Edm. Himself. What sayst thou to him?
Edg. Draw thy sword,
That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice. Here is mine:
Behold, it is the privilege of my tongue,
My oath, and my profession. I protest,
Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,
Thy valor and thy heart, thou art a traitor,
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father,
Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince,
And, from th' extremest upward of thy head
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou 'No.'
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits are bent
To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,
Thou liest.
Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;
But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes,
⟨What safe and nicely I might well delay⟩
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn.
Back do I toss those treasons to thy head,
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart,
Which, for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise,
This sword of mine shall give them instant way,
Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets, speak!
Alarums. Fights. [Edmund falls.]
Alb. Save him, save him!
Gon. This is mere practice, Gloucester.
By th' law of arms thou wast not bound to answer
An unknown opposite. Thou art not vanquish'd,
But cozen'd and beguil'd.
Alb. Stop your mouth, dame,

80 the most: the most he could claim; cf. n. 85 stomach: passion 87 Cf. n. 91 let-alone: quit-claim; cf. n. 94 Cf. n. 97 attaint; cf. n. 105 An interlude: 'This is as good as a play' 109 mark: cf. n. 123 single virtue: unaided valor 131 lists: limits, borders 132 supposed: putative, soi-distant S.d. trumpet: trumpeter 144 canker-bit: worm-eaten 146 cope: meet 153 mine: my sword 154 privilege: warrant; cf. n. 156 Maugre: despite 162 descent and dust: dusty depth (hendiadys) 169 say: smack, hint 170 safe and nicely: prudently and fastidiously; cf. n. 172, 173 treasons, lie; cf. n. 182, 183 Stop . . . it; cf. n.

Or with this paper shall I stopple it. ⟨Hold, sir.⟩
Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil.—
No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.
Gon. Say, if I do. The laws are mine, not thine.
Who can arraign me for't?
Alb. Most monstrous!
Know'st thou this paper?
Gon. Ask me not what I know.
Exit Goneril.
Alb. Go after her. She's desperate; govern her.
[Exit an Officer.]
Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have I done,
And more, much more. The time will bring it out.
'Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou.
That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt noble,
I do forgive thee.
Edg. Let's exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;
If more, the more thou'st wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague us:
The dark and vicious place where thee he got
Cost him his eyes.
Edm. Thou'st spoken right. 'Tis true.
The wheel is come full circle; I am here.
Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy
A royal nobleness. I must embrace thee.
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee or thy father.
Edg. Worthy prince, I know't.
Alb. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father?
Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale;
And, when 'tis told, O that my heart would burst!
The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow'd me so near—(O our lives' sweetness!
That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!)—taught me to shift
Into a madman's rags, t'assume a semblance
That very dogs disdain'd: and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,
Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;
Never, (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,
Until some half hour past, when I was arm'd,
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success.
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage; but his flaw'd heart
(Alack! too weak the conflict to support)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.
Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall perchance do good; but speak you on.
You look as you had something more to say.
Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.
«Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity. Whilst I was big
In clamor came there in a man,
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father,
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him
That ever ear receiv'd; which is recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack. Twice then the trumpets sounded,
And there I left him tranc'd.
Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.»

Enter a Gentleman with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help, help! O help!
Edg. What kind of help?
⟨Alb. Speak, man.
Edg.⟩ What means this bloody knife?
Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—⟨O! she's dead.⟩
Alb. Who dead? speak, man.
Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady; and her sister
By her is poison'd. She confesses it.
Edm. I was contracted to them both. All three
Now marry in an instant.
Edg. Here comes Kent, sir.

Enter Kent.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead.
This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pity. [To Kent.]
O! is this he?
The time will not allow the compliment
Which very manners urges.
Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good-night;
Is he not here?
Alb. Great thing of us forgot!
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?
The bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.
Seest thou this object, Kent?
Kent. Alack! why thus?
Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd. The one the other
Poison'd for my sake, and after slew herself.
Alb. Even so. Cover their faces.
Edm. I pant for life. Some good I mean to do
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,
(Be brief in it!) to th' castle, for my writ
Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia.
Nay, send in time.
Alb. Run, run! O run!

183 stopple: close as with a bung or cork 190 Ask . . . know; cf. n. 206 I am here; cf. n. 216 Cf. n. 222 rings: eye-sockets 239 period: full stop (the ultimate) 240–242 but another . . . extremity; cf. n. 244, 245 having . . . society; cf. n. 248 threw him; cf. n. 258–260 Cf. n. 268, 269 Cf. n. 277 aye: forever 284 Cf. n. 288 brief: hasty castle: Dover Castle

Edg. To who, my lord? [To Edmund.] Who has the office? Send.
Thy token of reprieve.
Edm. Well thought on. Take my sword, Give it the captain.
Alb. Haste thee, for thy life.
[Exit Edgar.]
Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid herself.
Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile.
[Edmund is borne off.]

Enter Lear, with Cordelia in his arms [followed by Edgar, Captain, and others].

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl! O, you are men of stones!
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vault should crack. She's gone for ever.
I know when one is dead, and when one lives.
She's dead as earth. Lend me a looking-glass.
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.
Kent. Is this the promis'd end?
Edg. Or image of that horror.
Alb. Fall and cease!
Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.
Kent. O, my good master!
Lear. Prithee, away.
Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.
Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!
I might have sav'd her; now, she's gone for ever!
Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!
What is't thou sayst? Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.
I kill'd the slave that was a-hanging thee.
Capt. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.
Lear. Did I not, fellow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion
I would have made them skip. I am old now,
And these same crosses spoil me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o' th' best. I'll tell you straight.
Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.
Lear. ⟨This is a dull sight.⟩ Are you not Kent?
Kent. The same,
Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?
Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that.
He'll strike, and quickly too. He's dead and rotten.
Kent. No, my good lord. I am the very man—
Lear. I'll see that straight.
Kent. That, from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.
Lear. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else. All's cheerless, dark, and deadly.
Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,
And desperately are dead.
Lear. Ay, so I think.
Alb. He knows not what he says, and vain is it
That we present us to him.
Edg. Very bootless.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Edmund is dead, my lord.
Alb. That's but a trifle here.
You lords and noble friends, know our intent:
What comfort to this great decay may come
Shall be applied. For us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power.—[To Edgar and Kent.]
You, to your rights,
With boot and such addition as your honors
Have more than merited. All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservings. O! see, see!
Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life!
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,
And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more.
Never, never, never, never, never!
Pray you, undo this button. Thank you, sir.
⟨Do you see this? Look on her! look! her lips!
Look there, look there!⟩ «O, O, O, O.»
He dies.
Edg. He faints!—My lord, my lord!
Kent. Break, heart. I prithee, break.
Edg. Look up, my lord.
Kent. Vex not his ghost. O let him pass! He hates him
That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.
Edg. He is gone, indeed.
Kent. The wonder is he hath endur'd so long.
He but usurp'd his life.
Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business
Is general woe. [To Kent and Edgar.] Friends of my soul, you twain
Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain.
Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go.
My master calls me. I must not say no.
Edg. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we that are young
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.
Exeunt, with a dead march.

FINIS

301 fordid: slew 308 stone: mirror 310 end: Judgment Day 311 Or image: It is, or else the image 312 Fall and cease; cf. n. 327, 328 I have . . . skip; cf. n. 327 falchion: broad sword 329 these same crosses: all these adversities 330 tell you straight: recognize you in a moment 331, 332 Cf. n. 333 This . . . sight: 'My eyes are certainly bad' 339 I'll . . . straight: you must prove that to me at once 340 your first . . . decay: the beginning of your friction and misfortune

343 Nor . . . else; cf. n. 352 know our intent; cf. n. 357 You . . . rights; cf. n. 362 fool; cf. n. 377 usurp'd: retained against natural law 384 Edg. Cf. n.

Notes

At the time of his sudden death in June of 1946, Professor Brooke had completed his work on the text, notes, and glosses for Hamlet, King Lear, Othello and I Henry IV. The editorial tasks which he left unfinished—preparation of some of the final copy for the press, reading of the proofs, compilation of the Indexes of Words Glossed, decisions as to certain matters of style and format, and, in the case of I Henry IV, the rescuing of the text from the prescriptive punctuation of the eighteenth-century editors—have been undertaken by Professor Benjamin Nangle.

Textual Note. The two authorities for the text of King Lear are the version included in the first folio (collected) edition of Shakespeare's dramatic works, published in 1623, and the first quarto (separate) edition, printed in 1608 and advertised on the titlepage for sale 'at the signe of the Pide Bull.' The quarto reprint of this (Q 2), which claims the same date on its titlepage but was produced over ten years later, has only very occasional textual significance. There is no good ground for doubting that Shakespeare wrote every line of King Lear to be found in the modern 'conflated' texts, though these contain more than was printed in any single early edition (see note on III.ii.81–97). The first Quarto preserves some three hundred lines which the Folio omitted; these, in the present book, are printed within ornamental brackets (« »). On the other hand, the Quarto omits about a hundred lines found in the Folio, which are here placed within angle brackets (⟨ ⟩). Thus about an eighth of the play is found in one or other of the original texts, but not in both. For the remainder there is no doubt that the Folio is in general the better and safer guide; but in recent years the Quarto has been unduly disparaged.

Very eminent authorities have condemned it as a 'reported' text, made up either from the recollection of actors who had played in Lear or from shorthand notes taken during a performance. The same authorities have, on the other hand, given countenance to a theory, proposed by P. A. Daniel in 1885, that the good Folio text was set up from a copy of this same bad Quarto which had been corrected by collation with the theatre manuscript of the play. The two assumptions, which are rather inconsistent with each other, combine to produce the allegation that neither of the two fundamental texts of King Lear was printed from a bona fide manuscript, and such a conclusion would put the textual integrity of the play as it has come down to us under very grave suspicion. There seems, however, to be no substantial evidence for either of the underlying assumptions.

The Quarto is much too good to be a reported text. Though it abounds in slovenliness of various kinds, it presents a very full and essentially faithful version of the play, such as would be produced by a printer struggling honestly (however ineffectually at times) with a difficult handwriting and yet more difficult style. The two most glaring faults, which have done much to injure its reputation, are its frequent inability to distinguish verse from prose and its scandalously light punctuation. Except at the ends of speeches it uses few stops beyond commas, and runs sentences together in a most abandoned way. Of the lines which are properly blank verse, the Quarto sets up five hundred as plain prose and misdivides a couple of hundred others. (See Edward Hubler, 'The Verse Lining of the First Quarto of King Lear', Parrott Presentation Volume, 1935, 421–441.)

For these things Shakespeare was largely to blame. His remarkably flexible and sinuous blank verse in Lear, his habit of beginning and ending speeches in the middle of lines, and of mingling prose and poetry without warning in the same scene make the division of a passage into its constituent verse units, once the visual distinction has been obscured, a work for none but a trained prosodist. The Folio, though based on a much clearer manuscript, makes many errors of this kind, and the editors of the play have continued through the centuries to make some (see note on IV.vi.123–137). The very badness of the Quarto in these respects is, in the circumstances, rather a testimony of authenticity, for it is not likely that any one but the poet himself would have produced a manuscript as disorderly as the one from which the first Quarto was evidently printed. It must have been a manuscript in which margins and capitalization were so disregarded that verse and prose looked alike, and in which punctuation and legibility were at a minimum. Within two years after the writing of the play no such manuscript is likely to have been in existence except the author's 'foul papers' or personal draft, and it may be surmised that King Lear first got into print as a result of the same haul by Thomas Thorpe and his gang which in the next year, 1609, led to the equally unauthorized publication of the Sonnets and Troilus and Cressida.

The Quarto compositor found his manuscript hard to read and sometimes blundered, or was stopped dead by an illegibility. As is well known, over a hundred of these faults were discovered while the sheets were being printed, and somebody in the printing house corrected or attempted to correct them. (See W. W. Greg, The Variants in the First Quarto of 'King Lear,' 1940.) Often, especially when printing verse as prose and therefore deprived of the check of rhythm, the compositor allowed small words to drop out or get transposed, and sometimes he 'vulgarized,' that is, simplified or paraphrased. These are mainly errors imposed upon him by the difficulty of his 'copy.' But not infrequently he rose above them and came almost as near perfection as the text of Lear can come. In Lear's long and passionate speech, 'O reason not the need!' (II.iv.289–309), the Quarto agrees with the Folio altogether in line arrangement and varies in wording in only six cases, one of which is a clear (though slight) Folio error. In Lear's shorter speech, 'Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are' (III.iv.32–40), there is, apart from punctuation and another slight Folio misprint, only one variation, and here it is somewhat doubtful whether the Folio 'pitiless storm' or the Quarto 'pitiless night' is to be preferred. So, in the great speech, 'No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison' (V.iii.9–20), there is no difference of working except that the Quarto omits two of the 'no's' and avoids the Folio's parenthesis-blunder in line 13. The well-rendered speeches are not always Lear's. In the first seventeen lines of Act Fifth, spoken by Edmund and Regan, the Quarto supplies two-and-one-half lines omitted by the Folio, retains a word which the Folio carelessly dropped, and makes two inferior substitutions ('abdication' for 'alteration' and 'I' for 'In'). Otherwise, they are verbally the same.

The passages cited are much above the Quarto's average of correctness, but they are certainly not more untypical than the ones which have been cited to prove its corruptness. It is not likely that Burbage himself could have recited Lear from memory with as little error as appears in the better pages of the Quarto text. That such lines could have been so well set down from the recollection of a hireling actor or by any kind of stenography then known exceeds credibility.

If the Quarto is too good to be a reported text, it is too bad to have served as 'copy' for the Folio. Daniel's theory that it was so used does little credit to the good faith of the Folio editors, who on that assumption went out of their way to put one of the 'stolen and surreptitious copies' they were deploring at the base of their purer text. It would be easier to write out clean any average page of King Lear than to do the re-lining, re-punctuating, capitalizing, transposing, and substituting of words necessary to make a Quarto page conform to the Folio readings—and the difference to the Folio printer would have been unspeakable. Considering that Heminge and Condell had in their services experts whose business was the making of fair copies, but whose skill in textual collation may well be doubted, it would have been asinine to adopt so cumbrous and dangerous a means of reproducing their theatre manuscript. And why should the editors of the Folio go to the trouble of cutting out the hundreds of undoubtedly Shakespearean lines which only the Quarto prints, while at the same time writing into its pages the lines which it lacks. It would have been a senseless way to proceed, whether considered as a means of giving Shakespeare's works to the word ('cured, and perfect of their limbs,' as they boasted) or as a means of conveniently providing the Folio printer with copy.

It would be a very bigoted editor who would ignore the Quarto text. In the present edition about one hundred and fifty Quarto readings have been accepted as clearly more Shakespearean than their Folio parallels; but, where judgment is difficult between the two texts, the Folio has been preferred, because it is the purer version on the whole and, when it diverges from the original, is more likely to sin in stagy over-heightening than in positive misrepresentation of the poet's meaning. It must be admitted, however, that in some of these cases the preference of the Folio is more the result of prudence and a desire for consistency than of poetic faith. Most of the dubious choices are discussed in the notes.

The Quartos indicate no division of the play into either acts or scenes. The Folio is admirably divided throughout, and is here followed with no change except to translate its Latin 'Actus rimus. Scaena Prima,' etc., to increase the scenes in Act Second from two to four, and regularize the numbering of scenes in Act Fourth. Stage directions are fairly full and accurate in both texts. As usual, those of the Folio show signs of revision by the prompter, and the Quarto wording is here often preferred as more likely to be Shakespeare's. Necessary amplifications and other necessary matter omitted in the original editions are supplied within square brackets ([ ]).

In Shakespeare's usage it was optional to give full syllabic value to the ending -ed of past verbal forms or (as is generally done now) to contract this ending with the preceding syllable. In the present edition final -ed must always be pronounced as a separate syllable in order to preserve the original rhythm of the verse. Where rhythm requires the contracted form, the spelling 'd is used.

Shakespeare accented a number of words on syllables which do not now bear the accent, and sometimes his practice in this matter was inconsistent. Where an unusual accentuation is required, it is indicated by an acute mark over the stressed vowel, as in revénues.

Obsolete words and words employed in now unusual senses are explained in footnotes the first time they occur in the text. Repetitions are not usually noted.

The critical and general notes in the following pages are announced by the symbol, cf. n., at the bottom of the page of text to which each has relevance. A name at the end of a note (in parentheses) indicates the authority; but no special effort is made to give credit for material which is common property or which is, so far as known, new in the present edition.

I.i.S.d. King Lear's Palace. Shakespeare probably assumed this scene to take place in Leicester, 'Leir-cester,' which, as Holinshed informed him, was built by King Lear and named after him. Leicester is about half way between Liverpool and London in the geographical center of England.

I.i.5, 6 equalities . . . moiety. The division is so equal as between these two beneficiaries that neither Albany nor Cornwall could find even frivilous reason for preferring the other's share. We are to understand that Lear's plans for dividing his kingdom into three parts are complete and are known to Kent and Gloucester. Only the formal ratifying ceremony remains. The two noblemen are discussing one of the smaller aspects of the abdication; namely, that in arranging it Lear has not allowed his preference of Albany over Cornwall to appear.

I.i.33–52. This speech is a good text for studying the theory that the Quarto version of the play is a 'reconstruction,' based upon an actor's memory, shorthand notes, or both. The Quarto lacks seven lines that are in the Folio and makes four important verbal substitutions: 'first intent' (35), 'business of our state' (36), 'Confirming them on younger years' (37), 'Where merit doth most challenge it' (51). It has three metrically short lines, in addition to the last. Otherwise it is a pretty faithful parallel to the Folio, and as a dramatic unit the shortened speech holds together well.

I.i.42 France and Burgundy. Both titles would be anachronisms in the prehistoric period in which Lear is set. Shakespeare is probably thinking of the fifteenth-century princes thus entitled whom he had dealt with in Henry V and Henry VI. See R. A. Law, 'Waterish Burgundy,' Studies in Philology, 1936, pp. 222–227.

I.i.51 Where . . . challenge. Where natural affection competes with the merit of the recipient as chief motive for my gift.

I.i.70. she names my very deed of love. The love she talks about is that which I practise in very deed.

I.i.73. square. All the joys that manifest themselves through the various senses are thought of as laid out on an area or 'square' of sensibility as on a map. This seems better than to take square as a measuring instrument, a carpenter's square.

I.i.78. More richer. The Quarto reading. The phrase occurs also in Hamlet III.ii.308. The Folio has 'More ponderous.'

I.i.83. Printed as in the Folio. The Quarto has 'Although the last, not the least in our dear love.'

I.i.138. still. The Quarto word. The Folio has 'shall,' possibly copied from 'shall' in the line above.

I.i.140. The sway. These words, attached to line 139 in the Folio and prefixed to line 141 in th Quarto, belong metrically to neither.

I.i.143. coronet. Perhaps the award intended for Cordelia as best beloved of his children (W. Perrett).

I.i.154. Reverse thy doom. Abrogate your decree. The Quarto reading seems clearly better here than the Folio 'Reserve thy state.' The latter could hardly mean anything but 'keep your pomp,' which in lines 138, 139 Lear has done. The Quarto stoops is also preferable to the Folio's 'falls' in this line.

I.i.159. Reverb no hollowness. There was a proverb, 'Empty vessels have the loudest sounds,' which Kent is applying to the case of Cordleia and her sisters. (The Quarto reading, 'sound reverbs,' may be the better here.)

I.i.167. by Apollo. The play is designedly pre-Christian. By Holinshed's chronology Lear lived in the ninth century B.C., before the founding of Rome. He swears by Apollo and Jupiter (190), or their Celtic equivalents, and, as in lines 111–113, by the sun and stars.

I.i.170. O vassal! miscreant! Vague terms of opprobrium. The Quarto reading 'Vassal, recreant' might have the preciser meaning, 'perfidious subject.'

I.i.180. That. The formal language of judicial sentence: 'for that,' 'forasmuch as.' It depends on reward in line 184. The Quarto has 'Since,' which is easier but more colloquial.

I.i.180. us. In changing from me (line 179) to us, Lear marks his assumption of royal dignity and power.

I.i.184. Our . . . good. That is, assuming again and asserting the royal power which I have been talking of relinquishing.

I.i.185. Five days. So the Folio. The Quarto, which in general gives rather the better version of this speech, has 'four days,' and in line 187 'fift' instead of sixt. There is a similar inconsistency between 'nine' and 'ten' in Othello I.iii.301. The explanation may be that Shakespeare used Roman letters for numerals. In Elizabethan script v and x often had a preliminary stroke which could cause them to be read iv, ix.

I.i.186. diseases. The Quarto word. The Folio 'disasters' seems to be a misprint.

I.i.191. revok'd. Ironically echoing Kent's word, line 175.

I.i.197. your large speeches may your deeds approve. I hope that your deeds will make good your lavish speeches.

I.i.213. that little-seeming substance. Her mere physical presence, small as it seems; i.e., Cordelia without dower.

I.i.236. folds of favor. Lear's love has been wrapped around Cordelia like a rich oriental garment, fold over fold.

I.i.239. which. Of the two alternatives France has just mentioned, he politicly omits to develop the second (namely, that Lear is at fault) and returns to the first, which reflects on Cordelia. (The Quarto gives the better text of this speech.)

I.i.246. murther. The early texts agree in putting this word in Cordelia's mouth and there is no reason for questioning it. The atmosphere of the play is primitive. Cordelia may not unnaturally imagine herself suspected of the crime her sisters so easily commit.

I.i.290. The jewels. A vocative: O you who are the jewels.

I.i.302. well . . . wanted. Well deserve the loss of the inheritance that you have missed.

I.i.303. plighted. The image is the same as in line 236 above. The sisters' real purposes are wrapped in fold on fold of cunning. (In the next line covers may be read as a plural, like stands in line 259.)

I.i.326. sit. That is, in order to continue this conversation. There is nothing to be said in favor of the Quarto reading here, 'hit together.'

I.ii.21. taw. It can hardly be doubted that this is what Shakespeare wrote. The word taw, originally to tan or curry leather, is well illustrated by a line in Jonson's Bartholomew Fair (1614) IV.v.78, 'You know where you were taw'd lately, both lash'd and slash'd you were in Bridewell.' The printers, however, could make nothing of it. Instead of taw th', the Folio has 'to'th'' and the Quarto 'tooth'.' The eighteenth-century emendation, 'top the legitimate,' which makes good but not vivid sense, is commonly adopted. One great objection to this has always been that a final 'p' is a very unlikely letter to be overlooked, either in pronunciation or on the written page.

I.ii.24. prescrib'd. The folio reading, clearly correct. The quarto has 'subscrib'd.'

I.ii.26. What news? In Edmund's letter, of course.

I.ii.41. too blame. A common Elizabethan misunderstanding of 'to blame,' blame being taken for an adjective (blameworthy).

I.ii.59. thrown . . . closet. Shakespeare borrows this device from his play of Julius Caesar (II.i.35), where in turn it is borrowed from Plutarch's life of Caesar.

I.ii.78. should. More deferential than 'will' or 'shall.'

I.ii.85, 86. I will . . . this. Shakespeare makes Edmund repeat the trick Iago had employed in Othello IV.i.87ff.

I.ii.92. wind me into him. Get into his confidence. The 'ethical dative,' me, means 'for my sake.' It was commonly used and often has such light emphasis that it can hardly be paraphrased.

I.ii.97. These late eclipses. A topical allusion, connecting the play with the very recent experience of the first spectators. An eclipse of the moon on 27 September 1605 was followed two weeks later (12 October) by an eclipse of the sun.

I.ii.99. sequent effects. The next two sentences depict the outburst of suspicion, fear, and brutality that followed the discovery of the Gunpowder Plot, 5 November 1605.

I.ii.104. falls . . . nature. Ceases to be governed by the natural instinct (to love one's daughter). A figure from the game of bowls. The 'bias' was the asymmetrical structure of the balls which forced them to roll in a peculiar course.

I.ii.119. dragon's tail. Referring to the position of the moon with relation to the long constellation Draco.

I.ii.127. Fa, sol, la, mi. This is mere trolling nonsense, based on the notes of the old musical scale.

I.ii.170. All with me's meet that I can fashion fit. With me any action is correct which I can make to suit my purpose. In the last six lines Edmund, left alone on the stage, steps out of his character and by a recognized Elizabethan convention speaks objectively and informatively to the audience.

I.iii.S.d. Duke of Albany's Palace. Albany was the old name of North Britain, above the Humber River. York, a very ancient city which was the military capital of Roman Britain, would be the natural residence of Goneril and her husband. It is a hundred miles north of Leicester.

I.iii.21. With . . . abus'd. The line, found only in the Quarto text, is most likely incorrect. A sense can be given to it by taking as to mean 'as well as' and abus'd 'misguided.'

I.iv.1. If but as well, etc. That is, if I can disguise my voice as well as I have changed my looks.

I.iv.15. fish. Possibly an anachronistic jest meaning 'I am ultra-Protestant,' keyed to the strong anti-Catholic feeling aroused by the Gunpowder Plot.

I.iv.16. What art thou? Lear repeats the question Kent has twice humorously evaded (lines 10, 12). Kent evades again.

I.iv.36. forty-eight. It has been suggested that Kent's part was specially written to fit John Heminge, one of the 'sharers' in Shakespeare's company and later the senior editor of the Folio. The age of Kent is not suggested by any of the sources and it would fit with Heminge's at the time the play was produced. See T. S. Baldwin, Organization and Personnel of the Shakespearean Company, p. 250.

I.iv.61. remember'st . . . conception. You remind me of what I have myself thought.

I.iv.78. football. Football was a rough game for rough village lads, not regarded as gentleman's sport. It was in special (but not exclusive) vogue in the North (see note on II.ii.75).

I.iv.89, 90. The Quarto is here correct. The Folio accidentally substitutes Lear's speech in line 98.

I.iv.104. the Lady-brach. This, one fears, alludes to Goneril. The Quarto has 'Ladie oth'e brach.'

I.iv.105. A pestilent gall to me. The Fool's talk rubs me shrewdly where I am sore. Lear, however, whose conscience has begun to hurt him, is not ungrateful for this counter-irritant and encourages it for the distraction it affords.

I.iv.109–113. Have . . . trowest. These precepts of wordly wisdom may be paraphrased: Don't display all you have, don't tell all you know, don't lend all you own, don't disregard your own comfort, don't believe all you are told.

I.iv.117, 118. thou shalt have more Than two tens to a score. If you do all this, you will have more than maximum felicity.

I.iv.134. Do thou for him stand. A masterpiece of indirect arraignment. The king can do no wrong, but the king can stand for the hypothetical lord who counselled the king to the king's own folly.

I.iv.144. monopoly out. This alludes to a common commercial abuse in Shakespeare's time. Individuals or companies were granted the exclusive right to trade in various commodities (as wine, sugar, etc.), and often thus amassed huge fortunes. The sense of out is 'issued in my name.'

I.iv.154. let . . . so. Any one who condemns the Fool's reasoning about Lear's distribution of the kingdom must be a knave and deserves whipping.

I.iv.157. wits to wear. Behind this nonsense verse, and in other parts of the play, one detects a scornful protest against the new foppery and social extravagance that James I's accession brought in.

I.iv.165. play bo-peep. Erratically display and conceal his royal countenance, as a nurse does her face to amuse an infant. This stanza is a parody of a popular pious ballad written by John Careless, one of the martyrs of Queen Mary's time (for text, see H. E. Rollins, Old English Ballads, 1920, pp. 47ff.).

I.iv.186. Weary of all, shall want some. Tired of possessing everything, shall find himself lacking even the portion that he needs. The story of Lear in a nutshell.

I.iv.205. it. An old possessive case, of which Shakespeare seems to have been fond as a relief from the neuter his, especially in childish talk.

I.iv.213. Whoop . . . thee. Jug was a pet-name for Joan, and the words may be quoted from a current song. They are inspired by Goneril's speech just above, on which the Fool comments: any ass can tell when the cart is drawing the horse; i.e., when the relation of father and child is unnaturally inverted. And then, with sardonic reference to Goneril, he trolls: 'Whoop! how I do love you!'

I.iv.223. Which they. The antecedent is not clear. Lear's speech above, badly preserved in the Quarto which alone contains it, was evidently in verse. Only the last line of it now scans.

I.iv.252. sea-monster. The dreadful mythological creature who came for

The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy
To the sea-monster (Merchant of Venice III.ii.59).

I.iv.285, 286. that scope As. Such scope as, whatever scope. The Quarto has the easier 'that scope that.'

I.iv.287. fifty of my followers at a clap. The two texts agree in this puzzling line. One might suspect that Lear has discovered, in the brief moment he has been off the stage, that Goneril has somehow liquidated fifty knights, though she has threatened nothing so drastic. However, in the next act (II.iv.223–225) Lear still has his hundred knights, as he has on Goneril's word in line 331 below. It looks as if some change was made in the play at this point. See E. S. Noyes, 'On the Dismissal of Lear's Knights and Goneril's Letter to Regan,' Philological Quarterly, 1930, pp. 297–303.

I.iv.315–319. The main virtuosity about this piece of doggerel appears to be that the Fool sings it in rustic dialect, making all the final words rime: ca't her, da'ter, sla'ter, ha'ter, a'ter.

I.iv.343. atask'd. For the elaborate bibliographical structure which has been built upon this word, see W. W. Greg, The Editorial Problem in Shakespeare, 1942, p. 98. The printer of the Quarto first set up 'alapt,' which can hardly be anything but a misreading of 'ataxt.' The error was discovered while the Quarto was being printed and in certain copies "attaskt' was substituted. The Folio printed 'at task.' 'Tax' and 'task' (the same word originally) were both commonly used in the sense of 'blame.' Shakespeare might have used whichever he liked (and on other occasions employed both with this meaning), but (perhaps only for the sake of rhythm), he preferred to invent a derived form, either 'atax' or 'atask,' which apparently no one else has ever used. The new word seems to have reached the Quarto printer in the form 'ataxt' or the Folio printer in the form 'attaskt' and in each case it made trouble; but it is doubtful whether more can be read into the situation than the presumption that the two texts were set up from different manuscripts.

I.v.1. Gloucester. The residence of Regan and Cornwall and capital of the southwestern section of Lear's kingdom. A very ancient city, important in Roman and Anglo-Saxon times, about seventy-five miles southwest of Leicester.

I.v.11. Thy wit shall not go slipshod. One of the Fool's poorer and more acid jokes. If men' brains were liable to chilblains like their heels, you would be immune, because you have so little brain. He is desperately attempting to prevent Lear from brooding.

I.v.S.d. The Folio marks the Gentleman's entrance (erroneously) with the rest at the opening of the scene. This is the textual convention known as 'massed entrances.'

I.v.46, 47. departure . . shorter. Pronounced in vulgar fashion, 'departer . . . sharter.' This parting obscenity is addressed to the audience after Lear has gone out. (The Fool, it should be remembered, is an adolescent boy.)

II.i.S.d. Castle. This is on a treeless and uncultivated heath, a day's ride from the city of Gloucester. Shakespeare was doubtless thinking of one of the British Camps, the remains of which are conspicuous on the crests of hills (e.g., the one near Dorchester on the Thames which he would have passed in going from Stratford to London). Gloucester's castle may appropriately be located in the Vale of the White House or Salisbury Plain or, perhaps more plausibly, in one of the bleaker parts of the Cotswolds, e.g., near Chipping Norton.

II.i.1. Curan. A name not found in any of the sources. It is probably suggested by the popular story of Curan and Argentile in William Watson's Albion's England, first printed in 1586. Curan seems to be a confidential agent of Gloucester who finds it worth his while to pass on to Edmund the information that he picks up.

II.i.18. Briefness and fortune, work! Let me leave it to quick action and luck.

II.i.41, 42. Mumbling . . . mistress. A clear effort at pagan atmosphere.

II.i.50. But that. That is, he could by no means so persuade me but that (in spite of what he said) I told him.

II.i.57. latch'd. Shakespeare is fond of this old word and probably used it here, as the Folio records. The Quarto has 'lancht,' i.e., lanced, a more obvious verb.

II.i.64. found—dispatch. When he is found, a quick death to him!

II.i.68. caitiff. The Quarto word, more expressive than 'Coward,' which the Folio substitutes.

II.i.99. He whom my father nam'd. This tells us by Elizabethan convention that Lear's name was also Edgar; but the reference to 'godson' and the Anglo-Saxon name are both anachronisms.

II.i.107. expense and waste. Folio reading. The Quarto text is an interesting illustration of publishers' methods. The printer set up 'these—and wast,' the first part of which (which perhaps should have been printed 'the—se') seems to be an honest confession of failure to make anything of the indecipherable combination 'thexpense.' The Quarto corrector, out of his own head, changed this to 'the wast and spoyle,' which appears in some of the copies.

II.i.122. How . . . please. Employing my power as you will.

II.i.132. poise. The Folio prints 'prize' and the Quarto printer first set up 'prise,' but this was corrected in certain copies of the Quarto to 'poyse.'

II.i.137. From . . . dispatch. Are waiting to be started on their way from here.

II.ii.S.d. Kent and Oswald have both ridden all night. Kent, having arrived a little earlier, is taken by Oswald for a native of the place.

II.ii.6. I love thee not. The particular reason for Kent's rage against Oswald appears in scene fourth of this act, lines 32ff.

II.ii.8. Lipsbury pinfold. Lipsbury, a place unknown to geographical research, must be a Shakespearean coinage, and can hardly mean anything but 'Lip-Town.' A pinfold is a village pound in which straying beasts are corraled. 'Lipsbury pinfold,' then, is where one may expect 'lippy' creatures like Oswald, with vagrant tongues and habits, to wind up. Kent says: If I had you in an appropriate place from which you couldn't escape, I would make you care for me. Both the texts print the phrase with perfect correctness, though the printers can hardly have known what it meant.

II.ii.14. three-suited. This has been sometimes taken to indicate poverty of wardrobe, but cf. III.iv.129, who hath had three suits to his back, where Edgar plainly alludes to a former state of affluence. It may refer to a servant's liveries, and thus would be a natural term of contempt applied to Oswald; and Edgar, in the later passage, would refer to the 'enough and to spare' enjoyed by hired servants. At the extortionate price of Elizabethan clothes the possession of three suits was quite beyond the ordinary man. Similarly hundred-pound and worsted-stocking suggest luxury. Kent is contrasting the pampered lackey's outward exquisiteness with his mental and moral poverty.

II.ii.27. sop o' th' moonshine. A sop was bread soaked in wine or other liquid. Kent will make Oswald's body so porous with holes that it will suck up the moonbeams he has just mentioned.

II.ii.40. With you. Let me have a word (and a blow) with you. Kent continues to address Oswald, refusing to be diverted by Edmund.

II.ii.57. zed. The current name of the letter 'z.' It had an ornate orthographic form, was seldom used (because its work was generally done by 's'), and so is an image of the social parasite.

II,ii.67, 68. holy cords . . . too intrinse. The holy cords are the bonds of affection between father and daughters. The idea is repeated in Cleopatra's lines to the asp, Antony and Cleopatra V.ii.349, 350:

> With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate
> Of life at once untie.

II.ii.71. halcyon. The kingfisher. The popular superstition was that, if a dead kingfisher were hung up, his bill would point toward the quarter from which the wind was blowing.

II.ii.75. Smoil. Both the texts read Smoile ('smoyle'), a Northern dialect form of 'smile,' meaning presumably 'smile at.' It is used in Tennyson's Northern Farmer (Old Style), line 53. It looks as if Oswald was represented on the stage as a somewhat farcical Yorkshireman (cf. I.iv.82), and Kent seems to be parodying his accent.

II.ii.77. Camelot. Supposed to have been in Somerset (or Cornwall), but the Elizabethans identified it with Winchester and believed that King Arthur's round table was still to be seen there (see the play of Eastward Hoe. V.i., composed about a year before King Lear). Winchester is about a day's journey by foot from Sarum (Salisbury) Plain. The goose . . . Camelot collocation contains an allusion to the unsavory disease known to Shakespeare as 'Winchester goose.' The idea is the same as in lines 9, 10 above.

II.ii.86. better faces. Kent's opinion of Cornwall is hinted at in the first lines of the play.

II.ii.102. Flickering on. Quarto: 'In flitkering.' Folio: 'On flickering.' 'Flickering' in this sense was perhaps original with Shakespeare; it puzzled the compositors.

II.ii.107. your displeasure. 'your Displeasure,' an ironic honorific, modelled on 'your Excellence,' 'your Grace,' etc.

II.ii.120. Ajax. According to their own account, Ajax is but a ninny beside them. In Love's Labor's Lost V.ii.618, Ajax is runner-up for a place among the Nine Worthies.

II.ii.129. Stocking. As a royal messenger. Kent had the immunity of heralds, and the stocks were punishment for low misdemeanors and vulgar malefactors.

II.ii.142. vilest and contemned'st. The reading is uncertain. The Quarto, which alone contains the line, originally had 'belest and contaned' which in some copies was changed to 'basest and temnest.' (See Greg, variants, p. 54.)

II.ii.146, 147. That . . . restrain'd. Here, except that the Folio has 'he' instead of he's, the two texts agree in a reading which does not make sense. Perhaps a line dropped out after 146.

II.ii.164. heaven's benediction. The proverb, with 'God's blessing' instead of heaven's benediction, is, as Kent stays, common; but the instances that have been found do not explain what God's blessing is. Probably, the beneficient rain; and probably the saw was meant to rebuke those who forsake a dull and salutary way of life in search of something more garish. The mention of 'the warm sun' in line 165 motivates Kent's following address to the luminary, which is now about to rise. The whole scene has taken place in the obscure light of dawn.

II.ii.168, 169. Nothing . . . misery. This, by admitting, palliates the improbability that Kent should at this time have an unread letter from Cordelia. Shakespeare is fond of the trick. The words mean: The strangest good fortune comes when one is most miserable.

II.ii.172–174. And . . . remedies. The last words of Cordelia's letter, offering hope that she may be able to remedy Lear's losses. 'This enormous state' may mean no more than the weighty business of the French crown.

II.iii. In the Folio, Scene Second continues to the end of the act. What modern editors mark as Scene Third has no local designation. It registers the passage of several hours, while Kent sleeps. Edgar simply appears on the front stage, without particular indication of where he is, makes his soliloquy to the audience, and goes out, after which the action of Scene Second resumes in what we call Scene Fourth.

II.iii.14. Bedlam beggars. Former inmates of Bedlam (Bethlehem Hospital for the insane) in London, who had been discharged as partially cured, and licensed to solicit charity. This is a contemporary (seventeenth-century) touch.

II.iii.20. Turlygod . . . Tom. The Bedlamites solicited their alms under the name of 'Poor Tom' or 'Tom o' Bedlam.' Turlygod is spelled in just this way in both the original texts, capitalized and italicized as a proper name. The Quarto, having first printed 'Tuelygod,' is at pains to correct the 'e' to 'r' on the revised forme. Yet the name has not been found elsewhere. It may be a form of 'twirligig' (whirligig). A word 'grinagod' (also 'grinagog') means one who is always grinning, on the analogy of which 'turligod' would be one always whirling or being whirled about, the sport of chance (O. E. D.).

II.iv.28. To do upon respect such violent outrage. To outrage decency so violently.

II.iv.43–47. And . . . drew. Kent is too angry to be coherent. And I, he means, meeting the other messenger, drew my sword.

II.iv.60, 61. mother . . . Hysterica passio. These terms are taken from Harsnet's pamphlet on witchcraft and demoniacal possession, which suggested so much of Edgar's mad talk. See note on III.iv.58. Both the early texts of the play, naturally enough, read 'Historica,' corrected in the fourth Folio of 1685.

II.iv.78. none but knaves. The Fool does not accept the opportunist doctrine he has just cynically stated.

II.iv.106–108. Text as in Quarto (corrected forme).

II.iv.146. scant. So the Folio. The Quarto has 'slack,' and Shakespeare doubtless wrote one or the other, though strict logic would require a word with the opposite meaning such as 'perform.'

II.iv.155, 156. on . . . confine. A very fine figure. Lear's powers (like the owner of an estate) have travelled over all the territory that is theirs and now stand on the extreme edge, viewing that over which they have no control.

II.iv.169. She . . . train. See note on I.iv.287 and lines 223–225 below.

II.iv.183. tender-hefted. Responsive to the hilt, easily managed. A figure from a knife or other instrument in which the haft or handle easily accommodates itself to the master's use. The term can perhaps be illustrated by Osric's talk about rapiers in Hamlet V.ii.147ff.

II.iv.243. bile. So spelled in the early editions ('byle,' 'bile') and so commonly pronounced.

II.iv.255. mingle . . . passion. Do not receive your wild words at face value, but discount them in the light of reason. The figure, however, is that of mixing a drink.

II.iv.292–295. Thou . . . warm. Lear here becomes very modern and proves his point by reference to the costume of a lady of fashion at James I's court. If we assume, he says, that the purpose of gorgeous raiment is to keep the wearer warm, then (1) nature does not need such extravagance of dress, and (2) this dress, cut according to the fashion of the day, hardly keeps the wearer warm anyway.

II.iv.318–321. So am I . . . return'd. These speeches are differently assigned in the Quarto, the first to Cornwall and the second to Regan. The Quarto likewise gives Cornwall's speech, line 325, to Regan.

II.iv.327. bleak. The Quarto word. Folio, 'high.'

II.iv.337. storm. The storm, which plays so large a rôle in Act Third, had no place in the Lear story before Shakespeare. He took it, along with the tale of Gloucester and his sons, from Sidney's Arcadia (ed. 1590, Bk.ii, ch. 10). See Sources of the Play.

III.i.10. little world of man. Lear, whose rage is in unison with that of the storm, illustrates the metaphysical doctrine that the 'microcosm,' man, lives in a complex harmony with the 'macrocosm' or universe of world of 'things' (see line 7).

III.i.31. furnishings. The sentence is incomplete, and, since a Quarto cut here immediately precedes a Folio cut, it is possible that an intermediate line or two may have been omitted by both texts (Greg), but nothing important for the sense seems to have been lost.

III.ii.23. high-engender'd battles. Battalions of rain and wind, produced high in the air.

III.ii.30. So beggars marry many. So many beggars marry; i.e., before they have a roof over their heads.

III.ii.31, 32. The toe stands for Goneril and Regan, the heart for Cordelia. He who misplaces his affection upon that which is meanest.

III.ii.74. vile. This word is regularly spelled 'vild' or 'vilde' in both the early texts.

III.ii.79. Must make content with his fortunes fit. Must fit contentment to his fortunes, be satisfied with what he has.

III.ii.81–97. Comic relief, which at this point is badly needed. It would be unreasonable to suppose that Shakespeare did not write it. It is a parody of the famous prophecy of Merlin, of which one text was printed in Elizabethan texts of Chaucer and in Puttenham's Art of English Poetry, 1589, whence Shakespeare may have got it. The first four lines describe conditions current in Shakespeare's England; the next six describe absurdly utopian conditions; and the conclusion (lines 94, 95) is that when these things come together, the realm of Albion will be in great confusion.

III.ii.86. nobles are their tailors' tutors. Noblemen spend their time teaching their tailors new fashions.

III.ii.87. No . . . suitors. No heretics except lying lovers; no burnings except from venereal disease.

III.ii.89. nor no poor knight. And no knight poor.

III.ii.96, 97. Then . . . feet. After the imposing build-up, the prophecy ends, as such things often did, in a flat truism: When people walk, they will do it with their feet.

III.ii.98. Merlin. A playful anachronism. Merlin was the magician of King Arthur's court. By the chronology Shakespeare followed, the Fool would have lived about 1300 years before his time.

III.iv.19–21. In such a night . . . In such a night as this! Consciously antiphonal, it would seem, to the joyous duet of Lorenzo and Jessica: 'in such a night as this . . . in such a night' (Merchant of Venice V.i).

III.iv.21. Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave you all. Here the Quarto text is better. The Folio, by omitting you, gets the conventional count of syllables, but puts the accent on the wrong words. Stress fath'r, frank, and gave.

III.iv.39. shake the superflux. The figure is from shaking the branches of an over-laden fruit tree.

III.iv.58. halters in his pew. The word pew is for the sake of grisly impropriety and to show how ubiquitous the fiend's temptation is. He lays knives under his pillow when he sleeps, puts hangman's nooses in his pew when he prays, sets ratsbane by his porridge when he eats. Lewis Theobald (1688–1744) was the first to show that the allusions to superstitions and fiends in Edgar's simulated ravings were largely taken from Samuel Harsnet's Declaration of Egregious Popish Impostures, 1603. Harsnet tells of a man who brought home a new halter and two knives; whereupon the devil 'laid them in the gallery, that some of those that were possessed might either hang themselves with the halter or kill themselves with the blades.' This is doubtless Shakespeare's source, though similar passages are found in Marlowe's Doctor Faustus (lines 632ff.) and Spenser's Faery Queen (Bk.I, canto ix, st. 22ff.)

III.iv.63, 64. There . . . now. He picks at different parts of his body, as if the foul fiend were vexing him in the bites of vermin.

III.iv.77. pelican. In the natural history of the time the young pelican is the type of ungrateful progeny, because fostered on its parents' blood.

III.iv.78. Pillicock. 'Pelican' suggests to Edgar this vulgar word, which he fancifully distorts into a bird of prey sitting on its hill.

III.iv.97, 98. Hay . . . sessa. Essentially as in Quarto. The Folio expands strangely: 'Sayes, suum, mun, nonny, Dolphin my Boy, Boy Sesey.' The last word, spelled 'caese' in Quarto, is probably the same exclamation which occurs in III.vi.70, where the Folio spells it 'sese,' and in IV.vi.208.

III.iv.134. Smulkin. Smulkin, like Modo and Mahu mentioned below (line 137), was among the devils exorcised in the witch findings discussed in Harsnet's book (see note on line 58 above).

III.iv.161–165. I had a son, etc. Edgar, who has been using mad talk as a shield against recognition, becomes almost speechless on hearing this disclosure.

III.iv.170–173. The first line may be from some lost romance; the last two are from the popular ballad of Jack the Giant-killer. They are Edgar's mystical way of saying that he sees a dark adventure before him and smells a rat.

III.iv.182. British man. 'English man' in the ballad, but there were no Englishmen in Lear's time, and when Shakespeare was writing this play there was a new movement to call all inhabitants of the island 'British' in recognition of the union with Scotland. James I had been proclaimed King of Great Britain, 24 October 1604.

III.vi.4. have. The preceding word, wits, has caused the verb to take the plural form. Shakespeare was capable of this and both the texts have it so, but it may be a scribal error.

III.vi.S.d. Enter Lear, etc. The Quarto has these characters enter with Kent and Gloucester at the opening of the scene, but the Folio arrangement is evidently correct. Edgar has been holding back to avoid recognition by his father. Lear has kept with Edgar, and the Fool with Lear.

III.vi.6. Frateretto. Listed by Harsnet with Flibbertigibbet (cf. III.iv.111) in his group of devils. The following allusion to Nero may be a vague recollection of Rabelais (bk. ii.30).

III.vi.25. broom. In the old song the word is 'bourn,' brook; but Edgar may be intentionally misquoting, with a hint at witches and broomsticks.

III.vi.40–43. Sleepest . . . harm. Based on some version of the nursery rime of 'Little Boy Blue,' as lines 25–28 are based on another popular song. In Edgar's perversion line 43 probably means 'If you give me one kiss.'

III.vi.44. Purr! the cat is grey. Hinting that it is an old grey witch who is wheedling the jolly shepherd. Lear seizes the suggestion and identifies her with Goneril.

III.vi.45, 46. 'Tis Goneril . . . father. So the first Quarto. The second Quarto (perhaps rightly) adds 'she' before kicked.

III.vi.49. joint-stool. A joint-stool was one made by joiners, as opposed to the usual rough home-made ones. The frequent mention of this article illustrates the scarcity of good furniture in Shakespeare's time. Lear, of course, in his delirium identifies the stool with Goneril.

III.vi.65. brach or him. So the early texts. Instead of him Sir Thomas Hanmer (1677–1746) conjectured 'lym' in the sense of 'lyme-hound,' bloodhound; but that use is not well supported, and a misreading of manuscript 'l' as 'h' is not likely.

III.vi.76. Persian. The customary epithet for gorgeous attire from the days of the Greeks and Romans. At the time Lear was written the travels of the Sherley brothers had called attention to the opportunities of trade with Persia.

III.vi.79. We'll go to supper i' th' morning. Lear is hungry, but his weariness exceeds his hunger, and by royal decree (We'll go) he postpones supper till the morning.

III.vi.80. And I'll go to bed at noon. Fool's logic. If supper takes place in the morning, bedtime will come at noon. The words are the last the Fool speaks and they hint a sort of author's apology for closing his career in the middle of the play. if the Fool's part was written for Robert Armin, as many think, there seems less reason for the otherwise plausible theory that the Fool's sudden disappearance and the scantiness of Cordelia's part are both due to the need Shakespeare found to give the two rôles to a single boy actor. On the other hand, if Armin played only the Fool, it seems strange that so conspicuous an actor should have been allowed no appearance in the fourth or fifth act. The likelihood is that Armin, who was not very old, was obliged to undertake the part of Cordelia as well as his normal one, for Goneril and Regan made big demands on the available boys in the company. (It may be too venturous to suggest that these famous words, found only in the Folio, may have been added by Armin himself rather than Shakespeare.)

III.vi.113. Lurk, lurk! In the Quarto version (which alone contains this speech) Edgar conceals himself as Cornwall et al. enter the stage for Scene Seventh.

III.vii.48. simple-answer'd. Straightforward in your reply. The Quarto reads 'Simple answerer.'

III.vii.66. rash. Here the Folio, which substitutes 'stick,' seems to be sophisticating. Rash was a good old verb, used by Malory of the attack of boars, but was becoming rare in standard English in Shakespeare's time. In printing 'rain' for rage in line 70 and 'stern' for dern in line 62, the Folio seems again to be preferring the less Shakespearean word.

III.vii.67. bow'd. This is a new emendation, but it seems to account for both the Quarto reading 'lou'd' (corrected in some copies to 'lowd') and the Folio 'bare.' A tragi-grotesque quibble with buoy'd in the next line is probably intentional.

III.vii.69. stelled fires. There is a pun in stelled, which suggests both 'stelled,' fixed, and 'stellate,' starry. The shortness of line 69 and the number of hard textual problems both indicate that this speech of Gloucester's puzzled the printers.

III.vii.73. All cruels else subscribe. The Folio reading. The Quarto has 'subscrib'd.' The clause is concessive and general: Give sanction and formal allowance, if you like, to all other cruel creatures, yet I shall see, etc.

III.vii.81. Hold your hand, etc. The intervention of the servant in a vain attempt to prevent his master's crime is not in Sidney's Arcadia, upon which this portion of the play is based. It is taken from an actual incident dramatized in the pseudo-Shakespearean play, A Yorkshire Tragedy, produced by Shakespeare's company in the late summer or autumn of 1605, and therefore throws light upon the date of composition of King Lear. See Modern Language Notes, xxvii (1912), p. 62.

IV.i.6. The . . . laughter. The familiar image of Fortune's wheel, constantly revolving. Those on its bottom live in the element of tears, those on the top in the element of laughter.

IV.i.10. poorly led. So the Folio. Edgar has not yet noticed his father's blindness. The original Quarto reading, 'poorlie, leed,' is probably a misreading of 'poorlie-ledd' and the Quarto corrector's 'parti, eyd' a mere guess.

IV.i.11, 12. But that . . . age. Only the strange reversals of worldly fortune make men grow old. The doctrine is similar to that of Matthew Arnold in The Scholar Gipsy, stanzas 17–23.

IV.i.22, 23. Means . . . commodities. Our resources (or capabilities) make us foolhardy and our bald deficiencies prove to be advantages.

IV.i.74–78. These lines repeat the social philosophy of III.iv.38–40.

IV.i.75. That slaves your ordinance. Who tramples underfoot your command (to love one's neighbor as oneself).

IV.i.81. in the confined deep. A poetical paraphrase for what the Elizabethans called 'the narrow seas,' the Strait of Dover. (In means 'into' or 'down upon.')

IV.ii.1. Welcome, my lord! Goneril and Edmund have, of course, made the long journey from Gloucester's castle to York (?) together. As they approach her palace, she bids him welcome there.

IV.ii.4. never man so chang'd. One of the most successful minor touches in the play is the development in Albany, who is evidently young and honest, and at the opening stands in confused awe of his majestic wife. Goneril's misjudgment of him is a large factor in her downfall.

IV.ii.19. names. The Folio reading. If the Quarto 'arms' is correct, the sense is: I must exchange the distaff for the sword.

IV.ii.23. mistress's. There is a quibble on two meanings. Ere long I shall challenge you both as queen and lover. She is doubtless planing to detach Edmund from Cornwall's service to her own.

IV.ii.24. My . . . body. To be taken with the preceding line. A woman might justly adore Edmund, but Albany in the rôle of husband is as if the foot presumed to control the whole body. This is the reading of the uncorrected Quarto and is doubtless as Shakespeare wrote it, but it was not understood. The Quarto corrector clarified it vulgarly into 'A fool usurps my bed' and the Folio into 'My fool usurps my body.'

IV.ii.34. worth the whistling. Alluding to the proverb, 'It is a poor dog that is not worth the whistling'; that is, there was a time when you thought me worthy of attention.

IV.ii.38. it. The purpose of the Quarto corrector in changing it to 'ith' is obscure. He can hardly have meant to substitute 'its,' for in 1608 that form was very new and rare. Doubtless he did not understand the passage and took this for another of the i' th' abbreviations of 'in the.'

IV.ii.45. Filths savor but themselves. To the filthy all things are filthy. Suggested by the Latin proverbs, 'puris omnia pura' and 'pravis omnia prava.'

IV.ii.58. a head for wrongs. That is, borne to be made a cuckold.

IV.ii.59, 60. discerning . . . suffering. Capable of distinguishing between an advantage and an injury.

IV.ii.61, 62. Fools . . . mischief. This is greatly condensed. 'Grant that we are all villains,' Goneril seems to mean; 'yet you are involved with the rest of us, and only fools pity the sort of villain you are, who will allow yourself to be punished for treason before you have done any overt act.'

IV.ii.64. state . . . threat. Where, as here, the Folio offers no text for comparison, the true reading of this difficult poetry is often obscure. The Quarto compositor read this as 'thy slayer begins threats,' which in certain copies was altered to 'thy state begins thereat.' The emendation is by Charles Jennens (1700–1773).

IV.ii.77. Mew! The 'cat-call' employed by an Elizabethan audience to hiss a bad actor.

IV.iii. This sentimental and undramatic scene is certainly Shakespeare's. Its purpose is to reawaken the audience's sympathy for Cordelia, who has been so long absent from the stage and is now about to appear again. The scene is wholly omitted in the Folio, which, of course, throws out the Folio numbering of the remaining scenes in the act (but see note on Scene Seventh). The Quarto printer made, as usual, several blunders, which previous editors have not been very resourceful in clearing up.

IV.iii.11. Ay, sir. Quarto 'I say' (explained by Theobald).

IV.iii.31. believe't. Quarto 'be beleeft.' (The repetition of 'be' is probably accidental.)

IV.iii.33. clamor-moisten'd hair. Quarto 'clamour moystened her.' In Shakespeare ladies' tresses suffer remarkably when they weep. Compare King John III.iv.62ff.:

> Bind up those tresses. O what love I note
> In the fair multitude of those her hairs!
> Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,
> Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends
> Do glue themselves in sociable grief.

IV.iii.43. sometime . . . tune. Occasionally, when better in tune, i.e., more rational.

IV.v.S.d. Regan's Palace. For the presumable place see note on I.v.1. There is no reason to suppose that Regan would continue to live in Gloucester's castle (which she complained of as 'little,' II.iv.313). When she speaks of Goneril's 'late being here' in line 28, she means 'in this part of the country,' in the South; or else it is a dramatic license which in Shakespeare's theatre would never be detected.

IV.v.24. Some things. Perhaps she begins to say that some things are not to be trusted even to Oswald's discretion, but she checks herself.

IV.v.26. I had rather—. Without being disrespectful, Oswald makes it clear that he is incorruptible, and Regan drops her plea to see the letter.

IV.vi.26. pebble. So in both texts. A collective plural like 'sand.' 'Pebbles' would be cacophonous here.

IV.vi.28. deficient sight. A bold use of metonymy. The dizzy man's failing eyesight is put for the man himself.

IV.vi.41, 42. Why . . . cure it. The grammar is curiously twisted, but apparently genuine. The two texts agree.

IV.vi.48. snuff. The partly consumed wick of a candle, giving smoke rather than light.

IV.vi.51. Gone, sir: farewell. The Quarto prints these words following the stage direction (omitted in the Folio) which they here precede. Since they give Gloucester assurance that his instructions have been obeyed, they clearly should be spoken before he leaps.

IV.vi.52–54. conceit . . . theft. Mere imagination (conceit) may cause death when there is no will to live.

IV.vi.68. summit. A rather rare word in the seventeenth century, often spelled 'sommet' as in French. Shakespeare employs it only here and in two passages of Hamlet (I.iv.76, III.iii.19), and the earliest texts generally print it 'Sonnet,' as in the Folio here. The Lear Quarto misrepresents it as 'sommons' and the Folio in the earlier Hamlet passage as 'Sonnet.'

IV.vi.86. fiend. Edgar's purpose is to give Gloucester a sense of the value of his life by persuading him that the evil powers have attempted to destroy him and the good have preserved him.

IV.vi.101. Nature's above art. To be taken with Lear's previous speech. A king cannot be arrested for issuing false currency, for the currency is all the king's and bears his image. Therefore nature (royal birth) is better than the counterfeiter's art. Lear then imagines himself in various occupations of his past life: enlisting soldiers, drilling recruits, indulging in the pastime of ratting, challenging an opponent, calling up the reserves in battle, and attending an archery contest. Finally, he sees Edgar and imagines himself a sentinel on duty.

IV.vi.102. crow-keeper. Crow-herd, a boy or old man employed to keep crows off planted fields (and equipped with a makeshift bow).

IV.vi.107. Sweet marjoram. Described in Nicholas Culpeper's Complete Herbal as 'an excellent remedy for the brain' (E. Blunden, Shakespeare's Significances, 1929).

IV.vi.113. 'Ay' . . . divinity. Alluding to St. Paul's words to the Corinthians (2 Cor. I. 18, 19): 'But as God is true, our word toward you was not yea and nay. For the Son of God, Jesus Christ . . . was not yea and nay, but in him was yea.'

IV.vi.123–127. After a line and a half of blank verse matching Gloucester's, Lear reverts to undoubted prose. The Folio made a halfhearted attempt to divide it as poetry and modern editors have gone further, with sad results. It is part of the great irony of the play that this mad barbarian king here interrupts his madness to arraign Jacobean court life.

IV.vi.129. Whose face between her forks presages snow. To understand this now it is necessary to read between her forks after snow.

IV.vi.132. centaurs. Hybrids of beast and man. Ben Jonson had the same idea, if not this line, in mind when he called one of the ladies in The Silent Woman (1609) Madam Centaur.

IV.vi.141. Do you. Quarto reading. Th Folio has 'Do'st thou,' but there seems no reason for Gloucester to speak familiarly to his king at this point.

IV.vi.144. challenge. The challenge is addressed to Cupid. Compare the opening of Much Ado about Nothing (I.i.32-34), where Beatrice says that Benedick 'challenged Cupid at the flight; and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the bird-bolt.'

IV.vi.157. handy-dandy. An expression from a child's game, meaning 'which hand will you have?'—i.e., they both look alike.

IV.vi.162. in office. That is, when he has a position of authority. The Quarto has the interesting misprint, 'a dogge, so bade in office,' which is stressed by some critics as evidence that that text depends on hearing rather than the written word. All it means is that the Quarto compositor was here working automatically without his mind on his work and unthinkingly set up the first words suggested by the sounds he was carrying in his head. A subconscious association with 'a dog so bayed' may have put him off the track. The wonder is that the style of Lear did not oftener derail him.

IV.vi.165. lusts. Second person singular, like whipp'st below. Shakespeare was not obliged by current usage to employ the -st form, and did not when it was too cacophonous. (Quarto reading: 'thy bloud hotly lusts.')

IV.vi.167. Through totter'd rags small vices do appear. Quarto reading. Here the Folio goes wrong: 'Thorough tatter'd cloathes great Vices do appeare.' But this is cold-blooded perversion by somebody who thought he could improve the text. The meaning is that the smallest vices are seen (and punished) in the poor, but the privileged classes can conceal even the greatest. Shakespeare seems to have preferred the spelling totter'd to 'tatter'd,' but both were used.

IV.vi.168. Plate sin. Theobald's excellent emendation for the Folio 'Place sinnes.'

IV.vi.177, 178. O matter . . . madness! Much the same as Laertes' remark on Ophelia (Hamlet IV.i.190): 'A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.'

IV.vi.185. block! One of the remarkable topical anachronisms in the play. Lear (or Gloucester) is wearing one of the flamboyant hats that current fashion prescribed, either the 'copintank' or sugarloaf, or more probably one of the newer type with broad drooping brims. Lear suggests, there would be enough felt in a few of these to shoe a troop of horse, and this sets him off on a mad thought.

IV.vi.S.d. three Gentlemen. In the Folio text the frugality of the stage manager has reduced them to one.

Iv.vi.195. ransom. He imagines himself on the battlefield and wounded.

Iv.vi.199. man of salt. Even a man of salt, whose tears would not be good for the garden.

IV.vi.202. Good sir. This speech has had to be supplied from the second Quarto, but it is evident that something has dropped out of the first, which here assigns two consecutive speeches to Lear. In the extant copies of Q 1 no corrections have been noted in sheet I, which contains this part of the play, but, as Q 2 shows no other sign of independent authority, it looks as if it had been printed from a copy of Q 1 which did have this correction (P. A. Daniel).

IV.vi.220. The main descry, etc. We expect from hour to hour to get a view of the main body.

IV.vi.237. To boot, and boot. A quibble on the two senses of boot, one casual, the other spiritual. Gloucester offers Edgar his thanks, wishing him the bounty and benison of heaven to boot (in addition) and also, thinking of the deeper meaning, to his soul's boot. On em ight paraphrase thus: I give you hearty thanks; I invoke upon you the blessing of heaven also, and the latter (as my thanks are not) is a gift of real profit. The same pun is made, more jocosely, by Autolycus (Winter's Tale IV.iv.746f.): 'What an exchange had this been without boot! what a boot is here with this exchange!

IV.vi.249. Chill not, etc. Shakespeare makes Edgar use the Southwestern rustic dialect, which suits him as a Gloucestershire peasant and was familiar to the poet from childhood. It was sometimes called 'Cotswold speech' and became the usual mark of the stage countryman. It is characterized by retention of the old 'ich' for 'I' and the voicing (v, z) of the voiceless spirants, f and s.

IV.vi.254. che vor ye. See H. Kökeritz, 'Elizabethan "che vore ye," "I warrant you,"' Modern Language Notes, February, 1942. Edgar's dialect may here be slightly wrong.

IV.vi.255. batoon. The older English form of French baton. The word made trouble. The Quarto printed it 'battero,' reduced in some copies to 'bat.' The folio printed 'Ballow,' a word not otherwise known and probably, like 'battero,' a misreading of 'battoon.' Skeat and Mayhew (Glossary of Tudor and Stuart Words) suggest that a 'ballow' might be a quarterstaff made from 'ballow' wood, that is, wood with the bark removed, but this last sense also has very scanty support.

IV.vi.263. British party. In the army of the Britons (in opposition to the French). The Folio erroneously prints 'English.'

IV.vi.282, 283. and . . . tormentor. One who torments herself with thoughts of you. The Quarto compositor set up what he thought he saw: 'and for you her owne for Venter.' The second Quarto and Folio omitted the words entirely (rather than print foolishness, presumably), but they are necessary. Goneril's conclusion is flat without them.

IV.vi.296. fenced. Here the Quarto keeps the Shakespearean word, the Folio 'seuer'd' (sever'd) being an easy but trite misreading. If Gloucester were distract, he would still have both thoughts and griefs, but they would be fenced or railed off from each other, so that, as he says in the next lines, the griefs (woes) would no longer be interpreted by thought and would lose the knowledge of themselves.

IV.vii. As Scene Third of this act is omitted in the Folio, Scenes Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth are naturally there marked 'tertia,' 'quarta,' and 'quinta,' respectively; but the present scene is marked 'septima,' as if there had been no omission. The Folio reduces this scene considerably and combines the Doctor and Gentleman in a single part.

IV.vii.11. Yet . . . intent. To be recognized now would limit the scope of my design.

IV.vii.20. child-changed. This means both 'changed into a child' and 'changed by the action of his children.'

IV.vii.37, 38. Was . . . winds? The Quarto reading. The Folio has 'oppos'd' and 'jarring.' There is a reminiscence, as elsewhere in Shakespeare, of Marlowe's great line. 'Was this the face that launch'd a thousand ships?'

IV.vii.92. cur'd. Quarto reading. Folio, 'kill'd.' Here words of opposite sense give the same meaning and there is not a great deal to choose between them.

V.i.16. as far . . . hers. To the limit of what she has to give.

V.i.30. Not bolds, etc. A confused sentence. Albany apparently means: This business concerns me because France invades Britain, not because France countenances King Lear (in which support of Lear France is joined), with others whom, I fear, righteous and serious causes impel against us. The similarity in meaning as well as form between the two clauses beginning 'with others whom' (lines 26f. and 30f.) is very suspicious.

V.i.35, 36. For . . . here. This is not the place to discuss these petty details of domestic friction. (For particulars in this sense, cf. I.iv.270.) The text is that of the Quarto as emended by Collier and Mitford: poor instead of 'dore.' The Folio reads 'For these domestic and particular broils Are not the question here,' which is easy but not very convincing. Shakespeare uses 'broils' to describe tumults of a more violent character than the bickerings Goneril wishes to suggest, and 'particular broils' is a muddy phrase not used elsewhere by Shakespeare. It took quite a number of people to make a broil. If the Folio text were original there would be no accounting for that of the Quarto; but if both rest on a manuscript in which the scribe had carelessly repeated the 'd' of domestic in the next word, making 'door' out of poor, the compositor or editor of the Folio may have felt justified in rewriting the line according to his own lights.

V.i.43. riddle. Since Goneril does not share her knowledge, the riddle remains obscure. This seems to be the meaning. There are two separate British armies which have entered the field successively: a Southern army, commanded by Regan and Edmund, and a Northern army commanded by Albany and Goneril. Regan most surprisingly invites her sister to join Edmund and herself in the Southern camp, and insists that she must come as chaperon (line 42). The 'riddle' Goneril reads is apparently Regan's secret intention to take advantage of her sister's visit to poison her. When we next see them, we find it is Goneril who has poisoned Regan. On the stage the words would be delivered with a sort of wink to the audience, inviting them to watch developments.

V.i.61. By diligent discovery. Edmund has been engaged on a reconnaissance. See IV.v.15, 16.

V.ii.S.d. This, except the words, and exeunt, is the Quarto stage direction. The Folio version is drier and more technical.

V.ii.l. bush. The Folio makes it a 'Tree,' but a bush would be better cover for the old man in a battle.

V.ii.12. Ripeness is all. Compare Hamlet V.ii.211, 212: '. . . if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all' (Steevens).

V.iii.S.d. The Folio stage direction, probably composed by the stage-manager. Shakespeare may have written the simpler (and insufficient) version of the Quarto: 'Enter Edmund, with Lear and Cordelia prisoners.'

V.iii.2. their greater pleasures. That is, the will of those personages of higher rank (than mine); i.e., Goneril, Regan, and Albany.

V.iii.17, 18. And take upon's the mystery of things, As if we were God's spies. Undertake to explain the mysterious ways of providence, as if we were spying on God Himself. This seems to be the only allusion in the play to the Christian God.

V.iii.19. packs and sects of great ones. Flocks and flocks of office-holders. The distinguishing thing about all these is that they have no personal existence, but are mere units in a transient crowd. The lowest ones are grouped in packs, like dogs or wolves; the most intelligent in sects, like philosophers.

V.iii.22. Upon such sacrifices, etc. A paganized echo of two well-known Scriptural passages: 'The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O God, shalt thou not despise' (Psalm 51. 17), and 'for with such sacrifices God is well pleased' (Hebrews 13. 16).

V.iii.24, 25. He . . . foxes. The last resort for getting foxes from their holes was fire. At Judgment Day the whole world will be subjected to the same treatment. Cordelia and Lear will dwell in their prison secure and united as foxes in their 'earths,' and nothing shall drive them hence but the angel of judgment with his fiery brand.

V.iii.26. good years. A vague phrase, perhaps Dutch in origin, suggesting some unnamed malign force. Still current in English dialect as 'The Goodgers.'

V.iii.36, 37. Thy . . question. The important service I am offering you cannot be discussed.

V.iii.43. I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried oats. I cannot live like a beast of burden: I must better my condition.

V.iii.S.d. As in the Folio, doubtless after the prompter's revision. Shakespeare's more casual way of dealing with such details probably appears in the Quarto version: 'Enter Duke, the two Ladies, and others.'

V.iii.48. I. So the Folio, correctly. The Quarto, doubtless misled by the next line, has 'We.' Albany does not until much later (line 354 below) assume the royal 'We,' as Regan does in line 69. In line 49 we . . . our means 'all of us in our council' and 'our general safety.'

V.iii.62, 63. And the best quarrels in the heat are curs'd By those that feel their sharpness. Edmund is saying that we are in no mood to judge dispassionately while suffering personal discomfort. He illustrates by a figure from an archery contest, heat meaning 'bout' (as in horse-races). A man who has been accidentally struck by one of the quarrels (cross-bow arrows) is more likely to curse it than to praise its extraordinary length of flight. Of course there is a quibble on the other sense of 'quarrel.'

V.iii.77. your addition. The title you have given him. The Quarto has 'your advancement,' probably a simplification of a rather unusual expression.

V.iii.80. That were the most, if he should husband you. The Quarto, followed by most editors, gives this speech to Goneril.

V.iii.87. The line is not in the Quarto, and the Folio reading, 'the walls is thine,' does not make sense. The conjecture, whole, is an old one, but anonymous.

V.iii.91. The let-alone. Waiver of one's claim, promise to pursue a laissez-faire policy; used of land with a clouded title. Goneril, Albany says, has no property in Edmund, no legal position in regard to him.

V.iii.94. The Quarto gives this line to Edmund, changing the words to 'prove my title good.'

V.iii.97. attaint. In conjunction with your attainder or accusation of dishonor. The Folio has 'in thy arrest' by influence of the line above.

V.iii.109. mark. The Folio reads 'make' and the Quarto 'prove' (probably repeated from line 107). In the Folio word the type is spread so as to suggest that an 'r' may have dropped out in printing.

V.iii.154. Behold, it is the privilege of my tongue. So the Quarto. The Folio is confused here, missing both sense and rhythm: 'Behold it is my privilege, The privilege of mine Honours.'

V.iii.170. What safe and nicely I might well delay. For the sake of the record. Edmund makes the most of the fact that knights accepted challenges only from opponents of proper rank; but his action, like all his actions, is practical and self-interested. Deprived of military power, arrested as a traitor, and challenged by Albany, he has little to lose in encountering the unknown and a good deal perhaps to gain, since victory in trial by combat cleared the victor of the charges against him.

V.iii.172, 173. treasons, lie. Accusations of treason and lying. Which in the next line refers to both.

V.iii.182, 183. Stop . . . stopple it. Quarto reading. Folio: 'Shut . . . stop it.' It looks as if the Folio editor added the words 'Hold, sir' to complete his metrically deficient line, under the erroneous impression that line 184 is addressed to Edmund.

V.iii.190. Ask . . . know. Assigned to Edmund in the Folio.

V.iii.206. I am here. At the foot of Fortune's wheel, where his life began.

V.iii.216. The bloody proclamation to escape. In order to escape the hue and cry after me as a capital offender. When this sentence resumes after the parenthesis, the construction is altered. Instead of taught me in line 219, one would expect something like 'I was obliged.'

V.iii.240–242. but another . . . extremity. But if I were to recount another sorrow too fully, it would make much more (sorrow) and exceed the limit of endurance.

V.iii.244, 245. having . . . society. When he had seen me as Poor Tom, he had shunned my abhorrent company.

V.iii.248. threw him. Threw himself. Theobald's emendation for the Quarto 'threw me.'

V.iii.258–260. Alb. Speak, man. The Quarto, omitting this short speech, throws the two questions of Edgar together and gives them as one speech to Albany.

V.iii.268, 269. Here comes Kent, sir. The quarto has this and the entrance of Kent follow the words 'Touches us not with pity' (line 272), which would seem to be more effective; but the metrical dove-tailing of speeches indicates that the Folio order was intentional.

V.iii.284. Poison'd for my sake, and after slew herself. A fine tumultuous line with a spondaic second foot. Read 'Poison'd for my sáke.'

V.iii.311. Fall and cease! Albany invokes the heaven and earth to display the accompaniments of Judgment Day. Fall, heavens! Cease, earth!

V.iii.327, 328. I have . . . skip. Reminiscent of Othello V.ii.309-312f.:

> I have seen the day
> That with this little arm and this good sword
> I have made my way through more impediments
> Than twenty times your stop.

V.iii.331, 332. 'If fortune . . . behold. If the inconstant goddess can boast that she ever consistently loved one man and hated another, then one of those two (the latter) we behold. The meaning is clear if we understand the word 'respectively' before lov'd.

V.iii.343. Nor . . . else. Kent sees the grisly irony of Lear's words and puns on them: Neither I nor any of the rest of us have well come hither.

V.iii.352. know our intent. Albany, as the survivor of those to whom Lear had transferred his absolute power, now assumes the royal prerogative and language in order to return to him what he had resigned.

V.iii.356, 357. You . . . rights. That is, I wish you a happy return to the rightful dignities you have been deprived of.

V.iii.362. my poor fool. A phrase of tenderness, of course; but more telling if the rôles of Cordelia and the Fool were linked and Lear were felt by the audience to be taking leave of both of them. See note on III.vi.80.

V.iii.384. Edg. The Quarto gives this last speech to Albany, who might be expected to close the play, but the Folio is right. It is Edgar's reply to Albany's commission: Rule in this realm. Kent replies that he cannot serve because he expects to follow his master in death. Edgar replies that the young must accept the burden of the time and answer its demands by the dictates of their hearts rather than their heads: Speak what we feel, not what we ought (prudentially) to say. He accepts Albany's commission.

The Tragedy of Macbeth

Edited by
EUGENE M. WAITH

Dramatis Personae

DUNCAN, King of Scotland
MALCOLM } his Sons
DONALBAIN }
MACBETH } Generals of the King's Army
BANQUO }
MACDUFF }
LENNOX }
ROSS }
MENTETH } Noblemen of Scotland
ANGUS }
CATHNESS }
FLEANCE, Son to Banquo
SIWARD, Earl of Northumberland, General of the English forces
YOUNG SIWARD, his Son
SEYTON, an Officer attending on Macbeth
BOY, Son to Macduff

AN ENGLISH DOCTOR
A SCOTCH DOCTOR
A CAPTAIN
A PORTER
AN OLD MAN
LADY MACBETH
LADY MACDUFF
GENTLEWOMAN ATTENDING ON LADY MACBETH
HECCAT
THREE WITCHES

LORDS, GENTLEMEN, OFFICERS, SOLDIERS, MURTHERERS, ATTENDANTS, AND MESSENGERS; THE GHOST OF BANQUO, AND OTHER APPARITIONS

SCENE—Scotland; in IV.3, England.

The Tragedy of Macbeth

Introduction

Text and Date

The Tragedie of Macbeth was first printed in the Folio of 1623, the First Folio. This is the only authoritative text, and is consequently the basis of the present edition. From the early 18th century to the present time many editors, feeling that the Folio text was seriously corrupt, have altered it extensively. The main reasons for this feeling are, first, that the play is abnormally short, suggesting that it was cut; second, that certain passages presenting Heccat (III.5; IV.1.39–43, 136–143), stylistically different from the rest of the play, seem to have been interpolated; and, third, that the lineation of the play is often markedly irregular. Most critics agree that the shortness may be due in part to the special requirements of a court performance, but it cannot be proved that there was a much longer version which was drastically cut, as some have suspected. In fact, it is difficult to imagine what of any importance is missing from the play as it stands. As A. C. Bradley pointed out long ago in his Shakespearean Tragedy (London, Macmillan, 1912, pp. 468–9): (1) 'there is no internal evidence of the omission of anything essential to the plot,' (2) Simon Forman, who saw the play in 1611 (see below) mentions nothing we do not find in the Folio; and (3) if extensive cuts were made, their location is extremely puzzling. The question is complicated by the virtual certainty that Shakespeare did not leave the play in its present form. The Heccat passages, referred to above, not only stand out stylistically, but seen to relate Macbeth to The Witch, a manuscript play by Thomas Middleton, in which Heccat appears, singing two songs indicated in the stage direction of Macbeth (III.5.33, IV.1.43). The exact relationship of these plays is uncertain, but it is probable that someone, possibly Middleton himself, added the Heccat passages in the course of revising Shakespeare's play. Although this speculation opens the further possibility that the entire play was substantially altered at the time of this revision, a conservative view limits the changes to the relatively brief interpolations.

It is possible, then, that neither the first nor the second reason for suspecting widespread corruption is valid. Modern editors, such as J. Dover Wilson and Kenneth Muir, argue against the earlier, pessimistic view. The irregular lineation of the Folio, however, presents a difficult problem. If it is not due to the hand of an unskillful reviser, it may be explained as the fantasy of a compositor or as an indication of how the lines should be read. Though I do not brush aside the possibility that the compositor (or a transcriber of the manuscript) rearranged Shakespeare's lines, the alternative explanation seems to me to deserve more consideration than it has been given. For example, Wilson[1] cites the end of II.2 as a place where the compositors 'have obviously been monkeying with the verse-lining . . . in order to fill up their columns.' It may be so, but can we be certain that the Folio printing does not indicate the pauses occasioned by the knocking at the gate and by the anxiety it arouses in Lady Macbeth and Macbeth? A pause between Macbeth's last two lines seems a necessity, and in each of the other cases where these half-lines appear as separate lines, a marked pause might create an appropriate effect. If the half-lines are combined, as is usually done, the indication of such effects is lost. Here and in a few comparable situations I have retained the separate lines, but have introduced modern echeloning. Another example of a sort of punctuation by line-division is provided by III.2.24, 25, which most editors print as one line. This alteration not only obscures what may again be the indication of a pause, but suggests that ecstasy should be crowded into one foot so as to make room in the line for 'Duncan is in his grave.' As they are printed in the Folio, both of these short lines are made up of three feet, and the rhythm and meaning are better served by reading them in that way. Accentuation is adversely affected in another instance, III.1.87, 88, printed by most editors:

which held you
So under fortune, which you thought had been
Our innocent self.

The Folio arrangement, reprinted in this text, suggests the accentuation:

Which yóu thought hád been oúr ínnocent sélf.

This reading, with its heavy emphasis on Macbeth's deceptive portrayal of himself, seems to me a good one; it is surely not indicated by the alternative arrangement. One more instance of what may be punctuation by irregular line-division is II.1.9–11. It is natural for Banquo to pause after the word sleep before uttering his anguished prayer. Though l. 10 has six feet and l. 11 only four, no rearrangement is entirely satisfactory, and the lines as they stand correspond to a natural musical phrasing.

In the face of such evidence we cannot assume that we shall be getting back to what Shakespeare wrote by rearranging the lines in the closest approximation to iambic pentameter. Since the contrary assumption, that the Folio is always right, is also unwarranted, each irregularity must be considered separately. My aim has been to reproduce the Folio lineation except where I could find no raison d'être for an irregularity, or where one could be corrected easily without altering the rhythm or meaning. For example, the Folio prints I.3.142–144 thus:

This supernaturall solliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good.
If ill? why hath it giuen me earnest of successe,

This division might be defended as logical, but no damage is done to a good reading of the lines by adding the first foot of l. 144 to the end of l. 143, making them both normal five-foot lines. In some instances, such as III.1.96–102, the familiar modern rearrangement seems a definite improvement over the Folio's senseless irregularity. Here is the passage as the Folio gives it:

1. Macbeth, Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1951, pp. 90–1.

Macb. I did so:
And went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting.
Doe you finde your patience so predominant,
In your nature, that you can let this goe?
Are you so Gospell'd, to pray for this good man,
And for his Issue, whose heauie hand
Hath bow'd you to the Graue, and begger'd
Yours for euer?

This erractic lineation in no way clarifies the meaning of the passage, nor does it correspond to any conceivable speech rhythm. In such instances I have reproduced a regularization of the lines.

My conclusion is that the case against the irregular lineation of the Folio is not proven. In a large number of passages, therefore, I have preferred to accept the Folio arrangement as possibly deliberate and meaningful. While there is no guarantee that Shakespeare wrote the lines this way, there is at least a fair chance that they were spoken this way, whereas the regularizations often represent only the prosody of an 18th-century editor. The argument for the procedure I have adopted is strengthened by the fact that comparable irregularities of lineation occur in Coriolanus and Antony and Cleopatra, which are thought to have been set up from Shakespeare's own manuscripts. I should point out here that because I have not kept the modern regularizations, the line-numbering of this edition often differs slightly from that of the Globe edition, on which many references are based.

There is little obscurity in Macbeth. In a very few instances, where it seemed essential for the understanding of a passage, I have accepted emendations, recording the divergence from the Folio at the foot of the page. I have rejected two emendations which have become so familiar that the original forms will shock many readers. Scorch'd (III.2.15) is a good word, and has been accepted by several modern editors in preference to Theobald's unnecessary emendation, scotch'd. Theobald is also responsible for weird, instead of which I have kept weyard, the form occuring most often in the Folio. The spelling weird never occurs there, and Theobald's diaeresis is an unsatisfactory means of indicating the two syllables clearly required by the meter. Except in such instances as this, where an archaic spelling is a necessary indication of pronunciation, I have used modern American spelling. In punctuating, I have tried to give the modern equivalents of the Elizabethan marks.

The first recorded performance of Macbeth is that which the astrologer, Dr. Simon Forman, attended on April 20, 1611. Though his reference to 'women feiries or Nimphes' suggests that he refreshed his memory of the play by reading in Holinshed's Chronicle, his account of the performance is extremely interesting as showing what particularly struck one contemporary spectator:

In Mackbeth at the glob[2] 1610[3] the 20 of aprill [Saturday[4]]. ther was to be obserued firste howe Mackbeth and Bancko 2 noble men[5] of Scotland Ridinge thorowe a wod the[r] stode befor them 3 women feiries or Nimphes And Saluted Mackbeth sayinge: 3 tyms vnto him. Haille mackbeth. king of Codor[6] for thou shalt be a kinge but shalt beget No kinges. &c. then said Bancko What all to mackbeth And nothing to me. Yes said the nimphes Haille to thee Banko thou shalt beget kinges. yet be no kinge And so they departed & cam to the Courte of Scotland to Dunkin king of Scotes and yt was in the dais of Edward the Confessor. And Dunkin bad them both kindly wellcom. And made Mackbeth forth with Prince of Northumberland. and sent him hom to his own castell and appointed mackbeth to prouid for him for he wold Sup with him the next dai at night. & did soe. And mackebeth contrived to kill Dunkin. & thorowe the persuasion of his wife did that night Murder the kinge in his own Castell beinge his guest And ther were many prodigies seen that night & the dai before. And when Mack Beth had murdred the kinge the blod on his handes could not be washed of by Any means. nor from his wiues handes which handled the bluddi daggers in hiding them By which means they became both moch amazed & affronted. the murder being knowen Dunkins 2 sonns fled the on to England the [other to] Walles to saue them selues. they beinge fled they were supposed guilty of the murder of their father which was nothinge so—Then was Mackbeth. Crowned kinge and then be for feare of Banko his old Companion that he should beget kinges but be no kinge him self. he contriued the death to Banko and caused him to be Murdred on the way as he Rode The next night beinge at supper with his noble men whom he had bid to a feaste to the which also Banco should haue com. he began to speake of Noble Banco and to wish that he wer ther. And as he thus did standing vp to drincke a Carouse to him. the ghoste of Banco came and sate down in his cheier behind him. And he turninge About to sit down Again sawe the goste of banco which fronted him so. that he fell in to a great passion of fear & fury. Vtteringe many wordes about his murder by which when they hard that Banco was Murdred they Suspected Mackbet.

Then Mack Dove fled to England to the kinges sonn. And soe they Raised an Army and cam to scotland. and at dun ston Anyse over thrue Mackbet. In the meantyme whille Macdouee was in England Mackbet slewe Mackdoues wife & children. and after in the battelle mackdoue slewe mackbet.

Obserue Also howe Mackbetes quen did Rise in the night in her slepe & walke and talked and confessed all & the docter noted her words.[7]

That the performance seen by Forman was not the first is suggested by what seem to be topical allusions in the play to events of 1606, such as the apparent reference to Garnet in II.3.7. Macbeth may have been given at Hampton Court before James I and his royal guest, Christian IV of Denmark, on August 7, 1606; Shakespeare may even have written the play specifically for this occasion.[8] From various bits of evidence it seems most likely that Macbeth belongs to the year 1606.

Any editor of Shakespeare is enormously indebted to his predecessors. I wish to acknowledge in particular my debt to Mark Harvey Liddell (New York Doubleday, Page, 1903), George Lyman Kittredge (Boston, Ginn, 1939), J. Dover Wilson (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1947), and Kenneth Muir (London, Methuen, 1951). I am grateful for innumerable suggestions from the general editors of the Yale Shakespeare, Professors Helge Kökeritz and Charles T. Prouty.

2. Miswritten 'glod.'
3. A slip for '1611,' as is clear from other entries in the MS.
4. Represented by an astronomical sign for Saturn.
5. Italicized letters indicate expansions of MS contractions.
6. Miswritten 'Codon.'
7. See Macbeth, ed. G. L. Kittredge, pp. 240–1; E. K. Chambers, William Shakespeare, Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1930, 2, 337–8.
8. Henry N. Paul, The Royal Play of Macbeth (New York, Macmillan, 1950, pp. 317–31), adduces persuasive evidence to support this hypothesis.

Sources of the Play

Shakespeare's chief source for Macbeth was the second edition (1587) of Raphael Holinshed's Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland. The excerpts from 'The Historie of Scotland' printed below illustrate how Shakespeare put together details from various sections of this work. He obviously read in the pages preceding the account of Macbeth about the murder of King Duff by Donwald, and about the sleeplessness of King Kenneth, tormented by guilt after he had murdered his nephew:

But Donwald, not forgetting the reproch which his linage had susteined by the execution of those his kinsmen, whome the king for a spectacle to the people had caused to be hanged, could not but shew manifest tokens of great griefe at home amongst his familie: which his wife perceiuing, ceassed not to trauell with him, till she vnderstood what the cause was of his displeasure. Which at length when she had learned by his owne relation, she as one that bare no lesse malice in hir heart towards the king, for the like cause of hir behalfe, than hir husband did for his friends, counselled him (sith the king oftentimes vsed to lodge in his house without anie gard about him, other than the garrison of the castell, which was wholie at his commandement) to make him awaie, and shewed him the meanes wherby he might soonest accomplish it.

Donwald thus being the more kindled in wrath by the words of his wife, determined to follow hir aduise in the execution of so heinous an act. Whervpon deuising with himselfe for a while, which way hee might best accomplish his cursed intent, at length gat opportunitie, and sped his purpose as followeth. It chanced that the king vpon the daie before he purposed to depart foorth of the castell, was long in his oratorie at his praiers, and there continued till it was late in the night. At the last, comming foorth, he called such afore him as had faithfullie serued him in pursute and apprehension of the rebels, and giuing them heartie thanks, he bestowed sundrie honorable gifts amongst them, of the which number Donwald was one, as he that had beene euer accounted a most faithfull seruant to the king.

At length, hauing talked with them a long time, he got him into his priuie chamber, onelie with two of his chamberlains, who hauing brought him to bed, came foorth againe, and then fell to banketting with Donwald and his wife, who had prepared diuerse delicate dishes, and sundrie sorts of drinks for their reare supper or collation, wherat they sate vp so long, till they had charged their stomachs with such full gorges, that their heads were no sooner got to the pillow, but asleepe they were so fast, that a man might haue remooued the chamber ouer them, sooner than to haue awaked them out of their droonken sleepe.

Then Donwald, though he abhorred the act greatlie in heart, yet through instigation of his wife hee called foure of his seruants vnto him (whome he had made priuie to his wicked intent before, and framed to his purpose with large gifts) and now declaring vnto them, after what sort they should worke the feat, they gladlie obeied his instructions, & speedilie going about the murther, they enter the chamber (in which the king laie) a little before cocks crow, where they secretlie cut his throte as he lay sleeping, without anie buskling at all: and immediatlie by a posterne gate they caried foorth the dead bodie into the fields . . .

Donwald, about the time that the murther was in dooing, got him amongst them that kept the watch, and so continued in companie with them all the residue of the night. But in the morning when the noise was raised in the kings chamber how the king was slaine, his bodie conueied awaie, and the bed all beraied with bloud; he with the watch ran thither, as though he had knowne nothing of the matter, and breaking into the chamber, and finding cakes of bloud in the bed, and on the floore about the sides of it, he foorthwith slue the chamber-leins, as guiltie of that heinous murther, and then like a mad man running to and fro, he ransacked euerie corner within the castell, as though it had beene to haue seene if he might have found either the bodie, or anie of the murtherers hid in anie priuie place: but at length comming to the posterne gate, and finding it open, he burdened the chamberleins, whome he had slaine, with all the fault, they hauing the keies of the gates committed to their keeping all the night, and therefore it could not be otherwise (said he) but that they were of counsell in the committing of that most detestable murther.

Finallie, such was his ouer earnest diligence in the seuere inquisition and triall of the offendors heerein, that some of the lords began to mislike the matter, and to smell foorth shrewd tokens, that he should not be altogither cleare himselfe. But for so much as they were in that countrie, where he had the whole rule, what by reason of his friends and authoritie togither, they doubted to vtter what they thought, till time and place should better serue therevnto, and heerevpon got them awaie euerie man to his home. For the space of six moneths togither, after this heinous murther thus committed, there appeered no sunne by day, nor moone by night in anie part of the realme, but still was the skie couered with continuall clouds, and sometimes such outragious winds arose, with lightenings and tempests, that the people were in great feare of present destruction. . . .

Monstrous sights also that were seene within the Scotish kingdome that yeere were these: horsses in Louthian, being of singular beautie and swiftnesse, did eate their owne flesh, and would in no wise taste anie other meate. In Angus there was a gentlewoman brought foorth a child without eies, nose, hand, or foot. There was a sparhawke also strangled by an owle. Neither was it anie lesse woonder that the sunne, as before is said, was continuallie couered with clouds for six moneths space. But all men vnderstood that the abhominable murther of king Duffe was the cause heereof . . . (Pp. 150–2).

Thus might he seeme happie to all men, hauing the loue both of his lords and commons: but yet to himselfe he seemed most vnhappie, as he that could not but still liue in continuall feare, least his wicked practise concerning the death of Malcolme Duffe should come to light and knowledge of the world. For so commeth it to passe, that such as are pricked in conscience for anie secret offense committed, haue euer an vnquiet mind. And (as the fame goeth) it chanced that a voice was heard as he was in bed in the night time to take his rest, vttering vnto him these or the like woords in effect: 'Thinke not Kenneth that the wicked slaughter of Malcolme Duffe by thee contriued, is kept secret from the knowledge of the eternall God: thou art he that didst conspire the innocents death, enterprising by traitorous meanes to doo that to thy neighbour, which thou wouldest haue reuenged by cruell punishment in anie of thy subjects, if it had beene offered to thy selfe. It shall therefore come to passe, that both thou thy selfe, and thy issue, through the iust vengeance of almightie God, shall suffer woorthie punishment, to the infamie of thy house and familie for euermore. For euen at this present are there in hand secret practises to dispatch both thee and thy issue out of the waie, that other maie inioy this kingdome which thou doost indeuour to assure vnto thine issue.'

The king, with this voice being striken into great dread and terror, passed that night without anie sleepe comming in his eies. (P. 158.)

Ten pages later comes the story of Duncan's succession to the throne:

After Malcolme succeeded his nephue Duncane the sonne of his daughter Beatrice: for Malcolme had two daughters, the one which was this Beatrice, being giuen in mariage vnto one Abbanath Crinen, a man of great nobilitie, and thane of the Iles and west parts of Scotland, bare of that mariage the foresaid Duncane; the other called Doada, was maried vnto Sinell the thane of Glammis, by whom she had issue one Makbeth a valiant gentleman, and one that if he had not beene somewhat cruell of nature, might have beene thought most woorthie the gouernement of a realme. On the other part, Duncane was so soft and gentle of nature, that the people wished the inclinations and maners of these two cousins to haue beene so tempered and interchangeablie bestowed betwixt them, that where the one had too much of clemencie, and the other of crueltie, the meane vertue betwixt these two extremities might haue reigned by indifferent partition in them both, so should Duncane haue proued a woorthie king, and Makbeth an excellent capteine.

Holinshed then gives a lengthy account of the rebellion of Makdowald (Shakespeare's 'merciless Macdonwald'), and the wars against Sueno of Norway and Canute of England, in all of which Macbeth and Banquo fought victoriously for Duncan. The three actions are combined in the account given in I.2. Next comes the introduction of Macbeth's ambition for the throne:

After these were the warres that Duncane had with forren enimies, in the seuenth yeere of his reigne. Shortlie after happened a strange and vncouth woonder, which afterward was the cause of much trouble in the realme of Scotland, as ye shall after heare. It fortuned as Makbeth and Banquho iournied towards Fores, where the king then laie, they went sporting by the waie togither without other companie, saue onelie themselues, passing thorough the woods and fields, when suddenlie in the middest of a laund, there met them three women in strange and wild apparell, resembling creatures of elder world, whome when they attentiuelie beheld, woondering much at the sight, the first of them spake and said; 'All haile Makbeth, thane of Glammis' (for he had latelie entered into that dignitie and office by the death of his father Sinell). The second of them said: 'Haile Makbeth thane of Cawder.' But the third said; 'All haile Mackbeth that heereafter shalt be king of Scotland.'

Then Banquho; 'What manner of woman (saith he) are you, that seeme so little fauourable vnto me, whereas to my fellow heere, besides high offices, ye assigne also the kingdome, appointing foorth nothing for me at all?' 'Yes (saith the first of them) we promise greater benefits vnto thee, than vnto him, for he shall reigne in deed, but with an vnluckie end: neither shall he leaue anie issue behind him to succeed in his place, where contrarilie thou in deed shalt not reigne at all, but of thee those shall be borne which shall gouerne the Scotish kingdome by long order of continuall descent.' Herewith the foresaid women vanished immediatlie out of their sight. This was reputed at the first but some vaine fantasticall illusion by Mackbeth and Banquho, insomuch that Banquho would call Mackbeth in iest, king of Scotland; and Mackbeth againe would call him in sport likewise, the father of manie kings. But afterwards the common opinion was, that these women were either the weird sisters, that is (as ye would say) the goddesses of destinie, or else some nymphs or feiries, indued with knowledge of prophesie by their necromanticall science, bicause euerie thing came to passe as they had spoken. For shortlie after, the thane of Cawder being condemned at Fores of treason against the king committed; his lands, liuings, and offices were giuen of the kings liberalitie to Mackbeth.

The same night after, at supper, Banquho iested with him and said; Now Mackbeth thou hast obteined those things which the two former sisters prophesied, there remaineth onelie for thee to purchase that which the third said should come to passe. Wherevpon Mackbeth reuoluing the thing in his mind, began euen then to deuise how he might atteine to the kingdome: but yet he thought with himselfe that he must tarie a time, which should aduance him thereto (by the diuine prouidence) as it had come to passe in his former preferment. But shortlie after it chanced the king Duncane, hauing two sonnes by his wife which was the daughter of Siward earle of Northumberland, he made the elder of them called Malcolme prince of Cumberland, as it were thereby to appoint him his successor in the kingdome, immediatlie after his deceasse. Mackbeth sore troubled herewith, for that he saw by this means his hope sore hindered (where, by the old lawes of the realme, the ordinance was, that if he that should succeed were not of able age to take the charge vpon himselfe, he that was next of bloud vnto him should be admitted) he began to take counsell how he might vsurpe the kingdome by force, hauing a iust quarell so to doo (as he tooke the matter) for that Duncane did what in him lay to defraud him of all maner of title and claime, which he might in time to come, pretend vnto the crowne.

The woords of the three weird sisters also (of whom before ye haue heard) greatlie incouraged him herevnto, but speciallie his wife lay sore vpon him to attempt the thing, as she that was verie ambitious, burning in vnquenchable desire to beare the name of a queene. At length therefore, communicating his purposed intent with his trustie friends, amongst whome Banquho was the chiefest, vpon confidence of their promised aid, he slue the king at Enuerns, or (as some say) at Botgosuane, in the sixt years of his reigne. Then hauing a companie about him of such as he had made priuie to his enterprise, he caused himselfe to be proclaimed king, and foorthwith went vnto Scone, where (by common consent) he receiued the inuesture of the kingdome according to the accustomed maner. The bodie of Duncane was first conueied vnto Elgine, & there buried in kinglie wise; but afterwards it was remoued and conueied vnto Colmekill, and there laid in a sepulture amongst his predecessors, in the yeare after the birth of our Sauiour, 1046.

Malcolme Cammore and Donald Bane the sons of king Duncane, for feare of their liues (which they might well know that Mackbeth would seeke to bring to end for his more sure confirmation in the estate) fled into Cumberland, where Malcolme remained, till time that saint Edward the sonne of Ethelred recouered the dominion of England from the Danish power, the which Edward receiued Malcolme by way of most friendlie enterteinment: but Donald passed ouer into Ireland, where he was tenderlie cherished by the king of that land. Mackbeth, after the departure thus of Duncanes sonnes, vsed great liberalitie towards the nobles of the realme, thereby to win their fauour, and when he saw that no man went about to trouble him, he set his whole intention to mainteine iustice, and to punish all enormities and abuses, which had chanced through the feeble and slouthful administration of Duncane. (Pp. 170–1).

After Holinshed has described some good laws passed by Macbeth at the beginning of his reign, he continues:

These and the like commendable lawes Mackbeth caused to be put as then in vse, gouerning the realme for the space of ten yeares in equall iustice. But this was but a counterfet zeale of equitie shewed by him, partlie against his naturall inclination to purchase thereby the fauour of the people. Shortlie after, he began to shew what he was, in stead of equitie practising crueltie. For the pricke of conscience (as it chanceth euer in tyrants, and such as atteine to anie estate by vnrighteous means) caused him euer to feare, least he should be serued of the same cup, as he had ministred to his predecessor. The woords also of the three weird sisters, would not out of his mind, which as they promised him the kingdome, so likewise did they promise it at the same time vnto the posteritie of Banquho. He willed therefore the same Banquho with his sonne named Fleance, to come to a supper that he had prepared for them, which was in deed, as he had deuised, present death at the hands of certeine murderers, whom he hired to execute that deed, appointing them to meete with the same Banquho and his sonne without the palace, as they returned to their lodgings, and there to slea them, so that he would not haue his house slandered, but that in time to come he might cleare himselfe, if anie thing were laid in his charge vpon anie suspicion that might arise.

It chanced yet by the benefit of the darke night, that though the father were slaine, the sonne yet by the helpe of almightie God reseruing him to better fortune, escaped that danger: and afterwards hauing some inkeling (by the admonition of some friends which he had in the court) how his life was sought no lesse than his fathers, who was slaine not by chancemedlie (as by the handling of the matter Makbeth woould haue had it to appeare) but euen vpon a prepensed deuise: wherevpon to auoid further perill he fled into Wales. (P. 172.)

An account of the Stuart dynasty follows. Shakespeare, at a comparable point in his play, introduces the 'show of eight kings.' Holinshed then describes how Macbeth became suspicious of Macduff:

Neither could he afterwards abide to looke vpon the said Makduffe, either for that he thought his puissance ouer great; either else for that he had learned of certeine wizzards, in whose words he put great confidence (for that the prophesie had happened so right, which the three faries or weird sisters had declared vnto him) how that he ought to take heed of Makduffe, who in time to come should seeke to destroie him.

And suerlie herevpon had he put Makduffe to death, but that a certeine witch, whom hee had in great trust, had told that he should neuer be slaine with man borne of anie woman, nor vanquished till the wood of Bernane came to the castell of Dunsinane. By this prophesie Makbeth put all feare out of his heart, supposing he might doo what he would, without anie feare to be punished for the same, for by the one prophesie he beleeued it was vnpossible for anie man to vanquish him, and by the other vnpossible to slea him. This vaine hope caused him to doo manie outragious things, to the greeuous oppression of his subiects. At length Makduffe, to auoid peril of life, purposed with himselfe to passe into England, to procure Malcolme Cammore to claime the crowne of Scotland. But this was not so secretlie deuised by Makduffe, but that Makbeth had knowledge giuen him thereof: for kings (as is said) haue sharpe sight like vnto Lynx, and long ears like vnto Midas. For Makbeth had in euerie noble mans house one slie fellow or other in fee with him, to reueale all that was said or doone within the same, by which slight he oppressed the most part of the nobles of his realme.

Immediatlie then, being aduertised whereabout Makduffe went, he came hastily with a great power into Fife, and foorthwith besieged the castell where Makduffe dwelled, trusting to haue found him therein. They that kept the house, without anie resistance opened the gates, and suffered him to enter, mistrusting none euill. But neuertheless Makbeth most cruellie caused the wife and children of Makbeth, with all other whom he found in that castell, to be slaine. Also he confiscated the goods of Makduffe, proclamed him traitor, and confined him out of all the parts of his realme; but Makduffe was alreadie escaped out of danger, and gotten into England vnto Malcolme Cammore, to trie what purchase hee might make by means of his support, to reuenge the slaughter so cruellie executed on his wife, his children, and other friends. At his comming vnto Malcolme, he declared into what great miserie the estate of Scotland was brought, by the detestable cruelties exercised by the tyrant Makbeth, hauing committed manie horrible slaughters and murders, both as well of the nobles as commons, for the which he was hated right mortallie of all his liege people, desiring nothing more than to be deliuered of that intollerable and most heauie yoke of thraldome, which they susteined at such a caitifes hands.

Malcolme hearing Makduffe's woords, which he vttered in verie lamentable sort, for meere compassion and verie ruth that pearsed his sorowfull hart, bewailing the miserable state of his countrie, he fetched a deepe sigh; which Makduffe perceiuing, began to fall most earnestlie in hand with him, to enterprise the deliuering of the Scotish people out of the hands of so cruell and bloudie a tyrant, as Makbeth by too manie plaine experiments did shew himselfe to be: which was an easie matter for him to bring to passe, considering not onelie the good title he had, but also the earnest desire of the people to haue some occasion ministred, whereby they might be reuenged of those notable iniuries, which they dailie susteined by the outragious crueltie of Makbeths misgouernance. Though Malcolme was verie sorowfull for the oppression of his countriemen the Scots, in maner as Makduffe had declared; yet doubting whether he were come as one that ment vnfeinedlie as he spake, or else as sent from Makbeth to betraie him, he thought to haue some further triall, and therevpon dissembling his mind at the first, he answered as followeth.

'I am trulie verie sorie for the miserie chanced to my countrie of Scotland, but though I haue neuer so great affection to relieue the same, yet by reason of certeine incurable vices, which reigne in me, I am nothing meet thereto. First, such immoderate lust and voluptuous sensualitie (the abhominable founteine of all vices) followeth me, that if I were made king of Scots, I should seeke to defloure your maids and matrones, in such wise that mine intemperancie should be more importable vnto you than the bloudie tyrannie of Makbeth now is.' Heerevnto Makduffe answers: 'This suerlie is a verie euill fault, for manie noble princes and kings haue lost both liues and kingdomes for the same; neuerthelesse there are women enow in Scotland, and therefore follow my counsell. Make thy selfe king, and I shall conueie the matter so wiselie, that thou shalt be so satisfied at thy pleasure in such secret wise, that no man shall be aware thereof.'

Then said Malcolme, 'I am also the most auaritious creature on the earth, so that if I were king, I should seeke so manie waies to get lands and goods, that I would slea the most part of all the nobles of Scotland by surmized accusations, to the end I might inioy their lands, goods, and possessions; and therefore to shew you what mischiefe may insue on you through mine vnsatiable couetousnes, I will rehearse vnto you a fable. There was a fox hauing a sore place on him ouerset with a swarme of flies, that continuallie sucked out hir bloud: and when one that came by and saw this manner, demanded whether she would haue the flies driuen beside hir, she answered no: for if these flies that are alreadie full, and by reason thereof sucke not verie egerlie, should be chased awaie, other that are emptie and fellie an hungred, should light in their places, and sucke out the residue of my bloud farre more to my greeuance than these, which now being satisfied doo not much annoie me. Therefore' saith Malcome, 'suffer me to remaine where I am, least if I atteine to the regiment of your realme, mine vnquenchable auarice may prooue such; that ye would thinke the displeasures which now grieue you, should seeme easie in respect of the vnmeasurable outrage, which might insue through my comming amongst you.'

Makduffee to this made answer, how it was a far woorse fault than the other: 'for auarice is the root of all mischiefe, and for that crime the most part of our kings haue beene slaine and brought to their finall end. Yet notwithstanding follow my counsell, and take vpon thee the crowne. There is gold and riches inough in Scotland to satisfie thy greedie desire.' Then said Malcolme againe, 'I am furthermore inclined to dissimulation, telling of leasings, and all other kinds of deceit, so that I naturallie reioise in nothing so much, as to betraie & deceiue such as put anie trust or confidence in my words. Then sith there is nothing that more becommeth a prince than constancie, veritie, truth, and iustice, with the other laudable fellowship of those faire and noble vertues which are comprehended onelie in soothfastnesse, and that lieng vtterlie ouerthroweth the same; you see how vnable I am to gouerne anie prouince or region: and therefore sith you haue remedies to cloke and hide all the rest of my other vices, I praie you find shift to cloke this vice amongst the residue.'

Then said Makduffe: 'This yet is the woorst of all, and there I leaue thee, and therefore saie; Oh ye vnhappie and miserable Scotishmen, which are thus scourged with so manie and sundrie calamities, ech one aboue other! Ye haue one cursed and wicked tyrant that now reigneth ouer you, without anie right or title, oppressing you with his most bloudie crueltie. This other that hath the right to the crowne, is so replet with the inconstant behauiour and manifest vices of Englishmen, that he is nothing woorthie to inioy it: for by his owne confession he is not onelie auaritious, and giuen to vnsatiable lust, but so false a traitor withall, that no trust is to be had vnto anie woord he speaketh. Adieu Scotland, for now I account my selfe a banished man for euer, without comfort or consolation': and with those woords the brackish tears trickled downe his cheekes verie abundantlie.

At the last, when he was readie to depart, Malcolme tooke him by the sleeue, and said: 'Be of good comfort Makduffe, for I haue none of these vices before remembred, but haue iested with thee in this manner, onelie to prooue thy mind: for diuerse times heeretofore hath Makbeth sought by this manner of meanes to bring me into his hands, but the more slow I haue shewed my selfe to condescend to thy motion and request, the more diligence shall I vse in accomplishing the same.' Incontinentlie heerevpon they imbraced ech other, and promising to be faithfull the one to the other, they fell in consultation how they might best prouide for all their businesse, to bring the same to good effect. Soone after, Makduffe repairing to the borders of Scotland, addressed his letters with secret dispatch vnto the nobles of the realme, declaring how Malcolme was confederat with him, to come hastilie into Scotland to claime the crowne, and therefore he required them, sith he was right inheritor thereto, to assist him with their powers to recouer the same out of the hands of the wrongfull vsurper.

In the meane time, Malcolme purchased such fauor at king Edwards hands, that old Siward earle of Northumberland was appointed with ten thousand men to go with him into Scotland, to support him in this enterprise, for recouerie of his right. After these newes were spread abroad in Scotland, the nobles drew into two seuerall factions, the one taking part with Makbeth, and the other with Malcolme. Heerevpon insued oftentimes sundrie bickerings, & diuerse light skirmishes: for those that were of Malcolmes side, would not ieopard to ioine with their enimies in a pight field, till his comming out of England to their support. But after that Makbeth perceiued his enimies power to increase, by such aid as came to them foorth of England with his aduersarie Malcolme, he recoiled backe into Fife, there purposing to abide in campe fortified, at the castell of Dunsinane, and to fight with his enimies, if they ment to pursue him; howbeit some of his friends aduised him, that it should be best for him, either to make some agreement with Malcolme, or else to flee with all speed into the Iles, and to take his treasure with him, to the end he might wage sundrie great princes of the realme to take his part, & reteine strangers, in whome he might better trust than in his owne subiects, which stale dailie from him: but he had such confidence in his prophesies, that he beleeued he should neuer be vanquished, till Birnane wood were brought to Dunsinane; nor yet to be slaine with anie man, that should be or was borne of anie woman.

Malcolme following hastilie after Makbeth, came the night before the battell vnto Birnane wood, and when his armie had rested a while there to refresh them, he commanded euerie man to get a bough of some tree or other of that wood in his hand, as big as he might beare, and to march foorth therewith in such wise, that on the next morrow they might come closelie and without sight in this manner within viewe of his enimies. On the morrow when Makbeth beheld them comming in this sort, he first maruelled what the matter ment, but in the end remembered himselfe that the prophesie which he had heard long before that time, of the comming of Birnane wood to Dunsinane castell, was likelie to be now fulfilled. Neuertheless, he brought his men in order of battell, and exhorted them to doo valiantlie, howbeit his enimies had scarselie cast from them their boughs, when Makbeth perceiuing their numbers, betooke him streict to flight, whom Makduffe pursued with great hatred euen till he came vnto Lunfannaine, where Makbeth perceiuing that Makduffe was hard at his backe, leapt beside his horsse, saieng; 'Thou traitor, what meaneth it that thou shouldest thus in vaine follow me that am not appointed to be slaine by anie creature that is borne of a woman, come on therefore, and receiue thy reward which thou hast deserued for thy paines,' and therewithall he lifted vp his swoord thinking to haue slaine him.

But Makduffe quicklie auoiding from his horsse, yer he came at him, answered (with his naked swoord in his hand) saieng: 'It is true Makbeth, and now shall thine insatiable crueltie haue an end, for I am euen he that thy wizzards haue told thee of, who was neuer borne of my mother, but ripped out of her wombe': therewithall he stept vnto him, and slue him in the place. Then cutting his head from his shoulders, he set it vpon a pole, and brought it vnto Malcolme. This was the end of Makbeth, after he had reigned 17 yeeres ouer the Scotishmen. In the beginning of his reigne he accomplished manie woorthie acts, verie profitable to the commonwealth (as ye haue heard), but afterward by illusion of the diuell, he defamed the same with most terrible crueltie. He was slaine in the yeere of the incarnation 1057, and in the 16 yeere of king Edwards reigne ouer the Englishmen. (Pp. 174–6.)

Any reader of these excerpts will observe that Shakespeare departs notably from Holinshed in depicting the characters of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. Holinshed's description of Donwald and his wife does not account for the departure, and it may be that Shakespeare was influenced by other historians of Scotland. Several scholars, Henry Paul most recently, have suggested that he was familiar with the Latin Rerum Scoticarum Historia (1582) by George Buchanan, whose portrayal of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth differs considerably from that of Holinshed. The nature of the difference may be seen from the following brief excerpts in Paul's translation:[1]

For Macbeth had keen intelligence, was absolutely high minded and desirous of great things; had moderation been given to him he would have been worthy of exercise power howsoever great.

• • •

By this dream [in Buchanan the meeting with the witches occurs in a dream] his mind, sick with desire and hope, was so profoundly stirred that he kept turning over with himself all the ways of obtaining the kingdom. [Even before the dream he] cherished in his mind a hidden hope of being king.

• • •

His mind, bold enough of itself, was spurred on by the almost daily taunts of his wife, who shared all of his plans.

• • •

The stings of the king's murder drove his overwrought mind to a precipice, as he turned his rule gained by perfidy into a cruel tyranny.

1. See Paul, pp. 213–17; Buchanan, pp. 72–3.

Act First ❧ Scene First

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

1 Witch. When shall we three meet again?
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.
3 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.
1 Witch. Where the place?
2 Witch. Upon the heath.
3 Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.
1 Witch. I come, Graymalkin!
2 Witch. Paddock calls.
3 Witch. Anon!
All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Hover through the fog and filthy air. Exeunt.

❧ Scene Second ❧

Alarum within. Enter King [Duncan], Malcolm, Donalbain, Lennox, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Captain.

Duncan. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.
Malcolm. This is the sergeant,
Who like a good and hardy soldier fought
'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend!
Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
As thou didst leave it.
Captain. Doubtful it stood,
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald—
Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villainies of nature
Do swarm upon him—from the Western Isles
Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied;
And Fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak;
For brave Macbeth—well he deserves that name—
Disdaining Fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like Valor's minion carv'd out his passage
Till he fac'd the slave;
Which nev'r shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
Till he unseam'd him from the nave to th' chops,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.
Duncan. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Captain. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection
Shipwracking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to come
Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark:
No sooner Justice had, with valor arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their heels,
But the Norweyan lord, surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms and new supplies of men
Began a fresh assault.
Duncan. Dismay'd not this our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?
Captain. Yes, as sparrows eagles,
Or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks,
So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe.
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell—but I am faint,
My gashes cry for help.
Duncan. So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honor both. Go, get him surgeons.
[Exit Captain, attended.]

Enter Ross and Angus.

Who comes here?
Malcolm. The worthy Thane of Ross.
Lennox. What a haste looks through his eyes!
So should he look that seems to speak things strange.
Ross. God save the king!
Duncan. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?
Ross. From Fife, great king;
Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky
And fan our people cold.
Norway himself, with terrible numbers,
Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,
The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict,
Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,
Confronted him with self-comparisons,
Point against point, rebellious arm 'gainst arm,
Curbing his lavish spirit; and to conclude,
The victory fell on us.
Duncan. Great happiness!
Ross. That now Sweno, the Norways' king,
Craves composition;
Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disbursed, at Saint Colme's Inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use.
Duncan. No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive.
Our bosom interest. Go pronounce his present death,
And with his former title greet Macbeth.
Ross. I'll see it done.
Duncan. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won.
Exeunt.

SD Thunder and lightning: Cf. n. 9–13 Graymalkin . . . air: Cf. n. 11 Anon: right away SD Alarum within: trumpet call off stage 4 sergeant: three syllables; Cf. n. 12 to that: to make him so 15 kerns: light-armored Irish foot soldiers gallowglasses: Irish armor-bearers; F. Gallowgrosses 16 quarrel: F. Quarry 20 execution: five syllables 21 minion: (three syllables) favorite 23 Which: who; Cf. n. 24 he: i.e. Macbeth unseam'd: ripped nave: navel 27, 28 As whence . . . thunders break; Cf. n. 27 reflection: (four syllables) shining 28 break: F omits 33 surveying vantage: seeing his chance 40 sooth: truth 41 cracks: explosions, i.e. charges 43 Except: unless reeking: steaming 44 memorize another Golgotha; Cf. n. 50 Thane; Cf. n. 56, 57 flout . . . cold; Cf. n. 58 Norway: the King of Norway 60 dismal: disastrous 61 Bellona: goddess of war bridegroom: i.e. Macbeth lapp'd in proof: clad in tested (proved) armor 62 Confronted him with self-comparisons: i.e. showed him (Norway) his equal 63 rebellious; Cf. n. 64 lavish: insolent 67 Norways': Norwegians' 68 composition: (five syllables) a truce 70 Saint Colme's Inch: the island of Inchcolm in the Firth of Forth 71 dollars: 16th-century German and Spanish currency (thaler) general: read 'gen'ral'; Cf. n. 72, 73 deceive . . . interest; Cf. n.

Scene Third

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?
2 Witch. Killing swine.
3 Witch. Sister, where thou?
1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,
And munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd: 'Give me,' quoth I:
'Aroint thee, witch!' the rump-fed ronyon cries.
Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' th' Tiger:
But in a sieve I'll thither sail,
And, like a rat without a tail,
I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.
2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.
1 Witch. Th' art kind.
3 Witch. And I another.
1 Witch. I myself have all the other;
And the very ports they blow,
All the quarters that they know
I' th' shipman's card.
I'll drain him dry as hay;
Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his penthouse lid;
He shall live a man forbid.
Weary sev'nights nine times nine
Shall he dwindle, peak and pine:
Though his bark cannot be lost,
Yet it shall be tempest-tost.
Look what I have.
2 Witch. Show me, show me.
1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,
Wrack'd as homeward he did come. Drum within.
3 Witch. A drum! a drum!
Macbeth doth come.
All. The weyard sisters, hand in hand,
Posters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about,
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again, to make up nine.
Peace! the charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macbeth. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.
Banquo. How far is't call'd to Forres? What are these,
So wither'd and so wild in their attire,
That look not like th' inhabitants o' th' earth,
And yet are on't? Live you? or are you aught
That man may question? You seem to understand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny lips. You should be women,
And yet your beards forbid me to interpret
That you are so.
Macbeth. Speak, if you can: what are you?
1 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Glamis!
2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!
3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth, that shall be king hereafter!
Banquo. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear
Things that do sound so fair? I' th' name of truth,
Are ye fantastical, or that indeed
Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner
You greet with present grace and great prediction
Of noble having and of royal hope,
That he seems rapt withal; to me you speak not.
If you can look into the seeds of time,
And say which grain will grow and which will not,
Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear
Your favors nor your hate.
1 Witch. Hail!
2 Witch. Hail!
3 Witch. Hail!
1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.
2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.
3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none.
So, all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!
1 Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!
Macbeth. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more.
By Sinel's death I know I am Thane of Glamis;
But how of Cawdor? the Thane of Cawdor lives,
A prosperous gentleman; and to be king
Stands not within the prospect of belief
No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence
You owe this strange intelligence, or why
Upon this blasted heath you stop our way
With such prophetic greeting. Speak, I charge you.
Witches vanish.
Banquo. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them. Whither are they vanish'd?
Macbeth. Into the air, and what seem'd corporal
Melted, as breath into the wind.
Would they had stay'd!
Banquo. Were such things here as we do speak about?
Or have we eaten on the insane root
That takes the reason prisoner?
Macbeth. Your children shall be kings.
Banquo. You shall be king.
Macbeth. And Thane of Cawdor too; went it not so?
Banquo. To th' selfsame tune and words. Who's here?

Enter Ross and Angus.

Ross. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,
The news of thy success; and when he reads
Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend
Which should be thine, or his. Silenc'd with that,
In viewing o'er the rest o' th' selfsame day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as hail
Came post with post, and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defense,

7 Aroint thee: begone rump-fed: fat-rumped ronyon: term of abuse; literally 'scab' 8 Tiger: name of a ship 15 other: i.e. other winds 16 ports they blow: ports to which they blow (?); Cf. n. 18 card: dial of the compass 21 penthouse lid: eyelid; Cf. n. 22 forbid: accursed 24 peak: waste away 33 weyard: weird; F. weyward; Cf. n. 34 Posters: persons who ride posthaste 36, 37 thrice to thine . . . to make up mine; Cf. n. 40 Forres: F. Soris 45 choppy: chapped, cracked 47 beards; Cf. n.

55 fantastical: imaginary 58 having: estate 59 rapt withal: transported by it 69 get: beget 73 Sinel: Macbeth's father 83 corporal: corporeal 87 insane: causing insanity as, e.g., hemlock was supposed to do 96, 97 His wonders . . . Silenc'd with that; Cf. n. 101 images of death: i.e. those killed by Macbeth; F. punctuates death, as 101, 102 hail/Came: F. Tale/Can

And pour'd them down before him.
Angus. We are sent
To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.
Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater honor,
He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor;
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!
For it is thine.
Banquo. What, can the devil speak true?
Macbeth. The Thane of Cawdor lives;
Why do you dress me in borrowed robes?
Angus. Who was the thane lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose.
Whether he was combin'd with those of Norway,
Or did line the rebel with hidden help
And vantage, or that with both he labor'd
In his country's wrack, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrown him.
Macbeth. [Aside.] Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind.
[To Ross and Angus.] Thanks for your pains.
[To Banquo.] Do you not hope your children shall be kings.
When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me
Promis'd no less to them?
Banquo. That, trusted home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
Win us with honest trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.
Cousins, a word, I pray you.
Macbeth. [Aside.] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentleman.—
[Aside.] This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill, cannot be good; if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of Cawdor.
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose murther yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man
That function is smother'd in surmise,
And nothing is but what is not.
Banquo. Look how our partner's rapt.
Macbeth. [Aside.] If chance will have me king, why,
chance may crown me,
Without my stir.
Banquo. New honors come upon him.
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mold
But with the aid of use.
Macbeth. [Aside.] Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.
Banquo. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon our leisure.
Macbeth. Give me your favor;
My dull brain was wrought with things forgotten.
Kind gentlemen, your pains are register'd
Where every day I turn the leaf to read them.
Let us toward the king.
[To Banquo.] Think upon what hath chanc'd; and,
at more time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.
Banquo. Very gladly.
Macbeth. Till then, enough. Come, friends. Exeunt.

109 earnest: pledge 111 addition: title 113 devil: (one syllable here) often spelled and pronounced 'divel' 120 line: reinforce 122 wrack: ruin 131 home: to the utmost 137 In deepest consequence: in matters of gravest importance 140 swelling: stately; see Henry V, Prologue, 3–4 142 soliciting: prompting 148 seated: firmly fixed 149 Against . . . nature: contrary to natural habit 151 murther: common Elizabethan variant of 'murder' fantastical: imaginary 152–155 Shakes . . . rapt; Cf. n. 152 single state of man; Cf. n. single, undivided, unbroken 153 function: normal activity of mind and body

Scene Fourth

Flourish. Enter King, Lennox, Malcolm, Donalbain, and Attendants.

Duncan. Is execution done on Cawdor?
Are not those in commission yet return'd?
Malcolm. My liege, they are not yet come back.
But I have spoke with one that saw him die;
Who did report that very frankly he
Confess'd his treasons, implor'd your highness' pardon,
And set forth a deep repentance.
Nothing in his life became him
Like the leaving it. He died
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd
As 'twere a careless trifle.
Duncan. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

Enter Macbeth, Banquo, Ross, and Angus.

O worthiest cousin,
The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserv'd,
That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.
Macbeth. The service and the loyality I owe,
In doing it, pays itself.
Your highness' part is to receive our duties;
And our duties are to your throne and state,
Children and servants, which do but what they should,
By doing everything safe toward your love
And honor.

160 strange: unfamiliar, new their mold: i.e. the body 162, 163 Come . . . day; Cf. n. 162 runs: alternative plural form 165 favor: pardon 166 wrought: troubled SD Flourish: trumpet fanfare 2 Are: F. Or in commission: charged with the duty 10 had been studied: had trained himself 11 ow'd: owned 19 before: ahead 22, 23 That . . . mine; Cf. n. 23 I have: read I've; Cf. n. 30 safe toward: to guarantee

Duncan. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labor
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so, let me infold thee
And hold thee to my heart.
Banquo. There if I grow,
The harvest is your own.
Duncan. My plenteous joys,
Wanton is fullness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter
The Prince of Cumberland; which honor must
Not unaccompanied invest him only,
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.
Macbeth. The rest is labor, which is not us'd for you:
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.
Duncan. My worthy Cawdor!
Macbeth. [Aside.] The Prince of Cumberland! that is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap;
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires;
Let not light see my black and deep desires;
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see. Exit.
Duncan. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations I am fed:
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

Enter Macbeth's Wife alone, with a letter.

Lady Macbeth. 'They met me in the day of success; and I have learn'd by the perfect'st report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burn'd in desire to question them further, they made themselves air, into which they vanish'd. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hail'd me, "Thane of Cawdor," by which title, before, these weyard sisters saluted me, and referred to me to the coming on of time with "Hail, king that shalt be!" This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightst not lose the dues of rejoicing by being ignorant of what greatness is promis'd thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell.'
Glamis thou art, and Cawdor, and shalt be
What thou art promis'd. Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full o' th' milk of human kindness
To catch the nearest way. Thou wouldst be great,
Art not without ambition, but without
The illness should attend it. What thou wouldst highly
That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win.
Thou'dst have, great Glamis, that which cries,
'Thus thou must do,' if thou have it,
And that which rather thou dost fear to do
Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee hither,
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valor of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which Fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter Messenger.

What is your tidings?
Messenger. The king comes here tonight.
Lady Macbeth. Thou'rt mad to say it.
Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.
Messenger. So please you, it is true; our thane is coming;
One of my fellows had the speed of him,
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.
Lady Macbeth. Give him tending;
He brings great news. Exit Messenger.
The raven himself is hoarse
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here,
And fill me from the crown to the toe top-full
Of direst cruelty! Make thick my blood,
Stop up th' access and passage to remorse,
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
Th' effect and it! Come to my women's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murth'ring ministers,
Wherever in your sightless substances
You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick Night,
And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor Heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
To cry 'Hold, hold!'

Enter Macbeth.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!
Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.
Macbeth. My dearest love,
Duncan comes here tonight.
Lady Macbeth. And when goes hence?

41 Wanton: unrestrained 44 establish our estate: settle the succession 46 Prince of Cumberland; Cf. n. 51 The rest . . . for you; Cf. n. rest: repose 53 your approach: i.e. news of your approach 5 missives: messengers 7 weyard: F weyward 9 deliver: report to 13 shalt: wilt 16 catch the nearest way: take the shortest route 18 The illness should: the wickedness which should 19–24 Thou'dst have . . . undone; Cf. n. 26 chastise: stressed — — — 27 round: i.e. crown 28 metaphysical: supernatural 34 preparation: five syllables 36 had the speed of: outspeeded 41 raven; Cf. n. 42 entrance: perhaps three syllables here 44 mortal: murderous 49, 50 keep . . . it; Cf. n. 50 it: F. hit 51 take: exchange 52 sightless: invisible 54 pall: enshroud dunnest: murkiest 59 hereafter: following, i.e. the third all-hail

Macbeth. Tomorrow, as he purposes.
Lady Macbeth. O, never
Shall sun that morrow see!
Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
May read strange matters. To beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like th' innocent flower,
But be the serpent under't. He that's coming
Must be provided for; and you shall put
This night's great business into my dispatch;
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.
Macbeth. We will speak further.
Lady Macbeth. Only look up clear;
To alter favor ever is to fear.
Leave all the rest to me. Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

Hoboyes and torches. Enter King, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lennox, Macduff, Ross, Angus, and Attendants.

Duncan. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.
Banquo. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve
By his lov'd mansionry that the heavens' breath
Smells wooingly here; no jutty, frieze,
Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed and procreant cradle:
Where they most breed and haunt, I have observ'd
The air is delicate.

Enter Lady.

Duncan. See, see, our honor'd hostess!
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you
How you shall bid God eyld us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.
Lady Macbeth. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and single business, to contend
Against those honors deep and broad
Wherewith your majesty loads our house.
For those of old, and the late dignities
Heap'd up to them, we rest your ermites.
Duncan. Where's the Thane of Cawdor?
We cours'd him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor; but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest tonight.

70 To beguile: the time F punctuates matters, to beguile the time; Cf. n. 75 dispatch: management 79 clear: with unclouded face 80 favor: facial expression SD Hoboyes: (phonetic spelling of 'hautboys') woodwind instruments, related to modern oboe torches; Cf. n. 1 seat: situation 5 martlet: F. Barlet; Cf. n. approve: prove 6 mansionry: home-building 7 jutty: projection 8 coign of vantage: advantageous projecting corner 9 procreant cradle: cradle where he breeds 10 most: F. must 13–16 The love . . . trouble; Cf. n. 15 eyld: (probably pronounced 'eeld') reward 19 single: trivial 23 ermites: hermits, i.e. to pray for you 25 cours'd: rode after 26 purveyor: stressed — — —; Cf. n. 27 holp: helped

Lady Macbeth. Your servants ever
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.
Duncan. Give me your hand;
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess. Exeunt.

Scene Seventh

Hoboyes, Torches. Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service over the stage. Then enter Macbeth.

Macbeth. If it were done, when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly. If th' assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success: that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all—here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which being taught, return
To plauge th' inventor. This even-handed justice
Commends th' ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
Who should against his murtherer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongu'd against
The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And Pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself
And falls on th' other.

Enter Lady.

How now? What news?
Lady Macbeth. He has almost supp'd. Why have you left the chamber?
Macbeth. Hath he ask'd for me?
Lady Macbeth. Know you not he has?
Macbeth. We will proceed no further in this business;
He hath honor'd me of late, and I have bought
Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
Not cast aside so soon.
Lady Macbeth. Was the hope drunk

31 Have . . . in compt: (pronounced 'count') hold . . . accountable theirs: their retainers 33 Still: always 36 our: probably disyllabic here SD Sewer: chief butler 3 trammel up: hold, as in a net; hamper 4 his surcease: Cf. n. 5–7 here . . . come; Cf. n. 6 shoal: F. Schoole (a 17th-century spelling of shoal) 7 jump: risk 8 have judgment: receive sentence; Cf. n. 17 faculties: powers 18 clear: blameless 22–3 heaven's . . . air; Cf. n. 23 sightless: invisible 27–8 Vaulting ambition . . . on th' other; Cf. n.

Wherein you dress'd yourself? Hath it slept since?
And wakes it now to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time
Such I account thy love. Art thou afeard
To be the same in thine own act and valor
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem,
Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,'
Like the poor cat i' th' adage?
Macbeth. Prithee, peace.
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.
Lady Macbeth. What beast was't then
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would
Be so much more the man. Nor time nor place
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both:
They have made themselves, and that their fitness now
Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know
How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me—
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn
As you have done to this.
Macbeth. If we should fail?
Lady Macbeth. We fail?
But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep—
Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey
Soundly invite him—his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only. When in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lies as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
Th' unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?
Macbeth. Bring forth men-children only;
For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done't?
Lady Macbeth. Who dares receive it other,
As we shall make our griefs and clamor roar
Upon his death?
Macbeth. I am settled, and bend up
Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
Away, and mock the time with fairest show:
False face must hide what the false heart doth know. Exeunt.

49 cat i' th' adage; Cf. n. 52 do: F. no; Cf. n. 54 break: broach 58 adhere: suit 59 that their fitness: that fitness of time and place 60 unmake: unnerve 68 But: only sticking-place; Cf. n. 72 convince: overpower 73–75 memory . . . only; Cf. n. 74 receipt: receptable 75 limbeck: alembic, an apparatus formerly used in distilling 76 lies: lie 79 spongy: drunken 80 quell: killing 82 mettle: (same word as 'metal') substance, spirit 83 males: pun on 'mails,' the metal rings of which mail armor was composed receiv'd: understood 87 other: otherwise 91 corporal agent: bodily faculty 92 time: world; see I.5.70, 71.

Act Second ❧ Scene First

Enter Banquo, and Fleance with a torch before him.

Banquo. How goes the night, boy?
Fleance. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.
Banquo. And she goes down at twelve.
Fleance. I take't, 'tis later, sir.
Banquo. Hold, take my sword.
There's husbandry in heaven;
Their candles are all out. Take thee that too.
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me,
And yet I would not sleep.
Merciful powers, restrain in me the cursed thoughts
That nature gives way to in repose.

Enter Macbeth, and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword. Who's there?
Macbeth. A friend.
Banquo. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed.
He hath been in unusual pleasure,
And sent forth great largess to your offices.
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess, and shut up
In measureless content.
Macbeth. Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.
Banquo. All's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weyard sisters:
To you they have show'd some truth.
Macbeth. I think not of them.
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that business,
If you would grant the time.
Banquo. At your kind'st leisure.
Macbeth. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis,
It shall make honor for you.
Banquo. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsell'd.
Macbeth. Good repose the while!
Banquo. Thanks, sir: the like to you.
Exit Banquo [with Fleance.]
Macbeth. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.
Exit [Servant.]
Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee.
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.

SD torch: i.e. torchbearer 6 husbandry: economy 7 that: i.e. a shield (?) or clock(?) 8 summons: i.e. to sleep 16 largess: gifts offices: servants' quarters 18 shut up: ended (his remarks or his day) 20–22 Being . . . wrought; Cf. n. 24 weyard: F. weyward 31 cleave . . . 'tis: be of my party when the time comes 35 franchis'd: free of blame 44 sensible: perceptible

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going,
And such an instrument I was to use.
Mine eyes are made the fools o' th' other senses,
Or else worth all the rest. I see thee still;
And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood,
Which was not so before. There's no such thing:
It is the bloody business which informs
Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half world
Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain'd sleep; witchcraft celebrates
Pale Heccat's off'rings; and wither'd Murther,
Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf,
Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design
Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set earth,
Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
Thy very stones prate of my whereabout,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now suits with it. Whiles I threat he lives:
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

A bell rings.

I go, and it is done; the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell
That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

Exit.

Scene Second

Enter Lady.

Lady Macbeth. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold:
What hath quench'd them hath give me fire.
Hark! Peace! It was the owl that shriek'd,
The fatal bellman, which gives the stern'st good night.
He is about it; the doors are open;
And the surfeited grooms do mock their charge
With snores. I have drugg'd their possets,
That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live or die.

Macbeth. [Within.] Who's there? what, ho!

Lady Macbeth. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,
And 'tis not done; th' attempt and not the deed
Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready;
He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled
My father as he slept I had done't.

Enter Macbeth.

My husband!

Macbeth. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady Macbeth. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.

54 dudgeon: handle gouts: drops 56 informs: gives information; takes shape (?) 60 Heccat's off'rings: offerings to Hecate, the classical goddess of witchcraft (the phonetic spelling of F indicates the pronunciation) 61 Alarum'd: aroused 62 Whose howl's his watch; Cf. n. 63 Tarquin's; Cf. n. strides F sides 64 sure: F sowre 65 way they: F they may 67 present horror: i.e. silence 5 bellman: watchman, town crier; Cf. n. 8 posset: a punch made of hot milk curdled with ale or wine 14 Confounds: ruins SD Enter Macbeth; Cf. n.

Did not you speak?

Macbeth. When?

Lady Macbeth. Now.

Lady Macbeth. As I descended?

Lady Macbeth. Ay.

Macbeth. Hark! Who lies i' th' second chamber?

Lady Macbeth. Donalbain.

Macbeth. [Looking on his hands.] This is a sorry sight.

Lady Macbeth. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.

Macbeth. There's one did laugh in's sleep,
And one cried 'Murther!' that they did wake each other.
I stood and heard them; but they did say their prayers,
And address'd them again to sleep.

Lady Macbeth. There are two lodg'd together.

Macbeth. One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen' the other,
As they had seen me with these hangman's hands.
List'ning their fear, I could not say 'Amen,'
When they did say 'God bless us!'

Lady Macbeth. Consider it not so deeply.

Macbeth. But wherefore could not I pronounce 'Amen'?
I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'
Stuck in my throat.

Lady Macbeth. These deeds must not be thought
After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macbeth. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep no more!
Macbeth does murther Sleep,' the innocent Sleep,
Sleep that knits up the ravel'd sleave of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast,—

Lady Macbeth. What do you mean?

Macbeth. Still it cried, 'Sleep no more!' to all the house;
'Glamis hath murther'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor
Shall sleep no more: Macbeth shall sleep no more!'

Lady Macbeth. Who was it that thus cried? Why worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength to think
So brainsickly of things. Go get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there. Go carry them, and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macbeth. I'll go no more.
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on't again I dare not.

Lady Macbeth. Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead
Are but as pictures; 'tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt. Exit. Knock within.

Macbeth. Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noise appalls me?
What hands are here? Ha! they pluck out mine eyes.
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather

37 As: as if hangman: used loosely for 'executioner' 48 knits: ties, fastens ravel'd: frayed, disintegrated sleave: slender filament of silk obtained by separating (sleaving) thicker thread 50 second course: i.e. the main course of an Elizabethan dinner 58 unbend: relax

The multitudinous seas incarnardine,
Making the green one red.

Enter Lady.

Lady Macbeth. My hands are of your color, but I shame
To wear a heart so white.— Knock.
I hear a knocking at the south entry.
Retire we to our chamber.
A little water clears us of this deed.
How easy is it, then! Your constancy
Hath left you unattended. Knock.
Hark! more knocking.
Get on your night-gown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers. Be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.
Macbeth. To know my deed Knock.
'Twere best not know myself.
Wake Duncan with thy knocking!
I would thou couldst!

Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter a Porter. Knocking within.

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate he should have old turning the key. (Knock.) Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' th' name of Belzebub? Here's a farmer that hang'd himself on th' expectation of plenty. Come in, time-server; have napkins enow about you; here you'll sweat for't. (Knock.) Knock, knock! Who's there, in th' other devil's name? Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven. O, come in, equivocator! (Knock.) Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose. Come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose. (Knock.) Knock, knock! Never at quiet! What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further. I had thought to have let in some of all professions, that go the primrose way to th' everlasting bonfire. (Knock.) Anon, anon! I pray you, remember the porter. [Opens the gate.]

Enter Macduff and Lennox.

Macduff. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed, that you do lie so late?

Porter. Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macduff. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Porter. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine. Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore much drink may be said to be an equivocator with Lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macduff. I believe drink gave thee the lie last night.

Porter. That it did, sir, i' the very throat of me; but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong to him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Enter Macbeth.

Macduff. Is thy master stirring?
Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.
Lennox. Good morrow, noble sir.
Macbeth. Good morrow, both.
Macduff. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?
Macbeth. Not yet.
Macduff. He did command me to call timely on him;
I have almost slipp'd the hour.
Macbeth. I'll bring you to him.
Macduff. I know this is a joyful trouble to you;
But yet 'tis one.
Macbeth. The labor we delight in physics pain.
This is the door.
Macduff. I'll make so bold to call,
For 'tis my limited service. Exit Macduff.
Lennox. Goes the king hence today?
Macbeth. He does; he did appoint so.
Lennox. The night has been unruly.
Where we lay, our chimneys were blown down,
And, as they say, lamentings heard i' th' air,
Strange screams of death,
And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion and confus'd events
New hatch'd to th' woeful time.
The obscure bird clamor'd the livelong night.
Some say the earth was feverous, and did shake.
Macbeth. 'Twas a rough night.
Lennox. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Enter Macduff.

Macduff. O horror! horror! horror!
Tongue nor heart cannot conceive nor name thee!
Macbeth.
Lennox. } What's the matter?
Macduff. Confusion now hath made his masterpiece!
Most sacrilegious murther hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' th' building!
Macbeth. What is't you say? the life?
Lennox. Mean you his majesty?
Macduff. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon. Do not bid me speak.
See, and then speak yourselves.

Exeunt Macbeth and Lennox.

Awake! awake!

78 incarnardine: incarnadine, redden 85, 86 constancy ... unattended: firmness has abandoned you 88 night-gown: dressing gown 90 poorly: feebly 2 should: would old: plenty of (colloquial) 3 Belzebub: Beelzebub 4 farmer; Cf. n. 4, 5 come in, time-server: F. Come in time; Cf. n. 5 napkins: handkerchiefs enow: enough 7 equivocator; Cf. n. 11, 12 stealing ... hose; Cf. n. 13 goose: smoothing iron; Cf. n. 16 anon: right away 18–21 Was ... things: F prints as verse 20 second cock: i.e. about 3 A.M.

34 took up my legs: got my feet off the ground (as in wrestling) made a shift: contrived 35 cast: throw; also 'vomit' SD Enter Macbeth; Cf. n. 43 slipp'd: missed 47 physics: curse 50 limited: appointed 53–61 The night ... shake; Cf. n. 58 combustion: tumult, disorder 60 obscure bird: bird of darkness, the owl 64 fellow: equal 71 Lord's anointed temple: anointed body of the king 76 Gorgon: a monster whose aspect turned the beholder to stone

Ring the alarum-bell. Murther and treason!
Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm, awake!
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,
And look on death itself! up, up, and see
The great doom's image! Malcolm, Banquo,
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,
To countenance this horror! Ring the bell.

Bell rings. Enter Lady.

Lady Macbeth. What's the business,
That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!
Macduff. O gentle lady,
'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak;
The repetition in a woman's ear
Would murther as it fell.

Enter Banquo.

O Banquo, Banquo,
Our royal master's murther'd!
Lady Macbeth. Woe, alas!
What, in our house?
Banquo. Too cruel anywhere.
Dear Duff, I prithee contradict thyself,
And say it is not so.

Enter Macbeth and Lennox.

Macbeth. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time; for, from this instant
There's nothing serious in mortality;
All is but toys; renown and grace is dead,
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees
Is left this vault to brag of.

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Donalbain. What is amiss?
Macbeth. You are, and do not know't:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood
Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.
Macduff. Your royal father's murther'd.
Malcolm. O, by whom?
Lennox. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done't.
Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood;
So were their daggers, which unwip'd we found
Upon their pillows. They star'd and were distracted;
No man's life was to be trusted with them.
Macbeth. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.
Macduff. Wherefore did you so?
Macbeth. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temp'rate and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man.
Th' expedition of my violent love
Outrun the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;
And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature
For ruin's wasteful entrance; there, the murtherers,
Steep'd in the colors of their trade; their daggers
Unmannerly breech'd with gore. Who could refrain,
That had a heart to love, and in that heart
Courage to make's love known?
Lady Macbeth. Help me hence, ho!
Macduff. Look to the lady.
Malcolm. [Aside to Donalbain.] Why do we hold our tongues.
That most may claim this argument for ours?
Donalbain. [Aside to Malcolm.] What should be spoken here,
Where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,
May rush and seize us? Let's away.
Our tears are not yet brew'd.
Malcolm. [Aside to Donalbain.] Nor our strong sorrow
Upon the foot of motion.
Banquo. Look to the lady.
[Lady Macbeth is carried out.]
And when we have our naked frailties hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us.
In the great hand of God I stand, and thence
Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight
Of treasonous malice.
Macduff. And so do I.
Allduff. So all.
Macbeth. Let's briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet i' th' hall together.
All. Well contented.
Exeunt [all but Malcolm and Donalbain.]
Malcolm. What will you do? Let's not consort with them.
To show an unfelt sorrow in an office
Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.
Donalbain. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune
Shall keep us both safer. Where we are,
There's daggers in men's smiles; the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.
Malcolm. This murtherous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way
Is to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse!
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away. There's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself when there's no mercy left. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Enter Ross with an Old Man.

Old Man. Threescore and ten I can remember well,
Within the volume of which time I have seen
Hours dreadful and things strange, but this sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.
Ross. Ha! good father,
Thou seest the heavens, as troubled with man's act,
Threatens his bloody stage. By th' clock 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the traveling lamp.

83 great doom's image: likeness of doomsday 84 sprites: spirits 85 countenance: face (?) or accord with (?) SD Enter Macbeth and Lennox; Cf. n. 102 mortality: mortal life 103 toys: trifles 105 vault; Cf. n. 113 badg'd: marked with 122 expedition: speed 123 Outrun: outran 124 lac'd: decorated in a lacy pattern

128 Unmannerly . . . gore; Cf. n. 135 argument: subject 137, 138 Where . . . seize us; Cf. n. 137 auger-hole: i.e. a small hole 139–141 Our tears . . . motion; Cf. n. 143 naked frailties; Cf. n. 148 pretence: design 152 briefly: quickly 160 near: nearer 165 dainty of: particular about 166 shift: steal warrant: justification 4 trifled: made trifles of 6–24 Thou . . . upon't: see II.3.53–61; Cf. n. 7 Threatens: threaten stage; Cf. n. 8 lamp: i.e. the sun

Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of the earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?
Old Man. 'Tis unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last,
A falcon, tow'ring in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at and kill'd.
Ross. And Duncan's horses—a thing most strange and certain—,
Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,
Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would
Make war with mankind.
Old Man. 'Tis said they eat each other.
Ross. They did so, so th' amazement of mine eyes,
That look'd upon't.

Enter Macduff.

Here comes the good Macduff.
How goes the world, sir, now?
Macduff. Why see you not?
Ross. Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?
Macduff. Those that Macbeth hath slain.
Ross. Alas, the day!
What good could they pretend?
Macduff. They were suborn'd.
Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled, which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.
Ross. 'Gainst nature still!
Triftless ambition, that will ravin up
Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.
Macduff. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be invested.
Ross. Where is Duncan's body?
Macduff. Carried to Colmekill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors
And guardian of their bones.
Ross. Will you to Scone?
Macduff. No, cousin, I'll to Fife.
Ross. Well, I will thither.
Macduff. Well, may you see things well done there. Adieu!
Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!
Ross. Farewell, father.
Old Man. God's benison go with you, and with those
That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!

Exeunt omnes.

Act Third ❧ Scene First

Enter Banquo.

Banquo. Thou hast it now: king, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weyard women promis'd; and I fear
Thou play'dst most foully for't; yet it was said
It should not stand in thy posterity,
But that myself should be the root and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them—
As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine—
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But hush, no more.

Sennet sounded. Enter Macbeth, as king; Lady; Lennox, Ross, Lords, and Attendants.

Macbeth. Here's our chief guest.
Lady Macbeth. If he had been forgotten.
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all-thing unbecoming.
Macbeth. Tonight we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.
Banquo. Let your highness
Command upon me, to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
Forever knit.
Macbeth. Ride you this afternoon?
Banquo. Ay, my good lord.
Macbeth. We should have else desir'd your good advice—
Which still hath been both grave and prosperous—
In this day's council; but we'll take tomorrow.
Is't far you ride?
Banquo. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper. Go not my horse the better,
I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.
Macbeth. Fail not our feast.
Banquo. My lord, I will not.
Macbeth. We hear our bloody cousins are bestow'd
In England and in Ireland, not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention. But of that tomorrow,
When therewithal we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse. Adieu,
Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you?
Banquo. Ay, my good lord; our time does call upon's.
Macbeth. I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;
And so I do commend you to their backs. Farewell.

Exit Banquo.

Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night;
To make society the sweeter welcome,
We will keep ourself till suppertime alone.
While then, God be with you.

Exeunt [all but Macbeth and a Servant.]

Sirrah, a word with you.
Attend those men our pleasure?
Servant. They are, my lord,
Without the palace gate.
Macbeth. Bring them before us.

Exit Servant.

10 entomb: Cf. n. 15 mousing: i.e. that normally flies near to the ground 18 minions: darlings: i.e. best 22 eat: ate 31 pretend: intend 32 suborn'd: induced to commit a crime 37 ravin up: swallow greedily 41 invested: robed and crowned 43 Colmekill: island in the Hebrides now called Iona 52 benison: blessing

SD Sennet: trumpet call 14 all-thing: wholly 15 solemn: formal, ceremonious; see III.4.40–42 19 indissoluble: stressed — ˊ — ˊ — 24 still . . . prosperous: has always been weighty and profitable 28 Go . . . better: Cf. n. 37 cause of state: public business 38 Craving us jointly: demanding our joint attention 45–53 To make . . . safely thus: Cf. n. 45 sweeter: more sweetly 47 While then: till then

To be thus is nothing, but to be safely thus.
Our fears in Banquo stick deep,
And in his royalty of nature reigns
That which would be fear'd. 'Tis much he dares,
And to that dauntless temper of his mind
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valor
To act in safety. There is none but he
Whose being I do fear; and under him
My genius is rebuk'd, as it is said
Mark Antony's was by Caesar. He chid the sisters
When first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him. Then, prophet-like,
They hail'd him father to a line of kings.
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren scepter in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. If't be so,
For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind;
For them the gracious Duncan have I murther'd;
Put rancors in the vessel of my peace
Only for them; and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man,
To make them kings, the seeds of Banquo kings!
Rather than so, come Fate into the list,
And champion me to th' utterance!
Who's there?

Enter Servant and two Murtherers.

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call.

Exit Servant.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?
Murtherers. It was, so please your highness.
Macbeth. Well then.
Now have you consider'd of my speeches;
Know that it was he, in the times past,
Which held you so under fortune,
Which you thought had been our innocent self.
This I made good to you in our last conference;
Pass'd in probation with you
How you were borne in hand, how cross'd,
The instruments, who wrought with them,
And all things else that might to half a soul
And to a notion craz'd say, 'Thus did Banquo.'
1 Murtherer. You made it known to us.
Macbeth. I did so; and went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature
That you can let this go? Are you so gospel'd
To pray for this good man and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave
And beggar'd yours forever?
1 Murderer. We are men, my liege.
Macbeth. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men,
As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,
Shoughs, waterrugs, and demi-wolves, are clipt
All by the name of dogs. The valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him clos'd; whereby he does receive
Particular addition, from the bill
That writes them all alike; and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
Not i' th' worst rank of manhood, say't;
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.
2 Murtherer. I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Hath so incens'd that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.
1 Murtherer. And I another,
So weary with disasters, tugg'd with Fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it or be rid on't.
Macbeth. Both of you
Know Banquo was your enemy.
Murtherers. True, my lord.
Macbeth. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life; and though I could
With barefac'd power sweep him from my sight
And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
Who I myself struck down. And thence it is
That I to your assistance do make love,
Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.
2 Murtherer. We shall my lord,
Perform what you command us.
1 Murtherer. Though our lives—
Macbeth. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most
I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' th' time,
The moment on't, for't must be done tonight,
And something from the palace; always thought
That I require a clearness; and with him,
To leave no rubs nor botches in the work,
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart;
I'll come to you anon.

53 but: unless 61, 62 My genius . . . Caesar; Cf. n. 61 genius: guardian spirit rebuk'd cowed 70 fil'd defiled 72 rancors: bitter enmities vessel of my peace: peace is compared to a liquid in a container 73 jewel: i.e. soul 76 list: lists 77 champion: fight utterance: uttermost 78 Who's there?: a customary phrase to summon the servant 83 have you: you have 84 Know: i.e. now you know 85 under fortune: in distress 87 made good: proved 88 Pass'd in probation: went over the proofs 89 borne in hand: deceived 92 notion: mind 97 gospel'd: so filled with Christian forgiveness

104 Shoughs: pronounced 'shocks'; shag-haired dogs waterrugs: shaggy water dogs clipt: called 105 valued file: list in which value is recorded 110 addition: title 110, 111 from . . . alike: i.e. to distinguish him from the others in the general category of dogs 118 in: during 121 Hath: have 124 tugg'd with: pulled about by 130 distance: enmity 132 near'st of life: most vital parts 134 avouch: justify 135 For: on account of 136 but wail: but I must wail 146 advise: inform 147 perfect spy: exact indication (literally, 'observation'); Cf. n. 148 on't: for it 149 something: a little way always thought: i.e. it must be kept in mind 150 clearness: freedom from suspicion 151 rubs nor botches: roughness nor clumsy patching

Murtherers. We are resolv'd, my lord.
Macbeth. I'll call upon you straight. Abide within.
[Exeunt Murtherers.]
It is concluded. Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out tonight. [Exit.]

Scene Second

Enter Macbeth's Lady and a Servant.

Lady Macbeth. Is Banquo gone from court?
Servant. Ay, madam, but returns again tonight.
Lady Macbeth. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.
Servant. Madam, I will. Exit.
Lady Macbeth. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content.
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord? Why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died
With them they think on? Things without all remedy
Should be without regard: what's done is done.
Macbeth. We have scorch'd the snake, not kill'd it:
She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor malice
Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer,
Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams
That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
In restless ecstasy.
Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well.
Treason has done his worst. Nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing
Can touch him further.
Lady Macbeth. Come on:
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial among your guests tonight.
Macbeth. So shall I, love, and so, I pray, be you.
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue—
Unsafe the while that we must lave
Our honors in these flattering streams,
And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.
Lady Macbeth. You must leave this.
Macbeth. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife!
Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance lives.
Lady Macbeth. But in them nature's copy's not eterne.
Macbeth. There's comfort yet; they are assailable;
Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight, ere to black Heccat's summons
The shard-borne beetle with his drowsy hums
Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done
A deed of dreadful note.
Lady Macbeth. What's to be done?
Macbeth. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,
And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond
Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow
Makes wing to th' rooky wood.
Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,
Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse.
Thou marvell'st at my words; but hold thee still;
Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill.
So prithee go with me. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter three Murtherers.

1 Murtherer. But who did bid thee join with us?
3 Murtherer. Macbeth.
2 Murtherer. He needs not our mistrust, since he delivers
Our offices and what we have to do
To the direction just.
1 Murtherer. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day.
Now spurs the lated traveler apace
To gain the timely inn, and near approaches
The subject of our watch.
3 Murtherer. Hark! I hear horses.
Banquo within. Give us a light there, no!
2 Murtherer. Then 'tis he;
The rest that are within the note of expectation
Already are i' th' court.
1 Murtherer. His horses go about.
3 Murtherer. Almost a mile; but he does usually,
So all men do, from hence to th' palace gate
Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fleance with a torch.

2 Murtherer. A light, a light!
3 Murtherer. 'Tis he.
1 Murtherer. Stand to't.
Banquo. It will be rain tonight.
1 Murtherer. Let it come down.
[Strikes out light; stabs Banquo.]
Banquo. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!
Thou mayst revenge. O slave! [Dies. Fleance escapes.]
3 Murtherer. Who did strike out the light?
1 Murtherer. Was't not the way?

157 Resolve: yourselves make up your minds 15 scorch'd: slashed as with a knife; Cf. n. 18 frame of things disjoint: structure of the universe fall to pieces both the worlds: i.e. celestial and terrestrial 24 ecstasy: frenzy 31 sleek: smooth 34 remembrance: read 'rememberance' 35 Present him eminence: do him honor 36 Unsafe: i.e. though we are unsafe 38 vizards: masks 42 lives: live 43 copy: pattern; Cf. n.

47 shard-borne; Cf. n. 51 chuck: familiar term of endearment 52 seeling: sewing up the eyelids (a term from falconry) 55 bond; Cf. n. 57 rooky: filled with rooks 3 He needs not our mistrust: i.e. we need not distrust him (the third murderer) delivers: reports 4 offices: duties 5 To the direction: according to the instructions (of Macbeth) 14 note of expectation: list of expected guests SD Enter Banquo and Fleance: See II.3. SD; Cf. n.

3 Murtherer. There's but one down; the son is fled.
2 Murtherer. We have lost
Best half of our affair.
1 Murtherer. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.
Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Banquet prepared. Enter Macbeth, Lady, Ross, Lennox, Lords and Attendants.

Macbeth. You know your own degrees; sit down.
At first and last, the hearty welcome.
Lords. Thanks to your majesty.
Macbeth. Ourself will mingle with society
And play the humble host.
Our hostess keeps her state, but in best time
We will require her welcome.
Lady Macbeth. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends,
For my heart speaks they are welcome.

Enter First Murtherer [to the door].

Macbeth. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.
Both sides are even; here I'll sit i' th' midst.
Be large in mirth; anon, we'll drink a measure
The table round. [Approaching the door.] There's blood upon thy face.
Murtherer. 'Tis Banquo's, then.
Macbeth. 'Tis better thee without than he within.
Is he dispatch'd?
Murtherer. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did for him.
Macbeth. Thou art the best o' th' cut-throats;
Yet he's good that did the like for Fleance:
If thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil.
Murtherer. Most royal sir—
Fleance is 'scap'd.
Macbeth. Then comes my fit again; I had else been perfect;
Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air.
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in
To saucy doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?
Murtherer. Ay, my good lord; safe in a ditch he bides.
With twenty trenched gashes on his head;
The least a death to nature.
Macbeth. Thanks for that.
There the grown serpent lies; the worm that's fled
Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for th' present. Get thee gone; tomorrow
We'll hear ourselves again. Exit Murderer.
Lady Macbeth. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer. The feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making;
'Tis given with welcome. To feed were best at home;
From thence, the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

1 degrees: ranks 2 At first and last: once for all 4–6 Ourself . . . state: Cf. n. 7 require: request 11 Both sides are even: i.e. there are equal numbers on both sides of the table 12 measure: large goblet 13 Approaching the door: Cf. n. 16 thee . . . within: outside you than inside him 21 nonpareil: unequaled one 26 broad and general: free and unconfined casing: surrounding 30 trenched: cut 36 hear ourselves: confer 38–40 The feast . . . welcome: Cf. n.

Enter the Ghost of Banquo, and sits in Macbeth's place.

Macbeth. Sweet remembrancer!
Now good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both!
Lennox. May't please your highness sit?
Macbeth. Here had we now our country's honor roof'd,
Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance!
Ross. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please't your highness
To grace us with your royal company?
Macbeth. Take table's full.
Lennox. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.
Macbeth. Where?
Lennox. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness?
Macbeth. Which of you have done this?
Lords. What, my good lord?
Macbeth. Thou canst not say I did it; never shake
Thy gory locks at me.
Ross. Gentlemen, rise; his highness is not well.
Lady Macbeth. Sit, worthy friends. My lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth. Pray you, keep seat;
The fit is momentary; upon a thought
He will again be well. If much you note him
You shall offend him and extend his passion;
Feed and regard him not. Are you a man?
Macbeth. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appall the divel.
Lady Macbeth. O proper stuff!
This is the very painting of your fear;
This is the air-drawn dagger which you said
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws and starts—
Imposters to true fear—would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done
You look but on a stool.
Macbeth. Prithee, see there!
Behold! look! lo! how say you?
Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.
If charnel houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Exit Ghost.]
Lady Macbeth. What! quite unmann'd in folly?
Macbeth. If I stand here, I saw him.
Lady Macbeth. Fie, for shame!
Macbeth. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' th' olden time,
Ere humane statute purg'd the gentle weal;
Ay, and since too, murthers have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear. The times has been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end. But now they rise again,

SD Enter . . . Banquo; Cf. n. 43 remembrancer: one who reminds another; Cf. n. 47 had we: we should have honor: noblemen roof'd: under one roof 67 upon a thought: in a moment 69 extend: increase 76 flaws: outbursts 77 Imposters: false pretenders 79 Authoriz'd: stressed — ˘ —; vouched for 81 stool; Cf. n. 85–87 If charnel houses . . . kites; Cf. n. charnel houses: repositories for bones 92 humane: stressed ˘ — —; both 'human' and 'humane' gentle weal: civilized state 94 has: have

With twenty mortal murthers on their crowns,
And push us from our stools. This is more strange
Than such a murther is.
Lady Macbeth. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.
Macbeth. I do forget.
Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;
Then, I'll sit down. Give me some wine; fill full.

Enter Ghost.

I drink to th' general joy o' th' whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss.
Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.
Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.
Macbeth. Avaunt, and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.
Lady Macbeth. Think of this, good peers.
But as a thing of custom. 'Tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.
Macbeth. What man dare, I dare.
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or th' Hyrcan tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble. Or be alive again,
And dare me to the desart with thy sword;
If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mock'ry, hence! [Exit Ghost.]
Why, so; being gone
I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.
Lady Macbeth. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting
With most admir'd disorder.
Macbeth. Can such things be
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.
Ross. What sights, my lord?
Lady Macbeth. I pray you, speak not. He grows worse and worse;
Question enrages him. At once, good night.
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.
Lennox. Good night; and better health
Attend his majesty!
Lady Macbeth. A kind good night to all!

Exeunt Lords [and Attendants].
Macbeth. It will have blood, they say: blood will have blood.
Stones have been known to move and trees to speak;
Augures and understood relations have
By maggot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth
The secret'st man of blood. What is the night?
Lady Macbeth. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.
Macbeth. How sayst thou, that Macduff denies his person
At our great bidding?
Lady Macbeth. Did you send to him, sir?
Macbeth. I hear it by the way; but I will send.
There's not a one of them but in his house
I keep a servant fee'd. I will tomorrow—
And betimes I will—to the weyard sisters.
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know
By the worst means the worst. For mine own good
All causes shall give way. I am in blood
Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no more,
Returning were as tedious as go o'er.
Strange things I have in head that will to hand,
Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd.
Lady Macbeth. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.
Macbeth. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse
Is the initiate fear that wants hard use;
We are yet but young in deed. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting Heccat.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Heccat? You look angerly.
Heccat. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,
Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth
In riddles and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now. Get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i' th' morning. Thither he
Will come to know his destiny.
Your vessels and your spells provide,
Your charms and every thing beside.
I am for th' air; this night I'll spend
Unto a dismal and a fatal end.
Great business must be wrought ere noon.
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vap'rous drop profound;

97 murthers: i.e. wounds 103 muse: wonder SD Enter Ghost: see III.4.SD; Cf. n. 109 thirst: are eager to drink 110 all to all: all drink to all 115 speculation: comprehending vision 118 of custom: usual 122 Hyrcan: Hyrcanian: Cf. n. 123 that: i.e. of Banquo nerves: sinews 125 desart: desert, i.e. any solitary place 126 inhabit: live, continue to live protest: proclaim 127 The baby of a girl: a baby girl 131 displac'd: banished 132 admir'd: wondered at 135 overcome: pass over 136, 137 You . . . owe; Cf. n. 140 is: are 145 Stand . . . going; Cf. n.

153 Augures: auguries understood relations; Cf. n. 154 maggot-pies: magpies choughs: birds of the crow family 156 at odds with: disputing with 158 How sayst thou: what do you say to this 161 by the way: incidentally 171 scann'd: considered 172 season: preservative 173 strange and self-abuse: strange and self-imposed delusion 175 in deed: F. indeed Scene 5; Cf. n. 2 beldams: hags 7 close: secret 15 Acheron: a river of Hades

I'll catch it ere it come to ground;
And that distill'd by magic sleights
Shall raise such artificial sprites
As by the strength of their illusion
Shall draw him on to his confusion.
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear;
And you all know security
Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

Music and a song. Sing within.
'Come away, come away,' etc.

Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.

[Exit Heccat.]

1 Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again.

Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

Enter Lennox and another Lord.

Lennox. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret farther. Only I say
Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan
Was pitied of Macbeth. Marry, he was dead!
And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late;
Whom you may say—if't please you—Fleance kill'd,
For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.
Who cannot want the thought how monstrous
It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain
To kill their gracious father? Damned fact!
How it did grieve Macbeth! Did he not straight
In pious rage the two delinquents tear,
That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep?
Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive
To hear the men deny't. So that I say
He has borne all things well; and I do think
That, had he Duncan's sons under his key—
As, and't please heaven, he shall not—they should find
What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance.
But, peace! for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd
His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear
Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan,
From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,
Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd
Of the most pious Edward with such grace
That the malevolence of fortune nothing
Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff
Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid
To wake Northumberland and warlike Siward;
That, by the help of these (with Him above
To ratify the work) we may again
Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights;
Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives;
Do faithful homage and receive free honors,
All which we pine for now. And this report
Hath so exasperate the king that he
Prepares for some attempt of war.

Lennox. Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did; and with an absolute 'Sir, not I'
The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say, 'You'll rue the time
That clogs me with this answer.'

Lennox. And that well might
Advise him to a caution, t' hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England and unfold
His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him!

Exeunt.

Act Fourth

Scene First

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.
2 Witch. Thrice, and once the hedge-pig whin'd.
3 Witch. Harpier cries; 'tis time, 'tis time.
1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go;
In the poison'd entrails throw.
Toad, that under cold stone
Days and nights has thirty-one
Swelt'red venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i' th' charmed pot.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog;
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing;
For a charm of pow'rful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witches' mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark;
Root of hemlock digg'd i' th' dark;
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew

27 artificial: cunning, well-contrived sprites: spirits 29 confusion: ruin SD Sing within: Cf. n. 34 5 Hark . . . for me; Cf. n. Scene 6; Cf. n. 1 hit: coincided with 3 borne: managed 4 of: by 8 cannot want: can avoid monstrous: perhaps three syllables here 19 and: if 21 broad: frank, outspoken 21, 22 fail'd/His presence: did not appear 25 son: F Sonnes 28 Edward: Edward the Confessor, King of England (1042–66) 31 pray . . . upon his aid: i.e. ask for his assistance; Cf. n.

36 Free . . . knives; Cf. n. 37 free: not bought by subservience to the tyrant 39 exasperate: exasperated the: F their 42 absolute: unconditional 'Sir, not I': Macduff's message 43 cloudy: frowning 45 clogs: hampers; Cf. n. 1 brinded: brindled 2 hedge-pig: hedgehog; Cf. n. 3 Harpier: see I.1.8–12; Cf. n. 8 Swelt'red: 'exuded,' like sweat 12 Fillet: slice fenny: from the fens 16 fork: forked tongue blind-worm: a small lizard 17 howlet: owlet 23 mummy: mummified flesh; Cf. n. maw and gulf: stomach; Cf. n. 24 ravin'd: glutted with prey, or ravenous (?)

Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse;
Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips;
Finger of birth-strangled babe
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,
Make the gruel thick and slab.
Add thereto a tiger's chawdron,
For th' ingredients of our cawdron,
All. Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.
2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood;
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter Heccat and the other three Witches.

Heccat. O, well done! I commend your pains,
And every one shall share i' th' gains.
And now about the cauldron sing,
Like elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

Music and a song, 'Black Spirits,' etc.

[Exit Heccat.]

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.
Open, locks, whoever knocks.

Enter Macbeth.

Macbeth. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags?
What is't you do?
All. A deed without a name.
Macbeth. I conjure you, by that which you profess—
Howere you come to know it—answer me.
Though you untie the winds and let them fight
Against the churches; though the yesty waves
Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodg'd and trees blown down;
Though castles topple on their warders' heads;
Though palaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure
Of nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken; answer me
To what I ask you.
1 Witch. Speak.
2 Witch. Demand.
3 Witch. We'll answer.
1 Witch. Say if th' hadst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters?
Macbeth. Call 'em; let me see 'em.
1 Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten
Her nine farrow; grease, that's sweaten
From the murderer's gibbet, throw
Into the flame.
All. Come, high or low;
Thy self and office deftly show.

Thunder. First Apparition, an Armed Head.

Macbeth. Tell me, thou unknown power—
1 Witch. He knows thy thought:
Hear his speech, but say thou nought.
1 Apparition. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware Macduff;
Beware the Thane of Fife. Dismiss me. Enough. He descends.
Macbeth. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution thanks;
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more—
1 Witch. He will not be commanded. Here's another,
More potent than the first.

Thunder. Second Apparition, a Bloody Child.

2 Apparition. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!
Macbeth. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.
2 Apparition. Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn.
The power of man; for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth. Descends.
Macbeth. Then live, Macduff; what need I fear of thee?
But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate. Thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.

Thunder. Third Apparition, a Child Crowned, with a tree in his hand.

What is this,
That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty?
All. Listen, but speak not to't.
3 Apparition. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care
Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are.
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. Descend.
Macbeth. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements! good!
Rebellious head, rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, if your art
Can tell so much: shall Banquo's issue ever
Reign in this kingdom?
All. Seek to know no more.
Macbeth. I will be satisfied. Deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this?

Hoboyes.

1 Witch. Show!
2 Witch. Show!
3 Witch. Show!
All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.

31 Ditch-deliver'd: born in a ditch drab: whore 32 slab: thick 33 chawdron: entrails 34 cawdron: cauldron 37 baboon's: stressed — ⏑ — SD Enter Heccat . . . Witches; Cf. n. 39–43 O, well done . . . you put in; Cf. n. 50 that which you profess: i.e. your magic art 53 yesty: frothy 55 bladed corn: grain not yet in the ear lodg'd: beaten flat 59 germens: seeds (see King Lear, III.2.8) 69 farrow: young pigs 73 office: function SD First Apparition; Cf. n.

80 harp'd: guessed SD Second Apparition; Cf. n. 90 bond: i.e. further guaranty SD Third Apparition; Cf. n. 101 Dunsinane: stressed — ⏑ — (here only) SD Descend; Cf. n. 104 impress: enlist forcibly 105 bodements: prophecies 106 head: F dead; Cf. n. 107 Birnam: F Byrnan; Cf. n. 108 lease of nature: normal life-span 116 sinks that cauldron; Cf. n.

A show of eight Kings and Banquo, [the] last [king] with a glass in his hand.

Macbeth. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo; down!
Thy crown does sear mine eyeballs. And thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first.
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this?—A fourth? Start, eyes!
What, will the line stretch out to th' crack of doom?
Another yet? A seventh? I'll see no more.
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shows me many more; and some I see
That twofold balls and treble scepters carry.
Horrible sight! Now, I see, 'tis true,
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. [Apparitions vanish.]
What? is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so. But why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights.
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round,
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

Music. The Witches dance, and vanish.

Macbeth. Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

Enter Lennox.

Lennox. What's your grace's will?
Macbeth. Saw you the weyard sisters?
Lennox. No, my lord.
Macbeth. Came they not by you?
Lennox. No indeed, my lord.
Macbeth. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them! I did hear
The galloping of horse. Who was't came by?
Lennox. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word
Macduff is fled to England.
Macbeth. Fled to England?
Lennox. Ay, my good lord.
Macbeth. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits;
The flighty purpose never is o'ertook
Unless the deed go with it. From this moment
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:
The castle of Macduff I will surprise,
Seize upon Fife, give to th' edge o' th' sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do before this purpose cool;
But no more sights! Where are these gentlemen?
Come, bring me where they are. Exeunt.

SD A show of eight Kings; Cf. n. 127 crack of doom: sound of the trumpet on doomsday 129 eighth: F eight glass; Cf. n. 131 twofold . . . scepters; Cf. n. 133 blood-bolter'd: having the hair clotted with blood 136–143 Ay, sir, . . . his welcome pay; Cf. n. 141 antic: fantastic round: dance 161 exploits: stressed — — 162, 163 The flighty . . . it; Cf. n. 165 firstlings: first-born 170 trace: follow, i.e. are related to

Scene Second

Enter Macduff's Wife, her Son, and Ross.

Lady Macduff. What had he done to make him fly the land?
Ross. You must have patience, madam.
Lady Macduff. He had none.
His flight was madness. When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.
Ross. You know not
Whether it was his wisdom or his fear.
Lady Macduff. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his babes,
His mansion, and his titles, in a place
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not;
He wants the natural touch. For the poor wren,
The most diminitive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.
Ross. My dearest coz,
I pray you school yourself. But, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' th' season. I dare not speak much further;
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors
And do not know ourselves, when we hold rumor
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea
Each way, and move. I take my leave of you.
Shall not be long but I'll be here again.
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before. My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!
Lady Macduff. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.
Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort:
I take my leave at once. Exit Ross.
Lady Macduff. Sirrah, your father's dead;
And what will you do now? How will you live?
Son. As birds do, mother.
Lady Macduff. What, with worms and flies?
Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
Lady Macduff. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net
nor lime,
The pit-fall nor the gin.
Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.
My father is not dead, for all your saying.
Lady Macduff. Yes, he is dead. How wilt thou do for a father?
Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?
Lady Macduff. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
Lady Macduff. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;
And yet, i' faith, with wit enough for thee.
Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?
Lady Macduff. Ay, that he was.
Son. What is a traitor?
Lady Macduff. Why, one that swears and lies.
Son. And be all traitors that do so?

9 titles: possessions 11 wants: lacks 12 diminitive: diminutive 17 coz: short for 'cousin' 18 school: control 20 fits: disorders 34 Sirrah: form of address often used by parents to children 40 lime: birdlime 41 gin: snare 42 they: i.e. traps and snares

Lady Macduff. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hang'd.

Son. And must they all be hang'd that swear and lie?

Lady Macduff. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them?

Lady Macduff. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools, for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men and hang up them.

Lady Macduff. Now God help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him. If you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

Lady Macduff. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known.
Though in your state of honor I am perfect.
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly.
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus methinks I am too savage;
To do worse to you were fell cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!
I dare abide no longer. Exit Messenger.

Lady Macduff. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world, where to do harm
Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly. Why then, alas,
Do I put up that womanly defense,
To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murtherers.

What are these faces?

Murtherer. Where is your husband?

Lady Macduff. I hope in no place so unsanctified
Where such as thou mayst find him.

Murtherer. He's a traitor.

Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain.

Murtherer. What! you egg.
Young fry of treachery! [Stabbing him.]

Son. He has killed me, mother.
Run away, I pray you!

Exit [Lady Macduff] crying 'Murther.'

Scene Third

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Malcolm. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macduff. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men
Bestride our downfall'n birthdom. Each new morn
New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows
Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out
Like syllable of dolor.

Malcolm. What I believe I'll wail,
What know believe, and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest; you have lov'd him well;
He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something
You may discern of him through me, and wisdom
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb
T' appease an angry god.

Macduff. I am not treacherous.

Malcolm. But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil
In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon
That which you are my thoughts cannot transpose;
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.
Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,
Yet grace must still look so.

Macduff. I have lost my hopes.

Malcolm. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.
Why in that rawness left you wife and child,
Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,
Without leave-taking? I pray you,
Let not my jealousies by your dishonors,
But mine own safeties. You may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macduff. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dare not check thee! Wear thou thy wrongs;
The title is affeer'd! Fare thee well, lord,
I would not be the villain that thou think'st
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Malcolm. Be not offended.
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds. I think withal,
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands. But, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Macduff. What should he be?

Malcolm. It is myself I mean; in whom I know
All the particulars of vice so grafted
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state
steem him as a lamb, being compar'd

56, 57 Every one ... hang'd: F prints as verse 63 enow: enough 64, 65 Now ... father: F prints as verse 71 in ... perfect: perfectly acquainted with your honorable station 72 doubt: fear 73 homely: humble 75 thus methinks: F punctuates thus. Me thinkes 91 shag-hair'd: F shagge-ear'd; Cf. n. 4 mortal: deadly 5 Bestride: i.e. in its defense birthdom: fatherland

12 to friend: as a friend; i.e. to be favorable 14 sole: mere 17 discern: learn by discernment; Cf. n. 22, 23 recoil ... charge: give way under pressure from a ruler 24 transpose: alter 27 so: i.e. like itself 30 rawness: unprotected condition 31 motives: persons inspiring love and action 33 jealousies: suspicions 39 affeer'd: confirmed; F affear'd 49 gracious England: i.e. the English king, Edward the Confessor

With my confineless harms.
Macduff. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a divel more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.
Malcolm. I grant him bloody,
Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name. But there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust, and my desire
All continent impediments would o'erbear
That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth
Than such an one to reign.
Macduff. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny. It hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours; you may
Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.
We have willing dames enough; there cannot be
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclin'd.
Malcolm. With this there grows
In my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands,
Desire his jewels and this other's house;
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.
Macduff. This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root
Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings. Yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will
Of your mere own. All these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.
Malcolm. But I have none. The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temp'rance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them, but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should
Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.
Macduff. O Scotland, Scotland!
Malcolm. If such a one be fit to govern, speak.
I am as I have spoken.

Macduff. Fit to govern?
No, not to live. O nation miserable!
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scept'red,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accus'd,
And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king; the queen that bore thee,
Oft'ner upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself
Hath banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast,
Thy hope ends here!
Malcolm. Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honor. Divelish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From overcredulous haste; but God above
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and
Unspeak mine own detraction, here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman, never was forsworn,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,
At no time broke my faith, would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth than life. My first false speaking
Was this upon myself. What I am truly
Is thine and my poor country's to command;
Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent?
Macduff. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Malcolm. Well, more anon. Comes the king forth,
I pray you?
Doctor. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched souls
That stay his cure; their malady convinces
The great assay of art. But, at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.
Malcolm. I thank you, doctor. Exit [Doctor.]
Macduff. What's the disease he means?
Malcolm. 'Tis call'd the evil.
A most miraculous work in this good king,
Which often, since my here-remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,

62 confineless: boundless 67 Luxurious: lustful 73 continent: restraining 81 Convey: arrange secretly 82 cold, the time: F punctuates cold. The time. time: see I.5.70; Cf. n. 88 affection: disposition 89 stanchless: insatiable 98 summer-seeming: befitting (beseeming) summer, or resembling it 99 sword: i.e. cause of death 100 foisons: plentiful supplies 101 your mere own: what is entirely yours portable: endurable 102 With . . . weigh'd: i.e. when balanced against other graces 105 perseverance: read 'persév'rance' 108 division: variation 110–112 Pour . . . earth; Cf. n.

121 interdiction: statement of unfitness (legal term) 125 Died . . . liv'd: i.e. was always ready for death; see I Corinthians 15:31 127 Hath: have 133 trains: stratagems 134 modest: marked by moderation 140 For: as being 148 thy: F they 150 at a point: in readiness 151, 152 the chance . . . quarrel; Cf. n. 158 stay his cure: wait for him to cure them; Cf. n. 158, 159 convinces . . . art: conquers the greatest efforts of medical skill 161 presently: immediately 164 evil: see IV.3.157; Cf. n. 168 visited: afflicted

All swolne and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers; and 'tis spoken
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.

Macduff. See who comes here.
Malcolm. My countryman; but yet I know him not.
Macduff. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.
Malcolm. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove
The means that makes us strangers!
Ross. Sir, amen.
Macduff. Stands Scotland where it did?
Ross. Alas, poor country.
Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot
Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
Where sighs and groans and shrieks that rent the air
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives
Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.
Macduff. O, relation
Too nice, and yet too true.
Malcolm. What's the newest grief?
Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;
Each minute teems a new one.
Macduff. How does my wife?
Ross. Why, well.
Macduff. And all my children?
Ross. Well too.
Macduff. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?
Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.
Macduff. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes't?
Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumor
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather
For that I saw the tyrant's power afoot,
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.
Malcolm. Be't their comfort
We are coming thither. Gracious England hath
Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men;
An older and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out.
Ross. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words
That would be howl'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing them should not latch them.
Macduff. What concern they?
The general cause? or is it a fee-grief
Due to some single breast?
Ross. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part
Pertains to you alone.
Macduff. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it.
Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue forever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound
That ever yet they heard.
Macduff. Humh! I guess at it.
Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes
Savagely slaughter'd. To relate the manner
Were, on the quarry of these murther'd deer,
To add the death of you.
Malcolm. Merciful heaven!
What, man! Ne'er pull your hat upon your brows.
Give sorrow words; the grief that does not speak
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart and bids it break.
Macduff. My children too?
Ross. Wife, children, servants, all that could be found.
Macduff. And I must be from thence! My wife kill'd too?
Ross. I have said.
Malcolm. Be comforted.
Let's make us med'cines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.
Macduff. He has no children. All my pretty ones?
Did you say all? O hell-kite! All?
What, all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?
Malcolm. Dispute it like a man.
Macduff. I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man.
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee! Naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!
Malcolm. Be this the whetstone of your sword; let grief
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.
Macduff. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And braggart with my tongue. But, gentle heavens,
Cut short all intermission. Front to front
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he scrape,
Heaven forgive him too!
Malcolm. This tune goes manly.
Come, go we to the king; our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above
Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may;
The night is long that never finds the day. Exeunt.

169 swolne: swollen 170 mere: utter 171 stamp: stamped coin 180 gentle: noble 181 betimes: speedily 191 ecstasy: frenzy; Cf. n. 194 or ere: ere 195 relation: recital 196 nice: minutely accurate 198 hiss: cause to be hissed for giving outdated information 199 teems: gives birth to 210 out: i.e. in the field of arms 212 power: army 217 Gracious England: see l. 49 220 gives out: proclaims

223 would be: demand to be 224 latch: catch 226 fee-grief: private grief 234 heaviest: most grievous 239 quarry: game killed in hunting 255 swoop: i.e. of the hell-kite 256 Dispute it: contest it (Macbeth's action); i.e. avenge yourself; Cf. n. 262 Naught: wicked man 269 intermission: delay 273 tune: F time 274 power: army 275 Our lack . . . leave: we need only permission to go 277 Put on their instruments: arm themselves

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting Gentlewoman.

Doctor. I have two nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walk'd?

Gentlewoman. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doctor. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumb'ry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gentlewoman. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doctor. You may to me, and 'tis most meet you should.

Gentlewoman. Neither to you nor anyone, having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes. This is her very guise, and upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doctor. How came she by that light?

Gentlewoman. Why, it stood by her. She has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doctor. You see her eyes are open.

Gentlewoman. Ay, but their sense are shut.

Doctor. What is it she does now? Look how she rubs her hands.

Gentlewoman. It is an accustom'd action with her, to seem thus washing her hands. I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady Macbeth. Yet here's a spot.

Doctor. Hark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady Macbeth. Out, damned spot! out, I say! One; two. Why, then, 'tis time to do't. Hell is murky. Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to accompt? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doctor. Do you mark that?

Lady Macbeth. The Thane of Fife had a wife. Where is she now? What, will these hands ne'er be clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that! You mar all with this starting.

Doctor. Go to, go to! You have known what you should not.

Gentlewoman. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that. Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady Macbeth. Here's the smell of the blood still. All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh!

Doctor. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charg'd.

Gentlewoman. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doctor. Well, well, well.

Gentlewoman. Pray God it be, sir.

Doctor. This disease is beyond my practice. Yet I have known those which have walk'd in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Lady Macbeth. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown, look not so pale. I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doctor. Even so?

Lady Macbeth. To bed, to bed! There's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed! Exit Lady.

Doctor. Will she go now to bed?

Gentlewoman. Directly.

Doctor. Foul whisp'rings are abroad. Unnatural deeds
Do breed unnatural troubles. Infected minds
To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets.
More needs she the divine than the physician.
God, God forgive us all! Look after her;
Remove from her the means of all annoyance,
And still keep eyes upon her. So, good night.
My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight.
I think, but dare not speak.

Gentlewoman. Good night, good doctor.

Exeunt.

❧ Scene Second ❧

Drum and colors. Enter Menteth, Cathness, Angus, Lennox, Soldiers.

Menteth. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm,
His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff.
Revenges burn in them; for their dear causes
Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm
Excite the mortified man.

Angus. Near Birnam wood
Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Cathness. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Lennox. For certain, sir, he is not. I have a file
Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son,
And many unrough youths that even now
Protest their first of manhood.

Menteth. What does the tyrant?

Cathness. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies.
Some say he's mad; others that lesser hate him
Do call it valiant fury; but, for certain,
He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause
Within the belt of rule.

Angus. Now does he feel
His secret murthers sticking on his hands;
Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach.
Those he commands move only in command,
Nothing in love. Now does he feel his title
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Menteth. Who then shall blame
His pester'd senses to recoil and start,
When all that is within him does condemn

3 into the field: i.e. to battle 4 nightgown: dressing gown 5 closet: private repository of valuables 9 effects of watching: actions of a waking condition 17 close: concealed 21 are; Cf. n. 34 accompt: account (and so pronounced) 40 Go to, go to: come, come You: i.e. Lady Macbeth 47 sorely charg'd: heavily burdened 49 dignity: worth

56 on's: of his 68 annoyance: injury (to herself) 70 mated: bewildered 1 power: army 3 dear: heartfelt 4 alarm: call to battle 5 mortified: numbed, or even dead 11 unrough: unbearded 12 Protest: proclaim 17 distemper'd: sick, unruly 21 minutely: (stressed – — —) happening every minute 23 Nothing: not at all 27 pester'd: troubled

Itself for being there?
Cathness. Well, march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd.
Meet we the med'cine of the sickly weal,
And with him pour we in our country's purge
Each drop of us.
Lennox. Or so much as it needs
To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds.
Make we our march towards Birnam.
Exeunt marching.

Scene Third

Enter Macbeth, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macbeth. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all!
Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane
I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know
All mortal consequences have pronounc'd me thus:
'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman
Shall ere have power upon thee.' Then fly, false thanes,
And mingle with the English epicures!
The mind I sway by and the heart I bear
Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear.

Enter Servant.

The divel damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!
Where got'st thou that goose look?
Servant. There is ten thousand—
Macbeth. Geese, villain?
Servant. Soldiers, sir.
Macbeth. Go prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,
Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch?
Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine
Are counselors to fear. What soldiers, wheyface?
Servant. The English force, so please you.
Macbeth. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.]
Seyton!—I am sick at heart
When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will cheer me ever or disseat me now.
I have liv'd long enough. My way of life
Is falne into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have; but, in their steed,
Curses, not loud but deep, mouth-honor, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton!

Enter Seyton.

Seyton. What's your gracious pleasure?
Macbeth. What news more?
Seyton. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.
Macbeth. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.
Give me my armor.
Seyton. 'Tis not needed yet.
Macbeth. I'll put it on.
Send out moe horses, skirr the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armor.
How does your patient, doctor?
Doctor. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies
That keep her from her rest.
Macbeth. Cure her of that!
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd.
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart?
Doctor. Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.
Macbeth. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.
Come, put mine armor on. Give me my staff.
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from me.—
Come, sir, dispatch.—If thou couldst, doctor, cast
The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.—
What rhubarb, cyme, or what purgative drug
Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them?
Doctor. Ay, my good lord. Your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.
Macbeth. Bring it after me.
I will not be afraid of death and bane
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane.
Doctor. [Aside.] Were I from Dunsinane away and clear.
Profit again should hardly draw me here. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

Drum and colors. Enter Malcolm, Siward, Macduff, Siward's Son, Menteth, Cathness, Angus, [Lennox, Ross,] and Soldiers marching.

Malcolm. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand
That chambers will be safe.
Menteth. We doubt it nothing.
Siward. What wood is this before us?
Menteth. The wood of Birnam.
Malcolm. Let every soldier hew him down a bough
And bear't before him: thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host, and make discovery
Err in report of us.
Soldier. It shall be done.
Siward. We learn no other but the confident tyrant
Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before't.
Malcolm. 'Tis his main hope;

32 med'cine: physician weal: state 36 dew: literally 'water,' figuratively 'make grow' sovereign flower: Cf. n. 3 taint: become tainted 5 mortal consequences: future events in human life 9 sway: control myself 11 cream-fac'd: the servant's face is white with fear loon: rascal, lout 16 over-red: cover with red 17 patch: clown, fool 23 push: crisis, attack 24 cheer: Cf. n. disseat: unseat; F. dis-eate 26 falne: fallen 29 steed: stead

40 moe: more skirr: scour 45 her: F omits 49 Raze out: erase written: i.e. permanent 50 oblivious: causing forgetfulness 58, 59 cast/The water: analyze the urine 63 cyme: a cathartic; Cf. n. 2 chambers will be safe: i.e. we can sleep in security 7 shadow: partially conceal 8 discovery: reconnaissance 13 setting down before: laying siege to

For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and less have given him the revolt,
And none serve with him but constrained things
Whose hearts are absent too.
Macduff. Let our just censures
Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.
Siward. The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have and what we owe.
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,
But certain issue strokes must arbitrate,
Towards which advance the war. Exeunt marching.

Scene Fifth

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers, with drums and colors.

Macbeth. Hang out our banners on the outward walls.
The cry is still, 'They come.' Our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn. Here let them lie
Till famine and the ague eat them up.
Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours,
We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,
And beat them backward home.
A cry within of women.
What is that noise?
Seyton. It is the cry of women, my good lord. [Exit.]
Macbeth. I have almost forgot the taste of fears.
The time has been, my senses would have cool'd
To hear a night-shriek, and my fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't. I have supp'd full with horrors;
Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

[Enter Seyton.]

Wherefore was that cry?
Seyton. The queen, my lord, is dead.
Macbeth. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word.
Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more. It is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly.

15 where ... given: i.e. where opportunity is offered 16 more and less: high and low 19, 20 Let ... event: Let's wait until after the battle to make a true judgment 19 censures: judgments 20 event: outcome 24 owe: own (in fact, as opposed to what we 'say we have') 25, 26 Thoughts ... arbitrate; Cf. n. 5 forc'd: reinforced 12 fell of hair: skin with hair growing on it 13 treatise: story 15 start: startle 18 should: would 19 word: i.e. the announcement of her death 25, 26 Life's ... stage: see II.4.7; Cf. n.

Messenger. Gracious my lord,
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do't.
Macbeth. Well, say, sir.
Messenger. As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.
Macbeth. Liar and slave!
Messenger. Let me endure your wrath if't be not so:
Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say, a moving grove.
Macbeth. If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shall thou hang alive
Till famine cling thee. If thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much.
I pull in resolution and begin.
To doubt th' equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth. 'Fear not, till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunsinane,' and now a wood
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here.
I gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish th' estate o' th' world were now undone.
Ring the alarum bell! Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back. Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

Drum and colors. Enter Malcolm, Siward, Macduff, and their Army, with boughs.

Malcolm. Now near enough; your leavy screens throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,
Shall with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle. Worthy Macduff and we Shall take upon's what else remains to do,
According to our order.
Siward. Fare you well.
Do we but find the tyrant's power tonight,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.
Macduff. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath.
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
Exeunt. Alarums continued.

Scene Seventh

Enter Macbeth.

Macbeth. They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,
But bearlike I must fight the course. What's he
That was not born of woman? such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter Young Siward.

Young Siward. What is thy name?

44 shall: shalt 45 cling: wither sooth: truth 47 pull in: rein in resolution: assurance, confidence 55 estate o' th' world: orderly universe 56 wrack: ruin 1 leavy: leafy 4 battle: part of the army 2 bearlike ... course; Cf. n.

Macbeth. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
Young Siward. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.
Macbeth. My name's Macbeth.
Young Siward. The divel himself could not pronounce a title
More hateful to mine ear.
Macbeth. No, nor more fearful.
Young Siward. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.
Fight, and Young Siward slain.
Macbeth. Thou wast born of woman;
But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,
Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born. Exit.

Alarums. Enter Macduff.

Macduff. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face!
If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves; either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword with an unbatter'd edge
I sheathe again undeeded. There thou shouldst be.
B this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune!
And more I beg not. Exit. Alarums.

Enter Malcolm and Siward.

Siward. This way, my lord; the castle's gently rend'red;
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.
Malcolm. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.
Siward. Enter, sir, the castle.
Exeunt. Alarum.

Enter Macbeth.

Macbeth. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Enter Macduff.

Macduff. Turn, hell-hound, turn!
Macbeth. Of all men else I have avoided thee.
But get thee back, my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.
Macduff. I have no words;
My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! Fight. Alarum.
Macbeth. Thou losest labor.
As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed.
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.
Macduff. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou still hast serv'd
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.
Macbeth. Accursed be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man!
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with thee.
Macduff. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze o' th' time.
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
'Here may you see the tyrant.'
Macbeth. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body
I throw my warlike shield. Lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be him that first cries, 'Hold, enough!'
Exeunt fighting. Alarums.

Enter fighting, and Macbeth slain.
Retreat and flourish. Enter, with drum and colors, Malcolm, Siward, Ross, Thanes, and Soldiers.

Malcolm. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.
Siward. Some must go off; and yet, by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.
Malcolm. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt.
He only liv'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.
Siward. Then he is dead?
Ross. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow
Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.
Siward. Had he his hurts before?
Ross. Ay, on the front.
Siward. Why then, God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death;
And so, his knell is knoll'd.
Malcolm. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.
Siward. He's worth no more;
They say he parted well, and paid his score,
And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Enter Macduff, with Macbeth's head.

Macduff. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands

SD Exit: Cf. n. 23 kerns: see I.2.15. 24 staves: spears 28 bruited: noised, reported 30 rend'red: surrendered 32 bravely: worthily, excellently 36 strike beside us deliberately miss us SD Enter Macbeth: Cf. n. 38 Roman fool: i.e. Brutus, Antony, etc. 39 lives: i.e. living enemies 49 intrenchant: incapable of being cut

55 still: always 59 better part of man: i.e. valor 61 palter: equivocate 67 Painted upon a pole: i.e. with a painted likeness suspended on a pole 71 baited: i.e. like a bear; see V.7.2.; Cf. n. SD Retreat: trumpet signal to cease pursuit 78 go off: stage metaphor for 'die' 84 unshrinking station: i.e. the station where he did not shrink 93 hairs: pronounced like 'heirs' 99 score: account

Th' usurper's cursed head; the time is free.
I see thee compass'd with thy kindgom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine;
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland!

Flourish.

Malcolm. We shall not spend a large expense of time
Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honor nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time—
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny,
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher and his fiendlike queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life—this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace
We will perform in measure, time, and place.
So, thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

Flourish. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS

103 pearl: i.e. the nobles 109 several loves: devotion of each of you 118 self and violent: her own violent 121 in measure: in proportion, with proper decorum

Notes

I.i.SD. Thunder and lightning. The scenes with the witches were probably staged in a spectacular fashion. The witches may have been revealed on the inner stage by drawing back a curtain; each of their appearances is accompanied by stage thunder, which was produced by beating drums or by rolling a heavy ball of iron or stone down an uneven set of steps constructed in the superstructure over the stage. The lightning was made by blowing rosin through a candle flame. A stage mist, made by burning rosin, may have risen through the trap door to make the witches disappear in the 'fog and filthy air' at the end of this scene, as also at I.3.83.

I.i.9–13. Graymalkin . . . air. The witches answer the calls of their 'familiars' or attendant spirits, which have assumed the forms of animals. Graymalkin is a pet name for a grey cat; Paddock means 'toad.' The familiar of the Third Witch, unnamed here, is called Harpier in IV.1.3, possibly a corruption of 'harpy.' F ascribes the lines "Paddock calls . . . filthy air" to All; the arrangement adopted here is clearly more logical.

I.ii.4. sergeant. A title which a commissioned officer might have in the army of Shakespeare's time. Modern editors often unnecessarily change Captain to Sergeant in the stage directions and speech headings.

I.ii.23. Which. Probably refers to Macdonwald, who never took leave of Macbeth until Macbeth killed him. It may refer to Macbeth; it is possible that the omission of some lines has obscured the sense. A touch of grim humor is added by reference to polite forms of leave-taking: 'shook hands,' 'bade farewell.'

I.ii.27, 28. As whence . . . thunders break. Storms come out of the east, whence the sun rises.

I.ii.44. memorize another Golgotha. Make the field memorable as another 'place of the skull,' the literal meaning of Golgotha, where Christ was crucified.

I.ii.50. Thane. A title of nobility in Scotland, corresponding to the English earl.

I.ii.56, 57. flout . . . cold. Insult the Scottish sky and chill the people with fear.

I.ii.63. rebellious. Sweno, though not a rebel, was assisting rebellion.

I.ii.71. general. Here and in many other words such as prosperous, treasonous, interim, etc. a lightly accented syllable following a heavily accented syllable may be omitted in pronunciation. Note also that phrases such as 'to the' and 'to his' may be pronounced 'to th' ' and 'to's.'

I.ii.72, 73. deceive . . . interest. Betray the interests closest to our heart. Here as elsewhere the king uses the royal plural.

I.iii.16. ports they blow. The meaning seems to be that she will delay the Tiger's arrival in port.

I.iii.21. penthouse lid. The eyelid is compared to a penthouse, that is, a lean-to.

I.iii.33. weyard. One form of 'weird,' derived from the Old English wyrd, 'fate.' F uses the forms weyard and weyward (possibly by association with 'wayward'), but never 'weird,' which has become familiar because of Theobald's 18th-century emendation. The form weyard preserves the original meter. The exact nature of the 'weyard sisters' is left undefined: they are not merely old hags practicing sorcery, nor are they truly fates, as they appear to be in Holinshed's Chronicle, one of the chief sources of the play (see Sources of the Play).

I.iii.36. thrice to thine . . . to make up nine. The witches probably make obeisances to their familiars.

I.iii.47. beards. A beard on a woman was often thought to indicate that she was a witch.

I.iii.96, 97. His wonders . . . Silenc'd with that. Since the king is unable to decide whether astonishment or admiration better answers Macbeth's accomplishment, or better expresses his own feeling, he is reduced to silence.

I.iii.152–155. Shakes . . . rapt. Here and in a number of other places (notably I.3.152–155, I.4.1–9, I.5.19, 20, I.7.65, 66, II.1.4–11, 13–15, II.2.3–10, 37, 38, II.3.53–61, III.1.47–53, 83–94, III.4.19–23) most modern editors rearrange the lines in order to approximate more closely regular iambic pentameter. See Text and Date.

I.iii.152. single state of man. The nature of man is compared to a nation (as in Julius Caesar, II.1.65–68), which internal disturbances may reduce to impotence.

I.iii.162, 163. Come . . . day. That is, even the roughest day must come to an end. This fatalistic thought is relevant to Macbeth's previous aside.

I.iv.22, 23. That . . . mine. That I might have been able to make my thanks and reward proportionate to your desert.

I.iv.23. I have. Such contractions as 'I've' were common in Elizabethan speech, but are not always indicated in the spelling. Other examples will be found in I.7.29–65, and elsewhere.

I.iv.46. Prince of Cumberland. A Scottish title corresponding to Prince of Wales in England.

I.iv.51. The rest . . . for you. Any relaxation of the effort to serve you is in reality a greater effort.

I.v.19–24. Thou'dst have . . . undone. That is, Macbeth would have the crown, which demands that he murder in order to have it; and murder is what he rather fears to do than wishes undone.

I.v.41. raven. The raven's croaking was traditionally associated with gloom and misfortune.

I.v.49, 50. keep . . . it. Peaceably intervene between my purpose and its accomplishment.

I.v.70. To beguile the time. The time means here 'the world' or 'the present age'; hence, 'to deceive the world.'

I.vi.SD. torches. Torches were often used to indicate that the scene took place at night, though the stage of the Elizabethan public theater, lighted by daylight, was necessarily bright. In this scene Duncan approaches the castle gate in the evening. It is light enough for him to see the building and the birds, but the torches remind us that night, called upon by Lady Macbeth in the preceding scene, is falling.

I.vi.5. martlet. In Shakespeare's day martlet often meant the house martin, which was supposed to build its nest only in 'fair houses.'

I.vi.13–16. The love . . . trouble. Duncan means that just as we gratefully accept the trouble to which our friends put us as a sign of their love, so Lady Macbeth should thank him for the troublesome visit he is paying her.

I.vi.26. purveyor. An officer whose duty was to ride ahead and make necessary arrangements.

I.vii.4. his surcease. Probably Duncan's death; possibly the arresting of the consequence.

I.vii.5–7. here . . . come. That is, we'd enjoy the profits of crime in this present life and take our chances on the next life.

I.vii.8. have judgment. That is, we may be punished here by those who follow our example.

I.vii.22–3. heavens . . . air. Psalm 18:10 in the Great Bible (1539) reads: 'He rode upon the Cherubins and dyd flye: he came flyenge with the wynges of the wynde.'

I.vii.27–8. Vaulting ambition . . . on th' other. Ambition, like an overeager horseman, vaults over the saddle and falls on the other side of the horse. The word 'side,' which would fill out the meter of the line, may have dropped out.

I.vii.49. cat i' th' adage. 'The cat would eat fish and would not wet her feet.'

I.vii.52. do Lady. Macbeth's reply makes Macbeth's implication clear: to do more than becomes a man is to behave like a beast. The sense of the context thus justifies the emendation.

I.vii.68. sticking-place. The metaphor is that of a corssbow, the cord of which must be screwed up to the notch where it sticks.

I.vii.73–75. memory . . . only. In Elizabethan physiology memory was thought of as a sort of guard, prepared to warn the brain of attack. It was supposed to be lodged at the base of the skull, reason occupying the upper part. If memory is overcome by fumes of wine rising from the stomach, no warning is given, and the fumes rise to fill the receptacle of reason.

II.i.20–22. Being . . . wrought. Our desire to entertain the king was hampered by unpreparedness; otherwise we should have done more.

II.i.62. Whose howl's his watch. The wolf's howl tells Murder that it is time to act.

II.i.63. Tarquin's. See Shakespeare's The Rape of Lucrece.

II.ii.5. bellman. A bellman was customarily sent to condemned prisoners the night before their execution.

II.ii.SD. Enter Macbeth. F gives Macbeth's entrance before his speech, 'Who's there?' but this is clearly given offstage.

II.iii.4. farmer. He had hoarded grain to sell at high prices in a famine; the prospect of a plentiful crop confronted him with ruin.

II.iii.4, 5. Come in, time-server. It is logical to expect a phrase here to parallel the later 'come in, equivocator' and 'Come in, tailor.' F's Come in time is incomprehensible. J. Dover Wilson, who suggests the emendation adopted here, in his edition of Macbeth (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1951, pp. 125–6) says, 'My guess is "come in, time-server," an epithet appropriate to all farmers, who must serve Time in its changes of season and caprices of weather, and to this farmer in its special sense of one who adapts his conduct to the time with an eye to the main chance . . .'

II.iii.7. equivocator. Presumably a reference to Henry Garnet, a Jesuit tried and condemned in 1600 for complicity in the Gunpowder Plot. After perjuring himself at the trial, he defended his conduct on the grounds that equivocation was justifiable in certain circumstances.

II.iii.11, 12. stealing . . . hose. Trousers (hose) made in the latest French style were so tight-fitting that the tailor got caught in trying to steal cloth as he had done in making the larger ones formerly in fashion. There may be a pun on 'staling' (since stealing then had the same pronunciation), 'urinating.'

II.iii.13. goose. Possibly continues the double entendre on stealing, since goose also meant a swelling caused by venereal disease.

II.iii.SD. Enter Macbeth. The entrance of a character is frequently indicated a few lines before his first speech, to give him time to walk across the large platform stage, and to give characters onstage the chance to see him and comment on his arrival.

II.iii.53–61. The night . . . shake. In Macbeth, as in many other plays, Shakespeare makes use of the commonly held belief that dire portents and disorders in nature accompany disruptions of the social order, such as the assassination of Duncan.

II.iii.SD. Enter Macbeth and Lennox. F indicates an entrance for Ross here, but it is apparent later (II.4.28 ff) that he has not visited Duncan's chamber.

II.iii.105. vault. Refers both to a wine cellar and to the earth, with the sky as a roof.

II.iii.128. Unmannerly . . . gore. The blood makes unmannerly breeches for the daggers, whose proper breeches would be sheathes.

II.iii.137, 138. Where . . . seize us. That is, where we may be surprised by fate, hidden in the smallest and least suspected place.

II.iii.139–141. Our tears . . . motion. There has not been time yet to weep for our father's death nor to express our sorrow in action.

II.iii.143. naked frailties. All except Lennox and Macduff are in dressing gowns.

II.iv.7. stage. The frequent comparison of the world to a stage (see V.5.25, 26) had a special appropriateness in the Elizabethan public theater, where the canopy over the stage was called 'the heavens,' while the 'cellarage' beneath it often represented hell.

II.iv.14. tow'ring . . . place. Technical terms in falconry: towering means circling upward; place is the highest point in the falcon's flight.

III.i.28. Go . . . better. Unless my horse goes fast enough to make it unnecessary.

III.i.45–53. To make . . . safely thus. Neither the lineation nor the punctuation of F makes good sense here. This arrangement of lines was suggested by Kenneth Muir in his edition of Macbeth (London, Methuen, 1951).

III.i.61, 62. My genius . . . Caesar. See Antony and Cleopatra, II.3.20ff.

III.i.147. perfect spy. Macbeth apparently intends to send someone with these final pieces of information; it is logical to assume that the Third Murtherer of Scene 3 is that person.

III.ii.15. scorch'd. Theobald's 18th-century emendation, scotch'd, has become familiar, but is unwarranted; it is merely another spelling of the same word.

III.ii.43. copy. May also mean lease, since 'copyhold' was a form of tenure.

III.ii.47. shard-borne. It is difficult to tell whether this means 'dung-bred' or 'borne of sealy wings.' The latter seems more probable in this context, which calls attention to the beetle's flight, rather than to its origin.

III.ii.55. bond. The prophecy that Banquo's descendants should be kings.

III.iv.4–6. Ourself . . . state. Thrones, covered by a canopy, are set up on a dais for the king and queen, probably on the inner stage. On the platform stage is the table for the guests. Macbeth means to sit there with them, while Lady Macbeth will stay on her canopied throne ('keep her state').

III.iv.13. Approaching the door. Just as he is about to sit down, Macbeth sees the murderer at the door upstage, some distance from the table, and goes over to confer with him.

III.iv.38–40. The feast . . . welcome. That is, a feast where the usual courtesies of the host are omitted seems like a meal sold at an inn.

III.iv.SD. Enter . . . Banquo. The ghost may enter at another door than that where Macbeth has been talking, or rise through a trap door beside the table. Macbeth walks back toward the table, but does not at once see the ghost. He first notes that his place is occupied (l. 56), then, recognizing Banquo, supposes that someone has perpetrated a grim practical joke. Simon Forman, who saw Macbeth at the Globe in 1611, seems to have been particularly impressed by this scene, which he describes in detail (see Text and Date). His statement that the ghost entered when Macbeth stood up to toast Banquo has puzzled some editors, but the explanation is simple. Forman apparently remembered the second appearance of the ghost (l. 106), when Macbeth has finally gone to his place at the table and proposed a toast. As he turns to sit down (l. 112), he sees the ghost again. Forman's account shows clearly that, although the ghost is invisible to all except Macbeth on the stage, it is intended to be seen by the audience.

III.iv.43. remembrancer. The word was used as a title for certain officers of the Exchequer, such as The King's Remembrancer.

III.iv.81. stool. The stool was the normal seat for rich and poor in Elizabethan England. Chairs, which were very rare, were reserved for the highest ranking persons present.

III.iv.85–87. If charnel houses . . . kites. That is, it may be safer to let kites (birds of prey) eat dead bodies to prevent them from returning to haunt us.

III.iv.122. Hyrcan. Hyrcania, south of the Caspian Sea, is often mentioned in classical literature as the habitat of tigers.

III.iv.136, 137. You . . . owe. You make me feel unfamiliar with my own disposition.

III.iv.145. Stand . . . going. Don't stand on ceremony, the correct order of precedence, etc.

III.iv.153. understood relations. Relations as understood by a soothsayer.

III. Scene 5. This scene was probably added by Thomas Middleton or some other contemporary of Shakespeare. The songs indicated in the stage directions here and in IV.1 are found in full in Middleton's The Witch. The exact relationship of the two plays has never been determined. See IV. 1.39–43 Cf. n.

III.v.SD. Sing within. The second part of this stage direction, Sing within, 'Come away, come away,' etc., is printed in F at the end after being interrupted by two spoken lines. Such an arrangement is easy to imagine, since the song, as we have it in The Witch (III.3), is in dialogue form, beginning:

Come away: Come away:
Heccat: Heccat, Come away } in ye aire.

(See Malone Society Reprint, Oxford, Oxford University Press, 1950, p. 57.) Heccat answers, 'I come, I come,' but she might very well give this answer after ll. 34–5, and then proceed with the rest of the song. Davenant arranged the stage business in this way in his adaptation, which was published in 1674 with the full text of the song.

III.v.34, 35. Hark . . . for me. Heccat's words suggest that the attendant spirit appears in a car suspended on ropes and possibly wrapped in some light cloth (the 'foggy cloud'). At the end of the song Heccat gets into the car, and it is drawn up into 'the heavens.'

III. Scene 6. In this scene Lennox and the other Lord describe the results of the action against Macduff planned by Macbeth in III.4. Macduff has already had time to get to England, though the following scene, IV.1, supposedly occurs the day after III.4. There is no logical explanation for this discrepancy.

III.vi.31. pray . . . upon his aid. Upon seems to have the force here of 'relying on.' Shakespeare may have had in mind the expression, 'pray in aid,' meaning 'claim assistance' (to which one has some right).

III.vi.36. Free . . . knives. That is, free our feasts and banquets from bloody knives.

III.vi.45. clogs. The messenger is embarrassed by the answer Macduff makes him return; he is fearful of Macbeth's reaction to it.

IV.i.2. hedge-pig. In I.1 the Second Witch's familiar is a toad.

IV.i.23. mummy. Embalmed human flesh and powders or liquids made from it, all known as mummy, were used in medicine and were also thought to have great magical power.

IV.i.23. maw and gulf. Both words mean 'stomach'; gulf, by suggesting a yawning chasm, emphasizes the voracious appetite of the shark.

IV.i.SD. Enter Heccat . . . Witches. The appearance of Heccat and three more witches was probably a non-Shakespearean addition to the play (see III.5 Cf. n.). No exit is indicated for Heccat, but since she has no lines after l. 43, she probably leaves at this point. The other witches may remain to join in the dance (doubtless another addition) after l. 143.

IV.i.39–43. O, well done . . . you put in. These lines, like many in III.5, are iambic tetrameter, whereas the witches elsewhere speak in trochaic tetrameter. This discrepancy is one reason for doubting that they originally belonged in the play. The reference to 'elves and fairies' also strikes a false note.

IV.i.SD. First Apparition. Each of the three apparitions rises and then descends through a trap door, probably on the inner stage. The significance of the Armed Head is disputable. Some have thought it prefigured the head of Macbeth, cut off by Macduff at the end of the play. It is more likely that it represents Macduff, the adversary of whom Macbeth is here told to beware. As George Lyman Kittredge has pointed out in his edition of Macbeth (Boston, Ginn and Co., 1939, p. 189), each of the other apparitions represents a person dangerous to Macbeth; the first apparition should set the pattern. Kittredge also notes that 'the First Apparition should not represent something that comes to pass later than the events foretold by the Second and Third.'

IV.i.SD. Second Apparition. Represents Macduff: see V.7.44–5, 56, 57.

IV.i.SD. Third Apparition. The child is presumably Malcolm, holding a tree to represent the stratagem by which his army approaches Dunsinane: see V.4.4–9.

IV.i.SD. Descend. An imperative verb is often used in Elizabethan stage directions.

IV.i.106. head. Macbeth presumably refers again to Macduff, whose 'armed head' is the one potential threat to his security. F's Rebellious dead has been interpreted by some as evidence that Macbeth is thinking of Banquo, whom he mentions at l. 111; but Rebellious dead would seem to be plural, and, in any case, Banquo cannot well be called 'rebellious.' It is more likely that head was mistakenly printed as dead.

IV.i.107. Birnam. The modern form of this name, suggested by F Byrnam at its first mention (l. 101), has been kept throughout, though F spells it more often with a final n (as here) or ne. Deviations from F's spelling of the name are not elsewhere noted.

IV.i.116. sinks that cauldron. The cauldron is lowered by a machine through one of the trap doors.

IV.i.SD. A show of eight Kings. The stage direction as printed in F, A shew of eight Kings, and Banquo last, with a glasse in his hand, contradicts l. 129, where it is clear that the last king carries the glass. Various reconstructions of the stage business have been made, with corresponding emendations of the text. The emendation adopted here suits the following hypotheses: It seems likely that the kings enter at one side of the stage and move across to the other in a dignified and spectacular procession. They probably remain in sight until l. 134, where Banquo 'points at them,' after which they may vanish with him in a stage mist, as the witches do. Since they are all Banquo's descendants, he may precede them onto the stage, standing aside where Macbeth can note their resemblance to him (l. 122).

However this show was staged, it is certain that it had a special topical importance as a compliment to King James, before whom the play was probably first given (see Henry N. Paul, The Royal Play of Macbeth, New York, Macmillan, 1950, pp. 162–82, 317–31). The Stuarts claimed their descent from Banquo, and James was the ninth Stuart sovereign. His mother, Mary, Queen of Scots, whom Queen Elizabeth forced to abdicate, was the eighth. Faced with the delicate problem of presenting this controversial member of the family, Shakespeare may, as Paul suggests (p. 179) have created a deliberate ambiguity about the eighth 'king,' who may have appeared on the stage heavily shrouded and carrying the glass before his face. In this way various members of the audience would be free to assume that the mysterious figure represented the ill-fated Mary (the eighth 'king' in the generic sense of the word) or her fortunate son (the eighth male sovereign), who could not, however, be plainly depicted without lèse majesté. Shakespeare may have seen the drawing of the Stuart genealogical tree published during Mary's lifetime in John Leslie's De Origine, Moribus, et Rebus Gestis Scotorum (Rome, 1578), showing the series of 'eight kings' descended from Banquo. On this tree, Mary is the eighth.

IV.i.129. glass. Presumably a magic glass in which the future can be seen.

IV.i.131. twofold . . . scepters. The ball is part of the royal regalia; twofold probably refers to England and Scotland, united under James; the treble scepters probably indicate that James is king of England, Scotland, and Ireland.

IV.i.136–143. Ay, sir . . . his welcome pay. The meter and the spirit of these lines again seem out of keeping. They were probably added with the Heccat material.

IV.i.162, 163. The flighty . . . it. Unless intentions are translated into deeds, they remain forever out of reach.

IV.ii.91. shag-hair'd. Refers to the long, unkempt hair of the Elizabethan ruffian.

IV.iii.17. discern. Macduff may learn something about Macbeth through Malcolm's plight, and he may even learn the wisdom of betraying Malcolm to Macbeth. The unexpected suggestion of the latter part of the sentence makes it at first obscure. Most editors change discern to deserve, but by this emendation the second half of the sentence is cast adrift: Macduff doesn't deserve wisdom.

IV.iii.109–111. Pour . . . earth. Concord, peace, and unity have not only their general significance here but also a special topical reference, since these were the avowed goals of James I's foreign and domestic policy.

IV.iii.150, 151. the chance . . . quarrel. That is, may the chance of good fortune equal the justness of our cause.

IV.iii.157. stay his cure. Edward the Confessor was thought to be able to heal 'the king's evil' (scrofula) by his touch. The passage is presumably an indirect compliment to James I, who claimed the same healing power.

IV.iii.190. ecstasy. Probably alludes to the sham fits of people pretending to be 'possessed.' Several such cases were known in Shakespeare's day.

IV.iii.255. dispute it. Sometimes interpreted as 'contend with your sorrow,' but notice that Malcolm has just urged Macduff to express his sorrow (l. 242).

V.i.21. are. The plural, though not strictly grammatical, is probably due to the thought of the two eyes, both unseeing.

V.ii.36. sovereign flower. Suggests both 'flower of true sovereignty' (as opposed to usurping weeds) and 'healing, restorative flower' (as opposed to noxious weeds).

V.iii.24. cheer. In Shakespeare's day, as still in many dialects, 'chair' had the same pronunciation. There is therefore a pun on 'chair' which relates cheer to disseat.

V.iii.63. cyme. Probably refers to the 'cymes' or tops of the colewort, often taken as a cathartic. May be a misprint for 'cinne,' another spelling of 'senna,' also a cathartic.

V.iv.25, 26. Thoughts . . . arbitrate. That is, optimistic speculation is mere wishful thinking; battle will decide the issues.

V.vii.2. bearlike . . . course. The comparison is to the popular Elizabethan sport of bear-baiting, in which a bear, tied to a post, was attacked by dogs. A course was one round or bout.

V.vii.SD. Exit. Here, or possibly after l. 29, the body of Young Siward must be removed, for at l. 86 we learn that he has been 'brought off the field.' Whether or not the body is still onstage when Macduff enters, it is clear that he does not see it, nor does the elder Siward when he enters (l. 30). The entire scene is an excellent example of the fluidity of Elizabethan staging. Different localities are suggested in rapid succession by the use of different parts of the stage. Macduff apparently enters at some distance from the place where Macbeth has killed Young Siward; when Malcolm and the elder Siward enter, they probably head for the inner stage, which may represent the gates of the castle; when Macbeth re-enters, the action is presumably away from the inner stage again, suggesting another part of the field of battle; the entrance of l. 77 may be in the inner stage to indicate that it is inside the castle. Because of the size and the facilities of the stage this panoramic action can be continuous and the pace rapid.

V.vii.SD. Enter Macbeth. Many editors begin a new scene here, and some begin another new scene after line 76. The explanation in the preceding note should make it clear why such scene division was unnecessary in writing for the Elizabethan stage.

The Tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra

Edited by
PETER G. PHIALAS

Dramatis Personae

MARK ANTONY
OCTAVIUS CAESAR
M. AEMILIUS LEPIDUS
} Triumvirs

DOMITIUS ENOBARBUS
VENTIDIUS
EROS
SCARUS
DERCETAS
DEMETRIUS
PHILO
} Friends to Antony

MAECENAS
AGRIPPA
DOLABELLA
PROCULEIUS
THIDIAS
GALLUS
} Friends to Caesar

MENAS
MENECRATES
VARRIUS
} Friends to Pompey

TAURUS, Lieutenant General to Caesar
CANIDIUS, Lieutenant General to Antony
ROMAN OFFICER UNDER VENTIDIUS
A SCHOOLMASTER

ALEXAS
MARDIAN
SELEUCUS
DIOMEDES
} Attendants on Cleopatra

A SOOTHSAYER
A CLOWN
CLEOPATRA, Queen of Egypt
OCTAVIA, Sister to Caesar, and Wife to Antony

CHARMIAN
IRAS
} Attendants on Cleopatra

OFFICERS, SOLDIERS, MESSENGERS, ATTENDANTS

The Tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra

Introduction

1. The Date

The earliest record of Antony and Cleopatra appears in the Stationers' Register, where under date of May 20, 1608, Edward Blount, the publisher, entered his copy of the play. On the basis of indirect evidence, however, it appears that the play had been completed a year or two earlier. For instance, it probably served as the model for the revision which Samuel Daniel made in his play Cleopatra before republishing it in 1607. In this revised edition of his play Daniel replaced much of the relation of events by dialogue, gave greater parts to Iras and Charmian, and introduced Diomedes and Dercetas, the latter in the scene in which he brings Antony's sword to Caesar. Daniel had published Cleopatra in 1594, 1599, 1601, and 1602, but only in the edition of 1607 did he make the alterations which brought a portion of his play nearer Shakespeare's tragedy. There is good reason to believe, then, that Antony and Cleopatra was the impetus and model for Daniel's revisions, and that therefore it must have been completed in or before 1607 (see note on IV.11.SD).

Echoes of Antony and Cleopatra can be heard also in Barnabe Barnes' The Devil's Charter, first acted on February 2, 1607, and printed in October of the same year. In a brief passage of the play reference is made to 'Aspiks,' 'Cleopatra's birds,' 'Egyptian slime,' 'Nylus,' 'Ptolemies wife'; and there is the stage direction, 'He putteth to either of their brests an Aspike.' Such echoes may not constitute proof but they support the view that Antony and Cleopatra had appeared in 1607 if not earlier. How much earlier the play had been written can be fixed by the dates of two plays, from one of which Shakespeare seems to have borrowed Antony's image of the dragonish cloud (IV.10.3–9). The two plays are George Chapman's Monsieur D'Olive (1606) and his Bussy D'Ambois (1607). In the latter play appears the passage:

> and like empty clouds,
> In which our faulty apprehensions forge
> The forms of dragons, lions, elephants,
> When they hold no proportion.[1]

Perhaps more appropriate as Shakespeare's source is a passage in the earlier play where, as in Antony's image, the central thought is the decline of great men's fortunes:

> Our great men
> Like to a mass of clouds that now seem like
> An elephant, and straightways like an ox,
> And then a mouse. . . .[2]

Since the dates of the two plays are 1606 and 1607, we may fix 1606 as the earliest date for Antony and Cleopatra. And there is support for such conclusion from internal evidence. On the basis of metrical tests Antony and Cleopatra follows Macbeth, whose date is 1606. The date of the play, then, is 1606 or 1607.

2. The Text

Though Edward Blount entered his copy in the Stationers' Register in 1608, the play does not appear to have been printed until much later, and the earliest text we possess is that of the First Folio (1623). The probability is strong that this text was set up from a fair copy of Shakespeare's manuscript before its excessive length had been trimmed for stage performance. In support of this theory may be cited the peculiarly Shakespearean misspellings, misprints, and colloquial abbreviations in the text which are duplicated in good quartos or even in Folio texts believed to be based on Shakespeare's manuscripts (New Cambridge Shakespeare, ed. J. D. Wilson, pp. 124–30). Furthermore the stage directions are so precise and demanding, even fussy, and at the same time impracticable, that they appear to be the work of the author rather than those of a promptbook used in an actual performance.

The view that the text was not based on that of a promptbook is supported by the presence of textual irregularities which the prompter might be thought to have eliminated. For instance he would have assigned the speeches at IV.5.1,4,9 to Soldier, not to Eros, and he would not have retained Dolabella as the speaker at V.1.34,38, since he is not on the stage at the time. It is also likely that he would have eliminated the duplication of the speech prefix Eno. at II.7.147,152, and of Proc. at V.2.37,40. These are errors due to forgetfulness on the part of Shakespeare or his scribe, and though they appear insignificant, the prompter could not have allowed them to stand since they would have obscured the meaning of the passages involved.

The text contains other irregularities, most of which may be laid to the compositor. In I.2.58–64 he took six lines from Charmian's speech and set them up as a separate speech and prefixed it Alexas. The name Alexas occurs in Charmian's speech, but the compositor mistook it for a speech prefix, printed it as such, and transferred to it that portion of Charmian's speech which followed it. On the other hand the speech prefix at IV.4.9,10 shows the compositor making the reverse error. Here he mistook the speech prefix Anthony for part of Cleopatra's speech and printed:

> Cleo. Nay, Ile helpe too, Ant'ony,
> What's this for? Ah let be, let be, thou art
> The Armourer of my heart: False, false this, this,
> Sooth-law Ile helpe: Thus it must bee.

1 The Plays of George Chapman, ed. T. M. Parrott (London, George Routledge & Sons, 1910), III.1.23-6.

2 Ibid., II.2.91-4.

Anthony was the prefix for the speech 'Ah . . . this, this,' which Shakespeare probably wrote in the margin of his manuscript. The compositor literally inserted it between two of Cleopatra's speeches; and having eliminated one speech prefix, he was forced to cancel a second to avoid duplication. Consequently, he struck off the prefix Cleo. from the line 'Sooth-law . . . bee,' and added the line to the rest, making one speech out of three.

One last error in speech prefixes may claim comment. In II.1, where Menas and Menecrates appear together, the Folio prefixes Mene. all speeches not spoken by Pompey or Varrius, the other two characters in the scene. This, however, renders Menas mute, although two of Pompey's speeches (ll. 38–45, 51–61) are addressed to him and he is three times called by name in them. Far from being mute, then, Menas may claim those speeches prefixed Mene. which Pompey seems to be answering, that is, ll. 20, 22, 38–45. The speeches have been reassigned by editors in a variety of ways, the least satisfactory being that in the New Cambridge Shakespeare, where Professor Dover Wilson, following Johnson's hint, assigned all speeches prefixed Mene. to Menas. Professor Wilson believes that Mene. stands for Menas since the latter is once called Menes in the Folio (II.7.17SD). But even if his name were Menes, the argument would not be conclusive since Mene. could stand for either name. Nor is it likely that Shakespeare would have prefixed Menas' (or Menes') speeches Mene. in a scene shared with Menecrates. Even in ll.6 and 7, where Menecrates does not appear, Menas' speeches are prefixed Men.

It may be argued that the compositor failed to distinguish between Mene. and Men. in Shakespeare's manuscript, and having set up Mene. for the first two speeches, he proceeded to do the same for the rest. That the speeches belong to two different, if not opposite, personalities is suggested by their content and tone. In the first two Menecrates calmly and philosophically recommends prudence and patience to the overconfident Pompey, whereas in the remaining speeches the pragmatic Menas thrusts before his master urgent facts of military and political nature. Menas is the pirate who in a later scene offers to slit the triumvirs' throats so that his master might rule the world alone. To such a character one is scarcely tempted to attribute the lines:

> we, ignorant of ourselves
> Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
> Deny us for our good; so find we profit
> By losing of our prayers.

The text of the present edition is based on the First Folio, to which it adheres in all important matters. Of minor changes, the most important deal with punctuation and spelling, both of which have been modernized. In the matter of proper names a distinction has been made between spelling and form: the latter is retained throughout, whereas the spelling has been slightly changed in a few cases. Among proper names whose form is preserved is Mesena (II.2.192), which editors unnecessarily change to Misenum, although it is clear that Shakespeare is following North's spelling of Misena. Also restored is the Shakespearean Thidias (III.10) which in many editions is metamorphosed into Thyreus (Plutarch, Thyrsus). Shakespeare is not as careless in his spelling of proper names as we are occasionally asked to believe. In our play he reproduces so accurately such difficult names as Hipparchus, Proculeius, Seleucus, Ventidius (Ventigius), and Menecrates (also Menacrates) that when his spelling differs from North's we may reasonably conclude that the compositor is responsible for most, if not all, such variations. For instance there is no reason why Shakespeare should have written Orades instead of Orodes, Medena instead of Modena; the only plausible explanation for such spelling is that the compositor misread Shakespeare's manuscript. Consequently I have emended the Folio spelling of such names, as for instance Tourus to Taurus, Brandusium to Brundusium, Orades to Orodes, Medena to Modena, Licoania to Lycaonia, Action (Actiom) to Actium, Cidrus (Sidnis) to Cydnus. I have also changed Anthony to Antony, since the latter represents more clearly the pronunciation and is in fact the spelling given in Julius Caesar.

Another matter in which the present text adheres to the Folio is lineation. Much has been said in defense of regularizing what appears to be mislineation in the text of Shakespearean plays. In such defense the arguments are based on the unwarranted assumption that in all verse passages, even in the late plays, Shakespeare wrote nothing but precise iambic pentameter. That this is not so the text of Antony and Cleopatra makes very clear. In a play whose pervasive quality is spaciousness and freedom we are not surprised to find what may be called irregular lines; for it is clear that here, as elsewhere, the dramatist was concerned far more with rhythm and pause than with metrical consistency. Yet editors have rearranged his lines even when the change involved was a minute one. For instance, in the opening scene of the play the Folio prints ll. 58–60 in the following manner:

> No messenger but thine, and all alone tonight
> We'll wander through the streets, and note
> The qualities of people.

It is true that l. 58 stretches beyond the regular five feet. But it is no great matter; and certainly if we read messenger as dissyllabic the line may pass for a respectable pentameter. Some editors, however, print the lines to read as follows:

> No messenger but thine, and all alone
> Tonight we'll wander through the streets, and note
> The qualities of people.

Since both lines (58, 59) can be read as pentameters (we may read We'll 'We will') the change is unnecessary; but it is also unfortunate, and indeed unacceptable, since by placing tonight at the beginning of l. 59 editors give it the primary emphasis and furthermore make it modify we'll wander exclusively, whereas in fact it modifies all alone as well and rhythmically belongs with it. Finally, what reason can the compositor have had for making such a small change in Shakespeare's manuscript? If the Folio reading is what Shakespeare wrote, it should remain inviolate.

A similar instance is I.3.122–124, which the Folio prints as follows:

> Be strew'd before your feet:
> Ant. Let vs go.
> Come: Our separation so abides and flies

Finding l. 123 excessively long, Pope and subsequent editors regularized it by adding its first foot to the end of l. 122. Again, it is difficult to discover for what reason the compositor would have made such a small change, assuming that Shakespeare wrote Come at the end of l. 122. If, as we learn elsewhere, the compositor was troubled by long pentameters, some of them too long for his column, why should he have lengthened l. 123 by adding a word taken from a half-line? On the contrary, he often divides a long pentameter into half-lines, as for instance I.3.42, which the Folio prints as two lines:

But bid farewell, and goe:
When you sued staying,

This is the compositor's most frequent departure from Shakespeare's lineation, and in the present text such half-lines are reunited into a single pentameter.

Not all short lines, however, can be so explained and regularized. To be sure, it is generally safe to combine into a single pentameter two consecutive half-lines. But what of single short lines? Take for instance two such lines separated by a regular pentameter, as in II.2.18–21:

Ant. If we compose well heere, to Parthia:
Harke Ventidius.
Caesar. I do not know Mecenas, aske Agrippa.
Lep. Noble Friends:

Since the passage apparently violates 18th-century prosody, editors have regularized it into the following:

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark Ventidius.
Caesar. I do not know,
Maecenas; ask Agrippa.
Lep. Noble friends,

The change is, of course, unnecessary and indeed unfortunate, for the Folio reading is unquestionably superior, and for the following reasons. First, 'Hark, Ventidius' is a short line not a half-line; that is, it is not the first half of a pentameter. It is independent of the following speech, and in fact its brevity is intended to suggest an awkward pause between the two speeches, perhaps even the distance separating Caesar and Antony on the stage. Second, the regularization breaks up l. 20, which is a precise iambic pentameter: it interrupts the flow of its musical phrasing, by separating Maecenas from the preceding clause, with which it surely belongs. And finally the regularization disregards the long pause very clearly marked by the colon at the end of the short line 'Noble friends,' a pause which indicates Lepidus' apprehension and hesitation. The phrase commands a pause, it would seem, for its import must go home to both Antony and Caesar. The two words are not, I believe, a portion of the preceding pentameter but a line in themselves.

Another irregularity in the Folio text is the presence of prose passages which, we are convinced, Shakespeare wrote as verse. Why the compositor made the change is not always clear, but in most cases he did so to conserve space. Now and then he refuses to set up half lines but instead runs them together with a portion of the following pentameter. But in doing so he loses control of the verse lines and is therefore forced to print the remainder of the speech as prose. An instance of such practice is the following passage (I.5.69–76):

Alex. I Madam, twenty seuerall Messengers.
Why do you send so thicke?
Cleo. Who's borne that day when I forget to send to Anthonie, shall dye a Begger. Inke and paper Charmian. Welcome my good Alexas. Did I Charmian, euer loue Caesar so?
Char. Oh that braue Caesar!

In fairness to the compositor it must be said that he may have been confused by revisions in the margin of Shakespeare's manuscript. Whatever the cause of the Folio lineation, I believe that we may profitably rearrange the lines on the assumption that Cleopatra's speech was written in verse. Such an assumption is strongly supported not only by the context but also by Charmian's half-line which is of sufficient length to complete the terminal half-line of Cleopatra's speech. A similar instance is II.1.1–8, a portion of which the Folio prints as prose:

Pom. If the great Gods be iust, they shall assist
The deeds of iustest men.
Mene. Know worthy Pompey, that what they do delay,
they do not deny.
Pom. Whiles we are sutors to their Throne, decayes the thing we sue for.
Mene. We ignorant of our selues,
Begge often our owne harmes, which the wise Powres

Here we may assume that the lines printed as prose were written in verse by Shakespeare, and for the following reasons. The ellipsis in the second speech and the inversion in the third are strong evidence against prose; and the initial half-line 'We ignorant of our selues' presupposes a terminal half-line in the preceding speech, since no other reason can be cited for its length. Going back over the passage we may assume that 'Know worthy Pompey' is a half-line completing the terminal half-line of the preceding speech. But the compositor again refuses to give it a whole line in his column and instead adds to it a portion of the following pentameter. Unfortunately in doing so he is forced to print the remainder of the speech in prose; and having disturbed the verse lines of one speech, he proceeds to do the same in the following speech as well. Then he comes upon a familiar landmark, the initial half-line of Menecrates' speech in l. 7, which he prints correctly as well as the remainder of the passage.

It is clear, then, that convincing reasons may be adduced for preserving the Folio lineation of most apparently mislineated passages and in effect for seeing that it is superior to any other; and also for regularizing the lineation of a few speeches where we may be certain the compositor departed from Shakespeare's manuscript. We may not, in other words, follow a blanket policy but must treat each passage separately.

Finally it will be seen that the present edition dispenses with the traditional act and scene divisions which in other editions mark the action of the play. Aside from being absent in the Folio text and therefore without authority, such formal divisions are scarcely admissible in a play where fluidity of scene and smoothness of action are of first importance. However, in order to facilitate reference to lines in this and other editions and to critical works, I have noted the act and scene divisions at the top of each page. Since I have combined the battle scenes in Acts III and IV and since in general I have retained the Folio lineation, my line numbering is slightly different from that of other editions.

In preparing the present edition I have received aid from other editors of Antony and Cleopatra, particularly from J. D. Wilson, M. R. Ridley, G. L. Kittredge (Boston, Ginn and Co., 1941), and H. H. Furness (Philadelphia, J. B. Lippincott Co., 1907). To all I wish to acknowledge my debt. And I am especially grateful to the general editors of the Yale Shakespeare, Professors Charles T. Prouty and Helge Kökeritz, for their help and kindness to me.

Sources of the Play

The source of Antony and Cleopatra is Plutarch's Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans Compared Together, first printed in 1579. Although North did not go to the Greek original but instead turned into English Jacques Amyot's French translation, his version of the Lives shows a startling fidelity to the original. And it appears that this fidelity may have been due in part to the instantaneous attraction North must have felt for Plutarch, whom he reverently calls 'Philosopher and Historiographer.' The attraction, with its attendant fidelity, was repeated a few years later when Shakespeare laid his hand on North's translation. As an additional source a small claim has been advanced for Samuel Daniel's play Cleopatra (1595), and it is possible that Shakespeare borrowed a few details from it. But from Plutarch he took all the incidents which make up the drama of Antony's decline and death, and he took also the main characters and much of the language, this last coming to him in the gorgeous prose of North's Elizabethan translation.

In reorganizing the events into a tragedy Shakespeare made no use of those incidents which dealt with the rise in Antony's fortunes, although he often makes reference to them in order to establish the hero's nobility and achievements. He selected, abridged, and rearranged only those episodes which in some way affected or reflected Antony's relationship with Cleopatra, for, unlike Plutarch, he was composing a tragedy in which two lovers played equal parts. It follows, then, that Shakespeare established his own balance in the roles of these two and consequently redistributed the concentration of interest.

Plutarch's main characters served Shakespeare as prototypes which he elaborated by means of emphasis and detail, but the elaboration did not always involve profound change. For instance, in depicting Antony Shakespeare did not find it necessary to alter the lines of the character he had found in North. Plutarch, no less than Shakespeare, was primarily concerned with the enigma of character, in the case of Antony with the juxtaposition in him of strength and weakness in their highest degree. To Plutarch it seemed that Antony illustrated a saying by Plato that 'from great minds, both great vertues and great vices do procede'; and he presented him, as Shakespeare did in the play, in what might be called a tragic equilibrium, a balance between his virtues and the ignoble deeds by which he destroyed himself. But there is this difference between the two characterizations: whereas Plutarch's Antony in the end bows before the moral principles he has violated, Shakespeare's reaffirms his adherence to the values he has espoused, the values by which he has lived, loved, and apparently lost.

In the characterization of Cleopatra Shakespeare departed significantly from Plutarch, who saw her only as another agent in Antony's tragedy. In Plutarch she is not a tragic character: the tragedy is Antony's and his alone. Shakespeare, on the other hand, elevates her to that position, and in Act V presents her in the process of apprehending the tragic experience. But the tragic dignity with which she is invested does not change her. On the contrary, the supreme fascination of the closing moments derives from the juxtaposition in her of the alluring temptress and the tragic heroine. Their tragic vision, then, changes neither Antony nor Cleopatra, and in this particular fact lies Shakespeare's most significant departure from Plutarch. Whereas the philosophic historiographer presents the world of Egypt in opposition to the world of Rome and in the death of Antony and Cleopatra emphasizes the operation of the moral laws they have violated, the dramatist merely juxtaposes the two worlds, and against the death of his hero and heroine he places the triumph of their devotion to the principles by which they have lived.

The most striking correspondence between the play and its source is in language. North's prose, not far removed from poetry, came conveniently to Shakespeare's hand, and he was content on occasion to lift whole passages of it and transfer them to his play. For instance, Enobarbus' description of Cleopatra's first visit to Antony seems little more than a transcription in blank verse of North's lines:

> Therefore when she was sent vnto by diuers letters, both from Antonius him selfe, and also from his frendes, she made so light of it, and mocked Antonius so much, that she disdained to set forward otherwise, but to take her barge in the riuer of Cydnus, the poope whereof was of gold, the sailes of purple, and the owers of siluer, which kept stroke in rowing after the sounde of the musicke of flutes, howboyes, citherns, viols, and such other instruments as they played vpon in the barge. And now for the person of her selfe: she was layed vnder a pauillion of cloth of gold of tissue, apparelled and attired like the goddesse Venus, commonly drawen in picture: and hard by her, on either hand of her, pretie faire boyes apparelled as painters doe set forth god Cupide, with litle fannes in their hands, with the which they fanned wind vpon her. Her Ladies and gentlewomen also, the fairest of them were apparelled like the nymphes Nereides (which are the mermaides of the waters) and like the Graces, some stearing the helme, others tending the tackle and ropes of the barge, out of the which there came a wonderfull passing sweete sauor of perfumes, that perfumed the wharfes side, pestered with innumerable multitudes of people. Some of them followed the barge all alongest the riuers side: others also ranne out of the citie to see her comming in. So that in thend, there ranne such multitudes of people one after an other to see her, that Antonius was left post alone in the market place, in his Imperiall seate to geue audience: and there went a rumor in the peoples mouthes, that the goddesse Venus was come to play with the god Bacchus, for the generall good of all Asia. (Pp. 981–2).

A comparison of the passage with II.2.224–253 of the play will show how much and how minutely Shakespeare borrowed from this description. But it will show also that Shakespeare's additions, though few, make a great deal of difference. In describing Cleopatra's barge Shakespeare makes the winds lovesick with the perfumed sails, and the water amorous of the oars' strokes. Another fanciful touch by which Shakespeare vivifies the scene occurs in the description of the deserted Antony. Plutarch says that so many people had gone out to see Cleopatra 'that Antonius was left post alone in the market place to geue audience.' This in Shakespeare becomes:

> and Antony,
> Enthron'd i' th' market-place, did sit alone,
> Whistling to th' air.

Other instances of verbal correspondence may be cited, among them the Soothsayer's colloquy with Antony (II.3.12–36), Antony's dying speech (IV.11.61–69), and the Seleucus episode (V.2.168–206). Such borrowing from his prose may be a compliment to North, but it is not, of course, a defect in the play. The passages borrowed were elevated to blank verse, and they were so vitally and smoothly fitted to their contexts that they give the reader no reason to question their origin.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Philo. Nay, but this dotage of our general's
O'erflows the measure: those his goodly eyes,
That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn
The office and devotion of their view
Upon a tawny front. His captain's heart,
Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gypsy's lust.

Flourish. Enter Antony, Cleopatra, her Ladies, the train, with Eunuchs fanning her.

Look! where they come:
Take but good note, and you shall see in him
The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool. Behold and see.
Cleopatra. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.
Antony. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.
Cleopatra. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.
Antony. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger. News, my good lord, from Rome.
Antony. Grates me, the sum.
Cleopatra. Nay, hear them, Antony.
Fulvia, perchance, is angry: or, who knows
If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent
His powerful mandate to you, 'Do this, or this;
Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that.
Perform't, or else we damn thee.'
Antony. How, my love?
Cleopatra. Perchance? nay, and most like:
You must not stay here longer, your dismission
Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony.
Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's I would say? both?
Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's queen,
Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of thine
Is Caesar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame
What shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The messengers!
Antony. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch
Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space.
Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as man; the nobleness of life
Is to do thus: when such a mutual pair
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up peerless.
Cleopatra. Excellent falsehood!
Why did he marry Fulvia and not love her?
I'll seem the fool I am not. Antony will be himself.

Antony. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.
Now, for the love of Love and her soft hours,
Let's not confound the time with conference harsh;
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport tonight?
Cleopatra. Hear the ambassadors.
Antony. Fie, wrangling queen!
Whom everything becomes, to chide, to laugh,
To weep: whose every passion fully strives
To make itself (in thee) fair and admir'd.
No messenger but thine, and all alone tonight
We'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen.
Last night you did desire it. Speak not to us.
Exeunt with the train.
Demetrius. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight?
Philo. Sir, sometimes when he is not Antony
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.
Demetrius. I am full sorry
That he approves the common liar, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds tomorrow. Rest you happy! Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus, a Soothsayer, Charmian, Iras, Mardian the eunuch, and Alexas.

Charmian. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most anything Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you prais'd so to th' queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must change his horns with garlands.
Alexas. Soothsayer!
Soothsayer. Your will?
Charmian. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?
Soothsayer. In nature's infinite book of secrecy a little I can read.
Alexas. Show him your hand.
Enobarbus. Bring in the banket quickly: wine enough Cleopatra's health to drink.
Charmian. Good sir, give me good fortune.
Soothsayer. I make not, but foresee.
Charmian. Pray then, foresee me one.
Soothsayer. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.
Charmian. He means in flesh.
Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.
Charmian. Wrinkles forbid!
Alexas. Vex not his prescience, be attentive.
Charmian. Hush!
Soothsayer. You shall be more beloving than belov'd.
Charmian. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.
Alexas. Nay, hear him.
Charmian. Good now, some excellent fortune: let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do

4 plate: clothed in armor 5 office: service 6 tawny front: dark face 8 reneges: renounces temper: self-restraint 10 gypsy's; Cf. n. 13 triple pillar; Cf. n. 14 fool: dupe 16 beggary; Cf. n. 17 bourn: boundary 21 Grates: irritates the sum: be brief 23 Fulvia: Antony's wife 24 scarce-bearded; Cf. n. 26 Take in: conquer enfranchise: set free 29 most like: without doubt 30 dismission: dismissal 32 process: summons 34 homager: vassal 38 rang'd: 'well-ordered'; or possibly, 'far-flung' 41 mutual: with equal love for each other 43 to weet: to know, to acknowledge 47 I'll seem . . . not: I'll pretend I am foolish enough to believe you (which I am not really)

50 confound: waste 51 stretch: pass, be protracted 56 whose: F who (F refers throughout to the First Folio of 1623) passion: emotion 58–60 all alone . . . people; Cf. n. 60 qualities: characteristics 64 property: distinctive quality 67 approves: proves true 69 Rest you happy: May God keep you happy SD Enter Enobarbus: begins I.2; Cf. n. 2 absolute: perfect 4 change . . . garlands; Cf. n. 11 banket: banquet, dessert 23 heat . . . drinking; Cf. n. 27 Herod of Jewry; Cf. n.

homage. Find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.
Soothsayer. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.
Charmian. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.
Soothsayer. You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune
Than that which is to approach.
Charmian. Then belike my children shall have no names.
Prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?
Soothsayer. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fertile every wish, a million.
Charmian. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.
Alexas. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.
Charmian. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.
Alexas. We'll know all our fortunes.
Enobarbus. Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be—drunk to bed.
Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.
Charmian. E'en as the o'erflowing Nilus presageth famine.
Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.
Charmian. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.
Soothsayer. Your fortunes are alike.
Iras. But how, but how? give me particulars.
Soothsayer. I have said.
Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?
Charmian. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?
Iras. Not in my husband's nose.
Charmian. Our worser thoughts Heavens mend! Alexas, come, his fortune, his fortune. O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee, and let her die too, and give him a worse, and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold. Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight: good Isis, I beseech thee.
Iras. Amen, dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people.
For, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wiv'd,
so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded.
Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly.
Charmian. Amen.
Alexas. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'ld do't.

Enter Cleopatra.

Enobarbus. Hush! here comes Antony.
Charmian. Not he, the queen.
Cleopatra. Saw you my lord?
Enobarbus. No, lady.
Cleopatra. Was he not here?
Charmian. No, madam.
Cleopatra. He was dispos'd to mirth, but on the sudden
A Roman thought hath struck him. Enobarbus!
Enobarbus. Madam?
Cleopatra. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?
Alexas. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Enter Antony, with a Messenger [and Attendants].

Cleopatra. We will not look upon him. Go with us.
Exeunt [Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Alexas, Iras, Charmian, Soothsayer, and Attendants].
Messenger. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.
Antony. Against my brother Lucius?
Messenger. Ay:
But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst Caesar,
Whose better issue in the war from Italy
Upon the first encounter drave them.
Antony. Well, what worst?
Messenger. The nature of bad news infects the teller.
Antony. When it concerns the fool, or coward. On.
Things that are past are done with me. 'Tis thus:
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.
Messenger. Labienus—
This is stiff news—hath with his Parthian force
Extended Asia: from Euphrates his conquering
Banner shook from Syria to Lydia
And to Ionia, whilst—
Antony. Antony, thou wouldst say.
Messenger. O, my lord.
Antony. Speak to me home.
Mince not the general tongue, name
Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome:
Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults
With such full license as both truth and malice
Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds
When our quick minds lie still, and our ills told us
Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile.
Messenger. At your noble pleasure. Exit Messenger.
Antony. From Sicyon, ho, the news! Speak there!
1. Attendant. The man from Sicyon, is there such an one?
2. Attendant. He stays upon your will.
Antony. Let him appear.
These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,
Or lose myself in dotage.

Enter another Messenger, with a letter.

What are you?
2. Messenger. Fulvia thy wife is dead.
Antony. Where died she?
2. Messenger. In Sicyon:
Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Gives a letter.]
Antony. Forbear me. [Exit 2. Messenger.]
There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it:

28, 29 companion me: i.e. as the wife of a triumvir 31 I . . . figs; Cf. n. 32 prov'd: experienced 34 shall have no names: will be bastards 35 wenches: girls 37 fertile: F foretell 38 for: because you are 39 privy to: secretly aware of 45 presages chastity: because it is dry and cool 48 oily palm: believed to indicate wantonness 48, 49 fruitful prognostication: sign of fertility 49, 50 worky-day: ordinary 59–64 come . . . thee: F assigns passage to Alexas; cf. n. 60 cannot go: cannot walk (cannot be pregnant?) 64 Isis; Cf. n. 66 loose-wiv'd: married to a wanton 74 Saw: F saue 79 A Roman thought: thought inspired by Roman virtue

87 time's state: situation at that moment 88 jointing: uniting (cf. Cymbeline, V.4.145, jointed) 89 issue: success 96 as: as if 97 Labienus; Cf. n. 99–103 Extended . . . lord; Cf. n. 99 Extended: taken possession of 100 Lydia; Cf. n. 104 home: plainly 105 Mince: extenuate general tongue: common report 110 minds: F windes 110, 111 our ills . . . earing; Cf. n. 111 earing: ploughing SD Exit Messenger: F reads 'Enter another Messenger' after this direction 113 ho: F how 114 1. Attendant: F 1. Mes. 115 2. Attendant: F 2. Mes. stays upon your will: awaits your command 118 lose myself: become lost 120 2. Messenger: F 3. Mes. 124 Importeth: concerns 125 Forbear me: leave me

What our contempts doth often hurl from us
We wish it ours again. The present pleasure,
By revolution low'ring, does become
The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;
The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off:
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,
My idleness doth hatch.

Enter Enobarbus.

How now, Enobarbus!

Enobarbus. What's your pleasure, sir?

Antony. I must with haste from hence.

Enobarbus. Why, then, we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure death's the word.

Antony. I must be gone.

Enobarbus. Under a compelling occasion let women die. It were pity to cast them away for nothing, though between them and a great cause they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly: I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think there is mettle in death which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Antony. She is cunning past man's thought.

Enobarbus. Alack, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears: they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report. This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Antony. Would I had never seen her!

Enobarbus. O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.

Antony. Fulvia is dead.

Enobarbus. Sir?

Antony. Fulvia is dead.

Enobarbus. Fulvia!

Antony. Dead.

Enobarbus. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice: when it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth: comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented. This grief is crown'd with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat, and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Antony. The business she hath broached in the state
Cannot endure my absence.

Enobarbus. And the business you have broach'd here cannot be without you, especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Antony. No more light answers. Let our officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall break
The cause of our expedience to the queen,
And get her leave to part. For not alone

129 By . . . low'ring: Cf. n. 134 idleness: trifling, dotage 142 a compelling occasion: F a compelling an occasion 145 noise: rumor 146 poorer moment: less cause 147 mettle: vigor 154 Jove: Jupiter Pluvius, the rain god of the Romans 166 tailors of the earth: the gods 169 cut: blow 172 broached: set in motion 176 abode: stay 178 break: tell 179 expedience: haste, sudden departure 180 part: depart

The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,
Do strongly speak to us, but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands
The empire of the sea. Our slippery people,
Whose love is never link'd to the deserver
Till his deserts are past, begin to throw
Pompey the Great and all his dignities
Upon his son, who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
For the main soldier; whose quality going on,
The sides o' th' world may danger. Much is breeding,
Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison. Say our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Enobarbus. I shall do't. [Exeunt.]

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Alexas, and Iras.

Cleopatra. Where is he?

Charmian. I did not see him since.

Cleopatra. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:
I did not send you. If you find him sad,
Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick. Quick, and return. [Exit Alexas.]

Charmian. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleopatra. What should I do, I do not?

Charmian. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleopatra. Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose him.

Charmian. Tempt him not so too far. I wish, forbear.
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Antony.

But here comes Antony.

Cleopatra. I am sick and sullen.

Antony. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose.

Cleopatra. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall.
It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Antony. Now, my dearest queen—

Cleopatra. Pray you, stand farther from me.

Antony. What's the matter?

Cleopatra. I know by that same eye there's some good news.
What says the married woman? You may go.
Would she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you: hers you are.

Antony. The gods best know—

Cleopatra. O, never was there queen
So mightily betray'd: yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.

181 touches: concerns 183 contriving: scheming 184 Sextus Pompeius: Cf. n. 185 Hath: F Haue 188–190 throw . . . Upon: transfer 191, 192 stands up For: aspires to be 192 main: foremost quality: condition, character 193 sides: frame danger: endanger 194 courser's hair: Cf. n. 196 place: F places SD Enter Cleopatra: begins I.3 3 who's: F whose 4 I did not send you: let him not know I sent you sad: serious 10 I do not: that I am not doing 14 Tempt: test, try I wish, forbear: I wish you would forbear 18 breathing: utterance 20 sides of nature: human frame 26 married woman: Fulvia woman? You may go: F woman you may go?

Antony. Cleopatra—
Cleopatra. Why should I think you can be mine and true,
(Though you in swearing shake the throned gods)
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing.
Antony. Most sweet queen—
Cleopatra. Nay, pray you, seek no color for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you su'd staying
Then was the time for words: no going then,
Eternity was in our lips and eyes,
Bliss in our brows' bent: none our parts so poor
But was a race of heaven. They are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.
Antony. How now, lady?
Cleopatra. I would I had thy inches; thou shouldst know
There were a heart in Egypt.
Antony. Hear me, queen:
The strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile, but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords; Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome;
Equality of two domestic powers
Breed scrupulous faction: the hated, grown to strength,
Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his father's honor, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change. My more particular,
And that which most with you should safe my going,
Is Fulvia's death.
Cleopatra. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,
It does from childishness. Can Fulvia die?
Antony. She's dead, my queen.
Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read
The garboils she awak'd: at the last, best,
See when and where she died.
Cleopatra. O most false love!
Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.
Antony. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know
The purposes I bear: which are or cease
As you shall give th' advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence
Thy soldier, servant, making peace or war
As thou affects.
Cleopatra. Cut my lace, Charmian, come,
But let it be, I am quickly ill, and well—
So Antony loves.
Antony. My precious queen, forbear,
And give true evidence to his love which stands
An honorable trial.
Cleopatra. So Fulvia told me.
I prithee, turn aside and weep for her,
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling, and let it look
Like perfect honor.
Antony. You'll heat my blood; no more.
Cleopatra. You can do better yet: but this is meetly.
Antony. Now, by my sword—
Cleopatra. And target. Still he mends.
But this is not the best. Look, prithee, Charmian
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.
Antony. I'll leave you, lady.
Cleopatra. Courteous lord, one word:
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd, but there's not it:
That you know well: something it is I would—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.
Antony. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.
Cleopatra. 'Tis sweating labor
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me,
Since my becomings kill me when they do not
Eye well to you. Your honor calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you. Upon your sword
Sit laurel victory, and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feet!
Antony. Let us go.
Come. Our separation so abides and flies,
That thou residing here, goes yet with me
And I hence fleeting here remain with thee.
Away! Exeunt.

Enter Octavius [Caesar], reading a letter, Lepidus, and their train.

Caesar. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Caesar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel: is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy
More womanly than he. Hardly gave audience
Or vouchsaf'd to think he had partners. You
Shall find there a man who is th' abstract of all faults,
That all men follow.
Lepidus. I must not think
There are evils enow to darken all his goodness:

41 color: pretext 42 su'd staying: begged to stay 45 brows' bent: arch of the eyebrows none our parts: none of our parts 46 race of heaven: of heavenly flavor 51 heart in Egypt: heart (courage) in Cleopatra 55 in use with you: yours to keep and enjoy 56 civil swords: swords drawn in civil war 59 scrupulous faction: quarrel over small differences 60 condemn'd: stressed — — 63 state: government 64, 65 grown ... change: Cf. n. 65 particular: personal concern 66 safe: make safe 73 garboils: brawls at the last, best: the last and best news 76 sacred vials: Cf. n. 80 are: exist 81, 82 By the fire ... slime: Cf. n. 85 lace: lace of her bodice 87 So: provided

89 his love which: the love of one who 91 told me: taught me 98 meetly: fairly good 99 by my sword: F by sword. 100 target: shield 102, 103 How ... chafe; Cf. n. 109, 110 O ... forgotten; Cf. n. 111 But that: if it were not that 112 idleness: frivolousness 117 becomings: graces 118 Eye well: appear well SD Enter Octavius: begins I.4 3 Our: F One competitor: associate 6 queen of Ptolemy; Cf. n. 7, 12 More ... goodness; Cf. n. 8 vouchsaf'd: F vouchsafe 9 abstract: epitome; F abstracts 12 enow: enough

His faults in him seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary
Rather than purchas'd: what he cannot change
Than what he chooses.
Caesar. You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is not
Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smells of sweat. Say this becomes him
(As his composure must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish)—yet must Antony
No way excuse his foils, when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones
Call on him for't. But to confound such time
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state and ours, 'tis to be chid
As we rate boys who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lepidus. Here's more news.
Messenger. Thy biddings have been done, and every hour,
Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea,
And it appears he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.
Caesar. I should have known no less.
It hath bin taught us from the primal state
That he which is was wish'd until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne're lov'd till ne're worth love,
Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lacking the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.
Messenger. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Makes the sea serve them, which they ear and wound
With keels of every kind. Many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt;
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen: for Pompey's name strikes more
Than could his war resisted.
Caesar. Antony,

15 purchas'd: acquired 19 mirth: entertainment 20 keep the turn of: take turns 21, 22 stand . . . knaves: condescend to exchange blows with the riffraff 22 smells: old plural form in s is common in Shakespeare; see l. 53 below 23 composure: disposition 25 foils: disgraces; cf. n. 25, 26 when . . . lightness: when his levity affects us so seriously 27 Call on: call to account confound: put to ill use 30 drums: calls as drum calls to battle 30, 31 speaks . . . ours: speaks of weighty matters of triumvirate 32 rate: scold. mature in knowledge: old enough to know 33 Pawn . . . pleasure: gratify their desires against their judgment 41 discontents: discontented 42 Give him: represent him as 44 bin: been. primal: primeval 46 ebb'd: declined in fortune. ne're: ne'er 47 Comes dear'd: F Comes fear'd 48 vagabond: shifty flag: iris 49 lacking: lackeying, following like a lackey 53 ear: plough 56 Lack blood: turn pale flush: vigorous 58, 59 strikes . . . resisted; Cf. n.

Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once
Was beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirsius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow, whom thou fought'st against,
(Though daintily brought up) with patience more
Than savages could suffer. Thou didst drink
The stale of horses and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou brows'd. On the Alps
It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on. And all this—
(It wounds thine honor that I speak it now)—
Was borne so like a soldier that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.
Lepidus. 'Tis pity of him.
Caesar. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome. 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i' th' field, and to that end
Assemble we immediate council. Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.
Lepidus. Tomorrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able
To front this present time.
Caesar. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.
Lepidus. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know meantime
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.
Caesar. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian

Cleopatra. Charmian!
Charmian. Madam?
Cleopatra. Ha, ha! Give me to drink mandragora.
Charmian. Why, madam?
Cleopatra. That I might sleep out this great gap of time
My Antony is away.
Charmian. You think of him too much.
Cleopatra. O! 'tis treason.
Charmian. Madam, I trust, no so.
Cleopatra. Thou, eunuch Mardian.
Mardian. What's your highness' pleasure?
Cleopatra. Not now to hear thee sing. I take no pleasure
In aught an eunuch has. 'Tis well for thee,
That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Has thou affections?
Mardian. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleopatra. Indeed?
Mardian. Not in deed, madam, for I can do nothing
But what indeed is honest to be done:
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

61 wassails: revels 61–76 When . . . lank'd not; Cf. n. 67 stale: urine gilded: of a golden color 71 brows'd: browsed'st 76 lank'd not: did not grow thin 79 we: F me 85 can be able: can muster 86 front: face 93 bond: duty, obligation SD Enter Cleopatra: begins I.5 3 mandragora: mandrake, a narcotic 14 unseminar'd: unsexed 15 affections: passions

Cleopatra. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse, for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?
The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men. He's speaking now,
Or murmuring "Where's my serpent of old Nile?'
(For so he calls me). Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison. Think on me,
That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch, and great Pompey
Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow;
There would he anchor his aspect and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas from Antony.

Alexas. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!
Cleopatra. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony!
Yet, coming from him, that great med'cine hath
With his tinct gilded thee.
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?
Alexas. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd—the last of many doubled kisses—
This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.
Cleopatra. Mine ear must pluck it thence.
Alexas. 'Good friend,' quoth he,
'Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms. All the East,
(Say thou) shall call her mistress.' So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed,
Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke
Was beastly dumb'd by him.
Cleopatra. What was he, sad or merry?
Alexas. Like to the time o' th' year between the extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry.
Cleopatra. O well-divided disposition! Note him,
Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him.
He was not sad, for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his. He was not merry,
Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy; but between both.
O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So does it no man else. Met'st thou my posts?
Alexas. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers.
Why do you send so thick?
Cleopatra. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Charmian.
Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian,
Ever love Caesar so?

26 wot'st: knowest 27 demi-Atlas; Cf. n. 28 burgonet: helmet 33 Broad-fronted: with broad forehead 35 great Pompey; Cf. n. 37 aspect: look (stressed — –) SD Antony: F Caesar 41 that great med'cine; Cf. n. 42 tinct: tincture, color 43 brave: splendid 49 firm: constant 51 mend: improve piece: piece out 54 arm-gaunt: worn thin with hard campaign service 56 dumb'd: silenced; F dumbe 60 disposition: mood 61 the man: the very man 68 posts: messengers 70 thick: in quick succession

Charmian. O, that brave Caesar.
Cleopatra. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!
Say, the brave Antony.
Charmian. The valiant Caesar!
Cleopatra. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,
If thou with Caesar paragon again
My man of men.
Charmian. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.
Cleopatra. My salad days,
When I was green in judgment, cold in blood,
To say as I said then. But come, away,
Get me ink and paper.
He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt. Exeunt.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas, in warlike manner.

Pompey. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.
Menecrates. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.
Pompey. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays
The thing we sue for.
Menecrates. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good: so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.
Pompey. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope
Says it will come to th' full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors. Caesar gets money where
He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd: but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.
Menas. Caesar and Lepidus are in the field.
A mighty strength they carry.
Pompey. Where have you this? 'Tis false.
Menas. From Silvius, sir.
Pompey. He dreams: I know they are in Rome together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honor
Even till a Lethe'd dullness—

Enter Varrius.

How now, Varrius!
Varrius. This is most certain that I shall deliver:
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected. Since he went from Egypt 'tis
A space for farther travel.

81 paragon: compare 85 salad days: inexperienced youth SD Enter Pompey: begins II.1.3-6 Know . . . for; Cf. n. 3 worthy: noble 8 powers: forces 13 crescent: growing auguring: prophesying 20, 23, 46 Menas: F Mene; see Introduction, 2 26 Salt: lustful wan'd: faded 30 cloyless: which will not satiate 31, 32 prorogue . . . dullness: suspend completely his sense of honor 32 Lethe'd; Cf. n. 34 that: what deliver: report 36, 37 'tis . . . travel: there has been time for a longer journey

Pompey. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think
This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm
For such a petty war: his soldiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne're lust-wearied Antony.
Menas. I cannot hope
Caesar and Antony shall well greet together;
His wife that's dead did trespasses to Caesar,
His brother warr'd upon him, although I think
Not mov'd by Antony.
Pompey. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves,
For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords: but how the fear of us
May ciment their divisions and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be't as our gods will have't! It only stands
Our lives upon, to use our strongest hands.
Come, Menas. Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lepidus. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.
Enobarbus. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Caesar move him,
Let Antony look over Caesar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonio's beard,
I would not shave't today.
Lepidus. 'Tis not a time for private stomaching.
Enobarbus. Every time serves for the matter that is then born in't.
Lepidus. But small to greater matters must give way.
Enobarbus. Not if the small come first.
Lepidus. Your speech is passion: but pray you stir
No embers up. Here comes the noble Antony.

Enter Antony and Ventidius.

Enobarbus. And yonder, Caesar.

Enter Caesar, Maecenas, and Agrippa.

Antony. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark, Ventidius.
Caesar. I do not know, Maecenas; ask Agrippa.
Lepidus. Noble friends:
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard. When we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murther in healing wounds. Then, noble partners,
The rather for I earnestly beseech,
Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to th' matter.
Antony. 'Tis spoken well.
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus. Flourish.
Caesar. Welcome to Rome.
Antony. Thank you.
Caesar. Sit.
Antony. Sit, sir.
Caesar. Nay, then.
Antony. I learn, you take things ill which are not so:
Or being, concern you not.
Caesar. I must be laugh'd at
If, or for nothing or a little, I
Should say myself offended, and with you
Chiefly i' th' world; more laugh'd at that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.
Antony. My being in Egypt, Caesar, what was't to you?
Caesar. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there
Did practice on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.
Antony. How intend you, practic'd?
Caesar. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent
By what did here befall me. Your wife and brother
Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.
Antony. You do mistake your business; my brother never Did urge me in his act: I did inquire it,
And have my learning from some true reports
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have to make it with,
It must not be with this.
Caesar. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me, but
You patch'd up your excuses.
Antony. Not so, not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' th' world is yours, which with a snaffle
You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

42, 43 rear . . . opinion: prize ourselves more highly 44 Egypt's widow: Cleopatra, young King Ptolemy's widow 46 hope: suppose 47 greet together: commune amicably 49 His brother: Lucius Antonius; cf. n. warr'd: F wan'd 54 pregnant: very probable square: quarrel 57 ciment: cement (stressed ⏑ —) 59, 60 It only . . . upon: Cf. n. SD Enter Enobarbus: begins II.2 2 to entreat: read 't'entreat' 5 like himself: as befits his character 9 would not shave't: would dare him (Caesar) to pluck it; cf. n. 10 stomaching: resentment 18 compose: come to an agreement 19 Hark: F Hearke; cf. n.

29 curstness: ill humor grow to: to be added to 41 or . . . or: either . . . or 44 derogately: disparagingly sound: mention 49 practice on: plot against 50 question: concern 51 intend: mean 55 Was theme for you: was undertaken in your behalf and interest word: watchword 58 urge me: use my name 59 reports: reporters 62 stomach: desire 63 Having . . . cause: since I had the same cause as you (to be displeased with him) 64 patch: make out of, i.e. start a quarrel 65 you have to: Cf. n. 74 graceful . . . attend: regard favorably 75 fronted: opposed 77 snaffle: bridle bit 78 pace easy: control easily

Enobarbus. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Antony. So much uncurbable, her garboils, Caesar,
Made out of her impatience—which not wanted
Shrodenesse of policy too—I grieving grant
Did you too much disquiet; for that you must
But say I could not help it.

Caesar. I wrote to you:
When rioting in Alexandria you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Antony. Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted, then:
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i' th' morning; but next day
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife: if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

Caesar. You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never
Have tongue to charge me with.

Lepidus. Soft, Caesar.

Antony. No, Lepidus, let him speak.
The honor is sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it. But on, Caesar,
The article of my oath—

Caesar. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them
The which you both denied.

Antony. Neglected, rather:
And then when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you. But mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon as befits mine honor
To stoop in such a case.

Lepidus. 'Tis noble spoken.

Maecenas. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.

Lepidus. Worthily spoken, Maecenas.

Enobarbus. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.

Antony. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

Enobarbus. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

Antony. You wrong this presence; therefore speak no more.

Enobarbus. Go to, then; your considerate stone.

Caesar. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for't cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So diff'ring in their acts. Yet, if I knew
What hoop should hold us staunch, from edge to edge
O' th' world I would pursue it.

Agrippa. Give me leave, Caesar.

Caesar. Speak, Agrippa.

Agrippa. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia; great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Caesar. Say not so, Agrippa:
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Antony. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear
Agrippa further speak.

Agrippa. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men: whose
Virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little jealousies which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing. Truths would be tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both
Would each to other and all loves to both
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Antony. Will Caesar speak?

Caesar. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Antony. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, 'Agrippa, be it so,'
To make this good?

Caesar. The power of Caesar,
And his power unto Octavia.

Antony. May I never
To this good purpose that so fairly shows
Dream of impediment! Let me have thy hand;
Further this act of grace, and from this hour
The heart of brothers govern in our loves
And sway our great designs.

Caesar. There's my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly. Let her live
To join our kingdoms and our hearts, and never
Fly off our loves again.

Lepidus. Happily, amen.

Antony. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst Pompey,
For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
Of late upon me. I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lepidus. Time calls upon's.

81 garboils: disturbances 83 Shrodenesse: shrewdness 89 missive: messenger 92 I had: read 'I'd' 92, 93 did want . . . morning: lacked mastery of myself which I had possessed in the morning 94 told him of myself: explained my condition to him 96 nothing of: irrelevant to 97 question: debate 103, 104 The honor . . . it; Cf. n. 110 From mine own knowledge: (kept me) from knowing what I was doing 111–113 But . . . without it; Cf. n. 113, 114 Fulvia . . . here; Cf. n. 120 griefs: grievances 122 atone: reconcile. 123 Worthily: nobly 130 presence: august company 131 Go to, then: very well considerate stone: I will think but remain dumb as a stone

134 conditions: dispositions 140 by the mother's side; Cf. n. 143 not so: F not, say 144 reproof: F proofe 145 deserv'd of rashness: deserved because of your rashness (in speaking as you do) 155 jealousies: suspicions 156 import: carry with them 157, 158 Truths . . . truths; Cf. n. 161 present: sudden 172 so fairly shows: looks so promising 184 strange: rare 186 remembrance: memory of favors shown

Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.
Antony. Where lies he?
Caesar. About the Mount Mesena.
Antony. What is his strength by land?
Caesar. Great and increasing:
But by sea he is an absolute master.
Antony. So is the fame.
Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it:
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch we
The business we have talk'd of.
Caesar. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I'll lead you.
Antony. Let us, Lepidus, not lack your company.
Lepidus. Noble Antony, not sickness should detain me.
Flourish. Exit omnes. Mane[n]t Enobarbus, Agrippa, Maecenas.
Maecenas. Welcome from Egypt, sir.
Enobarbus. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Maecenas. My honourable friend, Agrippa.
Agrippa. Good Enobarbus.
Maecenas. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well disgested. You stayed well by't in Egypt.
Enobarbus. Ay, sir, we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.
Maecenas. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast: and but twelve persons there. Is this true?
Enobarbus. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.
Maecenas. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.
Enobarbus. When she first met Mark Antony, she purs'd up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.
Agrippa. There she appear'd indeed, or my reporter devis'd well for her.
Enobarbus. I will tell you.
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne
Burnt on the water: the poop was beaten gold,
Purple the sails, and so perfumed that
The winds were lovesick with them; the oars were silver,
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water which they beat to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description; she did lie
In her pavilion, cloth of gold of tissue,
Orepicturing that Venus where we see
The fancy outwork nature. On each side her
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With divers-color'd fans whose wind did seem
To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
And what they undid did.

Agrippa. O, rare for Antony!
Enobarbus. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids tended her i' th' eyes,
And made their bends adornings. At the helm
A seeming mermaid steers: the silken tackle
Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands
That yarely frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her: and Antony,
Enthron'd i' th' market place, did sit alone,
Whistling to th' air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too
And made a gap in nature.
Agrippa. Rare Egyptian!
Enobarbus. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better he became her guest,
Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony,
Whom ne're the word of 'No' woman hard speak,
Being barber'd ten times o're, goes to the feast,
And for his ordinary pays his heart
For what his eyes eat only.
Agrippa. Royal wench!
She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed;
He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.
Enobarbus. I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street;
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted
That she did make defect perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.
Maecenas. Now Antony must leave her utterly.
Enobarbus. Never; he will not:
Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry
Where most she satisfies. For vildest things
Become themselves in her, that the holy priests
Bless her when she is riggish.
Maecenas. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.
Agrippa. Let us go.
Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest
Whilst you abide here.
Enobarbus. Humbly, sir, I thank you. Exeunt.

Enter Antony, Caesar, Octavia between them.

Antony. The world and my great office will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.
Octavia. All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.
Antony. Good night, sir. My Octavia
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:

189 Of: by presently: immediately 192 Mesena: Misenum, a harbor in southern Italy 196 fame: rumor 200 most: greatest 201 do: I do 206 Half . . . Caesar; Cf. n. 210 disgested: digested stayed well by't: kept it up 213 Eight wild boars; Cf. n. 215 by: in comparison with 218 triumphant: magnificent square: just, fair 220 purs'd up: pocketed 221 Cydnus: F Sidnis; V.2.272, Cidrus 222 devis'd: invented 224–235 I will . . . nature; Cf. n. 231 For: as for 233 cloth of gold of tissue: rich cloth interwoven with thread of gold 234 Orepicturing: surpassing the picture of 235 outwork: excel 238 glow: make hot; F gloue 239 what they undid did; Cf. n.

242 tended . . . eyes: waited upon her every wish 243 made . . . adornings; Cf. n. 246 yarely: nimbly. frame: perform 259 hard: heard 261 ordinary: dinner. 262 eat: ate 269 That: so that defect perfection: she made her defective (because panting) speech perfection 270 breathe: did breathe 273 stale: make stale 274 infinite variety; Cf. n. 276 vildest: vilest 278 riggish: wanton 281 lottery: prize SD Enter Antony: begins II.3

I have not kept my square, but that to come
Shall all be done by th' rule. Good night, dear lady.
Octavia. Good night, sir.
Caesar. Good night. Exit [with Octavia].

Enter Soothsayer.

Antony. Now, sirrah; you do wish yourself in Egypt?
Soothsayer. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither!
Antony. If you can, your reason?
Soothsayer. I see it in my motion, have it not in my tongue, But yet hie you to Egypt again.
Antony. Say to me, whose fortunes shall rise higher, Caesar's or mine?
Soothsayer. Caesar's.
Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side.
Thy demon, that thy spirit which keeps thee, is
Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Caesar's is not. But near him thy angel
Becomes a fear, as being o'repower'd; therefore
Make space enough between you.
Antony. Speak this no more.
Soothsayer. To none but thee: no more but when to thee.
If thou dost play with him at any game
Thou art sure to lose; and of that natural luck
He beats thee 'gainst the odds. Thy luster thickens
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him,
But he away, 'tis noble.
Antony. Get thee gone:
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him. Exit [Soothsayer].
He shall to Parthia. Be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true. The very dice obey him,
And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance; if we draw lots he speeds,
His cocks do win the battle still of mine
When it is all to nought: and his quails ever
Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I' th' east my pleasure lies. O, come Ventidius,

Enter Ventidius.

You must to Parthia; your commission's ready:
Follow me, and receive't. Exeunt.

Enter Lepidus, Maecenas, and Agrippa.

Lepidus. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you hasten
Your generals after.
Agrippa. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e'ne but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.
Lepidus. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.
Maecenas. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at Mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lepidus. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about:
You'll win two days upon me.
Both. Sir, good success!
Lepidus. Farewell. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleopatra. Give me some music: music, moody food
Of us that trade in love.
Attendant. The music, ho!

Enter Mardian the eunuch.

Cleopatra. Let it alone, let's to billiards: come, Charmian.
Charmian. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.
Cleopatra. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd
As with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, sir?
Mardian. As well as I can, madam.
Cleopatra. And when good will is show'd, though't come too short
The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now.
Give me mine angle; we'll to th' river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws; and as I draw them up
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say, 'Ah, ha! y'are caught.'
Charmian. 'Twas merry when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.
Cleopatra. That time! O times!
I laugh'd him out of patience: and that night
I laugh'd him into patience, and next morn,
Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O, from Italy!
Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have bin barren.
Messenger. Madam, madam—
Cleopatra. Antonio's dead:
If thou say so villain, thou kill'st thy mistress:
But well and free, if thou so yield him,
There is gold and here
My bluest veins to kiss, a hand that kings
Have lipp'd and trembl'd kissing.
Messenger. First, madam, he is well.
Cleopatra. Why, there's more gold.
But sirrah mark, we use
To say the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.
Messenger. Good madam, hear me.

8 square: bounds of prudence 12 sirrah: familiar form of 'sir,' used sometimes contemptuously, sometimes affectionately 16 I see . . . tongue; Cf. n. 22–25 Thy demon . . . o'repower'd; Cf. n. 29–34 If . . . 'tis noble; Cf. n. 31 thickens: grows dim 32 by: near by 34 away: F alway SD Ventidius: F Ventigius; III.1, Ventidius 37 art: magic hap: chance 39 better cunning: superior skill 40 speeds: is successful 41 His cocks; Cf. n. 42 When . . . nought; Cf. n. 43 inhoop'd: confined in hoops SD Enter Lepidus: begins II.4 8 at Mount: at the Mount (i.e. Misenum)

11 much about: in a roundabout way SD Enter Cleopatra: begins II.5 1 moody: melancholy 13 betray: snare 14 Tawny-finn'd: F Tawny fine 17–21 'Twas . . . drew up; Cf. n. 26 tires: head-dresses 27 Philippan; Cf. n. 32–35 Antonio's . . . here; Cf. n. 34 yield: report 38 well: in heaven 41 bring it to that: say that that is your meaning

Cleopatra. Well, to go, I will;
But there's no goodness in thy face; if Antony
Be free and healthful, so tart a favor
To trumpet such good tidings! if not well,
Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown'd with snakes
Not like a formal man.
Messenger. Will't please you hear me?
Cleopatra. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st:
Yet, if thou say Antony lives, 'tis well,
Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,
I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.
Messenger. Madam, he's well.
Cleopatra. Well said.
Messenger. And friends with Caesar.
Cleopatra. Th'art an honest man.
Messenger. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.
Cleopatra. Make thee a fortune from me.
Messenger. But yet, madam—
Cleopatra. I do not like 'but yet,' it does allay
The good precedence; fie upon 'but yet!'
'But yet' is as a gaoler to bring forth
Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together: he's friends with Caesar,
In state of health, thou say'st, and thou say'st, free.
Messenger. Free, madam! no; I made no such report:
He's bound unto Octavia.
Cleopatra. For what good turn?
Messenger. For the best turn i' th' bed.
Cleopatra. I am pale, Charmian.
Messenger. Madam, he's married to Octavia.
Cleopatra. The most infectious pestilence upon thee!
Strikes him down.
Messenger. Good madam, patience.
Cleopatra. What say you?
Strikes him.
Hence, horrible villain, or I'll spurn thine eyes
Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head:
She hales him up and down.
Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine,
Smarting in ling'ring pickle.
Messenger. Gracious madam,
I that do bring the news made not the match.
Cleopatra. Say 'tis not so, a province I will give thee,
And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou hadst
Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage,
And I will boot thee with what gift beside
Thy modesty can beg.
Messenger. He's married, madam.
Cleopatra. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long.
Draw a knife.
Messenger. Nay, then I'll run.
What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. Exit.
Charmian. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself;
The man is innocent.
Cleopatra. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.
Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again:
Though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call!
Charmian. He is afeard to come.
Cleopatra. I will not hurt him.
[Exit Charmian.]
These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause. Come hither, sir.

Enter [Charmian and] the Messenger again.

Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news: give to a gracious message
An host of tongues, but let ill tidings tell
Themselves when they be felt.
Messenger. I have done my duty.
Cleopatra. Is he married?
I cannot hate thee worser than I do
If thou again say 'Yes.'
Messenger. He's married, madam.
Cleopatra. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?
Messenger. Should I lie, madam?
Cleopatra. O, I would thou didst,
So half my Egypt were submerg'd and made
A cesterne for scal'd snakes. Go, get thee hence;
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me
Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married?
Messenger. I crave your highness' pardon.
Cleopatra. He is married?
Messenger. Take no offense that I would not offend you;
To punish me for what you make me do
Seems much unequal; he's married to Octavia.
Cleopatra. O, that his fault should make a knave of thee,
That art not what th'art sure of. Get thee hence;
The marchandise which thou has brought from Rome
Are all too dear for me.
Lie they upon thy hand, and be undone by 'em!
[Exit Messenger.]
Charmian. Good your highness, patience.
Cleopatra. In praising Antony I have disprais'd Caesar.
Charmian. Many times, madam.
Cleopatra. I am paid for't now. Lead me from hence.
I faint. O Iras! Charmian! 'Tis no matter.
Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him
Report the feature of Octavia: her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The color of her hair. Bring me word quickly. [Exit Alexas.]
Let him forever go—let him not—Charmian!
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other way's a Mars. [To Mardian.] Bid you Alexas
Bring me word how tall she is. Pity me, Charmian,
But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber. Exeunt.

47 so tart a favor: so sour a countenance 50 formal: normally shaped 60 honest: worthy 65 precedence: earlier report 66 gaoler: jailer 80 spurn: kick. SD hales: drags 89 boot thee: make amends to thee what: whatever 90 modesty: moderation

98 kindly: benign 107 gracious: pleasing 115 confound: destroy 119 So: even though 120 cesterne: cistern 121 Narcissus; Cf. n. 125 Take ... you; Cf. n. 127 much unequal: very unjust 129 That ... sure of; Cf. n. 132 Lie ... hand: may they remain unsold (your merchandise) undone: ruined 140 inclination: disposition 142 him: i.e. Antony 144 way's: way as

Flourish. Enter Pompey at one door, with drum and trumpet: at another Caesar, Lepidus, Antony, Enobarbus, Maecenas, Agrippa, Menas, with Soldiers marching.

Pompey. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight.
Caesar. Most meet
That first we come to words, and therefore have we
Our written purposes before us sent;
Which if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword,
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth
That else must perish here.
Pompey. To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods, I do not know
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son and friends, since Julius Caesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
There saw you laboring for him. What was't
That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what
Made the all-honor'd, honest Roman, Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom,
To drench the capitol, but that they would
Have one man but a man? And that is it
Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burthen
The anger'd ocean foams, with which I meant
To scourge th' ingratitude that despiteful Rome
Cast on my noble father.
Caesar. Take your time.
Antony. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails;
We'll speak with thee at sea. At land, thou know'st
How much we do o'recount thee.
Pompey. At land, indeed,
Thou dost o'recount me of my father's house:
But since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in't as thou mayst.
Lepidus. Be pleas'd to tell us—
For this is from the present—how you take
The offers we have sent you.
Caesar. There's the point.
Antony. Which do not be entreated to,
But weigh what it is worth embrac'd.
Caesar. And what may follow to try a larger fortune.
Pompey. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must
Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send
Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon,
To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Our targes undinted.
Omnes. That's our offer.
Pompey. Know, then,
I came before you here a man prepar'd
To take this offer; but Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience. Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Caesar and your brother were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily and did find
Her welcome friendly.
Antony. I have heard it, Pompey,
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.
Pompey. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.
Antony. The beds i' th' east are soft; and thanks to you,
That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither,
For I have gain'd by't.
Caesar. Since I saw you last,
There's a change upon you.
Pompey. Well, I know not
What counts harsh Fortune casts upon my face,
But in my bosom shall she never come
To make my heart her vassal.
Lepidus. Well met here.
Pompey. I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed:
I crave our composition may be written
And seal'd between us.
Caesar. That's the next to do.
Pompey. We'll feast each other ere we part, and let's
Draw lots who shall begin.
Antony. That will I, Pompey.
Pompey. No, Antony, take the lot:
But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Caesar
Grew fat with feasting there.
Antony. You have heard much.
Pompey. I have fair meanings, sir.
Antony. And fair words to them.
Pompey. Then, so much have I heard;
And I have heard Apollodorus carried—
Enobarbus. No more of that: he did so.
Pompey. What, I pray you?
Enobarbus. A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress.
Pompey. I know thee now; how far'st thou, soldier?
Enobarbus. Well;
And well am like to do, for I perceive
Four feasts are toward.
Pompey. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behavior.
Enobarbus. Sir, I never lov'd you much, but I ha' prais'd ye
When you have well deserv'd ten times as much
As I have said you did.
Pompey. Enjoy thy plainness,
It nothing ill becomes thee.
Aboard my galley I invite you all:
Will you lead, lords?
All. Show's the way, sir.
Pompey. Come.
Exeunt. Mane[n]t Enobarbus and Menas.

SD Enter Pompey: begins II.6 3 meet: proper 9 tall: sturdy, courageous 12 factors: agents 15 ghosted: appeared as a ghost to 18 Made the all-honor'd: F Made all-honor'd 21 is: F his 27 fear frighten 28 speak: meet in conflict 31 o'recount; Cf. n. 30–33 At land . . . mayst; Cf. n. 32 cuckoo: the cuckoo never builds a nest but lays its eggs in the nests of other birds 33 mayst: canst 35 from the present: irrelevant to the present purpose 39 embrac'd: if accepted 40 to . . . fortune; Cf. n. 45 To part . . . edges: to depart without battle 46 targes: shields 47 Omnes: i.e. Caesar, Antony, Lepidus

54, 55 Your . . . friendly; Cf. n. 57 am well . . . thanks: I am ready to thank you very much 62 timelier: earlier 67 counts; Cf. n. 72 composition: agreement 80 Shall . . . fame: shall have the opportunity to show that it deserves its reputation; shall win the prize 87 more of that: F more that 93 toward: in prospect 102 nothing: not at all 105 All: i.e. the triumvirs

Menas. Thy father, Pompey, would ne're have made this treaty. You and I have known, sir.

Enobarbus. At sea, I think.

Menas. We have, sir.

Enobarbus. You have done well by water.

Menas. And you by land.

Enobarbus. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Menas. Nor what I have done by water.

Enobarbus. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety; you have been a great thief by sea.

Menas. And you by land.

Enobarbus. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas; if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Menas. All men's faces are true, whatsomere their hands are.

Enobarbus. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Menas. No slander; they steal hearts.

Enobarbus. We came hither to fight with you.

Menas. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Enobarbus. If he do, sure he cannot weep't back again.

Menas. Y' have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Enobarbus. Caesar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Menas. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Enobarbus. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Menas. Pray ye, sir?

Enobarbus. 'Tis true.

Menas. Then is Caesar and he for ever knit together.

Enobarbus. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Menas. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

Enobarbus. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Menas. Who would not have his wife so?

Enobarbus. Not he that himself is not so: which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar, and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is. He married but his occasion here.

Menas. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Enobarbus. I shall take it, sir: we have us'd our throats in Egypt.

Menas. Come, let's away. Exeunt.

Music plays. Enter two or three Servants, with a banket.

1. [Servant.] Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' th' world will blow them down.

2. [Servant.] Lepidus is high-color'd.

1. [Servant.] They have made him drink alms-drink.

2. [Servant.] As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, 'No more'; reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to th' drink.

1. [Servant.] But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2. [Servant.] Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship. I had as live have a reed that will do me no service as a partisan I could not heave.

1. [Servant.] To be call'd into a huge sphere and not to be seen to move in't are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A sennet sounded. Enter Caesar, Antony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Maecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other Captains.

Antony. Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' th' Nile
By certain scales i' th' pyramid; they know
By th' height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth
Or foison follow. The higher Nilus swells
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsman
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.

Lepidus. Y' have strange serpents there?

Antony. Ay, Lepidus.

Lepidus. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

Antony. They are so.

Pompey. Sit—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lepidus. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne're out.

Enobarbus. Not till you have slept; I fear me you'll be in till then.

Lepidus. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramises are very goodly things; without contradiction I have heard that.

Menas. Pompey, a word.

Pompey. Say in mine ear, what is't?

Menas. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain, Whispers in's ear.
And hear me speak a word.

Pompey. Forbear me till anon.
This wine for Lepidus!

Lepidus. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Antony. It is shap'd, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with it own organs. It lives by that which nourisheth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lepidus. What color is it of?

Antony. Of it own color too.

Lepidus. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Antony. 'Tis so, and the tears of it are wet.

Caesar. Will this description satisfy him?

Antony. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure. [Menas whispers again.]

Pompey. Go hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that? away!
Do as I bid you. Where's this cup I call'd for?

108 known: met 120 authority: i.e. to arrest criminals 121 take: arrest two thieves kissing: our hands clasping (with perhaps a glance at ll. 116, 117) 122 true: honest. whatsomere: whatsome'er 129 Y' have said: you are perfectly right 134 Pray ye, sir?: phrase expressing surprise and incredulity 137 unity: compact 139 made more in: had more to do with 143 conversation: demeanor, disposition 149, 150 will use . . . is: will keep loving where he now loves, i.e. in Egypt 150 occasion: convenience SD Music plays: begins II.7. 1 o' their: F o' th' their 1 plants: pun on two meanings: 'young trees,' and 'soles of the feet'

4 alms-drink: toast drunk for one too infirm to answer a pledge 5 As . . . disposition: whenever they start a quarrel 11 live: lief 12 partisan: spear, pike 13–15 To be call'd . . . cheeks; Cf. n. 15 disaster: ruin SD sennet: set of notes on trumpet announcing the approach or entrance of an important person Menas: F Menes 17 scales: graduations 18 dearth: scarcity 19 foison: abundance 29 I'll ne're out: I'll never give up 32 pyramises; Cf. n. 33 goodly: handsome SD Whisper . . . ear: F prints SD after anon, l. 38 42 it own: its own 43 elements: principle of life 44 transmigrates: dies (with facetious allusion to doctrine of transmigration of souls)

Menas. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,
Rise from thy stool.
Pompey. I think th' art mad. The matter?
Menas. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.
Pompey. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. What's else to say?
Be jolly, lords.
Antony. These quicksands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.
Menas. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?
Pompey. What sayst thou?
Menas. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice.
Pompey. How should that be?
Menas. But entertain it,
And though thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.
Pompey. Hast thou drunk well?
Menas. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.
Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove:
Whatere the ocean pales or sky inclips
Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.
Pompey. Show me which way.
Menas. These three world-sharers, these competitors,
Are in thy vessel. Let me cut the cable,
And when we are put off fall to their throats:
All there is thine.
Pompey. Ah, this thou shouldst have done,
And not have spoke on't. In me 'tis villainy;
In thee't had bin good service. Thou must know
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honor;
Mine honor it. Repent that ere thy tongue
Hath so betray'd thine act. Being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done,
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.
Menas. [Aside.] For this,
I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.
Who seeks and will not take when once 'tis offer'd
Shall never find it more.
Pompey. This health to Lepidus!
Antony. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.
Enobarbus. Here's to thee, Menas!
Menas. Enobarbus, welcome!
Pompey. Fill till the cup be hid.
Enobarbus. There's a strong fellow, Menas.
Menas. Why?
Enobarbus. A' bears the third part of the world, man; see'st not?
Menas. The third part then is drunk; would it were all, That it might go on wheels!
Enobarbus. Drink thou; increase the reels.
Menas. Come.
Pompey. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.
Antony. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, ho!
Here's to Caesar!
Caesar. I could well forbear't.
It's monstrous labor, when I wash my brain
And it grows fouler.
Antony. Be a child o' th' time.
Caesar. Possess it, I'll make answer:
But I had rather fast from all four days
Than drink so much in one.
Enobarbus. Ha! my brave emperor;
Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,
And celebrate our drink?
Pompey. Let's ha't, good soldier.
Antony. Come, let's all take hands,
Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense
In soft and delicate Lethe.
Enobarbus. All take hands.
Make battery to our ears with the loud music;
The while I'll place you; then the boy shall sing.
The holding every man shall bear as loud
As his strong sides can volley.

Music plays. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.

The Song

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus, with pink eyne!
In thy fats our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd.
Cup us, till the world go round,
Cup us, till the world go round!

Caesar. What would you more? Pompey, good night.
Good brother,
Let me request you off: our graver business
Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let's part;
You see we have burnt our cheeks; strong Enobarb
Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue
Splits what it speaks; the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good night.
Good Antony, your hand.
Pompey. I'll try you on the shore.
Antony. And shall, sir. Give's your hand.
Pompey. O, Antony, you have my father's house,
But, what, we are friends! Come down into the boat.
Enobarbus. Take heed you fall not. Menas, I'll not on shore.

[Exeunt Pompey, Caesar, Antony, and Attendants.]

Menas. No, to my cabin.
These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what!
Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell
To these great fellows. Sound and be hang'd! Sound out!

Sound a flourish with drums.

Enobarbus. Hoo! says a. There's my cap.
Menas. Hoa! noble captain! Come. Exeunt.

Enter Ventidius, as it were in triumph, the dead body of Pacorus borne before him.

Ventidius. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck; and now
Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death

57 I have ... fortunes: I have euer been your faithful follower 67 But entertain it: only accept it (the idea) 70 Hast ... well?: Are you drunk? 73 pales: encloses inclips: embraces 76 competitors: partners 89 pall'd: weakened 99 A': he 101 then is: F then he is 101, 102 would ... wheels; Cf. n. 103 reels: revels; cf. n. 106 Strike the vessels: broach the wine casks 109 monstrous: abnormal

112 Possess it: drink it off I'll ... answer: I'll drink to your pledge 115 brave: magnificent 121 Lethe: forgetfulness 123 Make battery: to assault 125 The holding: the burden or refrain of the song bear: keep going (the refrain); F beate 129 pink: small, half-closed eyne: eyes 130 fats: vats 136 request you off: beg you to come away 138 we have: read 'we've' 140 Splits: F Spleet's speaks: the F speakest: he 141 Antick'd us: turned us into grotesque buffoons 143 I'll try ... shore; Cf. n. 144 Give's: F giues 145 father's: F Father 147 Take heed ... out; Cf. n. 150 hear we: F heere a we a loud: F aloud SD Enter Ventidius: begins III.1. 1 darting Parthia; Cf. n. struck: defeated; F stroke

Make me revenger. Bear the king's son's body
Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Orodes,
Pays this for Marcus Crassus.
Roman. Noble Ventidius,
Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,
The fugitive Parthians follow. Spur through Media,
Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly: so thy grand captain Antony
Shall set thee on triumphant chariots and
Put garlands on thy head.
Ventidius. O Silius, Silius,
I have done enough. A lower place, note well,
May make too great an act. For learn this, Silius,
Better to leave undone than by our deed
Acquire too high a fame when him we serve's away.
Caesar and Antony have ever won
More in their officer than person. Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev'd by th' minute, lost his favor.
Who does i' th' wars more than his captain can
Becomes his captain's captain: and ambition,
The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss
Than gain which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him; and in his offense
Should my performance perish.
Roman. Thou hast, Ventidius, that
Without the which a soldier and his sword
Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?
Ventidius. I'll humbly signify what in his name
That magical word of war, we have effected;
How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks,
The ne're-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out o' th' field.
Roman. Where is he now?
Ventidius. He purposeth to Athens, whither, with what haste
The weight we must convey with's will permit
We shall appear before him. On, there; pass along.
Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa at one door, Enobarbus at another.

Agrippa. What! are the brothers parted?
Enobarbus. They have dispatch'd with Pompey; he is gone;
The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome; Caesar is sad, and Lepidus,
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubl'd
With the green-sickness.
Agrippa. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.
Enobarbus. A very fine one. O, how he loves Caesar!
Agrippa. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!
Enobarbus. Caesar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men.
Agrippa. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.
Enobarbus. Spake you of Caesar? How! the non-pareil!
Agrippa. O, Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

4, 5 Thy Pacorus ... Crassus; Cf. n. 4 Orodes: F Orades 5 this: i.e. death 6 Roman; Cf. n. 14 A lower place: a subordinate 17 serve's: F serues 22 by th' minute: incessantly 26 darkens: obscures (his superior) 28 his offense: my offending him 30–32 Thou hast ... distinction; Cf. n. 37 jaded: wearied SD Enter Agrippa: begins III.2 1 parted: departed 2 dispatch'd: completed their business 3 sealing: signing and sealing agreements 6 green-sickness; Cf. n. 7 'Tis; Cf. n. 11 Agrippa: F Ant. 13 Arabian bird; Cf. n.

Enobarbus. Would you praise Caesar, say, 'Caesar': go no further.
Agrippa. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.
Enobarbus. But he loves Caesar best; yet he loves Antony.
Hoo! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number—hoo!—
His love to Antony. But as for Caesar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.
Agrippa. Both he loves.
Enobarbus. They are his shards, and he their beetle.
[Trumpets within.]
This is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa.
Agrippa. Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Antony. No further, sir.
Caesar. You take from me a great part of myself;
Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band
Shall pass on thy approof. Most noble Antony,
Let not the piece of virtue, which is set
Betwixt us as the cyment of our love
To keep it builded, be the ram to batter
The fortress of it: for better might we
Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherish'd.
Antony. Make me not offended
In your distrust.
Caesar. I have said.
Antony. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the least cause
For what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep you,
And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!
We will here part.
Caesar. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well:
The elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.
Octavia. My noble brother!
Antony. The April's in her eyes; it is love's spring,
And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.
Octavia. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—
Caesar. What, Octavia?
Octavia. I'll tell you in your ear.
Antony. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart obey her tongue; the swan's-down feather
That stands upon the swell at full of tide
And neither way inclines.
Enobarbus. [Aside.] Will Caesar weep?
Agrippa. He has a cloud in's face.
Enobarbus. He were the worse for that were he a horse;
So is he, being a man.
Agrippa. Why, Enobarbus,
When Antony found Julius Caesar dead,
He cried almost to roaring; and he wept
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.
Enobarbus. That year, indeed, he was troubl'd with a rheum;

18 figures: F figure 19 cast: calculate 23 shards: 'wing cases,' here 'wings' 29, 30 as my ... approof; Cf. n. 30 pass: pledge 32 cyment: cement (stressed –'– —) 41 curious: minutely inquiring 46 elements; Cf. n. 55–57 the swan's-down ... inclines; Cf. n 56 at full: F at the full 59, 60 He has ... horse; Cf. n. 67 rheum: cold

What willingly he did confound he wail'd,
Believe't, till I wept too.
Caesar. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still; the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.
Antony. Come, sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.
Caesar. Adieu; be happy!
Lepidus. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!
Caesar. Farewell, farewell! Kisses Octavia.
Antony. Farewell!
Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleopatra. Where is the fellow?
Alexas. Half afeard to come.
Cleopatra. Go to, go to. Come hither, sir.

Enter the Messenger as before.

Alexas. Good majesty,
Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you
But when you are well pleas'd.
Cleopatra. That Herod's head
I'll have; but how, when Antony is gone
Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.
Messenger. Most gracious majesty!
Cleopatra. Didst thou behold Octavia?
Messenger. Ay, dread queen.
Cleopatra. Where?
Messenger. Madam, in Rome;
I look'd her in the face, and saw her led
Between her brother and Mark Antony.
Cleopatra. Is she as tall as me?
Messenger. She is not, madam.
Cleopatra. Didst hear her speak? is she shrill-tongu'd or low?
Messenger. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voic'd.
Cleopatra. That's not so good. He cannot like her long.
Charmian. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.
Cleopatra. I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!
What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If ere thou look'st on majesty.
Messenger. She creeps;
Her motion and her station are as one;
She shows a body rather than a life,
A statue than a breather.
Cleopatra. Is this certain?
Messenger. Or I have no observance.
Charmian. Three in Egypt
Cannot make better note.
Cleopatra. He's very knowing,
I do perceive't. There's nothing in her yet.
The fellow has good judgment.
Charmian. Excellent.

68 confound: destroy 69 wept: F Weepe 71 still: continually SD Enter Cleopatra: begins III.3 5 Herod: fierce tyrant of miracle plays 7, 8 That . . . have; Cf. n. 26 look'st: look'dst; cf. n. 28 station: manner of standing 29 shows: appears to be

Cleopatra. Guess at her years, I prithee.
Messenger. Madam, she was a widow.
Cleopatra. Widow! Charmian, hark.
Messenger. And I do think she's thirty.
Cleopatra. Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long or round?
Messenger. Round even to faultiness.
Cleopatra. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.
Her hair, what color?
Messenger. Brown, madam: and her forehead
As low as she would wish it.
Cleopatra. There's gold for thee:
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.
I will employ thee back again; I find thee
Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready;
Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit Messenger.]
Charmian. A proper man.
Cleopatra. Indeed, he is so: I repent me much
That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by him
This creature's no such thing.
Charmian. Nothing, madam.
Cleopatra. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.
Charmian. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,
And serving you so long!
Cleopatra. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian:
But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me
Where I will write. All may be well enough.
Charmian. I warrant you, madam. Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Octavia.

Antony. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,
That were excusable, that and thousands more
Of semblable import, but he hath wag'd
New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it
To public ear,
Spoke scantly of me; when perforce he could not
But pay me terms of honor, cold and sickly
He vented them; most narrow measure lent me;
When the best hint was given him, he not took't,
Or did it from his teeth.
Octavia. O my good lord,
Believe not all, or if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne're stood between,
Praying for both parts:
The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray 'O, bless my lord and husband';
Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
'O, bless my brother!' Husband win, win brother,
Prays and destroys the prayer; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.
Antony. Gentle Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point which seeks
Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honor

43 long or round; Cf. n. 48 Brown; Cf. n. 49 As low . . . it; Cf. n. 55 proper: handsome 57 harried: maltreated by him: according to his report SD Enter Antony: begins III.4 3 semblable: similar 4 made . . . read it; Cf. n. 8 vented: uttered narrow measure lent me: gave me little credit 9 took't: F look't 10 from his teeth: grudgingly 16 presently: instantly

I lose myself: better I were not yours
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,
Yourself shall go between's; the mean time, lady,
I'll raise the preparation of a war
Shall stain your brother; make your soonest haste,
So your desires are yours.
Octavia. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me, most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be
As if the world shall cleave, and that slain men
Should soader up the rift.
Antony. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults
Can never be so equal that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going;
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros.

Enobarbus. How now, friend Eros!
Eros. There's strange news come, sir.
Enobarbus. What, man?
Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.
Enobarbus. This is old: what is the success?
Eros. Caesar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivality, would not let him partake in the glory of the action, and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.
Enobarbus. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more;
And throw between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus, and spurns
The rush that lies before him; cries, 'Fool, Lepidus!'
And threats the throat of that his officer
That murdred Pompey.
Enobarbus. Our great navy's rigg'd.
Eros. For Italy and Caesar. More, Domitius;
My lord desires you presently: my news
I might have told hereafter.
Enobarbus. 'Twill be naught;
But let it be. Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. Exeunt.

Enter Agrippa, Maecenas, and Caesar.

Caesar. Contemning Rome, he has done all this and more
In Alexandria; here's the manner of't:
I' th' market place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthron'd: at the feet sat
Caesarion, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issue that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her
He gave the stablishment of Egypt; made her
Of Lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, absolute queen.
Maecenas. This in the public eye?
Caesar. I' th' common show place, where they exercise.
His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings;
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd
Syria, Cilicia, and Phoenicia. She
In th' habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd, and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.
Maecenas. Let Rome be thus inform'd.
Agrippa. Who, queasy with his insolence already,
Will their good thoughts call from him.
Caesar. The people knows it,
And have now receiv'd his accusations.
Agrippa. Who does he accuse?
Caesar. Caesar, and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o' th' isle; then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping unrestor'd; lastly, he frets
That Lepidus of the triumvirate should be depos'd;
And, being, that we detain all his revenue.
Agrippa. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Caesar. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.
I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel;
That he his high authority abus'd,
And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part: but then, in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I
Demand the like.
Maecenas. He'll never yield to that.
Caesar. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter Octavia, with her train.

Octavia. Hail, Caesar, and my lord; hail, most dear Caesar!
Caesar. That ever I should call thee castaway!
Octavia. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.
Caesar. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not Like Caesar's sister; the wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach
Long ere she did appear; the trees by th' way
Should have borne men, and expectation fainted,
Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,
Rais'd by your populous troops. But you are come
A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented
The ostentation of our love, which, left unshown,
Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you
By sea and land, supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.
Octavia. Good my lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted

26 branchless: mutilated 29 Shall stain: that will stain 34 that: repeats as if 35 soader: solder 41 has: F he's SD Enter Enobarbus: begins III.5 5 success: outcome 8 presently: immediately. rivality: partnership 9, 10 upon his own appeal: on his own (Caesar's) accusation 10 is up: imprisoned 11 enlarge his confine: set him free 12 Then, world, thou hast: F Then would thou hadst chaps: jaws 14 the one the other: F the other 17 that his officer: that officer of his; cf. n. 19 navy's: F Nauies SD Enter Agrippa: begins III.6 1 contemning: scorning he has: read 'he's' 3 tribunal: raised platform 6 my father's son; Cf. n.

9 stablishment: government, rule 10 Lydia; Cf. n. 12-19 I' th' common . . . so; Cf. n. 13 he there: F hither the kings: F the King 17 Isis: See I.2.60 cf. n. above 21 queasy: nauseated 27 spoil'd: despoiled of his territories rated him: assigned to him 30 triumvirate: F Triumpherate 31 revenue: stressed — ⏑ — 36 I have: read 'I've' 48 horse: horses 55–56 The ostentation . . . unlov'd; Cf. n.

My grieved ear withal: whereon, I begg'd
His pardon for return.
Caesar. Which soon he granted,
Being an abstract 'tween his lust and him.
Octavia. Do not say so, my lord.
Caesar. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind.
Where is he now?
Octavia. My lord, in Athens.
Caesar. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire
Up to a whore, who now are levying
The kings o' th' earth for war. He hath assembl'd
Bocchus the King of Libya, Archelaus
Of Cappadocia, Philadelphos, King
Of Paphlagonia, the Thracian king, Adallas,
King Manchus of Arabia, King of Pont,
Herod of Jewry, Mithridates, King
Of Comageat, Polemon and Amintas,
The Kings of Mede and Lycaonia;
With a more larger list of scepters.
Octavia. Ay me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
That do afflict each other!
Caesar. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth,
Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart;
Be you not troubl'd with the time, which drives
O're your content these strong necessities,
But let determin'd things to destiny
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome,
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought, and the high gods,
To do you justice, makes his ministers
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort,
And ever welcome to us.
Agrippa. Welcome, lady.
Maecenas. Welcome, dear madam.
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you;
Only th' adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.
Octavia. Is it so, sir?
Caesar. Most certain. Sister, welcome; pray you,
Be ever know to patience. My dear'st sister! Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cleopatra. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Enobarbus. But why, why, why?
Cleopatra, Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars,
And sayst it is not fit.
Enoarbus. Well, is it, is it?
Cleopatra. Is't not denounc'd against us? Why should not we
Be there in person?
Enobarbus. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:
If we should serve with horse and mares together,
The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
A soldier and his horse.
Cleopatra. What is't you say?
Enobarbus. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from's time,
What should not then be spar'd. He is already
Traduc'd for levity, and 'tis said in Rome
That Photinus an eunuch and your maids
Manage this war.
Cleopatra. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot
That speak against us! A charge we bear i' th' war,
And as the president of my kingdom will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.

Enter Antony and Canidius.

Enobarbus. Nay, I have done.
Here comes the emperor.
Antony. Is it not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum and Brundusium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne? You have heard on't, sweet?
Cleopatra. Celerity is never more admir'd
Than by the negligent.
Antony. A good rebuke,
Which might have well becom'd the best of men
To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.
Cleopatra. By sea! What else?
Canidius. Why will my lord do so?
Antony. For that he dares us to't.
Enobarbus. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.
Canidius. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey. But these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.
Enobarbus. Your ships are not well mann'd;
Your mariners are muleters, reapers, people
Ingross'd by swift impress; in Caesar's fleet
Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare, yours, heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.
Antony. By sea, by sea.
Enobarbus. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land,
Distract your army, which doth most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen, leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge, quite forgo

63 withal: with it 64 pardon: permission 66 Being an abstract . . . him; Cf. n. 73 He hath given: read 'He'th giv'n' 74 who: i.e. Antony and Cleopatra 76 Libya: North Africa exclusive of Egypt 77 Cappadocia: Roman province in East Asia Minor 78 Paphlagonia: Roman province in North Asia Minor Adallas: F Adullas 79 Manchus: F Mauchus Pont: Pontus 81 Comageat: Comagene 82 Mede: Media Lycaonia: Roman province in South Asia minor; F Licoania 86 do: F does afflict: clash with 89 wrong led; Cf. n. 90 negligent danger: danger which we neglected 96 mark: range (metaphor from archery) 97 makes his; Cf. n. 103 large: unrestrained 105 potent regiment: powerful rule trull: harlot 106 noises it: is clamorous 109 Be . . . patience: remain calm at all times SD Enter Cleopatra: begins III.7 3 forspoke: spoken against

5 it is: F it it 6 Is't not denounc'd: F If not, denounc'd; cf. n. denounc'd: proclaimed, declared 10 merely: utterly 13 puzzle: paralyze 16–18 'tis said . . . war; Cf. n. 20 charge: responsibility 27 Tarentum: Taranto Brundusium: Brindisi 29 take in: capture Toryne: F Troine; l. 68, Toryne on't: of it 38 For that: because 45 muleters: mule-drivers; F Militers 46 Ingross'd: gathered impress: conscription 48 yare: light, easy to handle 49 fall: befall 53 absolute soldiership: perfect generalship 54 Distract: divide

The way which promises assurance, and
Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard
From firm security.
Antony. I'll fight at sea.
Cleopatra. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.
Antony. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And with the rest full-mann'd, from th' head of Actium
Beat th' approaching Caesar. But if we fail,
We then can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?
Messenger. The news is true, my lord, he is descried;
Caesar has taken Toryne.
Antony. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;
Strange that his power should be. Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship:
Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier?
Soldier. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: do you misdoubt
This sword and these my wounds? Let th' Egyptians
And the Phoenicians go a-ducking; we
Have us'd to conquer standing on the earth
And fighting foot to foot.
Antony. Well, well: away!
Ex[eunt] Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.
Soldier. By Hercules, I think I am i' th' right.
Canidius. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows
Not in the power on't: so our leader's led,
And we are women's men.
Soldier. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?
Canidius. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius,
Publicola, and Caelius are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's
Carries beyond belief.
Soldier. While he was yet in Rome
His power went out in such distractions
As beguil'd all spies.
Canidius. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?
Soldier. They say, one Taurus.
Canidius. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger. The emperor calls Canidius.
Canidius. With news the time's with labor,
And throws forth each minute some. Exeunt.

Enter Caesar [and Taurus] with his army, marching.

Caesar. Taurus!
Taurus. My lord?
Caesar. Strike not by land,
Keep whole, provoke not battle
Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed
The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies
Upon this jump. [Exeunt.]

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Antony. Set we our squadrons on yond side o' th' hill,
In eye of Caesar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.]

Canidius marcheth with his land army one way over the stage, and Taurus, the lieutenant of Caesar, the other way. After their going in is heard the noise of a sea fight.

Alarum. Enter Enobarbus.

Enobarbus. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.
Th' Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder:
To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scarus. Gods and goddesses, all the whole synod of them!
Enobarbus. What's thy passion?
Scarus. The greater cantle of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.
Enobarbus. How appears the fight?
Scarus. On our side like the token'd pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yon ribald-rid nag of Egypt
(Whom leprosy o'ertake), i' th' midst o' th' fight,
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The breese upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails and flies.
Enobarbus. That I beheld:
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not
Endure a further view.
Scarus. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and (like a doting mallard)
Leaving the fight in heighth, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honor, ne're before
Did violate so itself.
Enobarbus. Alack, alack!

Enter Canidius.

Canidius. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general

63 head: headland Actium: on the coast of Epirus 67 descried: seen 70 power: forces 73 Thetis: sea goddess 75–80 O noble emperor . . . foot; Cf. n. 77 th' Egyptians: read 'the Egyptians' 83, 84 his whole action . . . on't; Cf. n. 84 leader's led: F Leaders leade 85 men: servants 88 Canidius: F Ven. 91 Carries: makes headway 93 distractions: detachments 96 Taurus: F Towrus 99 time's: F times 100 throws forth; Cf. n.

SD Enter Caesar: begins III.8 5 exceed: depart from 6 prescript: orders 7 jump: hazard 9 battle: troops in battle array 10 may: can 12 Naught: ruined, lost 14 admiral: flagship 18 passion: cause of your troubled mind 19 cantle: portion 20 With: by, through very: absolute we have: read 'we've' 23 like the token'd pestilence; Cf. n. 24 ribald-rid: licentious; F ribaudred 28 breese: gadfly 33 being loof'd; Cf. n. 35 mallard: drake, eager to follow his mate

Been what he knew himself, it had gone well:
O, he has given example for our flight
Most grossly by his own.
Enobarbus. Ay, are your thereabouts? Why, then, good night, indeed.
Canidius. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.
Scarus. 'Tis easy to't.
And there I will attend what further comes.
Canidius. To Caesar will I render
My legions and my horse; six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.
Enobarbus. I'll yet follow
The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.]

Enter Antony with Attendants.

Antony. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon't;
It is asham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither:
I am so lated in the world that I
Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship
Laden with gold, take that, divide it: fly,
And make your peace with Caesar.
Omnes. Fly? not we.
Antony. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards
To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone;
I have myself resolv'd upon a course
Which has no need of you. Be gone.
My treasure's in the harbor. Take it. O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon:
My very hairs do mutiny, for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting. Friends, be gone; you shall Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness; take the hint
Which my despair proclaims; let that be left
Which leaves itself; to the seaside straightway;
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now,
Nay, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore I pray you. I'll see you by and by. Sits down.

Enter Cleopatra, led by Charmian, [Iras,] and Eros.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort him.
Iras. Do, most dear queen.
Charmian. Do! Why, what else?
Cleopatra. Let me sit down. O Juno!
Antony. No, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, sir?
Antony. O fie, fie, fie!
Charmian. Madam!
Iras. Madam, O good empress!
Eros. Sir, sir!
Antony. Yes, my lord, yes. He at Philippi kept
His sword e'ne like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: yet now—No matter.
Cleopatra. Ah, stand by.
Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.
Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He's unqualitied with very shame.
Cleopatra. Well then, sustain me: O!
Eros. Most noble sir, arise, the queen approaches:
Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her, but
Your comfort makes the rescue.
Antony. I have offended reputation,
A most unnoble swerving.
Eros. Sir, the queen.
Antony. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back what I have left behind
Stroy'd in dishonor.
Cleopatra. O my lord, my lord.
Forgive my fearful sails: I little thought
You would have follow'd.
Antony. Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by th' strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after. O're my spirit
The full supremacy thou knew'st, and that
Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.
Cleopatra. O, my pardon!
Antony. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness, who
With half the bulk o' th' world play'd as I pleas'd,
Making and marring fortunes. You did know
How much you were my conqueror, and that
My sword, made weak by my affection, would
Obey it on all cause.
Cleopatra. Pardon, pardon!
Antony. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates
All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me.
We sent our schoolmaster; is a come back?
Love, I am full of lead. Some wine
Within there, and our viands! Fortune knows
We scorn her most when most she offers blows. Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, [Thidias,] with others.

Caesar. Let him appear that's come from Antony.
Know you him?
Dolabella. Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing
Which had superfluous kings for messengers
Not many moons gone by.

Enter Ambassador from Antony.

43 Been ... himself: been true to himself as shown in the past 44 he has: F 'his ha's' cf. n. 49 to't: F toot 51 render: surrender 55 chance: fortunes SD Enter Antony: begins III.9 3 lated: belated 7 Omnes: i.e. attendants 9 show their shoulders: show their backs 13 that: what 18 Sweep your way: make easy your reconcilement to Caesar 19 hint: occasion 20 that: F them 24, 25 I have lost ... you; Cf. n. 37 His sword ... dancer; Cf. n. struck: F strooke

38 lean ... Cassius; Cf. n. 40 Dealt on lieutenantry: fought by proxy 41 squares: squadrons 45 unqualitied: unmanned 48 seize: F cease but: unless 53–55 How ... dishonor; Cf. n. 62 tow: F stowe 69 palter: shuffle, play tricks the shifts of lowness: tricks of a man humbled by fortune 76 Fall: let fall rates: is worth 79 schoolmaster; Cf. n. a: he SD Enter Caesar: begins III.10. Thidias; Cf. n. 4 argument: proof SD Enter Ambassador; Cf. n.

Caesar. Approach and speak.
Ambassador. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends
As is the morn dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.
Caesar. Be't so. Declare thine office.
Ambassador. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessens his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.
Caesar. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience nor desire shall fail, so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.
Ambassador. Fortune pursue thee!
Caesar. Bring him through the bands. [Exit Ambassador.]
[To Thidias.] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time; dispatch.
From Antony win Cleopatra; promise,
And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention, offers. Women are not
In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure
The ne're-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thidias;
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.
Thidias. Caesar, I go.
Caesar. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.
Thidias. Caesar, I shall. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleopatra. What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Enobarbus. Think, and die.
Cleopatra. Is Antony or we in fault for this?
Enobarbus. Antony only, that would make his will
Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? Why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship, at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The mered question. 'Twas a shame no less
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.
Cleopatra. Prithee, peace.

Enter the Ambassador, with Antony.

Antony. Is that his answer?
Ambassador. Ay, my lord.
Antony. The queen shall then have courtesy,
So she will yield us up.
Ambassador. He says so.
Antony. Let her know't.
To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.
Cleopatra. That head, my lord?
Antony. To him again. Tell him he wears the rose
Of youth upon him, from which the world should note
Something particular: his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward's, whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child as soon
As i' th' command of Caesar. I dare him therefore
To lay his gay caparisons apart,
And answer me declin'd, sword against sword,
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.
[Exeunt Antony and Ambassador.]
Enobarbus. Yes, like enough, high-battl'd Caesar will
Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to th' show
Against a sworder! I see men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes, and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness! Caesar, thou hast subdu'd
His judgment too.

Enter a Servant.

Servant. A messenger from Caesar.
Cleopatra. What! no more ceremony? See! my women
Against the blown rose may they stop their nose
That kneel'd unto the buds. Admit him, sir. [Exit Servant.]
Enobarbus. Mine honesty and I begin to square.
The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith mere folly: yet he that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i' th' story.

Enter Thidias.

Cleopatra. Caesar's will?
Thidias. Hear it apart.
Cleopatra. None but friends: say boldly.
Thidias. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.
Enobarbus. He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has,
Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know
Whose he is we are, and that is Caesar's.
Thidias. So.
Thus then, thou most renown'd, Caesar entreats
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st
Further than he is Caesar.
Cleopatra. Go on: right royal.

10–12 as petty . . . sea; Cf. n. 21 circle: crown 22 Now . . . grace: now lost unless you show favor or mercy 25 so: provided 26 friend: lover 30 bands: troops 40 becomes his flaw: behaves in his disgrace 41, 42 what thou . . . moves; Cf. n. SD Enter Cleopatra: begins III.11 4 will: desire 6 ranges: lines of battle 8 affection: passion 9 nick'd: made a fool of; cf. n. 11 mered question: definite cause 12 course: chase SD Enter the Ambassador: see III.9.79; cf. n.

27 Something particular: some personal exploit 28 ministers: agents 31 caparisons: equipment 32 declin'd: in my fallen fortunes 34 high-battl'd: possessed of a victorious army 35 Unstate: strip of state and importance be stag'd to th' show: be shown on the stage in public view 36 sworder: gladiator 37 parcel: part 39 To suffer all alike: so that all deteriorate at the same rate 40 all measures: both good and bad fortune SD Thidias: see III.10.1; cf. n. 56 haply: very likely 59 for: as for 62 Caesar: F caesars

Thidias. He knows that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you fear'd him.
Cleopatra. O!
Thidias. The scars upon your honor therefore he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserv'd.
Cleopatra. He is a god, and knows
What is most right. Mine honor was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.
Enobarbus. To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou art so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. Exit Enobarbus.
Thidias. Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please him
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon. But it would warm his spirits
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud,
The universal landlord.
Cleopatra. What's your name?
Thidias. My name is Thidias.
Cleopatra. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Caesar this: in deputation
I kiss his conqu'ring hand; tell him I am prompt
To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel.
Tell him from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.
Thidias. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.
Cleopatra. Your Caesar's father oft,
When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Antony. Favors? By Jove that thunders!
What are thou, fellow?
Thidias. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man and worthiest
To have command obey'd.
Enobarbus. You will be whipp'd.
Antony. Approach there! Ah, you kite! Now, gods and divels!
Authority melts from me. Of late, when I cried 'Ho!'
Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth,
And cry, 'Your will?' Have you no ears? I am
Antony yet. Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Enter a Servant.

Enobarbus. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp
Than with an old one dying.
Antony. Moon and stars!
Whip him. Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries
That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of—she here, what's her name,
Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.
Thidias. Mark Antony—
Antony. Tug him away: being whipp'd,
Bring him again. This Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an arrant to him.

Exeunt [Attendants] with Thidias.

You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha?
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders?
Cleopatra. Good my lord—
Antony. You have been a boggler ever:
But when we in our viciousness grow hard—
O misery on't!—the wise gods seel our eyes,
In our own filth drop our clear judgments, make us
Adore our errors, laugh at's while we strut
To our confusion.
Cleopatra. O! is't come to this?
Antony. I found you as a morsel, cold upon
Dead Caesar's trencher; nay, you were a fragment
Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours,
Unregist'red in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out; for I am sure
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.
Cleopatra. Wherefore is this?
Antony. To let a fellow that will take rewards
And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with
My playfellow, your hand, this kingly seal
And plighter of high hearts. O, that I were
Upon the hill of Basan to outroar
The horned herd! for I have savage cause,
And to proclaim it civilly were like
A halter'd neck which does the hangman thank
For being yare about him.

Enter a Servant with Thidias.

Is he whipp'd?
Servant. Soundly, my lord.
Antony. Cried he? and begg'd a pardon?
Servant. He did ask favor.
Antony. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
To follow Caesar in his triumph, since
Thou hast bin whipp'd for following him: henceforth,
The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on't. Get thee back to Caesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look thou say
He makes me angry with him. For he seems
Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,

80 require: request 85 shroud: protection 93 from his: read 'from's' all-obeying: which all obey 101 taking . . . in: conquering 103 As: as if 111 divels: devils 112 me. Of late, when: F me of late. When 113 muss: scramble 115 Jack: impudent fellow 123 cringe: distort 127 This: F The 128 arrant: errand 131 getting: begetting 132 abus'd: tricked 133 feeders: servants 135 boggler: fickle creature 137 seel: sew up; cf. n. 139 at's: at us 140 confusion: destruction 143 trencher: wooden platter 145 vulgar fame: common report 146 Luxuriously: lasciviously 151 quit: requite 153 plighter: pledger 153–155 O, that . . . herd; Cf. n. 155 savage cause: cause enough to go mad 158 yare: quick 161 a: he 167 fever thee: may it (the lady's white hand) throw you into a fever 169 thy entertainment: your reception (here)

Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easy 'tis to do't,
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs and shot their fires
Into th' abysm of hell. If he mislike
My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranched bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me. Urge it thou:
Hence with thy stripes, be gone! Exit Thidias.
Cleopatra. Have you done yet?
Antony. Alack! our terrene moon is now eclips'd,
And it portends alone the fall of Antony.
Cleopatra. I must stay his time.
Antony. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?
Cleopatra. Not know me yet?
Antony. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleopatra. Ah! dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source, and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so
Dissolve my life. The next Caesarion smite
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!
Antony. I am satisfied.
Caesar sets down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too
Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sealike.
Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady?
If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn our chronicle:
There's hope in't yet.
Cleopatra. That's my brave lord!
Antony. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me. Come,
Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more:
Let's mock the midnight bell.
Cleopatra. It is my birth-day:
I had thought t' have held it poor. But, since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.
Antony. We will yet do well.
Cleopatra. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Antony. Do so, we'll speak to them; and tonight I'll force
The wine peep through their scars. Come on, my queen;
There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight
I'll make death love me, for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe. Exeunt [all but Enobarbus].
Enobarbus. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious
Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart. When valor preys on reason
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him. Exit.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, and Maecenas, with his army, Caesar reading a letter.

Caesar. He calls me boy, and chides as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt. My messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods, dares me to personal combat,
Caesar to Antony. Let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; meantime
Laugh at his challenge.
Maecenas. Caesar must think
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.
Caesar. Let our best heads know
That tomorrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight. Within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done,
And feast the army; we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! Exeunt.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, with others.

Antony. He will not fight with me, Domitius?
Enobarbus. No.
Antony. Why should he not?
Enobarbus. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.
Antony. Tomorrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honor in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?
Enobarbus. I'll strike, and cry 'Take all.'
Antony. Well said; come on
Call forth my household servants; let's tonight
Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give my thy hand,
Thou hast bin rightly honest, so hast thou,
Thou, and thou, and thou: you have serv'd me well,
And kings have been your fellows.
Cleopatra. What means this?
Enobarbus. 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.
Antony. And thou art honest too.

175 orbs: spheres; cf. n. 178 Hipparchus; Cf. n. enfranched: freed 180 quit: pay back Urge: mention 183 our terrene . . . eclips'd; Cf. n. 187 one . . . points: his valet 193 determines: melts 196 brave: noble 198 discandying: dissolving; F discandering 201 sets: sits 204 fleet: are afloat 207 in blood: both 'covered with blood' and 'in full vigor' (said of a stag) 208 earn our chronicle: earn a place in history 212 maliciously: fiercely 213 nice: in a light mood (wanton?) 216 gaudy: festive, with joyous revel 226 There's . . . yet: there is life in it still

228 Even: read 'e'en' 231 estridge; Cf. n 233 preys on: F prays in SD Enter Caesar: begins IV.1 10 Make boot: take advantage 16 fetch him in: capture him (surround him) SD Enter Antony: begins IV.2 7 on: either 9 Woo't: wilt 10 'Take all'; Cf. n.

I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapp'd up together in
An Antony, that I might do you service
So good as you have done.
Omnes. The gods forbid!
Antony. Well, my good fellows, wait on me tonight:
Scant not my cups, and make as much of me
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.
Cleopatra. What does he mean?
Enobarbus. To make his followers weep.
Antony. Tend me tonight;
May be it is the period of your duty:
Haply, you shall not see me more, or if,
A mangled shadow. Perchance tomorrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,
I turn you not away, but like a master
Married to your good service, stay till death:
Tend me tonight two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't!
Enobarbus. What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep,
And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd; for shame,
Transform us not to women.
Antony. Ho, ho, ho!
Now, the witch take me, if I meant it thus!
Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,
You take me in too dolorous a sense,
For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you
To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts,
I hope well of tomorrow, and will lead you
Where rather I'll expect victorious life
Than death and honor. Let's to supper, come,
And drown consideration. Exeunt.

Enter a company of Soldiers.

1. Soldier. Brother, good night: tomorrow is the day.
2. Soldier. It will determine one way: fare you well.
Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?
1. Soldier. Nothing. What news?
2. Soldier. Belike 'tis but a rumor. Good night to you.
1. Soldier. Well, sir, good night.

They meet other Soldiers.

2. Soldier. Soldiers, have careful watch.
3. Soldier. And you. Good night, good night.
They place themselves in every corner of the stage.
4. Soldier. Here we: and if tomorrow
Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.
3. Soldier. 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.
Music of the hautboys is under the stage.
4. Soldier. Peace! what noise?
1. Soldier. List, list!
2. Soldier. Hark!
1. Soldier. Music i' th' air.
3. Soldier. Under the earth.
4. Soldier. It signs well, does it not?
3. Soldier. No.
1. Soldier. Peace, I say!
What should this mean?
2. Soldier. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd,
Now leaves him.
1. Soldier. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do.
2. Soldier. How now, masters! [They] speak together.
Omnes. How now? How now? Do you hear this?
1. Soldier. Ay; is't not strange?
3. Soldier. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?
1. Soldier. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter.
Let's see how it will give off.
Omnes. Content. 'Tis strange. Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with others.

Antony. Eros! mine armor, Eros!
Cleopatra. Sleep a little.
Antony. No, my chuck. Eros, come; mine armor, Eros.

Enter Eros [with armor].

Come, good fellow, put thine iron on:
If fortune be not ours today, it is Because we brave her. Come.
Cleopatra. Nay, I'll help too.
What's this for?
Antony. Ah, let be, let be; thou art
The armorer of my heart: false, false; this, this.
Cleopatra. Sooth—la, I'll help: thus it must be.
Antony. Well, well, we shall thrive now.
Seest thou, my good fellow? Go, put on thy defenses.
Eros. Briefly, sir.
Cleopatra. Is not this buckled well?
Antony. Rarely, rarely:
He that unbuckles this, till we do please
To daff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.
Thou fumblest, Eros, and my queen's a squire
More tight at this than thou: dispatch. O love,
That thou couldst see my wars today, and knew'st
The royal occupation, thou shouldst see
A workman in't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good morrow to thee; welcome;
Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge:
To business that we love we rise betime,
And go to't with delight.
Soldier. A thousand, sir, early though't be, have on their
Riveted trim, and at the port expect you.
Shout. Trumpets flourish.

26 Omnes: i.e. servants 30 suffer'd: submitted to 33 Tend: wait on 34 period: end 35 Haply: very likely 42 yield: repay, reward 49 Grace: virtue 51 comfort: encouragement SD Enter a company: begins IV.3 1–33 Brother . . . 'Tis strange; Cf. n. 5 Belike: very likely 8, 12 3. Soldier: F 1 9, 14 4. Soldier: F 2; l. 19, 4 12 brave: splendid

19 It signs well: it is a good omen 23 'Tis . . . Hercules; Cf. n. 27 masters: gentlemen 31 so far . . . quarter: to the limits of our post 32 give off: end SD Enter Antony: begins IV.4 3 chuck: chick 7 Nay . . . must be; Cf. n. 10 false: wrong 11 Sooth: in truth 17 daff't: doff it, put it off; F daft 20 tight: able 23 workman: expert craftsman 25 charge: duty 26 betime: early 29 Riveted trim: armor port: gate

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Captain. The morn is fair. Good morrow, general.
All. Good morrow, general.
Antony. 'Tis well blown, lads.
This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
So, so; come, give me that: this way; well said.
Fare thee well, dame; whatere becomes of me
This is a soldier's kiss: [Kisses her.] rebukable
And worthy shameful check it were, to stand
On more mechanic compliment. I'll leave thee
Now like a man of steel. You that will fight,
Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. Adieu.
Exeunt [all but Cleopatra and Charmian].
Charmian. Please you, retire to your chamber.
Cleopatra. Lead me.
He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight!
Then, Antony—but now—Well, on. Exeunt.

Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros [a Soldier meeting them].

Soldier. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!
Antony. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd
To make me fight at land!
Soldier. Hadst thou done so,
The kings that have revolted and the soldier
That has this morning left thee would have still
Follow'd thy heels.
Antony. Who's gone this morning?
Soldier. Who?
One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus,
He shall not hear thee, or from Caesar's camp
Say, 'I am none of thine.'
Antony. What sayst thou?
Soldier. Sir, he is with Caesar.
Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure he has not with him.
Antony. Is he gone?
Soldier. Most certain.
Antony. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;
Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to him—
I will subscribe—gentle adieus and greetings;
Say that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master. O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men! Dispatch. Enobarbus!
[Exeunt.]

Flourish. Enter Agrippa, Caesar, with Enobarbus and Dolabella.

Caesar. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Antony be took alive;
Make it so known.
Agrippa. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.]
Caesar. The time of universal peace is near:
Prove this a prosp'rous day, the three-nook'd world
Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Messenger. Antony is come into the field.
Caesar. Go charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the vant,
That Antony may seem to spend his fury
Upon himself. Exeunt [Caesar and his train].
Enobarbus. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on Affairs of Antony; there did dissuade
Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar,
And leave his master Antony: for this pains
Caesar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the rest
That fell away have entertainment, but
No honorable trust. I have done ill,
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely
That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Caesar's

Soldier. Enobarbus, Antony
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus. The messenger
Came on my guard, and at my tent is now
Unloading of his mules.
Enobarbus. I give it you.
Soldier. Mock not, Enobarbus,
I tell you true: best you saf'd the bringer
Out of the host. I must attend mind office,
Or would have done't myself. Your emperor
Continues still a Jove. Exit.
Enobarbus. I am alone the villain of the earth,
And feel I am so most. O Antony,
Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid
My better service, when my turpitude
Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart:
If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do't, I feel.
I fight against thee! No: I will go seek
Some ditch, wherein to die; the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life. Exit.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter Agrippa.

Agrippa. Retire, we have engag'd ourselves too far.
Caesar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. Exit.

Alarums. Enter Antony, and Scarus wounded.

Scarus. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had droven them home
With clouts about their heads.
Antony. Thou bleed'st apace.
Scarus. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H. [Retreat sounded a]far off.
Antony. They do retire.
Scarus. We'll beat 'em into bench holes. I have yet
Room for six scotches more.

Enter Eros.

30 Captain: F Alexas 32 'Tis well blown: the day begins (blossoms) well 35 well said: well done; F well-sed 38 check: reproof 39 mechanic compliment: vulgar, common leave-taking SD Trumpets sound: begins IV.5 1, 4, 9 Soldier; Cf. n. SD [Exeunt]: F Exit SD Flourish; Cf. n. 29 three-nook'd: three-cornered (Europe, Asia, Africa)

33 vant: vaunt, van 36–40 Alexas . . . him; Cf. n. 37 dissuade: persuade away from 41 have entertainment: are employed (in Caesar's army) 48 on my guard: while I was on guard 52 saf'd: conducted safely 53 office: duty 60 blows: causes it to swell (with pain) 62 outstrike: strike sooner thought: sorrow, grief SD Alarum; Cf. n. 66 engag'd . . . far: involved ourselves too deeply in enemy's forces 67 our oppression: pressure on us 70 we had: read 'we'd' 73, 74 a T . . . an H; Cf. n. 74 Retreat sounded: F Far off after heads, l. 70 76 bench holes: privy holes 77 scotches: slashes

Eros. They are beaten, sir, and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.
Scarus. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up as we take hares behind:
'Tis sport to maul a runner.
Antony. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort and tenfold
For thy good valor. Come thee on.
Scarus. I'll halt after.
Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter Antony again in a march; Scarus, with others.

Antony. We have beat him to his camp: run one before
And let the queen know of our gests. Tomorrow,
Before the sun shall see's, we'll spill the blood
That has today escap'd. I thank you all,
For doughty-handed are you, and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but as't had been
Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.
Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats, whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
The honor'd gashes whole.

Enter Cleopatra

[To Scarus.] Give me thy hand
To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day o' th' world!
Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and all,
Through proof of harness to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.
Cleopatra. Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?
Antony. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! though gray
Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we
A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can
Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man;
Commend unto his lips thy favoring hand:
Kiss it, my warrior: he hath fought today
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had
Destroy'd in such a shape.
Cleopatra. I'll give thee, friend,
An armor all of gold; it was a king's.
Antony. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncl'd
Like holy Phoebus' car. Give me thy hand:
Through Alexandria make a jolly march;
Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them.
Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear,
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together,
Applauding our approach.
Exeunt.

Enter a Sentry and his company; Enobarbus follows.

Sentry. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
We must return to th' court of guard: the night
Is shiny, and they say we shall embattle
By th' second hour i' th' morn.
1. Watch. This last day was a shrewd one to's.
Enobarbus. O, bear me witness, night—
2. Watch. What man is this?
1. Watch. Stand close and list him.
Enobarbus. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory: poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent!
Sentry. Enobarbus!
2. Watch. Peace: hark further.
Enobarbus. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night disponge upon me,
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault,
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony!
Nobler than my revolt is infamous
Forgive me in thine own particular,
But let the world rank me in register
A master leaver and a fugitive.
O Antony! O Antony! [Dies.]
1. Watch. Let's speak to him.
Sentry. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Caesar.
2. Watch. Let's do so. But he sleeps.
Sentry. Swoonds rather, for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet for sleep.
1. Watch. Go we to him.
2. Watch. Awake, sir, awake, speak to us.
1. Watch. Hear you, sir?
Sentry. The hand of death hath raught him.
Drums afar off.
Hark! the drums demurely wake the sleepers.
Let us bear him to the court of guard: he is of note.
Our hour is fully out.
2. Watch. Come on, then; he may recover yet.
Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Scarus, with their army.

Antony. Their preparation is today by sea;
We please them not by land.
Scarus. For both, my lord.
Antony. I would they'ld fight i' th' fire or i' th' air;
We'ld fight there too. But this it is; our foot
Upon the hills adjoining to the city

86 halt: limp SD Alarum: begins IV.6 cf. n. 2 gests: exploits; F guests 7 shown: shown yourselves 8 clip: embrace 13 fairy: enchantress 14 O thou . . . world: thou light-giver to the world (likening Cleopatra to the sun). 16 proof of harness: armor of proof 17 triumphing: stressed — ⏑ — 19 virtue: valor 21 My: F Mine 22 We have: read 'we've' 24 nerves: sinews 25 Get goal . . . youth: win as many points from youth as they from us 26 Commend: commit favoring: F savoring 33 Phoebus' car: chariot of the sun 35 targets: shields owe: own

SD Enter a Sentry: begins IV.7; cf. n. 2 court of guard: guardroom 3 embattle: draw up in battle array 5 shrewd: wicked 8 close: in concealment 10 record: stressed — ⏑ 16 disponge: squeeze out 20 dried with grief: cf. n. 23 in . . . particular: yourself 24 in register: in its record of human conduct 25 master leaver: runaway servant 31 Swoonds: swoons 36 raught: reached, seized 37 demurely: with subdued sound SD Enter Antony: begins IV.8; cf. n.

Shall stay with us. Order for sea is given,
They have put forth the haven,
Where their appointment we may best discover
And look on their endeavor. Exeunt.

Enter Caesar and his army.

Caesar. But being charg'd, we will be still by land.
Which, as I take't, we shall; for his best force
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage! Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Scarus.

Antony. Yet they are not join'd.
Where yond pine does stand, I shall discover all.
I'll bring thee word straight how 'tis like to go. Exit.
Scarus. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests. The augurers
Say they know not, they cannot tell, look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant and dejected, and by starts
His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear
Of what he has and has not.

Alarum afar off, as at a sea fight.

Enter Antony.

Antony. All is lost!
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe, and yonder
They cast their caps up and carouse together
Like friends long lost. Triple-turn'd whore! 'tis thou
Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart
Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly:
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all. Bid them all fly, be gone. [Exit Scarus.]
O sun! thy uprise shall I see no more;
Fortune and Antony part here, even here
Do we shake hands. All come to this? The hearts
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Caesar; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am.
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home,
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
Like a right gypsy hath at fast and loose
Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.
What, Eros! Eros!

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt!
Cleopatra. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?
Antony. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebians;
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex. Most monsterlike, be shown
For poor'st diminitives, for dolts, and let
Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. Exit Cleopatra
'Tis well th' art gone,
If it be well to live; but better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many. Eros, ho!
The shirt of Nessus is upon me; teach me,
Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage.
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' th' moon,
And with those hands that grasp'd the heaviest club
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die.
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for't. Eros, ho! Exit.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, [and] Mardian.

Cleopatra. Help me, my women! O, he's more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.
Charmian. To th' monument! There lock yourself,
And send him word you are dead.
The soul and body rive not more in parting
Than greatness going off.
Cleopatra. To th' monument!
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say that the last I spoke was 'Antony,'
And word it, prithee, piteously. Hence, Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death. To th' monument!
Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Eros.

Antony. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros. Ay, noble lord.
Antony. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish,
A vapor sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs;
They are black vesper's pageants.
Eros. Ay, my lord.
Antony. That which is now a horse, even with a thought
The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.
Eros. It does, my lord.
Antony. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony,
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt, and the queen—
Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine,
Which whilst it was mine had annex'd unto't

9 appointment: nature and deployment of their ships SD Enter Caesar; Cf. n. 11 still: quiet 12 shall: i.e. remain quiet SD Enter Antony; Cf. n. 15 join'd: joined in battle 18–21 Swallows . . . knowledge; Cf. n. 19 augurers: F Auguries 23 fretted: checkered, varied SD Alarum . . . fight: F prints at end of l. 14 29 Triple-turn'd: Julius Caesar's, Cneius Pompey's, and Antony's mistress 32 charm: enchantress 37 spaniel'd: F panelled 38 discandy: dissolve 41 grave charm: evil-working enchantress 42 beck'd: beckoned 43 my crownet, my chief end; Cf. n. 44 right: true 45 loss: ruin 47 Avaunt!: be gone!

54 diminitives: diminutives; undersized, weak creatures dolts: fools; Cf. n. 61 shirt of Nessus; Cf. n. 62 Alcides: Hercules 65 worthiest: noblest 66 she hath: read 'she'th' SD Enter Cleopatra: begins IV.9 1 he's: read 'he is.' 2 Telamon; Cf. n. boar of Thessaly; Cf. n. 3 emboss'd: enraged, foaming at the mouth 4 To th' monument; Cf. n. 6 rive: rend SD Enter Antony: begins IV.10 9 black . . . pageants; Cf. n. 11 even: read 'e'en.' 12 rack: drifting cloud dislimns: unpaints, paints out 15 knave: fellow 18 Egypt: the Queen of Egypt

A million moe, now lost—she, Eros, has
Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false-play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph.
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter Mardian.

O, thy vilde lady; she has robb'd me of my sword.
Mardian. No, Antony,
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingl'd
With thine entirely.
Antony. Hence, saucy eunuch, peace. She hath betray'd me
And shall die the death.
Mardian. Death of one person can be paid but once,
And that she has discharg'd. What thou wouldst do
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake
Was 'Antony! most noble Antony!'
Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided
Between her heart and lips: she rend'red life,
Thy name so buried in her.
Antony. Dead, then?
Mardian. Dead.
Antony. Unarm, Eros, the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep. [To Mardian.] That thou depart'st hence safe,
Does pay thy labor richly; go. Exit Mardian.
Off, pluck off:
The sevenfold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!
Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace.
No more a soldier: bruised pieces, go;
You have bin nobly borne. From me awhile.
Exit Eros.
I will o'retake thee, Cleopatra, and
Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture: since the torch is out,
Lie down and stray no farther. Now all labor
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done.
Eros!—I come, my queen. Eros! Stay for me.
Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Aeneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours. Come, Eros! Eros!

Enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?
Antony. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonor that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword
Quarter'd the world, and o're green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman, less noble mind
Than she which by her death our Caesar tells
'I am conqueror of myself.' Thou art sworn, Eros,
That when the exigent should come—which now
Is come indeed—when I should see behind me
Th' inevitable prosecution of disgrace and horror,
That on my command thou then wouldst kill me.
Do't, the time is come. Thou strik'st not me,
'Tis Caesar thou defeat'st. Put color in thy cheek.
Eros. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim and could not?
Antony. Eros,
Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome and see
Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd
To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensu'd?
Eros. I would not see't.
Antony. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.
Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.
Eros. O, sir! pardon me.
Antony. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then
To do this when I bade thee? Do't at once,
Or thy precedent services are all
But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw and come.
Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance
Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.
Antony. Lo thee!
Eros. My sword is drawn.
Antony. Then let it do at once
The thing why thou hast drawn it.
Eros. My dear master,
My captain, and my emperor, let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.
Antony. 'Tis said, man, and farewell.
Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?
Antony. Now, Eros.
Eros. Why there then.
Thus do I escape the sorrow of Antony's death.
Kills himself.
Antony. Thrice-nobler than myself!
Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what
I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros
Have by their brave instruction got upon me
A nobleness in record; but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into't
As to a lover's bed. Come, then; and, Eros,
Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus
[Falls on his sword.]
I learn'd of thee. How! not dead? not dead?
The guard, ho! O, dispatch me!

Enter [Dercetas and] guard.

1. Guard. What's the noise?

21 moe: more 22, 23 Pack'd ... triumph; Cf. n. 26 vilde: vile sword: soldierly strength and courage 38 rend'red: gave up 49 thy continent: thy case, that which holds thee in 55 length: prolongation of life 58 seal: put the seal of death upon 61 port: bearing 62 want troops: lack admirers among the departed souls 64 all ... ours: we shall be the center of attraction there 69 to lack: *in that I lack

73 exigent: emergency 75 inevitable prosecution: unavoidable pursuit 78 defeat'st: frustratest 84 pleach'd: folded 85 corrigible: submissive 86 penetrative: penetrating 88 His baseness that ensu'd: the baseness of one who (as captive) followed (the chariot) 91 honest: honorable 96 precedent: former SD Kills himself: F prints SD after Eros, l. 109 115, 116 Have ... record: have won from me a noble position in history 121 ho!: F how? SD Enter [Dercetas and] Cf. n.

Antony. I have done my work ill, friends.
O, make an end of what I have begun.
2. Guard. The star is fall'n.
1. Guard. And time is at his period.
All. Alas, and woe!
Antony. Let him that loves me strike me dead.
1. Guard. Not I.
2. Guard. Nor I.
3. Guard. Nor any one. Exeunt [Guards].
Dercetas. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly.
This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings,
Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Diomedes. Where's Antony?
Dercetas. There, Diomed, there.
Diomedes. Lives he? Wilt thou not answer, man?
[Exit Dercetas.]
Antony. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me
Sufficing strokes for death.
Diomedes. Most absolute lord,
My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.
Antony. When did she send thee?
Diomedes. Now, my lord.
Antony. Where is she?
Diomedes. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear
Of what hath come to pass: for when she saw—
Which never shall be found—you did suspect
She had dispos'd with Caesar, and that your rage
Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead;
But fearing since how it might work hath sent
Me to proclaim the truth, and I am come,
I dread, too late.
Antony. Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard, I prithee.
Diomedes. What, ho! the emperor's guard!
The guard, what ho! Come, your lord calls!

Enter four or five of the guard of Antony.

Antony. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.
1. Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear
All your true followers out.
All. Most heavy day!
Antony. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows. Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up;
I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all. Exeunt, bearing Antony.

Enter Cleopatra and her maids aloft, with Charmian and Iras.

Cleopatra. O Charmian, I will never go from hence.
Charmian. Be comforted, dear madam.
Cleopatra. No, I will not.
All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter [below] Diomedes.

How now? is he dead?
Diomedes. His death's upon him, but not dead.
Look out o' th' other side your monument;
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter [below] Antony [borne by] the guard.

Cleopatra. O sun!
Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in; darkling stand
The varying shore o' th' world. O Antony,
Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help;
Help, friends below, let's draw him hither.
Antony. Peace!
Not Caesar's valor hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.
Cleopatra. So it should be,
That none but Antony should conquer Antony,
But woe 'tis so.
Antony. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.
Cleopatra. I dare not, dear,
Dear my lord, pardon: I dare not,
Lest I be taken: not th' imperious show
Of the full-fortun'd Caesar ever shall
Be brooch'd with me, if knife, drugs, serpents have Edge, sting, or operation. I am safe:
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes
And still conclusion, shall acquire no honor
Demuring upon me. But come, come, Antony—
Help me, my women—we must draw thee up.
Assist, good friends.
Antony. O, quick, or I am gone.
Cleopatra. Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs my lord!
Our strength is all gone into heaviness;
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,
The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,
Wishers were ever fools. O, come, come, come.
They heave Antony aloft to Cleopatra.
And welcome, welcome! Die when thou hast liv'd,
Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.
All. A heavy sight!
Antony. I am dying, Egypt, dying.
Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.
Cleopatra. No, let me speak, and let me rail so high
That the false huswife Fortune break her wheel,
Provok'd by my offense.
Antony. One word, sweet queen.
Of Caesar seek your honor with your safety. O!
Cleopatra. They do not go together.

126 period: end 134 Shall . . . him: will successfully recommend me to him 149 found: found true 150 dispos'd: come to terms 151 purg'd: cleared away, pacified 164 To grace it: by honoring it SD Exeunt: F Exit SD Enter Cleopatra: begins IV.11

13 sphere: see III.11.175; cf. n. darkling: in darkness 14 varying: ever changing 29 imperious show: imperial triumph 31 brooch'd: adorned 34 still conclusion: calm inference 40 heaviness: play on double meaning: 'weight' and 'sorrow' SD They heave . . . Cleopatra: Cf. n. 45 when: Cf. n. 46 Quicken: revive 52 huswife: hussy, strumpet 53 Provok'd: incited

Antony. Gentle, hear me:
None about Caesar trust, but Proculeius.
Cleopatra. My resolution and my hands I'll trust,
None about Caesar.
Antony. The miserable change now at my end
Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts
In feeding them with those my former fortunes
Wherein I liv'd, the greatest prince o' th' world,
The noblest: and do now not basely die,
Not cowardly put off my helmet to
My countryman. A Roman by a Roman
Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going,
I can no more.
Cleopatra. Noblest of men, woo't die?
Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide
In this dull world, which in thy absence is
No better than a sty? O, see, my women, [Antony dies.]
The crown o' th' earth doth melt. My lord!
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fall'n: young boys and girls
Are level now with men: the odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon. [Swoons.]
Charmian. O, quietness, lady!
Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.
Charmian. Lady!
Iras. Madam!
Charmian. O madam, madam, madam!
Iras. Royal Egypt! Empress!
Charmian. Peace, peace, Iras!
Cleopatra. No more, but in a woman, and commanded
By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest chares. It were for me
To throw my scepter at the injurious gods,
To tell them that this world did equal theirs
Till they had stol'n our jewel. All's but naught;
Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad: then is it sin
To rush into the secret house of death
Ere death dare come to us? How do you, women?
What, what, good cheer? Why, how now, Charmian?
My noble girls! Ah, women, women! look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out. Good sirs, take heart:
We'll bury him, and then, what's brave, what's noble,
Let's do't after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come, away.
This case of that huge spirit now is cold.
Ah, women, women! Come; we have no friend
But resolution, and the briefest end.
Exeunt, bearing off Antony's body.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Maecenas, [Gallus, Proculeius,] with his Council of War.

Caesar. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;
Being so frustrate, tell him
He mocks the pauses that he makes.
Dolabella. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.]

Enter Dercetas, with the sword of Antony.

Caesar. Wherefore is that? And what art thou that dar'st
Appear thus to us?
Dercetas. I am call'd Dercetas,
Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy
Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up and spoke
He was my master, and I wore my life
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.
Caesar. What is't thou sayst?
Dercetas. I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead.
Caesar. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack. The round world
Should have shook lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony
Is not a single doom; in the name lay
A moity of the world.
Dercetas. He is dead, Caesar;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand
Which writ his honor in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart. This is his sword;
I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.
Caesar. Look you sad, friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.
Agrippa. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.
Maecenas. His taints and honors wag'd equal with him.
Agrippa. A rarer spirit never
Did steer humanity: but you, gods, will give us
Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touch'd.
Maecenas. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.
Caesar. O Antony!
I have follow'd thee to this; but we do launch
Diseases in our bodies. I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine: we could not stall together
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle, that our stars,
Unreconciliable, should divide our equalness to this.
Hear me, good friends—

Enter an Egyptian.

61–68 The miserable ... vanquish'd; Cf. n. 70 woo't: wilt thou 76 pole: garlanded Maypole, central point of sports; cf. n. 77 odds: difference 78 remarkable: noteworthy, distinguished 87 in: even; Cf. n. 89 chares: chores 93 sottish: foolish 99 lamp: source of our light sirs: addressed to the women 100 brave: fine 101 do't: read 'do it' SD Enter Caesar: begins V.1; instead of Maecenas F prints Menas 2 frustrate: baffled 3 He mocks ... makes: he makes his own delay ridiculous 19 civil streets: streets of cities 22 moity: moiety, half 25 self: selfsame 34, 38 Agrippa; Cf. n. 36 persisted: persistently pursued 37 wag'd equal: were evenly matched 44 launch: lance 47 stall: dwell 50 competitor: partner 51 top of all design: loftiest enterprise

But I will tell you at some meeter season:
The business of this man looks out of him;
We'll hear him what he says. Whence are you?
Egyptian. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,
Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To th' way she's forc'd to.
Caesar. Bid her have good heart;
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honorable and how kindly we
Determine for her; for Caesar cannot live
To be ungentle.
Egyptian. So the gods preserve thee! Exit.
Caesar. Come hither, Proculeius. Go and say
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require,
Lest in her greatness by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us. For her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph. Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.
Proculeius. Caesar, I shall. Exit Proculeius.
Caesar. Gallus, go you along. [Exit Gallus.]
Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculeius?
All. Dolabella!
Caesar. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employ'd: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings. Go with me, and see
What I can show in this. Exeunt.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.

Cleopatra. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Caesar:
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave,
A minister of her will: and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change,
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dung,
The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter Proculeius.

Proculeius. Caesar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.
Cleopatra. What's thy name?
Proculeius. My name is Proculeius.
Cleopatra. Antony
Did tell me of you, bade me trust you, but
I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.
Proculeius. Be of good cheer;
Y'are fall'n into a princely hand, fear nothing.
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependency, and you shall find
A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.
Cleopatra. Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him i' th' face.
Proculeius. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that caus'd it.

[Roman soldiers enter behind Cleopatra.]

You see how easily he may be surpris'd.
Guard her till Caesar come.
Iras. Royal queen!
Charmian. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen.
Cleopatra. Quick, quick, good hands. [Draws a dagger.]
Proculeius. Hold, worthy lady, hold!
[Seizes and disarms her.]
Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this
Reliev'd, but not betray'd.
Cleopatra. What of death, too, that rids our dogs of languish?
Proculeius. Cleopatra, do not abuse my master's bounty by
Th' undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.
Cleopatra. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!
Proculeius. O, temperance, lady.
Cleopatra. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;
If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court,
Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up
And show me to the shouting varletry
Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave unto me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark nak'd, and let the water flies
Blow me into abhorring! rather make

57 meeter: more fitting 58 looks out of him: shows itself in his eyes 63 frame: adapt 68 live: F leaue 73 passion: passionate grief 76 eternal: eternally recorded (in history) 83 All: i.e. Agrippa and Maecenas 87 hardly: unwillingly 89 writings: dispatches (to Antony); cf. n. SD Enter Cleopatra: begins V.2 4 minister: agent 6 bolts up: fetters 7 never . . . dung: no longer tastes the fruits of this vile earth

26 Make your . . . freely: Cf. n. reference: appeal 29 dependency: submission 30 will pray . . . kindness: Cf. n. SD Roman . . . Cleopatra: Cf. n. 40, 41 You see . . . come: Cf. n. 45 worthy: noble 50 languish: sufferings 52 undoing: destruction 58 temperance: moderation 63 pinion'd: with wings clipped 64 chastis'd: stressed ⏑ — — 66 varletry: rabble; F Varlotarie

My country's high pyramides my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!
Proculeius. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dolabella. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee; as for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.
Proculeius. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.
[To Cleopatra.] To Caesar I will speak what you shall please,
If you'll employ me to him.
Cleopatra. Say, I would die. Exit Proculeius.
Dolabella. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?
Cleopatra. I cannot tell.
Dolabella. Assuredly you know me.
Cleopatra. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.
You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams;
Is't not your trick?
Dolabella. I understand not, madam.
Cleopatra. I dreamt there was an Emperor Antony:
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man.
Dolabella. If it might please ye—
Cleopatra. His face was as the heavens, and therein stuck
A sun and moon, which kept their course and lighted
The little O, th' earth.
Dolabella. Most sovereign creature—
Cleopatra. His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd arm
Crested the world: his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't; an autumn it was
That grew the more by reaping: his delights
Were dolphinlike, they show'd his back above
The element they liv'd in: in his livery
Walk'd crowns and crownets; realms and islands were
As plates dropp'd from his pocket.
Dolabella. Cleopatra—
Cleopatra. Think you there was or might be such a man
As this I dreamt of?
Dolabella. Gentle madam, no.
Cleopatra. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
But if there be or ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants stuff
To vie strange forms with fancy, yet to imagine
An Antony were nature's piece 'gainst fancy,
Condemning shadows quite.
Dolabella. Hear me, good madam.
Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it
As answering to the weight: would I might never O'retake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
My very heart at root.
Cleopatra. I thank you, sir.
Know you what Caesar means to do with me?
Dolabella. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.
Cleopatra. Nay, pray you, sir—
Dolabella. Though he be honorable—
Cleopatra. He'll lead me then in triumph?
Dolabella. Madam, he will; I know't.

Flourish. Enter Proculeius, Caesar, Gallus, Maecenas, and others of his train.

All. Make way there! Caesar!
Caesar. Which is the Queen of Egypt?
Dolabella. It is the emperor, madam. Cleopatra kneels.
Caesar. Arise, you shall not kneel.
I pray you, rise, rise, Egypt.
Cleopatra. Sir, the gods will have it thus,
My master and my lord I must obey.
Caesar. Take to you no hard thoughts;
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.
Cleopatra. Sole sir o' th' world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear, but do confess I have
Been laden with like frailties which before
Have often sham'd our sex.
Caesar. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:
If you apply yourself to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall find
A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking
Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.
Cleopatra. And may through all the world: 'tis yours, and we,
Your scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall
Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.
Caesar. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.
Cleopatra. [Giving a scroll.] This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels.
I am possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued,
Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?
Seleucus. Here, Madam.
Cleopatra. This is my treasurer; let him speak, my lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.
Seleucus. Madam, I had rather seel my lips
Than to my peril speak that which is not.
Cleopatra. What have I kept back?
Seleucus. Enough to purchase what you have made known.
Caesar. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.
Cleopatra. See, Caesar! O, behold

98 O, th' earth: F o' th' earth 101 Crested: surmounted was propertied: as harmonious 103 quail: terrify orb: earth 105 an autumn: F an Anthony it was: read 'twas' 106–108 his delights ... liv'd in; Cf. n. 109 crownets: coronets 110 plates: silver coins 116 or ever: F nor euer 118 To vie ... fancy: to compete with imagination in the creation of wonderful forms 118–120 yet ... quite; Cf. n.

146 project: set forth; stressed — — 151 enforce: stress (them) 156 bereave: deprive 162 scutcheons: armorial bearings, signs of victory 165 brief: list 173 seel: sew up; see III.11.137; cf. n.

How pomp is follow'd; mine will now be yours,
And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild. O slave, of no more trust
Than love that's hir'd. What! goest thou back? thou shalt
Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes
Though they had wings: slave, soulless villain, dog!
O rarely base!
Caesar. Good queen, let us entreat you.
Cleopatra. O Caesar! what a wounding shame is this,
That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honor of thy lordliness
To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy. Say, good Caesar,
That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,
Immoment toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern friends withal; and say,
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred? The gods! it smites me
Beneath the fall I have. [To Seleucus.] Prithee, go hence,
Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through th' ashes of my chance. Wert thou a man,
Thou wouldst have mercy on me.
Caesar. Forbear, Seleucus.
Cleopatra. Be it known that we, the greatest, are misthought
For things that others do; and, when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.
Caesar. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,
Put we i' th' roll of conquest: still be't yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure, and believe
Caesar's no merchant to make prize with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd,
Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen,
For we intend so to dispose you as
Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:
Our care and pity is so much upon you
That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.
Cleopatra. My master, and my lord!
Caesar. Not so. Adieu.
Flourish. Exeunt Caesar and his train.
Cleopatra. He words me, girls, he words me,
That I should not be noble to myself;
But, hark thee, Charmian. [Whispers.]
Iras. Finish, good lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.
Cleopatra. Hie thee again:
I have spoke already, and it is provided;
Go, put it to the haste.
Charmian. Madam, I will.

Enter Dolabella.

Dolabella. Where is the queen?
Charmian. Behold, sir. [Exit.]
Cleopatra. Dolabella!
Dolabella. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,
Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this: Caesar through Syria
Intends his journey; and within three days
You with your children will he send before.
Make your best use of this. I have perform'd
Your pleasure and my promise.
Cleopatra. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor.
Dolabella. I your servant.
Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar.
Cleopatra. Farewell, and thanks. Exit [Dolabella].
Now, Iras, what think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shall be shown
In Rome, as well as I; mechanic slaves
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers shall
Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths,
Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded
And forc'd to drink their vapor.
Iras. The gods forbid!
Cleopatra. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras. Saucy lictors
Will catch at us, like strumpets, and scald rimers
Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us and present
Our Alexandrian revels. Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness
I' th' posture of a whore.
Iras. O, the good gods!
Cleopatra. Nay, that's certain.
Iras. I'll never see't! for I am sure my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.
Cleopatra. Why, that's the way to fool their preparation,
And to conquer their most absurd intents.

Enter Charmian.

Now, Charmian.
Show me, my women, like a queen: go fetch
My best attires. I am again for Cydnus
To meet Mark Antony. Sirrah Iras, go.
Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed,
And when thou hast done this chare I'll give thee leave
To play till doomsday. Bring our crown and all.
[Exit Iras.] A noise within.
Wherefore's this noise?

Enter a Guardsman.

Guardsman. Here is a rural fellow
That will not be denied your highness' presence:
He brings you figs.
Cleopatra. Let him come in. Exit Guardsman.
What poor an instrument
May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing

180 How ... follow'd: how unfaithful are the servants of the great 181 shift estates: exchange places 183 Even: read 'e'en' 193 Parcel the sum: add to the sum total 195 lady: feminine 196 Immoment: valueless dignity: value 197 modern: ordinary 199 Livia: Octavius Caesar's wife 200 unfolded: betrayed 201 With: by 204 chance: fortune 208 misthought: misjudged 210 merits in our name: faults committed in our name 215 Bestow: make use of 216 make prize: bargain 225 words me: tries to delude me with words

250 mechanic: engaged in manual labor 257 scald: scurvy 258 Ballad: F Ballads quick: quick-witted 262 Some ... greatness; Cf. n. 263 posture: behavior 266 my: F mine 275 thou hast: read 'thou'st' chare: chore 284 plac'd: fixed

Of woman in me; now from head to foot
I am marble-constant: now the fleeting moon
No planet is of mine.

Enter Guardsman and Clown [bringing in a basket].

Guardsman. This is the man.
Cleopatra. Avoid, and leave him. Exit Guardsman.
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?
Clown. Truly, I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.
Cleopatra. Remember'st thou any that have died on't?
Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday—a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty—how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt. Truly, she makes a very good report o' th' worm; but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do: but this is most falliable, the worm's an odd worm.
Cleopatra. Get thee hence; farewell.
Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.
[Sets down the basket.]
Cleopatra. Farewell.
Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.
Cleopatra. Ay, ay; farewell.
Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people: for indeed there is no goodness in the worm.
Cleopatra. Take thou no care, it shall be heeded.
Clown. Very good: give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.
Cleopatra. Will it eat me?
Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five.
Cleopatra. Well, get thee gone, farewell.
Clown. Yes, forsooth: I wish you joy o' th' worm.
Exit.

[Enter Iras, with a robe, crown, etc.]

Cleopatra. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have Immortal longings in me. Now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip.
Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Methinks I hear
Antony call: I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act. I hear him mock
The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come:
Now to that name my courage prove my title!
I am fire and air; my other elements
I give to baser life. So, have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.

Farewell, kind Charmian; Iras, long farewell.
[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies.]
Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still?
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.
Charmian. Dissolve, thick cloud and rain, that I may say
The gods themselves do weep.
Cleopatra. This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss
Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch,
With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate
Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and dispatch. O, couldst thou speak,
That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass
Unpolicied.
Charmian. O eastern star!
Cleopatra. Peace, peace!
Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?
Charmian. O, break! O, break!
Cleopatra. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle—
O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too.
[Applying another asp to her arm.]
What should I stay— Dies.
Charmian. In this vile world? So, fare thee well.
Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies
A lass unparallel'd. Downy windows, close,
And golden Phoebus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play—

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1. Guard. Where is the queen?
Charmian. Speak softly, wake her not.
1. Guard. Caesar hath sent—
Charmian. Too slow a messenger.
[Applies an asp.]
O, come apace, dispatch; I partly feel thee.
1. Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Caesar's beguil'd.
2. Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Caesar; call him.
1. Guard. What work is here! Charmian, is this well done?
Charmian. It is well done, and fitting for a princess
Descended of so many royal kings.
Ah, soldier. Charmian dies.

Enter Dolabella.

Dolabella. How goes it here?
2. Guard. All dead.
Dolabella. Caesar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: thyself art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

Enter Caesar and all his train marching.

SD Clown: rustic 289 Avoid: withdraw 290 worm: serpent 293, 294 immortal: blunder for 'mortal' 297 honest: respectable 302 falliable: he means 'infallible' 313 heeded: guarded 327 Yare: quick 330, 331 The luck . . . wrath; Cf. n. 333, 334 my other . . . life; Cf. n. 334 baser life: human, mortal life

337 aspic: asp 348 mortal: deadly 349 intrinsicate: intricate 353 Unpolicied: unskilled 362 vile: F wilde 366 awry: F away SD rushing in: F rustling in, and Dolabella 382 Touch their effects: find fulfillment

All. A way there!—a way for Caesar!
Dolabella. O, sir, you are too sure an augurer:
That you did fear is done.
Caesar. Bravest at the last,
She level'd at our purposes, and being royal
Took her own way. The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.
Dolabella. Who was last with them?
1. Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs:
This was his basket.
Caesar. Poison'd then.
1. Guard. O Caesar!
This Charmian liv'd but now; she stood, and spake:
I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood,
And on the sudden dropp'd.
Caesar. O noble weakness!
If they had swallow'd poison 'twould appear
By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace.
Dolabella. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood, and something blown;
The like is on her arm.
1. Guard. This is an aspic's trail,
And these fig leaves have slime upon them, such
As th' aspic leaves upon the caves of Nile.
Caesar. Most probable
That so she died: for her physician tells me
She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed,
And bear her women from the monument.
She shall be buried by her Antony.
No grave upon the earth shall clip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is
No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,
In solemn show, attend this funeral,
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity. Exeunt omnes.

FINIS

387 That: what 389 level'd: aimed, guessed 398 trimming up: straightening toil: net, snare grace: beauty 407 vent: discharge blown: swollen

413–415 for her physician . . . die; Cf. n. 414 conclusions: experiments 418 clip: embrace

Notes

I.i.10. gypsy's. The word carries a double meaning here: Cleopatra is called an Egyptian (gypsies were believed to have come from Egypt) and also a hussy.

I.i.13. triple pillar. One of the triumvirs, on whom, as on pillars, the world rested.

I.i.16. beggary. Like other polysyllabic words (e.g. infinite, I.2.8; amorous, II.2.231; etc.), it syncopates the medial unstressed syllable when scansion so requires; such words should therefore be read 'begg'ry,' 'inf'nite,' etc. See Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation (New Haven, Yale University Press, 1953), pp. 25 ff., 283 ff.

I.i.24. scarce-bearded. Octavius was then twenty-three. Cf. 'the young man' (III.9.68), 'the boy Cæsar' (III.11.21).

I.i.58. all alone . . . people. 'And sometime also, when he would goe vp and downe the citie disguised like a slaue in the night, & would peere into poore mens windowes & their shops, and scold and brawle with them within the house: Cleopatra would be also in a chamber maides array, & amble vp and downe the streets with him, so that oftentimes Antonius bare away both mockes & blowes.' North's Plutarch (1579), p. 983.

I.ii.SD. Enter Enobarbus. The Folio entry includes Lamprius, Rannius, and Lucillius, all mute characters appearing nowhere else in the play. Lamprius was probably suggested to Shakespeare by Lampryas, Plutarch's grandfather, who related to him the anecdote of Antony's feasts. North, p. 982.

I.ii.4. change . . . garlands. 'Take horns (symbol of wife's unfaithfulness) in exchange for garlands (those of marriage).' Many editors read charge, 'to load,' in which case the meaning might be: 'to load his horns with garlands, to wear garlands on his horns.'

I.ii.23. heat . . . drinking. The liver being the seat of the passion of love, Charmian prefers to heat her liver with wine rather than with unrequited love.

I.ii.27. Herod of Jewry. Herod of Judea, who was represented as a fierce and blustering tyrant in the old miracle plays. Charmian prays for a son who would command such a tyrant's homage.

I.ii.31. I . . . figs. A difficult line. It may be a proverbial expression, with figs carrying one of several meanings, for which see the Arden Shakespeare, ed. M. R. Ridley (London, Methuen and Co., 1954), p. 12. Or it may be a phallic allusion, as J. D. Wilson suggests in the Cambridge Shakespeare (Cambridge, Cambridge University Press, 1950), p. 146.

I.ii.59–64. come . . . thee. The compositor mistook Alexas for a speech prefix. See Introduction, 2.

I.ii.60. Isis. Originally the Egyptian goddess of earth and fertility.

I.ii.97. Labienus. Quintus Labienus, having joined Brutus and Cassius in 44 B.C., was by them dispatched to seek aid from Orodes, King of Parthia. At this point he is commanding the Parthian army jointly with Orodes' son Pacorus.

I.ii.99–103. Extended . . . lord. Thus in F. Editors normalize passage into strict pentameter, so that the three lines end with Euphrates, Syria, and lord.

I.ii.100. Lydia. Ancient country in western part of Asia Minor.

I.ii.110, 111. Our ills . . . earing. 'Having our faults told us is as salutary to us as ploughing is to weed-grown fields.' For a highly suggestive analysis of the passage see Norman H. Pearson's essay 'Antony and Cleopatra' in Shakespeare: Of an Age and for All Time, The Yale Shakespeare Festival Lectures, ed. Charles T. Prouty, (Hamden, Conn., The Shoe String Press, 1954), pp. 138 ff.

I.ii.129. By . . . low'ring. Carried to a progressively lower place in our estimation by the turn of the wheel of circumstance. Cf. King Lear, V.3.206.

I.ii.184. Sextus Pompeius. Younger son of Pompey the Great. He was proscribed by the triumvirs, but taking advantage of the quarrels between Octavius and Antony he was able to seize Sicily and command the sea.

I.ii.194. courser's hair. Horse hairs laid in stagnant water were believed to come to life in the shape of worms or small serpents.

I.iii.64, 65. grown . . . change. Ill through inactivity (peace), it would restore itself to health through blood-letting (war). 'Purge' often carries the meaning of letting blood, as in 2 Henry IV, IV.1.68.

I.iii.76. sacred vials. Bottles of tears allegedly placed in the urn of loved ones. Cf. The Two Noble Kinsmen, I.5.5.

I.iii.81, 82. By the fire . . . slime. 'By the sun, which wakes to life Nile's mud' (causing spontaneous generation). Cf. II.7.25, 26.

I.iii.102, 103. How . . . chafe. How becomingly this descendant of Hercules conducts himself in his rage; how he acts the part of another Hercules Furens.

I.iii.109, 110. O . . . forgotten. My forgetfulness is like Antony, who is the epitome of utter forgetfulness, and I have forgotten all even as I am by all forgotten.

I.iv.6. queen of Ptolemy. Cleopatra, according to Egyptian custom, had married her brother Ptolemy, whom she is said to have poisoned.

I.iv.7–12. More . . . goodness. Thus in F. Editors rearrange passage into regular pentameter, making the lines end with Or, there, faults, and are.

I.iv.24. foils. Some editors print soils, an unnecessary emendation since 'soils' or 'disgraces' is precisely the meaning of foils in the context. Cf. F. H. Stratman, Middle English Dictionary; The Tempest, III.1.55.

I.iv.58, 59. strikes . . . resisted. Is more powerful than his actual warfare if it were opposed.

I.iv.61–76. When . . . lank's not. 'And therefore it was a wonderfull example to the souldiers, to see Antonius that was brought vp in all finenes and superfluitie, so easily to drinke puddle water, and eate wild frutes and rootes: and moreouer it is reported, that euen as they passed the Alpes, they did eate the barcks of trees, and such beasts, as neuer man tasted of their flesh before.' North, pp. 977, 978.

I.v.27. demi-Atlas. Antony and Caesar each carry half the globe on their shoulders; Lepidus does not count.

I.v.35. great Pompey. Not Pompey the Great but his son Cneius Pompey.

I.v.41. that great med'cine. The elixir which conferred immortality and changed base metals into gold: here meaning Antony.

II.i.3–6. Know . . . for. F prints passage as prose. See Introduction, 2.

II.i.32. Lethe'd. Oblivious; as if, like the dead crossing into Hades, he had drunk Lethe's water, which caused complete and utter forgetfulness.

II.i.49. His brother. 'Nowe Antonius delighting in these fond and childish pastimes, verie ill newes were brought him from two places. The first from Rome, that his brother Lucius, and Fuluia his wife, fell out first betwene them selues, and afterwards fell to open warre with Caesar . . .' North, p. 983.

II.i.59, 60. It only . . . upon. Only it is a matter of life and death for us.

II.ii.9. would not shave't. Plucking a man's beard was an invitation to quarrel. Cf. Hamlet, II.2.600; King Lear, III.7.86, 87.

II.ii.19. Hark. The F spelling Hearke may stand for Hark or Harkee, i.e. 'Hark ye.'

II.ii.65. you have to. Rowe and subsequent editors emend 'you have not to,' arguing that Antony would not admit that Caesar had a more serious grievance to 'patch a quarrel' with. The insertion of not may obviate Antony's alleged admission, but it does not clarify the meaning of ll. 64–66. The F lines mean: 'If you insist on starting (patching) a quarrel, you cannot do so with this particular complaint inasmuch as you have more serious complaints (matter whole) to do it with.'

II.ii.103, 104. The honor . . . it. The keeping of an oath is a sacred point of honor, which I am now accused of violating.

II.ii.111–113. But . . . without it. As my power shall not cause me to overlook my duty, neither shall my honesty (which dictates apology) sacrifice my dignity.

II.ii.113, 114. Fulvia . . . here. 'By them he was informed, that his wife Fuluia was the only cause of this warre: who being of a peeuish, crooked, and troublesome nature, had purposely raised this vprore in Italie, in hope thereby to withdraw him from Cleopatra.' North, pp. 983–984.

II.ii.140. by the mother's side. Octavia was in fact the daughter of both Caesar's parents, though Plutarch calls her his sister 'not by one mother, for she came of Ancharia, & Caesar him self afterwards of Accia.' North, p. 984.

II.ii.157, 158. Truths . . . truths. True reports of trouble would be dismissed as mere gossip, whereas now every rumor is accepted as the truth.

II.ii.206. Half . . . Caesar. Maecenas and Agrippa were equally loved by Octavius.

II.ii.213. Eight wild boars. Lampryas, Plutarch's grandfather, had heard from one Philotas, a physician, an eye-witness account of the 'wonderfull sumptuous charge and preparation of one only supper. When he was in the kitchen, and saw a world of diuersities of meates, and amongst others, eight wilde boares rosted whole: he began to wonder at it, and sayd, sure you haue a great number of ghests to supper. The cooke fell a laughing, and answered him, no (quoth he) not many ghestes, nor aboue twelue in all.' North, p. 982.

II.ii.224–253. I will . . . nature. A phonetic transcription of this famous description as it was spoken in Shakespeare's day is given in Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, p. 368.

II.ii.239. what they undid did. They cooled the cheeks even as they made them glow with apparent warmth.

II.ii.243. made . . . adornings. 'Their beautiful forms bending gracefully toward her seemed like adornments to her person.' Some editors read adorings and interpret: 'They did her observance in the posture of adoration as if she had been Venus.'

II.ii.274. infinite variety. The phrase occurs in Florio's Montaigne, in a passage contrasting the weaknesses of present 'indiscreet writers' with the excellence of Plutarch. The Essays of Montaigne (New York, The Modern Library, 1933), p. 108.

II.iii.16. I see . . . tongue. I have intuitive knowledge of it but cannot express it.

II.iii.22–25. Thy demon . . . o'repower'd. 'With Antonius there was a soothsayer or astronomer of Aegypt . . . [who] told Antonius plainly, that his fortune (which of it selfe was excellent good, and very great) was altogether bleamished, and obscured by Caesars fortune: and therefore he counselled him vtterly to leaue his company, and to get him as farre from him as he could. For thy Demon said he, (that is to say, the good angell and spirit that kepeth thee) is affraied of his: and being coragious & high when he is alone, becometh fearefull and timerous when he commeth neere vnto the other.' North, p. 985.

II.iii.29–34. If . . . 'tis noble. 'But in all other maner of sportes and exercises, wherein they passed the time away the one with the other: Antonius was euer inferior vnto Caesar, and alway lost, which grieued him much.' North, p. 985.

II.iii.41. His cocks. 'Oftentimes when they were disposed to see cockefight, or quailes that were taught to fight one with an other: Caesars cockes or quailes did euer ouercome.' North, p. 985.

II.iii.42. When . . . nought. When the odds are everything to nothing in my favor.

II.v.18–21. 'Twas . . . drew up. 'Antonius then threw in his line and Cleopatra straight commaunded one of her men to diue vnder water before Antonius men, and to put some old salte fish vpon his baite, like vnto those that are brought out of the contrie of Pont.' North, p. 983.

II.v.27. Philippan. The sword with which Antony had triumphed over Brutus and Cassius at Philippi in 42 B.C.

II.v.32–35. Antonio's . . . here. Thus in F. Some editors rearrange lines into regular pentameters, the three resulting lines ending with villain, free, here.

II.v.121. Narcissus. A beautiful youth in mythology who fell in love with his own face when he saw its reflection in the water.

II.v.125. Take . . . you. Do not be angry with me because I do not wish to offend you.

II.v.129. That . . . sure of. Who are not what you are certain Antony is, a deceiver and a knave.

II.vi.29. o'recount. Antony means 'outnumber,' whereas in the following line Pompey means 'cheat.'

II.vi.30–33. At land . . . mayst. 'Afterwards when Pompeys house was put to open sale, Antonius bought it: but when they asked him money for it, he made it very straung, and was offended with them, and writeth him selfe that he would not goe with Caesar into the warres of Africk, bicause he was not well recompenced for the seruice he had done him before.' North, p. 975.

II.vi.40. to . . . fortune. If you risk war in an attempt to gain more than we offer you.

II.vi.54, 55. Your . . . friendly. 'Furthermore, Sextus Pompeius had delt verie frendly with Antonius, for he had curteously receiued his mother, when she fled out of Italie with Fuluia.' North, p. 984.

II.vi.67. counts. Marks or lines, like those on tally sticks, by which Fortune has recorded her dealings with him.

II.vii.13–15. To be call'd . . . cheeks. Being in a position of pre-eminence but unable to dominate or exert influence is like having holes in the place of eyes, which would give a hideous appearance to the cheeks.

II.vii.32. pyramises. Lepidus' own unsteady plural. Although pyramis (Greek form) and even pyrame (taking pyramis or pyrames as a plural) were common, the plural was pyramides, the form Cleopatra uses below, V.2.71.

II.vii.101, 102. would . . . wheels. I wish the whole world were drunk so that it might run on wheels, that is, smoothly.

II.vii.103. reels. A contraction of revels not, as some editors believe, 'the world's reeling.' Cf. Hamlet, I.4.10, where reels is again a noun, that is, a contraction of revels not a verb. For further comment see Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, p. 189.

II.vii.143. I'll try . . . shore. I'll continue the drinking match with you on the shore.

II.vii.147–151. Take heed . . . out. F prints these lines as a single speech by Enobarbus.

III.i.1. darting Parthia. The Parthian cavalry was noted for its arrows, and one of its favorite maneuvers was to send a shower of them as it retreated.

III.i.4–5. Thy Pacorus . . . Crassus. 'In the mean time, Ventidius once againe ouercame Pacorus, (Orodes sonne King of Parthia) in a battell fought in the contrie of Cyrrestica, he being come againe with a great armie to inuade Syria: at which battell was slaine a great number of the Parthians, & among them Pacorus, the kings owne sonne slaine. This noble exployt as famous as euer any was, was a full reuenge to the Romanes, of the shame and losse they had receiued before by the death of Marcus Crassus.' North, p. 985.

III.i.6. Roman. Some editors give this and subsequent speeches the speech heading Silius, who is addressed by name in l. 13.

III.i.30–32. Thou hast . . . distinction. You possess discretion, without which a man's generalship confers no great distinction on him.

III.ii.6. green-sickness. Bilious hue peculiar to lovesick maidens. Lepidus is ironically reported as lovesick for Caesar and Antony.

III.ii.7. 'Tis 'It' is here used contemptuously to refer to Lepidus.

III.ii.13. Arabian bird. The unique phoenix, believed by the ancients to fly from Arabia to the temple of Helios in Egypt once every five hundred years in order to bury there its father's body.

III.ii.29, 30. as my . . . approof. Such as I would pledge my utmost you will prove.

III.ii.46. elements. Perhaps more than merely a wish for favorable weather. Caesar wishes that the four elements believed to constitute the whole world may be propitious to her.

III.ii.55–57. the swan's-down . . . inclines. Octavia's emotions, that is, her love of Antony and her devotion to Octavius, are as delicately balanced as a swan's-down feather on the water at the height of the flood and just before the ebb begins.

III.ii.59, 60. He has . . . horse. A horse with a dark face; one with no white on it. M. R. Ridley (Arden Shakespeare) quotes The Two Noble Kinsmen, V.4.63, to show that the absence of a white mark indicated ill temper.

III.iii.7, 8. That . . . have. '. . . also he tooke from other kings their lawfull realmes: (as from Antigonus King of the Iewes, whom he openly beheaded, where neuer King before had suffred like death).' North, p. 986. Another reference may be to the beheading of Cicero by Antony's men. Antony placed Cicero's head over the pulpit for orations, which was 'a fearfull and horrible sight vnto the Romanes, who thought they saw not Ciceroes face, but an image of Antonius life and disposicion.' North, p. 937.

III.iii.26. look'st. For such F forms as look'st (look'dst) see Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, p. 303.

III.iii.43. long or round. A long face denoted prudence and wariness; a round one foolishness, indiscretion, instability.

III.iii.48. Brown. Brown was not associated with beauty. 'Why, i' faith, methinks she's too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise and too little for a great praise.' Much Ado about Nothing, I.1.144–146.

III.iii.49. As low . . . it. A high forehead was a mark of beauty. Mercutio speaks of Rosaline's 'high forehead and her scarlet lip.' Romeo and Juliet, II.1.20.

III.iv.4. made . . . read it. Antony is suggesting that Octavius made promises as Julius Caesar had done in his own will. Here Shakespeare departs from Plutarch, who records that Octavius, taking possession of Antony's will, read and attacked it in public. Cf. North, p. 997.

III.v.17. that his officer. Titius, Antony's lieutenant, who is reported to have slain Pompey.

III.vi.6. my father's son. Caesarion, son of Julius Caesar and Cleopatra. Octavius was adopted as a son by Julius Caesar in his will.

III.vi.10. Lydia. So in North. Plutarch gives Libya, whose King Bocchus appears in l. 76 below.

III.vi.12-19. I' th' common . . . so. 'For he assembled all the people in the show place, where younge men doe exercise them selues, and there vpon a high tribunall siluered, he set two chayres of gold, the one for him selfe, and the other for Cleopatra, and lower chaires for his children: then he openly published before the assembly, that first of all he did establish Cleopatra Queene or Aegypt, of Cyprvs, of Lydia, and of the lower Syria, and at that time also, Caesarion king of the same Realmes. . . . Now for Cleopatra, she did not onely weare at that time (but at all other times els when she came abroad) the apparell of the goddesse Isis, and so gaue audience vnto all her subiects, as a new Isis.' North, p. 996.

III.vi.55, 56. The ostentation . . . unlov'd. The display of our (Caesar's) love, which (love), if not exhibited, is often thought to be unfelt.

III.vi.66. Being an abstract . . . him. Variously interpreted. Perhaps the most satisfactory explanation is: 'Your return being a short-cut (abstract) between him and his lust, that is the easiest way to satisfy his desires.' Some editors read obstruct (as substantive) and taking it to refer to Octavia interpret: 'You being an obstruction to the satisfaction of his lust.'

III.vi.89. wrong led. Some editors emend F reading to wrong'd on the doubtful theory that the compositor misread Shakespeare's 'wronged,' inserted a space and added an l. But Shakespeare very probably would have written 'wrongd,' which makes the compositor's misreading difficult if not impossible.

III.vi.97. makes his. Some editors read make them or make their. But makes (plural) is probably what Shakespeare wrote, and its singular form may be responsible for his.

III.vii.6. Is't not denounc'd. Some editors retain F reading and are thereby forced to give obscure sense.

III.vii.16–18. 'tis said . . . war. 'And Caesar sayde furthermore, that Antonius was not Maister of him selfe, but that Cleopatra had brought him beside him selfe, by her charmes and amorous poysons: and that they that should make warre with them, should be Mardian the Euenuke, Photinus, and Iras, a Woman of Cleopatraes bedchamber, that friseled her heare, and dressed her head, and Charmion, the which were those that ruled all the affaires of Antonius Empire.' North, p. 998.

III.vii.75–80. O noble emperor . . . foot. 'Now, as he was setting his men in order of battel, there was a Captaine, & a valliant man, that had serued Antonius in many battels & conflicts, & had all his body hacked & cut: who as Antonius passed by him, cryed vnto him, & sayd: O, noble Emperor, how commeth it to passe that you trust to these vile brittle shippes? what, doe you mistrust these woundes of myne, and this sword? let the Aegyptians & Phaenicians fight by sea, and set vs on the maine land, where we vse to conquer, or to be slayne on our feete.' North, p. 1000.

III.vii.83, 84. his whole action . . . on't. His plan of action does not make use of his military power with greatest advantage.

III.vii.100. throws forth. Most editors read throes forth (an extremely rare verb) and interpret 'gives painful birth to,' with a reference to The Tempest, II.1. 248, 249, where the Folio reads throwes for throes:

The setting of thine eye and cheek proclaim
A matter from thee, and a birth indeed
Which throes thee much to yield.

But here the word means 'causes thee pain, the pain of a difficult birth,' a sense inadmissible in the context of our passage.

III.viii.23. like the token'd pestilence. Like the plague when its (usually red) spots have appeared on a patient's skin.

III.viii.33. being loof'd. 'Having brought her boat's head toward the wind so that she could sail away'; the word is now spelled 'luff.'

III.viii.44. he has. The F reading his ha's is retained by some editors. For support of F reading see J. C. Maxwell, 'Shakespeare's Manuscript of Antony and Cleopatra,' Notes and Queries, 196, 337.

III.ix.24, 25. I have lost . . . you. Since I have lost the power and authority to order you, I entreat you (to leave me).

III.ix.37. His sword . . . dancer. Since dancers in Shakespeare's day wore a light sword or rapier as ornaments, Antony means that Caesar wore his sword for ornament only.

III.ix.38. lean . . . Cassius. Cf. 'Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look.' Julius Caesar, I.2.201.

III.ix.54–56. How . . . dishonor. How I try to remove my shame from your eyes by turning from them and looking at my past which now lies in ruins.

III.ix.79. schoolmaster. Euphronius, the tutor of Antony's children by Cleopatra.

III.x.SD. Thidias. So in Folio. Many editors print North's Thyreus (Plutarch has Thyrsus) throughout the scene.

III.x.SD. Enter Ambassador. Many editors print 'Enter Euphronius, Ambassador from Antony' and prefix his speeches accordingly.

III.x.10–12. as petty . . . sea. 'As petty (of as little importance) to his plans and purposes as is the morning dewdrop to those of the ocean.' Some editors read 'its grand sea,' while others take his to mean 'its' and interpret: 'to its (the drewdrop's) grand sea, from which it is exhaled.' Another interpretation is: 'to his (Antony's) full tide of prosperity.'

III.x.41, 42. what thou . . . moves. What you think is the meaning and purpose of his every act. What we may forecast concerning his state of mind by observing his present behavior.

III.xi.9. nick'd. Cut short, like a fool's hair, thereby placing a mark of folly upon it. Cf. 'His man with scissors nicks him like a fool,' Comedy of Errors, V.1.178. 'To nick' means also 'to get the better of,' 'to cheat,' a nick being 'a winning throw in the game of hazard.' Cf. Arden Shakespeare, p. 139.

III.xi.137. seel. A term taken from falconry and meaning to sew up a hawk's eyes by way of preparing it for the use of the hood.

III.xi.153–155. O, that . . . herd. Cf. Psalm 12:12, 13. Antony calls himself a horned cuckold surrounded by Cleopatra's lovers.

III.xi.175. orbs. The nine concentric spheres in which the seven planets, the fixed stars, and the primum mobile moved about the earth in the Ptolemaic system. Cf. Cleopatra's line, IV.11.12, 13: 'O sun! Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in.'

III.xi.178. Hipparchus. Not a loyal follower. 'This Theophilus was the father of Hipparchus, who was had in great estimation about Antonius. He was the first of all his infranchised bondmen that reuolted from him, and yelded vnto Caesar, and afterwardes went and dwelt at Corinthe." North, p. 1002.

III.xi.183. Our terrene . . . eclips'd. 'Our earthly goddess of the moon, that is, Cleopatra, has changed, darkened, portending evil.' In her final moments Cleopatra takes leave of her planet, the moon, V.2.286, 287. Mr. Leslie Hotson interprets 'terrene moon' as the Mediterranean fleet of Antony and Cleopatra which has just been defeated by Caesar's smaller but battle-tested navy. See his Shakespeare's Sonnets Dated (London, 1949), pp. 7, 8.

III.xi.231. estridge. A goshawk, not ostrich. A dove pecking an ostrich is an incongruous image, whereas a dove pecking a goshawk or falcon is more appropriate, and in fact the expression appears in Shakespeare, 3 Henry VI, I.4.40, 41:

So cowards fight when they can fly no further;
So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons.

IV.ii.10. 'Take all.' Deliberately ambiguous: 'fight desperately' and 'surrender.'

IV.iii.1–33. Brother . . . 'Tis strange. 'Furthermore, the selfe same night within a little of midnight, when all the citie was quiet, full of feare, and sorrowe, thinking what would be the issue and ende of this warre: it is said that sodainly they heard a maruelous sweete harmonie of sundrie sortes of instrumentes of musicke, with the crie of a multitude of people, as they had bene dauncing, and had song as they vse in Bacchus feastes, with mouinges and turninges after the maner of Satyres: & it seemed that this daunce went through the city vnto the gate that opened to the enemies, & that all the troupe that made this noise they heard, went out of the city at that gate. Now, such as in reason sought the depth of the interpretation of this wonder, thought that it was the god vnto whom Antonius bare singular deuotion to counterfeate and resemble him, that did forsake them.' North, pp. 1005, 1006.

IV.iii.23. 'Tis . . . Hercules. Although in Plutarch the god here forsaking Antony is Bacchus, Shakespeare substituted Hercules, the more appropriately to forecst Antony's defeat on the morrow. Cf. I.3.102, and North, p. 971: "Now it had bene a speeche of old time, that the familie of the Antonii were discended from one Anton, the sonne of Hercules, whereof the familie took name."

IV.iv.7–11. Nay . . . must be. The Folio prints the whole as a single speech by Cleopatra. See Introduction, 2.

IV.v.1, 4, 9. Soldier. The Folio prefixes these speeches Eros, but Shakespeare intended the speaker to be the soldier, who also has the speeches at ll. 14, 17. That these are all his speeches is made clear by III.7.75 ff.

IV.v.SD. Flourish. Some editors begin Scene 6 here, interrupting the continuity of action in the field.

IV.v.36–40. Alexas . . . him. 'For Alexas Laodician, who was brought into Antonius house and fauor by meanes of Timagenes, and afterwards was in greater credit with him, then any other Grecian: (for that he had alway bene one of Cleopatraes ministers to win Antonius, and to ouerthrow all his good determinations to vse his wife Octauia well) him Antonius had sent vnto Herodes King of Ivrie, hoping still to keepe him his frend, that he should not reuolt from him. But he remained there, and betrayed Antonius. For where he should haue kept Herodes from reuolting from him, he perswaded him to turne to Caesar: & trusting King Herodes, he presumed to come in Caesars presence. Howbeit Herodes did him no pleasure: for he was presently taken prisoner, and sent in chaines to his owne contrie, & there by Caesars commaundement put to death.' North, p. 1004.

IV.v.SD. Alarum. With this stage direction some editors begin Scene 7.

IV.v.73, 74. a T . . . and H. Pun on 'ache,' pronounced 'aitch' in Shakespeare's time when a noun.

IV.vi.SD. Alarum. With this stage direction some editors begin Scene 8.

IV.vii.SD. Enter a Sentry. With this stage direction some editors begin Scene 9.

IV.vii.20. dried with grief. It was believed that with each sigh the heart lost a drop of blood. Cf. Hamlet, IV.3.134, 135: 'And then this "should" is like a spendthrift sigh That hurts by easing.'

IV.viii.SD. Enter Antony. With this stage direction some editors begin Scene 10.

IV.viii.SD. Enter Caesar. With this stage direction some editors begin Scene 11.

IV.viii.SD. Enter Antony. With this stage direction some editors begin Scene 12.

IV.viii. 18–21. Swallows . . . knowledge. 'The admirall galley of Cleopatra, was called Antoniade, in the which there chaunced a maruelous ill signe. Swallowes had bred vnder the poope of her shippe, & there came others after them that draue away the first, & plucked downe their neasts.' Shakespeare simplified the augury, perhaps influenced by North's marginal note: 'An ill signe, foreshewed by swallowed breding in Cleopatraes shippe.' North, p. 999.

IV.viii. 43. my crownet, my chief end. 'My coronet, the chief reward of all my efforts.' 'Crown' was used in the sense of fulfillment, the last, final achievement.

IV.viii.54. dolts. Some editors read doits, in which case they doubtfully interpret diminitives as 'small coins.' Doit was a copper coin of small value, originally of Dutch origin. See Sir William A. Craigie, A Dictionary of the Older Scottish Tongue (London, 1937), 2, 182. Shakespeare uses the word in The Tempest, II.2.31, 32: 'When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar.'

IV.viii.61. shirt of Nessus. A poisoned shirt innocently brought to Hercules by his servant Lichas, which caused him such pain that he threw Lichas to the sky (whence he fell into the sea) and had himself burnt on a pyre on Mount Oeta. Before sending the shirt to her husband, Deianira dipped it in the blood of the Centaur Nessus, recently slain by Hercules, believing the dying Centaur's assurance that she would thereby preserve her husband's love.

IV.ix.2. Telamon. Ajax, son of Telamon, went mad when Achilles' shield was denied him and given instead to Ulysses.

IV.ix.2. boar of Thessaly. The ferocious boar sent by Artemis to ravage Caledon and slain by Meleager.

IV.ix.4. To th' monument. 'Furthermore, Cleopatra had long before made many sumptuous tombes and monumentes, as well as for excellencie of workemanshippe, as for height and greatness of building, ioyning hard to the temple of Isis. Thither she caused to be brought all the treasure & pretious things she had of the auncient kings her predecessors: as gold, siluer, emerods, pearles, ebbanie, iuorie, and sinnamon, and besides all that, a maruelous number of torches, faggots, and flaxe.' North, p. 1005.

IV.x.9. black . . . pageants. Shows that precede or announce the coming of night. Extremely elaborate and costly, pageants honored important events or persons, the best known being the annual pageant honoring the inauguration of the Lord Mayor of London.

IV.x.21–22. Packed . . . triumph. 'Stacked the cards against me and in Caesar's favor, and played falsely causing my enemy to win (triumph) and me to lose the glory I had staked.' Triumph, early form of 'trump,' enriches the metaphor by suggesting that Cleopatra betrayed Antony by playing the wrong card (false-play'd) to Caesar's trump.

IV.x.SD. Enter [Dercetas and]. Dercetas probably enters with the guard. The Folio prefixes speech ll. 132–134 Dercetus, that at l. 136 Decre., and prints Decretas at V.1.SD, and Dec. at V.1.7.

IV.xi.SD. They heave . . . Cleopatra. The physical problems involved in raising the dying Antony to the upper stage representing Cleopatra's monument may be in fact solved by a description of the same action in Samuel Daniel's 1607 version of Cleopatra. Miss Joan Rees offers the attractive theory that Daniel's description is a reminiscence of an actual production of Antony and Cleopatra. For Daniel's passage and further comments see Joan Rees, 'An Elizabethan Eyewitness of Antony and Cleopatra,' Shakespeare Survey, 6 (1953), 91–93. Cf. also Roy Walker, 'Antony and Cleopatra,' (London) Times Literary Supplement, May 29, 1953, p. 349.

IV.xi.45. when. So in F. Pope and later editors print where. The sense of the F reading is: 'Die after you have lived once more,' an interpretation supported by 'quicken with kissing.'

IV.xi.61–68. The miserable . . . vanquish'd. 'When he had dronke, he earnestly prayed her, and perswaded her, that she would seeke to saue her life, if she could possible, without reproache and dishonor: and that chiefly she should trust Proculeius aboue any man else about Caesar. And as for him selfe, that she should not lament nor sorrowe for the miserable chaunge of his fortune at the end of his dayes: but rather that she would thinke him the more fortunate, for the former triumphes & honors he had receiued, considering that while he liued he was the noblest and greatest Prince of the world, & that now he was ouercome, not cowardly, but valiantly, a Romane by an other Romane.' North, pp. 1006, 1007.

IV.xi.76. pole. Another interpretation, given by Schmidt and some editors, is 'lodestar,' a sense made acceptable by IV.10.125, above.

IV.xi.87. in. Contracted, weakly stressed form of even, which appears also as e'ne, e'ene, or ev'n. See Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, pp. 203, 204.

V.i.34, 38. Agrippa. The Folio assigns these two speeches to Dolabella, who in fact is not on the stage, having left it at l. 4. Theobald and subsequent editors assign them to Agrippa.

V.i.89. writings. 'Then he called for all his frendes, and shewed them the letters Antonius had written to him, and his aunsweres also sent him againe, during their quarrell and strife: & how fiercely and prowdly the other answered him, to all iust and reasonable matters he wrote vnto him.' North, p. 1007.

V.ii.26. Make your . . . freely. Entrust yourself and your fortunes wholly and without fear.

V.ii.30. will pray . . . kindness. Will ask for help in looking for opportunities to do kind acts.

V.ii.SD. Roman . . . Cleopatra. This incident, as well as the entire scene, takes place inside the monument, and it is now generally agreed that it was acted on the main stage. See The Arden Shakespeare, pp. 251–257; C. W. Hodges, The Globe Restored (London, Ernest Benn, 1953), pp. 59, 60.

V.ii.40, 41. You see . . . come. Although the Folio heads these lines Pro., some editors have assigned them to Gallus, who presumably leads the soldiers who surprise Cleopatra. Such a drastic emendation was called for by the necessity to eliminate the duplication of the speech heading Pro., and the choice of Gallus was dictated by the fact that in the preceding scene Caesar sends him to the monument shortly after Proculeius. The editors have been influenced also by North's account of the incident, although there Proculeius is the one who surprises Cleopatra while Gallus holds her in conversation. It is possible that Gallus does lead the soldiers who surprise Cleopatra, although there is no evidence in the Folio for his presence on the scene until the stage direction following line 133. But if he does appear on the stage he must remain mute, and the lines in question must be spoken by Proculeius, for the duplication of the speech heading was caused not by careless speech distribution but by the omission of at least a speech. And for such an assumption we have good evidence. The duplication occurs at the precise point in the text where a crucial stage direction should be forthcoming, and it is reasonable to assume that such a stage direction appeared in the poet's manuscript. For in the matter of stage directions, both as to frequency and detail, our play is almost unique. And the absence of a stage direction here suggests strongly that something else in the manuscript may have been omitted as well at this point, perhaps a speech or two. Mr. Ridley's view (Arden ed., p. 254) that Proculeius is unaware of Caesar's little plot against Cleopatra and that therefore the lines are spoken by Gallus, who is privy to it, must be rejected. Proculeius could not mistake Caesar's lines addressed to him before he leaves for Cleopatra's monument (V.1.72–76):

> give her what comforts
> The quality of her passion shall require,
> Lest in her greatness by some mortal stroke
> She do defeat us. For her life in Rome
> Would be eternal in our triumph.

On the other hand, sending Gallus seems like an afterthought, and Caesar gives him no instructions whatever.

V.ii.106–108. his delights . . . liv'd in. He kept himself above (superior to) the pleasures in which he lived just as the dolphin keeps its back above the water.

V.ii.118–120. yet . . . quite. Yet to imagine an actual Antony, to accept him as a product of Nature, would be to place Nature above fancy since he would excel (and put to shame) even fancy's most outlandish creations.

V.ii.262. Some . . . greatness. 'Some boy actor with squeaking voice will burlesque my greatness.' Until the second half of the 17th century female parts were acted by boys on the English stage.

V.ii.330–331. The luck . . . wrath. Caesar's good fortune, the sort of excessively good luck which the envious gods use as an excuse (since good fortune may lead to pride) for striking a man (with such luck) down.

V.ii.333, 334. my other . . . life. Since of the four elements (earth, fire, air, water) thought to constitute the human body only air and fire were associated with immortality, Cleopatra bequeaths the other two to mortal, that is human, life.

V.ii.413–415. for her physician . . . die. 'So when she had dayly made diuers and sundrie proofes, she found none of all them she had proued so fit, as the biting of an Aspicke, the which only causeth a heauines of the head, without swounding or complaining, and bringeth a great desire also to sleepe, with a little swet in the face, and so by litle and litle taketh away the sences and vitall powers, no liuing creature perceiuing that the pacientes feele any paine.' North, p. 1004.

The Tragedy of Coriolanus

Edited by
TUCKER BROOKE

Dramatis Personae

CAIUS MARTIUS, later named Coriolanus
COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS } Roman Generals
MENENIUS AGRIPPA, Friend to Coriolanus
SICINIUS VELUTUS, JUNIUS BRUTUS } Tribunes of the People
YOUNG MARTIUS, Son to Coriolanus
A ROMAN HERALD
TULLUS AUFIDIUS, General of the Volscians
LIEUTENANT TO AUFIDIUS
CONSPIRATORS WITH AUFIDIUS
A ROMAN, named Nicanor
A VOLSCIAN, named Adrian
A CITIZEN OF ANTIUM
TWO VOLSCIAN GUARDS

VOLUMNIA, Mother to Coriolanus
VIRGILIA, Wife to Coriolanus
VALERIA, A noble Lady of Rome
GENTLEWOMAN, Attendant of Virgilia

ROMAN AND VOLSCIAN SENATORS, PATRICIANS, AEDILES, LICTORS, SOLDIERS, CITIZENS, MESSENGERS, SERVANTS TO AUFIDIUS, AND OTHER ATTENDANTS

SCENE—Rome and the Volscian country to the south, with the towns of Corioli and Antium.

The Tragedy of Coriolanus

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The chief and almost sole source of Coriolanus, as of Shakespeare's other Roman plays, is North's translation of Plutarch's Lives, which was first printed in 1579 and reached its third edition in 1603. About 550 lines of North's prose are woven into the text of Coriolanus, and the verbal adherence of the poet to the translator is even closer than it is in the earlier Plutarchan plays of Julius Cæsar and Antony and Cleopatra. The two principal characters, Coriolanus and Volumnia, owe most to Plutarch, though Shakespeare has given to each of them distinguishing traits hardly implied by his original. Virgilia, Menenius, and the Tribunes, on the other hand, are developed out of very slight suggestions. North only once mentions Virgilia's name and affords us no clue to her character. He says nothing of Menenius' friendship for Coriolanus, and names him only in the following account of his famous fable:

When the Plebeians were threatening to withdraw from Rome, North says: 'The Senate, being afeared of their departure, did send unto them certain of the pleasantest old men and the most acceptable to the people among them. Of those Menenius Agrippa was he who was sent for chief man of the message from the Senate. He, after many good persuasions and gentle requests made to the people on the behalf of the Senate, knit up his oration in the end with a notable tale, in this manner. That on a time all the members of man's body did rebel against the belly, complaining of it, that it only remained in the midst of the body, without doing anything, neither did bear any labour to the maintenance of the rest: whereas all other parts and members did labour painfully, and were very careful to satisfy the appetites and desires of the body. And so the belly, all this notwithstanding, laughed at their folly, and said: "It is true, I first receive all meats that nourish man's body: but afterwards I send it again to the nourishment of other parts of the same." "Even so" (quoth he) "O you, my masters, and citizens of Rome: the reason is a like between the Senate and you. For matters being well digested, and their counsels thoroughly examined, touching the benefit of the commonwealth, the Senators are cause of the common commodity that cometh unto every one of you." These persuasions pacified the people.'

The most famous declamatory passages in Coriolanus are precisely those in which Shakespeare has most closely reproduced the prose of North. They are Coriolanus' indictment of the mob (III.i.83-172), his speech to Aufidius in the latter's house at Antium (IV.v.66-103), and Volumnia's successful appeal for Rome (V.iii.97ff.). These are the emotional crises of the play. They are singular examples of the tact with which at this period of his career Shakespeare could transfer a fine and living picture from narrative to drama and from prose to poetry with the maximum of fidelity and an irreducible minimum of remoulding. North thus reports the speeches of Coriolanus and Aufidius:

"Tullus rose presently from the board, and, coming towards him, asked him what he was, and wherefore he came. Then Martius unmuffled himself, and after he had paused a while, making no answer, he said unto him. "If thou knowest me not yet, Tullus, and, seeing me, dost not perhaps believe me to be the man I am in deed, I must of necessity bewray my self to be that I am. I am Caius Martius, who hath done to thy self particularly, and to all the Volsces generally, great hurt and mischief, which I cannot deny for my surname of Coriolanus that I bear. For I never had other benefit nor recompense of all the true and painful service I have done, and the extreme dangers I have been in, but this only surname: a good memory and witness of the malice and displeasure thou shouldst bear me. Indeed the name only remaineth with me: for the rest envy and cruelty of the people of Rome have taken from me, by the sufferance of the dastardly nobility and magistrates, who have forsaken me, and let me be banished by the people. This extremity hath now driven me to come as a poor suitor to take thy chimney hearth, not of any hope I have to save my life thereby. For if I had feared death, I would not have come hither to have put my life in hazard: but pricked forward with spite and desire I have to be revenged of them that thus have banished me, whom now I begin to be avenged on, putting my person between my enemies. Wherefore, if thou hast any heart to be wreaked of the injuries thy enemies have done thee, speed thee now, and let my misery serve thy turn, and so use it, as my service may be a benefit to the Volsces: promising thee, that I will fight with better goodwill for all you, than ever I did when I was against you, knowing that they fight more valiantly, who know the force of their enemy, than such as have never proved it. And if it be so that thou dare not, and that thou art weary to prove fortune any more: than am I also weary to live any longer. And it were no wisdom in thee to save the life of him, who hath been heretofore thy mortal enemy, and whose service now can nothing help nor pleasure thee." Tullus, hearing what he said, was a marvellous glad man, and, taking him by the hand, he said unto him: "Stand up, O Martius, and be of good cheer, for in proffering thyself unto us thou dost us great honour: and by this means thou mayest hope also of greater things at all the Volsces' hands." So he feasted him for that time, and entertained him in the honourablest manner he could, talking with him in no other matters at that present: but within few days after, they fell to consultation together in what sort 'they should begin their wars.'

Comparison of this passage with its Shakespearean counterpart (IV.v.48-173) shows that while the speech of Coriolanus is virtually all Plutarch, the speeches of Aufidius are almost wholly original with Shakespeare. They offer an instructive contrast in style and an admirable illustration of the manner in which Shakespeare could make dramatic adaptation go hand in hand with dramatic originality.

In the handling of incident Shakespeare treats Plutarch with the same appreciative discrimination as in the writing of dialogue. Seven scenes of the play are independent of North, and Plutarchan incidents are not infrequently altered to the advantage of dramatic economy, as when Shakespeare makes Coriolanus' year-long squabbles with the Plebeians all focus upon the election to the Consulship. But when the Plutarchan story is good drama as it stands, the poet hardly tampers with it at all.

For the fable of Menenius, as told in the play (I.i.77-147) it has been pointed out that Shakespeare appears to have made use of a version more detailed than that which Plutarch gives. This is found in William Camden's Remaines of a Greater Worke, Concerning Britain, published in 1605. It will be seen on comparison with North's narrative, quoted on page 158, that the following account, as given by Camden, has a number of verbal similarities with Shakespeare's lines which are absent from North and can hardly have been accidental:—'All the members of the body conspired against the stomacke, as against the swallowing gulfe of all their labors; for whereas the eies beheld the eares heard, the handes labored, the feete traveled, the tongue spake, and all partes performed their functions, onely the stomacke lay ydle and consumed all. Hereuppon they ioyntly agreed al to forbeare their labors, and to pine away their lasie and publike enemy. One day passed over, the second followed very tedious, but the third day was so grievous to them all, that they called a common Counsel; The eyes waxed dimme, the feete could not support the body, the armes waxed lasie, the tongue faltered, and could not lay open the matter; Therefore they all with one accord desired the advise of the Heart. There Reason layd open before them, that hee against whome they had proclaimed warres, was the cause of all this their misery: For he as their common steward, when his allowances were withdrawne, of necessitie withdrew theirs fro them, as not receiving that he might allow. Therefore it were a farre better course to supply him, than that the limbs should faint with hunger. So by the perswasion of Reason, the stomacke was served, the limbes comforted, and peace re-established. Even so it fareth with the bodies of Commonweales. . . .

The History of the Play

Coriolanus is the latest in date of Shakespeare's tragedies. The evidence of style and several unusually persuasive internal allusions[1] point to its composition in 1608 or 1609, immediately after Antony and Cleopatra. Of the stage history of the play before the Restoration we have no knowledge whatever.[2] Indeed the earliest positive allusion to it is found in the licensing notice of previously uncopyrighted Shakespearean plays, entered on the book of the Stationers' Company by the publishers of the Shakespeare Folio, November 8, 1623. Here Coriolanus is named first among the eight tragedies 'not formerly entred to other men.' In the Folio of 1623, and the three following Folio editions of Shakespeare, Coriolanus is accordingly printed between Troilus and Cressida and Titus Andronicus. These, with the exception of Tate's alteration, are the only texts of the play published during the seventeenth century.

The manuscript upon which the Folio text of Coriolanus was based appears to have been pretty carefully prepared. The play is accurately divided into acts, though not into scenes, and contains rather full and explicit stage directions. The text is certainly faulty in certain places and the lines are frequently misdivided, but the proportion of error will seem small if one considers the alarming syntactic and metrical peculiarities (those of Shakespeare's last period) with which the printer had to deal. No reason has been found for doubting that the play is wholly Shakespeare's. The text, then, as we have it, would seem to represent a theatre manuscript fully completed by Shakespeare and doubtless occasionally acted by his company, but lacking evidence of the careful revision, abridgment or amplification which popular plays usually received.

Our actual knowledge of the production of Coriolanus in any form begins with 1682, when Nahum Tate adapted the tragedy for the Theatre-Royal under the title, The Ingratitude of a Commonwealth: or, The Fall of Caius Martius Coriolanus. Tate attempted to inject contemporary interest into the work by giving it an application of the political troubles of the last years of Charles II. 'Upon a close view of this Story,' he says, 'there appear'd in some Passages no small Resemblance with the busie Faction of our own time. And I confess, I chose rather to set the Parallel nearer to Sight than to throw it off at further Distance.'

Through his first four acts Tate follows Shakespeare with reasonable fidelity. The lines are mainly Shakespeare's, though frequently refashioned, and the chief alteration, apart from very drastic cutting, is the quite new presentation of Valeria as 'an affected, talkative, fantastical Lady' after the Restoration mode. The fifth act is almost pure Tate. It develops Aufidius' Lieutenant (Coriolanus IV.vii.) as a melodramatic villain and renegade under the name of Nigridius, makes Aufidius an unscrupulous though unsuccessful lover of Virgilia, and closes in a riot of horror. In the final scene at 'Corioles' Menenius, Virgilia, and young Martius are all horribly slain, as well as Nigridius, Aufidius, and Coriolanus, while Volumnia goes furiously mad. It is pleasing to remark that Tate's version does not appear to have been a success.

On November 11, 1719, the Drury Lane Theatre produced an adaptation of Coriolanus by John Dennis, which was printed in 1720 with the title, The Invader of his Country: or, The Fatal Resentment. This bad play appears to have been acted but three times. Dennis prefaced the printed edition with an indignant letter in which he expostulated against the unfairness with which the management of the theatre had treated him; but the cast, headed by Barton Booth as Coriolanus and Mrs. Porter as Volumnia, was an excellent one, and the failure of the piece to please is well accounted for by the dulness of the adaptation. The play contains extremely few lines recognizable as Shakespeare's, far fewer than Tate's revision, though it shows less than Tate's originality in inventing new plot devices. Dennis opens with the battles at Corioli and closes with a scene in which Coriolanus slays Aufidius and dies in spectacular combat with four Tribunes of the Volsci to an accompaniment of shrieks and lamentations from Volumnia and Virgilia. The most interesting scene is that of the consular election, where adherents of the candidates, Coriolanus and Sempronius, respectively, act out a lively imitation of an English electoral rally.

The theme of the play was next brought upon the English stage by James Thomson, author of the Seasons, whose Coriolanus was acted at Covent Garden some five months after the poet's death. Thomson's play is independent of Shakespeare's and follows different sources in its treatment of the legend: ignoring Plutarch, Thomson goes to the Roman historians, Livy and Dionysius of Halicarnassus, for his material. Consequently some of the characters appear with different names. Aufidius is called

1 See notes on I.i.168; II.ii.106.

2 Jonson's parody of II.ii, 106, however, in The Silent Woman is circumstantial evidence that Coriolanus was being acted in 1609-1610.

Attius Tullus, Coriolanus' mother Veturia, and his wife Volumnia. The mere fact that such alterations were possible shows how little the Shakespearean figures were known to the English public of the day.

Thomson's Coriolanus was first acted January 13, 1749, and was repeated some ten times by a very notable cast. The famous Quin took the title-rôle and Ryan the hardly less prominent or heroic part of Attius Tullus, while Peg Woffington played Coriolanus' mother and Mrs. Bellamy his wife. Thomson was the first capable English poet to touch the theme of Coriolanus since Shakespeare. His rhetorical tragedy, presenting various types of nobly sensitive souls as the eighteenth century liked to fancy them, seems to us lacking in reality and in dramatic force; but it is a worthy poem of its peculiar kind. It nowhere challenges comparison with Shakespeare, and would hardly come into the history of the latter's play, if the taste of later producers had not brought upon the stage several strange blends of Shakespeare and Thomson.

The earliest of these is ascribed to Thomas Sheridan, manager of the Smock Alley Theatre in Dublin. From thence it was transferred to Covent Garden in London, where it was produced first on December 10, 1754. There was more of Thomson than of Shakespeare in this, and Thomson's names of characters were retained. Coriolanus was played by Sheridan; Attius Tullus, Veturia, and Volumnia by the same distinguished performers who had supported those parts in the 1749 production of Thomson's tragedy. The blend of Shakespeare and Thomson, which had proved decidedly successful in Sheridan's version, became yet more so when John Philip Kemble staged at Drury Lane, February 7, 1789, another adaptation in which the greater part of the material was drawn from Shakespeare. 'In this alteration,' the European Magazine said at the time, 'the best parts of Shakespeare and Thomson are retained, and compose a more pleasing drama than that of either author separately.' Kemble's first three acts are wholly from Shakespeare, though much condensed; in acts four and five there is a predominance of Thomson. This piece was many times repeated. Kemble's Coriolanus and the Volumnia of his sister, Mrs. Siddons, are rated among their greatest parts; and it was in Coriolanus that Kemble took his leave of the stage on June 23, 1817.

On June 24, 1820, Coriolanus, with Shakespeare's text restored (as was a little falsely asserted), was performed at Drury Lane by Edmund Kean, whose success in this too statuesque rôle did not equal that of Kemble. Rival performances were given at Covent Garden (beginning November 29, 1819) with the title-rôle in the hands of W. C. Macready, who long continued to act the part. John Vandenhoff (from 1823) gave many successful performances of the play throughout England and Scotland, and Samuel Phelps (from 1848) at the Sadler's Wells Theatre in London. Other productions of some note in England have been those of James Anderson (from 1851), Sir Henry Irving (1901), and Sir F. R. Benson. It was the special degree in which this play (particularly with the interpolated borrowings from Thomson) fitted the statuesque acting of Kemble and Mrs. Siddons which gave it its impetus. Its stage value suffered when the Kemble ideal of acting gave place to more romantic and perhaps more subtle conceptions.

Thomson's Coriolanus was played at the Southwark Theatre, Philadelphia, on June 8, 1767. The Shakespearean play—that is, presumably, the Kemble version—was first acted in the United States by the Philadelphia Company, June 3, 1796. During the latter half of the nineteenth century the American actors Edwin Booth, John McCullough, and Lawrence Barrett all distinguished themselves as Coriolanus; and the Italian Tommaso Salvini interpreted the part in Boston and other cities during the season of 1885-1886. The American actor who most identified himself with the rôle was, however, Edwin Forrest (1806-1872), whose Coriolanus was perhaps his favorite character and whose statue represents him dressed for that part.

The most notable French production of the play was that of M. Joubé at the Odéon in Paris in 1910. In 1920 the tragedy was acted seven times in Berlin and twice at Lübeck. A total of 103 performances in different German cities has been collected for the period between 1911 and 1920.[3]

3 See the list by Dr. E. Mühlbach, Shakespeare-Jahrbuch, 1921, pp. 159-163.

Act First ❧ Scene First

[Rome. A Street]

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

1. Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

1. Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolved, resolved.

1. Cit. First, you know Caius Martius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know 't, we know 't.

1. Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is 't a verdict?

All. No more talking on 't; let it be done. Away, away!

2. Cit. One word, good citizens.

1. Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us. If they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularise their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2. Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Martius?

All. Against him first: he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2. Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1. Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for 't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2. Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1. Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2. Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

1. Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations: he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. Shouts within. What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen: why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

All. Come, come.

1. Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2. Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

1. Cit. He's one honest enough: would all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you. With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

2. Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths: they shall know we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?

2. Cit. We cannot, sir; we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care
Have the patricians of you. For your wants,
Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well
Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them
Against the Roman state, whose course will on
The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs
Of more strong link asunder than can ever
Appear in your impediment. For the dearth,
The gods, not the patricians, make it, and
Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack!
You are transported by calamity
Thither where more attends you; and you slander
The helms o' the state, who care for you like fathers,
When you curse them as enemies.

2. Cit. Care for us! True, indeed! They ne'er cared for us yet: suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must
Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you
A pretty tale: it may be you have heard it;
But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
To scale 't a little more.

2. Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir; yet you must not think to fob off your disgrace with a tale; but, an 't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time when all the body's members
Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it:
That only like a gulf it did remain
I' the midst o' the body, idle and unactive,
Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
Like labour with the rest, where th' other instruments
Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And, mutually participate, did minister
Unto the appetite and affection common
Of the whole body. The belly answer'd,—

2. Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile,
Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus—
For, look you, I may make the belly smile
As well as speak—it taintingly replied
To the discontented members, the mutinous parts
That envied his receipt; even so most fitly
As you malign our senators for that
They are not such as you.

2. Cit. Your belly's answer? What!
The kingly crowned head, the vigilant eye,
The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
With other muniments and petty helps

15 guess: think 16 are too dear: cost too much object: spectacle 17 particularise: itemize 18 sufferance: suffering 27 2. Cit.; cf. n. 31 to be partly: in part in order to be 36 to . . . repetition: which it would weary one to list over 45 bats: heavy sticks 58 curbs: restraining chains 64 more: more calamity 65 helms: pilots 79 scale 't; cf. n. 81 disgrace: unfavored treatment 84 gulf: devouring whirlpool 89 participate: cooperating 94 Which . . . lungs; cf. n. 96 taintingly: effectively; cf. n. 98 his receipt: what he received 103 counsellor heart; cf. n. 105 muniments: furnishings

In this our fabric, if that they—
Men. What then?—
'Fore me, this fellow speaks! what then? what then?
2. Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd,
Who is the sink o' the body,—
Men. Well, what then?
2. Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?
Men. I will tell you;
If you'll bestow a small, of what you have little,
Patience a while, you'st hear the belly's answer.
2. Cit. You're long about it.
Men. Note me this, good friend;
Your most grave belly was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:
'True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he,
'That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon; and fit is is,
Because I am the store-house and the shop
Of the whole body: but, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart, to the seat o' the brain;
And, through the cranks and offices of man,
The strongest nerves and small inferior veins
From me receive that natural competency
Whereby they live. And though that all at once,
You, my good friends,'—this says the belly, mark me,—
2. Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.
Men. 'Though all at once cannot
See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran.' What say you to 't?
2. Cit. It was an answer: how apply you this?
Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,
And you the mutinous members; for, examine
Their counsels and their cares, digest things rightly
Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find
No public benefit which you receive
But it proceeds or comes from them to you,
And no way from yourselves. What do you think,
You, the great toe of this assembly?
2. Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?
Men. For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest,
Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost:
Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage.
But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs:
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle;
The one side must have bale.

Enter Caius Martius.

Hail, noble Martius!
Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentious rogues,
That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?
2. Cit. We have ever your good word.
Mar. He that will give good words to thee will flatter
Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs,
That like nor peace nor war? the one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you,
Where he should find you lions, finds you hares;
Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is,
To make him worthy whose offence subdues him,
And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness
Deserves your hate; and your affections are
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that
Which would increase his evil. He that depends
Upon your favours swims with fins of lead
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye?
With every minute you do change a mind,
And call him noble that was now your hate,
Him vile that was your garland. What's the matter,
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another? What's their seeking?
Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof they say
The city is well stor'd.
Mar. Hang 'em! They say!
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know
What's done i' the Capitol; who's like to rise,
Who thrives, and who declines; side factions, and give out
Conjectural marriages; making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking
Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough!
Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry
With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high
As I could pick my lance.
Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded;
For though abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you,
What says the other troop?
Mar. They are dissolv'd: hang 'em!
They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs:
That hunger broke stone walls; that dogs must eat;
That meat was made for mouths; that the gods sent not
Corn for the rich men only. With these shreds
They vented their complainings; which being answer'd,
And a petition granted them, a strange one,—
To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale,—they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns o' the moon,
Shouting their emulation.
Men. What is granted them?
Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms,
Of their own choice: one's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not—'Sdeath!
The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,

109 'Fore me: by my faith! 111 sink: cesspool 117 you'st: you shall 119 Note me: pray note 122 incorporate: joined in one body 125 shop: workshop 129 cranks: winding passages 129 offices: kitchen, etc 131 competency: sufficiency 144 weal . . . common: common weal 152 rascal . . . blood; cf. n. 153 Lead'st first: art the very leader vantage: personal profit 156 bale: disaster 159, 160 rubbing . . . scabs; cf. n.

163 Beneath abhorring: more than can be enough abhorred 164 nor . . . nor: neither . . . nor 168 Cf. n. 169–171 Your virtue . . . did it; cf. n. 172 affections: favorable opinions 188 like: likely 189 side: espouse 190 parties: favored factions 191 feebling: reducing 194 quarry: pile of dead 196 pick: pitch 199 passing: surpassingly 206 vented: gave vent to answer'd: satisfied 208 generosity: the gentry

Ere so prevail'd with me; it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes
For insurrection's arguing.
Men. This is strange.
Mar. Go; get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Martius?
Mar. Here: what's the matter?
Mess. The news is, sir, the Volsces are in arms.
Mar. I am glad on 't; then we shall ha' means to vent
Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders.

Enter Sicinius Velutus, Junius Brutus; Cominius, Titus Lartius, with other Senators.

1. Sen. Martius, 'tis true that you have lately told us;
The Volsces are in arms.
Mar. They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to 't.
I sin in envying his nobility,
And were I anything but what I am,
I would wish me only he.
Com. You have fought together.
Mar. Were half to half the world by th' ears, and he
Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make
Only my wars with him: he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.
1. Sen. Then, worthy Martius,
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.
Com. It is your former promise.
Mar. Sir, it is;
And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.
What! are thou stiff? stand'st out?
Tit. No, Caius Martius;
I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with t'other,
Ere stay behind this business.
Men. O! true-bred.
Sen. Your company to the Capitol; where I know
Our greatest friends attend us.
Tit. [To Cominius.] Lead you on:
[To Martius.] Follow Cominius; we must follow you;
Right worthy you priority.
Com. Noble Martius!
Sen. [To the Citizens.] Hence! to your homes! be gone.
Mar. Nay, let them follow:
The Volsces have much corn; take these rats thither
To gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutiners,
Your valour puts well forth; pray, follow.
Exeunt [Martius, Cominius, Titus, etc.]. Citizens steal away. Mane[n]t Sicin. & Brutus.
Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Martius?
Bru. He has no equal.
Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,—
Bru. Mark'd you his lip and eyes?
Sic. Nay, but his taunts.
Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.
Sic. Bemock the modest moon.
Bru. The present wars devour him! he is grown
Too proud to be so valiant.
Sic. Such a nature,
Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder
His insolence can brook to be commanded
Under Cominius.
Bru. Fame, at the which he aims,
In whom already he's well grac'd, cannot
Better be held nor more attain'd than by
A place below the first; for what miscarries
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
To th' utmost of a man; and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Martius 'O! if he
Had borne the business.'
Sic. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion, that so sticks on Martius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.
Bru. Come:
Half all Cominius' honours are to Martius,
Though Martius earn'd them not; and all his faults
To Martius shall be honours, though indeed
In aught he merit not.
Sic. Let's hence and hear
How the dispatch is made; and in what fashion,
More than his singularity, he goes
Upon this present action.
Bru. Let's along. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Corioli. The Senate-house]
Enter Tullus Aufidius with Senators of Corioli.

1. Sen. So your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
And know how we proceed.
Auf. Is it not yours?
What ever have been thought on in this state,
That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone
Since I heard thence; these are the words: I think
I have the letter here; yes, here it is.
'They have press'd a power, but it is not known
Whether for east, or west: the dearth is great;
The people mutinous, and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Martius, your old enemy,—
Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,—
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation
Whither 'tis bent: most likely 'tis for you:
Consider of it.'
1. Sen. Our army's in the field:
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

218 Win upon: get ahead of power: constituted authority 219 For ... arguing: for insurgents to maintain 225 vent: dispose of 234 half to half: one half against the other 237 Only ... with him: with him alone 245 stand'st out: do you decline to go? 260 puts ... forth: shows well (ironic) S.d. Manent: remain on the stage

271 to be: of being 273, 274 disdains ... noon; cf. n. 282 giddy censure: fickle opinion 287 demerits: merits 295 singularity: peculiar character 2 enter'd: instructed 5 What: what designs 7 circumvention: means to circumvent 10 press'd a power: levied troops 16 preparation: expedition

Auf. Nor did you think it folly
To keep your great pretences veil'd till when
They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,
It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery
We shall be shorten'd in our aim, which was
To take in many towns ere almost Rome
Should know we were afoot.
2. Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission; hie you to your bands;
Let us alone to guard Corioli:
If they set down before 's, for the remove
Bring up your army; but I think you'll find
They've not prepar'd for us.
Auf. O! doubt not that;
I speak from certainties. Nay, more;
Some parcels of their power are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.
If we and Caius Martius chance to meet,
'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike
Till one can do no more
All. The gods assist you!
Auf. And keep your honours safe!
1. Sen. Farewell.
2. Sen. Farewell.
All. Farewell. Exeunt omnes.

Scene Third

[Rome. A Room in Martius's House]

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia, mother and wife to Martius. They set them down on two low stools and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort. If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied and the only son of my womb, when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way, when for a day of kings' entreaties a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I, considering how honour would become such a person, that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam; how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Martius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.
Vol. Indeed, you shall not.
Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum,
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair,
As children from a bear the Volsces shunning him:
Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus:
'Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear,
Though you were born in Rome.' His bloody brow
With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvestman that's task'd to mow
Or all or lose his hire.
Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood!
Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man
Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hecuba,
When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood,
At Grecian sword contemning. Tell Valeria
We are fit to bid her welcome.

Exit Gent.

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius!
Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Enter Valeria with an Usher, and a Gentlewoman.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.
Vol. Sweet madam.
Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.
Val. How do you both? you are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith, How does your little son?
Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.
Val. He had rather see the swords and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster.
Val. O' my word, the father's son; I'll swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; catched it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it; O! I warrant, how he mammocked it!
Vol. One on 's father's moods.
Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.
Vir. A crack, madam.
Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.
Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.
Val. Not out of doors!
Vol. She shall, she shall.
Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.
Vol. Fie! you confine yourself most unreasonably. Come; you must go visit the good lady that lies in.
Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.
Vol. Why, I pray you?

23 pretences: designs 27 take in: capture 31 Corioli; cf. n. 32 remove: raising the siege 37 parcels: portions 7 for ... entreaties: though kings should entreat for a day 9 person: beauty of body 13 bound with oak; cf. n. 21, 22 out of action: in inactivity

33 task'd: assigned the task 37 Than ... trophy: than gilding becomes his monument 40 contemning: showing defiance 48 housekeepers: recluses, stay-at-homes 49 spot: pattern for embroidery 56 confirmed: determined 57 gilded: gold-colored 61 mammocked: tore in pieces 62 on 's: of his 64 crack: lively child 66 play ... huswife: idle away your time

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope; yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: The Volsces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in everything hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady: as she is now she will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth, I think she would. Fare you well then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithee, Virgilia, turn thy solemness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed I must not. I wish you must mirth.

Val. Well then, farewell. Exeunt Ladies.

Scene Fourth

[Before Corioli]

Enter Martius, Titus Lartius, with Drum and Colours, with Captains and Soldiers, as before the City Corioli: to them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news: a wager they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell nor give him; lend you him I will For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours. Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work, That we with smoking swords may march from hence, To help our fielded friends! Come, blow thy blast.

They sound a Parley. Enter two Senators with others on the Walls of Corioli.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

1. Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he: That's lesser than a little. Drum afar off. Hark, our drums Are bringing forth our youth: we'll break our walls, Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates, Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes; They'll open of themselves. Hark you, far off! Alarum far off. There is Aufidius: list, what work he makes Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O! they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. Ladders, ho!

Enter the Army of the Volsces.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city. Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight With hearts more proof than shields. Advance, brave Titus: They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts, Which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on, my fellows: He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsce, And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The Romans are beat back to their trenches. Enter Martius, cursing.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you, You shames of Rome! you herd of—Boils and plagues Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd Further than seen, and one infect another Against the wind a mile! You souls of geese, That bear the shapes of men, how have you run From slaves that apes would beat? Pluto and hell! All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale With flight and argu'd fear! Mend and charge home, Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe And make my wars on you; look to 't: come on; If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives, As they us to our trenches follows.

Another alarum, and Martius follows them to gates, and is shut in.

So, now the gates are ope: now prove good seconds: 'Tis for the followers Fortune widens them, Not for the fliers: mark me, and do the like. Enter the gates.

1. Sol. Foolhardiness! not I.

2. Sol. Nor I. Alarum continues.

1. Sol. See, they have shut him in.

All. To the pot, I warrant him.

Enter Titus Lartius.

Lart. What is become of Martius?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

1. Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels, With them he enters; who, upon the sudden, Clapp'd-to their gates; he is himself alone, To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow!

77 want: am lacking in 80 sensible: sensitive 97 Give . . . excuse: pardon 99 disease: disturb 102, 103 turn . . . doors: banish gravity 104 at a word: positively 6 spoke: euphemism for 'fought' 15 fielded: engaged on the battlefield

18 less; cf. n. 22 pound . . . up: impound, confine 28 instruction: directions for proceeding 32 beyond . . . thoughts: more than we expected 36 south: south wind (thought to bring disease) 40 Against . . . mile; cf. n. 44 Mend: reform 48 follows; cf. n. 49 seconds: assistants 55 pot: cooking-pot; i.e. destruction 60 himself alone: quite alone 61 answer: withstand

Who, sensibly, outdares his senseless sword,
And, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left, Martius:
A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible
Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks and
The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds,
Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world
Were feverous and did tremble.

Enter Martius, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1. Sol. Look, sir!
Lart. O! 'tis Martius!
Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.
They fight, and all enter the City.

Scene Fifth

[Corioli. A Street]
Enter certain Romans, with spoils.

1. Rom. This will I carry to Rome.
2. Rom. And I this.
3. Rom. A murrain on 't! I took this for silver.
Exeunt. Alarum continues still afar off.

Enter Martius and Titus, with a Trumpet.

Mar. See Here these movers that do prize their hours
At a crack'd drachme! Cushions, leaden spoons,
Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,
Ere yet the fight be done, pack up. Down with them!
And hark, what noise the general makes! To him!
There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius,
Piercing our Romans: then, valiant Titus, take
Convenient numbers to make good the city,
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste
To help Cominius.
Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent
For a second course of fight.
Mar. Sir, praise me not;
My work hath yet not warm'd me: fare you well:
The blood I drop is rather physical
Than dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.
Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune,
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms
Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman,
Prosperity be thy page!
Mar. Thy friend no less
Than those she places highest! So, farewell.
Lart. Thou worthiest Martius!— [Exit Martius.]
Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place;
Call thither all the officers o' the town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away! Exeunt.

63 sensibly: though sensitive to pain 64 left: forsaken 67 Cato's wish; cf. n. 74 make . . . alike: remain to share his fate 4 movers: cowards 5 drachme: drachma, small Greek coin of silver 6 doit: Dutch copper coin 6, 7 doublets . . . wore them; cf. n. 20 physical: beneficial to health 27 Thy friend: may prosperity befriend thee

Scene Sixth

[Near the Camp of Cominius]
Enter Cominius as it were in retire, with soldiers.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought; we are come off
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck,
By interims and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends. The Roman gods,
Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering,
May give you thankful sacrifice.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?
Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issu'd,
And given to Lartius and to Martius battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.
Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is 't since?
Mess. Above an hour, my lord.
Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?
Mess. Spies of the Volsces
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir,
Half an hour since brought my report.
Enter Martius [at a distance].
Com. Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Martius; and I have
Before-time seen him thus.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor,
More than I know the sound of Martius' tongue
From every meaner man.
Mar. Come I too late?
Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.
Mar. O! let me clip ye
In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burnt to bedward.
Com. Flower of warriors.
How is 't with Titus Lartius?
Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning th' other;
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.
Com. Where is that slave?
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he? Call him hither.

5 By . . . gusts: from time to time, as winds conveyed the sound. 6 The Roman gods; cf. n. 18 briefly: a short time ago 19 confound: use up 22 that: so that 26 as: as if 30 tabor: small drum 32 From: from that of 36 clip: embrace 44 pitying: exempting from ransom

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth; but for our gentlemen,
The common file—a plague! tribunes for them!—
The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge
From rascals worse than they.
Com. But how prevail'd you?
Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.
Where is the enemy? Are you lords o' the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?
Com. Martius, we have at disadvantage fought,
And did retire to win our purpose.
Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side
They have plac'd their men of trust?
Com. As I guess, Martius,
Their bands i' the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.
Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows,
We have made to endure friends, that you directly
Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present, but,
Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts,
We prove this very hour.
Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking: take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.
Mar. Those are they
That most are willing. If any such be here—
As it were sin to doubt—that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Martius.

They all shout, and wave their swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps.

[Soldiers.] O, me alone! Make you a sword of me!
[Mar.] If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volsces? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select from all: the rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.
Com. March on, my fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall
Divide in all with us. Exeunt.

54 budge: shrink 65 vaward: vanguard Antiates: inhabitants of Antium 71 endure: continue 73 delay . . . present: make present delay 74 We prove: that we make trial of 85 his person: personal injury 91 Cf. n. 98 As . . . obey'd: as occasion requires 102 ostentation: show of valor

Scene Seventh

[The Gates of Corioli]

Titus Lartius, having set a guard upon Corioli, going with drum and trumpet toward Cominius and Caius Martius, enters with a Lieutenant, other Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So; let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lost the field,
We cannot keep the town.
Lieu. Fear not our care, sir.
Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon 's.
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. Exit.

Scene Eighth

[A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps]
Alarum, as in battle. Enter Martius and Aufidius at several doors.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.
Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot.
Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!
Auf. If I fly, Martius,
Halloo me like a hare.
Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd; 'tis not my blood
Wherein thou seest me mask'd; for thy revenge
Wrench up thy power to the highest.
Auf. Wert thou the Hector
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not 'scape me here.

Here they fight, and certain Volsces come in the aid of Aufidius. Martius fights till they be driven in breathless.

Officious, and not valiant, you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds. [Exit.]

Scene Ninth

[The Roman Camp]

Flourish. Alarum. A retreat is sounded. Enter at one door Cominius, with the Romans: at another door Martius, with his arm in a scarf.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou 't not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles,
Where great patricians shall attend and shrug,
I' the end, admire; where ladies shall be frighted,
And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull Tribunes,
That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours,
Shall say, against their hearts,

1 ports: gates 2 centuries: companies (viii) 5 fame and envy: rivalry in frame (?) 16 whip . . . progeny: cf. n. 19 condemned seconds: despised efforts at assistance 4 attend: give attention shrug: express inability to believe 6 quak'd: fearful

'We thank the gods our Rome hath such a soldier!'
Yet cam'st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully din'd before.

Enter Titus, with his power, from the pursuit.

Titus Lartius. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:
Hadst thou beheld—
Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me grieves me. I have done
As you have done; that's what I can: induc'd
As you have been; that's for my country:
He that has but effected his good will
Hath overta'en mine act.
Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know
The value of her own: 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech you,—
In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,—before our army hear me.
Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart
To hear themselves remember'd.
Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,
Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store, of all
The treasure, in this field achiev'd and city,
We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution,
At your only choice.
Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

A long flourish. They all cry 'Martius! Martius!' cast up their caps and lances: Cominius and Lartius stand bare.

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall
I' the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be
Made all of false-fac'd soothing!
When steel grows soft as is the parasite's silk,
Let him be made an overture for the wars!
No more, I say! For that I have not wash'd
My nose that bled, or foil'd some debile wretch,
Which, without note, here's many else have done,
You shout me forth
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I lov'd my little should be dieted
In praises sauc'd with lies.
Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful
To us that give you truly. By your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you,
Like one that means his proper harm, in manacles,
Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Martius
Wears this war's garland; in token of the which,
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all th' applause and clamour of the host,
Caius Marius Coriolanus! Bear
The addition nobly ever!

Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.
Omnes. Caius Martius Coriolanus!

Cor. I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to stride your steed, and at all times
To undercrest your good addition
To the fairness of my power.
Com. So, to our tent;
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius,
Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.
Lart. I shall, my lord.
Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.
Com. Take 't; 'tis yours. What is 't?
Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house; he us'd me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner:
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.
Com. O! well begg'd!
Where he the butcher of my son, he should
Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.
Lart. Martius, his name?
Cor. By Jupiter! forgot.
I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.
Have we no wine here?
Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come. Exeunt.

13 caparison: the mere accoutrements 16 charter: privilege her blood: him whose blood she shares 20 effected: exhibited in action 23 The grave of: that which buries or conceals 26 silence: ignore with silence 27 to . . . vouch'd: testified to with utmost praise 33 Should they not: i.e. hear themselves remembered 35 tent: cleanse, cure; cf. n. 36 good store: a goodly number 37 in . . . city: acquired both in this battle and in the city 45 beheld . . . doing: been present at the fighting 49 soothing: flattery 51 an overture: cf. n. 53 foil'd: have overcome debile: weak 54 note: special attention

57, 58 dieted In: fed on 61 give: report 63 proper: own 66 garland: i.e., special honor 68 his . . . belonging: the trappings that go with him 72 addition: title of honor 74 fair: clean 77 undercrest: maintain as a crest or distinguishing device 83 articulate: discuss terms 90 lay: lodged

Scene Tenth

[The Camp of the Volsces]

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus Aufidius, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en!
Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.
Auf. Condition!
I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
I' the part that is at mercy? Five times, Martius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me,
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat. By th' elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his: mine emulation
Hath not that honour in 't it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force—
True sword to sword—I'll potch at him some way
Or wrath or craft may get him.
Sol. He's the devil.
Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour's poison'd
With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself. Nor sleep nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Martius. Where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there
Against the hospitable canon, would I
Wash my fierce hand in 's heart. Go you to the city;
Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must
Be hostages for Rome.
Sol. Wil not you go?
Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove: I pray you—
'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
How the world goes, that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.
Sol. I shall, sir.

[Exeunt.]

Act Second

Scene First

[Rome. A Public Place]

Enter Menenius, with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius & Brutus.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.
Bru. Good or bad?
Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Martius.
Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.
Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?
Sic. The lamb.
Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Martius.
Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baes like a bear.
Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.
Both. Well, sir.
Men. In what enormity is Martius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?
Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.
Sic. Especially in pride.
Bru. And topping all others in boasting.
Men. This is strange now: do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you?
Both. Why, how are we censured?
Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?
Both. Well, well, sir; well.
Men. Why, 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Martius for being proud?
Bru. We do it not alone, sir.
Men. I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O that you could!
Both. What then, sir?
Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates—alias fools—as any in Rome.
Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough too.
Men. I am known to be a humorous partrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in 't; said to be something imperfect in favouring the first complaint; hasty and tinder-like upon too trivial motion; one that converses more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such wealsmen as you are,—I cannot call you, Lycurguses,—if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worships have delivered the matter well when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson conspectuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too?
Bru. Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.
Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor anything. You

2 condition: terms 5 that: what 7 I': from the point of view of 15 potch: poke, thrust heedlessly 16 Or wrath: in which either wrath 23 Embarquements: embargoes, restraints 27 hospitable canon: law of hospitality 32 attended: awaited

14 In ... poor in: what fault has Marius in small degree 18 topping: surpassing 20 censured: estimated right-hand file: conservative, aristocratic party 25, 26 a very ... occasion: a very little occasion, acting like a thief 32 single: simple, weak 34–36 O that ... good selves; cf. n. 42 humorous: whimsical 43 allaying Tiber: diluting water; cf. n. 44 something ... complaint: somewhat hasty in judgment 45 motion: occasion, incitement 45–47 one ... morning; cf. n. 47, 48 spend ... breath: get rid of my ill will by putting it into words 48 wealsmen: politicians 49 Lycurguses: great lawgivers 50–52 I cannot ... syllables; cf. n. 55 map ... microcosm; cf. n. 57 bisson conspectuities: blinded sight; cf. n.

are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller, and then rejourn the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience. When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mummers, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause is, calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a botcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying Martius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion, though peradventure some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. Good den to your worships: more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

Brutus and Sicinius [go] aside.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies,—and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler,—whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Martius approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Martius coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee. Hoo! Martius coming home!

2 Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel tonight. A letter for me!

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw 't.

Men. A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiricutic, and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O! no, no, no.

Vol. O! he is wounded, I thank the gods for 't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much. Brings a' victory in his pocket? The wounds become him.

Vol. On 's brows, Menenius; he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had stayed by him I would not have been so fidiused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go. Yes, yes, yes; the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war. He hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Val. In troth there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true. Where is he wounded? [To the Tribunes.] God save your good worships! Martius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. [To Volumnia.] Where is he wounded?

Vol. I' the shoulder, and i' the left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body.

Men. One i' the neck, and two i' the thigh, there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now, it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave.

Hark! The trumpets. A shout and flourish.

Vol. These are the ushers of Martius: before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears:

Death, that dark spirit, in 's nervy arm doth lie;
Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men die.

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter Cominius, the General, and Titus Lartius; between them, Coriolanus, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains and Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Martius did fight
Within Corioli gates: where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Caius Martius; these
In honour follows Coriolanus.
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! Sound. Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:
Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother!

Cor. O!
You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity. Kneels.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;
My gentle Martius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,—
What is it?—Coriolanus must I call thee?
But O! thy wife!—

Cor. My gracious silence, hail!
Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home,

61 caps and legs: applause and reverence 62, 63 orange-wife: hawker of oranges fosset-seller: seller of faucets, taps for barrels rejourn: postpone 66 mummers: rustic actors 66, 67 set . . . flag: proclaim violent war 71, 72 Cf. n. 75, 76 not worth . . . beards: not worth the effort of opening and closing your mouths 77 botcher's: patching sailor's 79 estimation: valuation 79, 80 Deucalion: The Greek Noah 81 Good den: good evening 85 your eyes: the eager looks you cast ahead 90, 91 prosperous approbation: positive success 92 Take . . . Jupiter: i.e. I throw my cap high in the air 101 make a lip at: defy 102 sovereign: efficacious empiricutic: experimental, quackish to: in comparison with 109 On 's brows: i.e. not in his pocket

115 fidiused: Aufidiused, put in Aufidius' proper place 117 possessed: informed 119 name: reputation 132 stand . . . place: seek the consulship 133 repulse of Tarquin; cf. n. 134 nine; cf. n. 143 nervy: muscular 144 advanc'd: raised declines: falls S.d. Sennet: trumpet signal for a procession to move 150 to: added to 165 My gracious silence; cf. n.

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah! my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.
Men. Now, the gods crown thee!
Cor. And live you yet? [To Valeria.] O my sweet lady, pardon.
Vol. I know not where to turn: O! welcome home;
And welcome, general; and y' are welcome all.
Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,
And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy. Welcome.
A curse begin at very root on 's heart
That is not glad to see thee! You are three
That Rome should dote on; yet, by the faith of men,
We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not
Be grafted to your relish. Yet, welcome, warriors!
We call a nettle but a nettle, and
The faults of fools but folly.
Com. Ever right.
Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.
Her. Give way there, and go on!
Cor. [To Volumnia and Virgilia.] Your hand, and yours:
Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.
Vol. I have liv'd
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only
There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but
Our Rome will cast upon thee.
Cor. Know, good mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.
Com. On, to the Capitol!
Flourish, Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before.

Enter Brutus and Sicinius.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights
Are spectacled to see him: your prattling nurse
Into a rapture lets her baby cry
While she chats him; the kitchen malkin pins
Her richest lockram bout her reechy neck,
Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks, windows
Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hors'd
With variable complexions, all agreeing
In earnestness to see him: seld-shown flamens
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station; our veil'd dames
Commit the war of white and damask in
Their nicely-gawded cheeks to the wanton spoil
Of Phœbus' burning kisses: such a pother
As if that whatsoever god who leads him
Were slily crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.
Sic. On the sudden
I warrant him consul.
Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.
Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours
From where he should begin and end, but will Lose those he hath won.
Bru. In that there's comfort.
Sic. Doubt not the commoners, for whom we stand,
But they upon their ancient malice will
Forget with the least cause these new honours,
Which that he'll give them, make I as little question
As he is proud to do 't.
Bru. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture of humility;
Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths.
Sic. 'Tis right.
Bru. It was his word. O! he would miss it rather Than carry it but by the suit of the gentry to him
And the desire of the nobles.
Sic. I wish no better
Than have him hold that purpose and to put it
In execution.
Bru. 'Tis most like he will.
Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills,
A sure destruction.
Bru. So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred
He still hath held them; that to 's power he would
Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders, and Dispropertied their freedoms; holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world.
Than camels in their war; who have their provand
Only for bearing burthens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.
Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall teach the people—which time shall not want,
If he be put upon 't; and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?
Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought
That Martius shall be consul.
I have seen the dumb men throng to see him, and
The blind to hear him speak: matrons flung gloves,

173 I . . . turn; cf. n. 177 begin; cf. n. 180 crab-trees: crabapple trees, i.e. the sour tribunes 181 Be . . . relish: be brought to taste like you 185 Menenius . . . ever: still the same Menenius 191 change: a variety 193 inherited: realized, come into my possession 199 sway with: rule S.d. Enter, etc.; cf. n. 203 rapture: fit 204 chats: gossips about malkin: wench 205 lockram: linen cloth reechy: dirty 206 bulks: projecting shelves outside a shop 207 leads: lead-covered roofs ridges hors'd: roof tops bestridden 208 variable complexions: all types of people seld-shown flamens: priests who seldom show themselves 210 popular throngs: crowds of rabble 211 vulgar station: place in the mob 213 nicely-gawded: daintily colored 214 pother: hubbub

222, 223 He . . . end; cf. n. 227 upon: on account of 234 napless: threadbare 239 but: otherwise than 245 as . . . wills: as we would have it 248 For an end: in short 249 suggest: remind by insinuation 250 still: always 251 mules: beasts of burden 252 Dispropertied: annulled 255 provand: food 260 teach; cf. n. 261 put upon 't: provoked 262 will . . . fire: will be in him like a spark 264 darken: tarnish, remove the gloss from

Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers
Upon him as he pass'd; the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue, and the commons made
A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts:
I never saw the like.
Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.
Sic. Have with you. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same. The Capitol]
Enter two Officers to lay cushions, as it were, in the Capitol.

1. Off. Come, come, they are almost here. How many stand for consulships?

2. Off. Three, they say; but 'tis thought of every one Coriolanus will carry it.

1. Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

2. Off. Faith, there hath been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that if they love they knew not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see 't.

1. Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him; and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2. Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report; but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury; to report otherwise were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

1. Off. No more of him; he's a worthy man: make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter the Patricians, and the Tribunes of the People, Lictors before them: Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius the Consul. Sicinius and Brutus take their places by themselves: Coriolanus stands.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volsces, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service that
Hath thus stood for his country: therefore, please you,
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caius Martius Coriolanus, whom
We meet here both to thank and to remember
With honours like himself.
1. Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think
Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. [To the Tribunes.] Masters o' the people,
We do request your kindest ears, and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.
Sic. We are convented
Upon a pleasing treaty, and have hearts
Inclinable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.
Bru. Which the rather
We shall be bless'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people than
He hath hereto priz'd them at.
Men. That's off, that's off;
I would you rather had been silent. Please you
To hear Cominius speak?
Bru. Most willingly;
But yet my caution was more pertinent
Than the rebuke you give it.
Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.
Worthy Cominius, speak.
Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.
Nay, keep your place.
Sen. Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.
Cor. Your honours' pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again
Than hear say how I got them.
Bru. Sir, I hope
My words disbench'd you not.
Cor. No, sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But your people,
I love them as they weigh—
Men. Pray now, sit down.
Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i' the sun
When the alarum were struck than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd. Exit Coriolanus.
Men. Masters of the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,—
That's thousand to one good one,—when you now see

274 shower: i.e. of falling caps 277 time: the present spectacle 278 hearts . . . event: i.e. keep our minds intent upon what is to follow 279 Have with you: let us go 4 carry: win 5 vengeance: accursedly 8 who: i.e. the people 12 in: concerning 15 waved indifferently: would waver impartially 16 devotion: earnestness 18 discover: manifest opposite: adversary affect: aim at, desire 22 easy degrees: gradual steps 23 bonneted: with hats off 28 giving . . . lie: manifesting its own falsehood 32 determin'd of: reached a decision concerning

35 gratify: reward 36 stood for: supported 39 well-found: auspicious 43 like himself: worthy of him 46 defective: insufficient 47 Than . . . out: than we deficient in seeking to make the largest requital 50 motion toward: proposal to 51 passes: is voted convented: called together 53 treaty: proposal 55 theme: subject, i.e. Coriolanus 57 bless'd: happy 58 kinder value: more favorable opinion 60 off: amiss 77 disbench'd: unseated 80 sooth'd: flattered 81 as they weigh: according to their worth 85 monster'd: grotesquely exaggerated 88 That's . . . good one: of whom only one in a thousand is good

He had rather venture all his limbs for honour
Than one on 's ears to hear it? Proceed, Cominius.
Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly. It is held
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others; our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him. He bestrid
An o'er-press'd Roman, and i' the consul's view
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee: in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea,
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since
He lurch'd all swords of the garland. For this last,
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the fliers,
And by his rare example made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword, death's stamp,
Where it did mark, it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was tim'd with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny; aidless came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli like a planet. Now all's his:
When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense; then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the battle came he; where he did
Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoil; and till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.
Men. Worthy man!
Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours
Which we devise him.
Com. Our spoils he kick'd at,
And look'd upon things precious as they were
The common muck o' the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.
Men. He's right noble:
let him be call'd for.

94 haver: possessor 96 Be . . . counterpois'd: find any single equal 97 made . . . for: raised an army against 98 mark; cf. n. 100 Amazonian: i.e. beardless 104 on his knee: with such force as to bring him to his knee 105 in the scene: on the stage 108 Man-enter'd: entered upon manhood 110 lurch'd: robbed; cf. n. 112 speak him home: do him full justice 116 fell . . . stem: yielded to his course 117 took: took possession, slew 120, 121 painted . . . destiny: stained with the blood of those who could not escape their doom 124 by and by: immediately 126 fatigate: wearied 135 kick'd at: scorned 136 as: as if 140 to end it: merely to kill time

Sen. Call Coriolanus.
Off. He doth appear.

Enter Coriolanus.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.
Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.
Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.
Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom, for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage: please you,
That I may pass this doing.
Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.
Men. Put them not to 't:
Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and
Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.
Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.
Bru. [Aside to Sicinius.] Mark you that?
Cor. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus;
Show them the unaching scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only!
Men. Do not stand upon 't.
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them; and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.
Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

Flourish Cornets. Then exeunt. Mane[n]t Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.
Sic. May they perceive 's intent! He will require them,
As if he did contemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.
Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place
I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.]

Scene Third

[The Same. The Forum]
Enter seven or eight Citizens.

1. Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.
2. Cit. We may, sir, if we will.
3. Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do; for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

155 pass this doing: omit this action 157 voices: votes. bate: abate, waive 159 Put . . . to 't: do not force the issue 160 fit you: accommodate yourself 162 with your form: in the conventional manner 170 breath: i.e. votes 172 recommend: entrust 173 Our . . . them: what we propose to them 177 require: request 178 contemn what: scorn that what 1 Once: once for all

1. Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

3. Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some abram, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass.

2. Cit. Think you so? Which way do you judge my wit would fly?

3. Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; 'tis strongly wedged up in a block-head; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward.

2. Cit. Why that way?

3. Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return for conscience' sake, to help to get thee a wife.

2. Cit. You are never without your tricks: you may, you may.

3. Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus, in a gown of humility, with Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility: mark his behaviour. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt Citizens.]

Men. O, sir, you are not right: have you not known
The worthiest men have done 't?

Cor. What must I say?
'I pray, sir,'—Plague upon 't! I cannot bring
My tongue to such a pace. 'Look, sir, my wounds!
I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd and ran
From the noise of our own drums.'

Men. O me! the gods!
You must not speak of that: you must desire them
To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! Hang 'em!
I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You'll mar all:
I'll leave you. Pray you, speak to 'em, I pray you,
In wholesome manner. Exit.

Enter two of the Citizens.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean. So, here comes a brace.
You know the cause, sir, of my standing here?

1. Cit. We do, sir; tell us what hath brought you to 't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

2. Cit. Your own desert!

Cor. Ay, not mine own desire.

1. Cit. How! not your own desire?

Cor. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

1. Cit. You must think, if we give you anything, we hope to gain by you.

Cor. Well, then, I pray, your price o' the consulship?

1. Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.

Cor. Kindly! sir, I pray, let me ha 't: I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private. Your good voice, sir; what say you?

2. Cit. You shall ha 't, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir. There's in all two worthy voices begged. I have your alms: adieu.

1. Cit. But this is something odd.

2. Cit. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis no matter.

Enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

1. Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma?

1. Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends; you have not indeed loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condition they account gentle: and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitly; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountiful to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

2. Cit. We hope to find you our friend, and therefore give you our voices heartily.

1. Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not seal your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no farther.

Both. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exeunt.]

Cor. Most sweet voices!
Better it is to die, better to starve,
Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.
Why in this wolfish toge should I stand here,
To beg of Hob and Dick, that does appear,
Their needless vouches? Custom calls me to 't:
What custom wills, in all things should we do 't,
The dust on antique time would lie unswept,

14 once: once when 15 stuck: hesitated 17 abram: auburn 20 consent of: agreement about 29 rotten dews: infectious vapors 31, 32 you may: you may have your joke 34 greater part: majority 39 by particulars: individually 40 single: separate 57 lose by 'em: i.e. vainly seek to propagate in them by preaching 60 wholesome: sane, reasonable

S.d. two of the Citizens; cf. n. 73 o': for 93 of: from 96 be off: bare my head counterfeitly: hypocritically 97 bewitchment: sorcery 97, 98 popular man: demagogue bountiful: bountifully 103 seal: confirm 108 first: previously, already 109 wolfish toge; cf. n. 110 Hob . . . appear: whatever plebeian appears 111 needless vouches: unnecessary confirmations

And mountainous error be too highly heap'd
For truth to o'er-peer. Rather than fool it so,
Let the high office and the honour go
To one that would do thus. I am half through;
The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three Citizens more.

Here come moe voices.
Your voices: for your voices I have fought;
Watch'd for your voices; for your voices bear
Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six
I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more; your voices:
Indeed, I would be consul.

1. Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

2. Cit. Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, amen.
God save thee, noble consul! [Exeunt Citizens.]

Cor. Worthy voices!

Enter Menenius, with Brutus and Sicinius.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice: remains
That, in th' official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharg'd:
The people do admit you, and are summon'd
To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sir. Fare you well.

Exeunt Coriolanus and Menenius.

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
'Tis warm at 's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Enter the Plebeians.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

1. Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

2. Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice,
He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

3. Cit. Certainly,
He flouted us downright.

1. Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech; he did not mock us.

2. Cit. No one amongst us, save yourself, but says
He us'd us scornfully: he should have show'd us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for 's country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no man, saw 'em.

3. Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private;
And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
'I would be consul,' says he: 'aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore': when we granted that,
Here was, 'I thank you for your voices, thank you,
Your most sweet voices: now you have left your voices,
I have no further with you.' Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why either were you ignorant to see 't,
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him.
As you were lesson'd, when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy, ever spake against
Your liberties and the charters that you bear
I' the body of the weal; and now, arriving
A place of potency and sway o' the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might
Be curses to yourselves? You should have said
That as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices and
Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit
And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd
Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en th' advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt
When he did need your loves, and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you
Ere now denied the asker? and now again
Of him that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your su'd-for tongues?

3. Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny him yet.

2. Cit. And will deny him:
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

1. Cit. Ay, twice five hundred and their friends to piece em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,

115 o'er-peer: peep over the accumulation of tradition fool it: play the fool 121 Watch'd: done vigil 133 limitation: fixed period of time 134 remains: it remains 135 marks: emblems of authority 140 upon: on the business of 151 'Tis . . . heart: it warms his heart

176 ignorant to: so dull as not to 180 lesson'd: instructed 183 charters: privileges 184 weal: commonwealth arriving: attaining 198 call'd you up: summoned you 200 article: condition 210 rectorship: guiding power 213 Of: upon 219 piece: reinforce

They have chose a consul that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs that are as often beat for barking
As therefore kept to do so.
Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed;
How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.
Bru. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd,—
No impediment between,—but that you must
Cast your election on him.
Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment than as guided
By your own true affections; and that, your minds,
Pre-occupied with what you rather must do
Than what you should, make you against the grain
To voice him consul: lay the fault on us.
Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures to you,
How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continu'd, and what stock he springs of,
The noble house o' the Martians, from whence came
That Ancus Martius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king;
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
And Censorinus, that was so surnam'd,—
And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor,—
Was his great ancestor.
Sic. One thus descended,
That hath, beside, well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.
Bru. Say you ne'er had done 't—
Harp on that still—but by our putting on;
And presently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to the Capitol.
All. We will so; almost all
Repent in their election. Exeunt Plebeians.
Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard
Than stay, past doubt, for greater.
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.
Sic. To the Capitol, come:
We will be there before the stream o' the people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. Exeunt.

226 safer: more prudent 227 Enforce: lay stress upon 232 apprehension: discernment portance: behavior 234 After: in accord with 237 No . . . between: without admitting any impediment 253 Cf. n. 260 Scaling: balancing 264 putting on: urging 265 drawn . . . number: collected a sufficient number 268 Repent in: repent of 270 put in hazard: risked 271 stay . . . greater: that we should wait for a greater, inevitable hazard 273, 274 answer . . . vantage: make use

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Rome. A Street]

Coronets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, all the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Lartius, and other Senators.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?
Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was which caus'd
Our swifter composition.
Cor. So then the Volsces stand but as at first,
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road
Upon's again.
Com. They are worn, lord consul, so,
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again.
Cor. Saw you Aufidius?
Lart. On safeguard he came to me; and did curse
Against the Volsces, for they had so vilely
Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.
Cor. Spoke he of me?
Lart. He did, my lord.
Cor. How? what?
Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword;
That of all things upon the earth he hated
Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeless restitution, so he might
Be call'd your vanquisher.
Cor. At Antium lives he?
Lart. At Antium.
Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o' the common mouth: I do despise them;
For they do prank them in authority
Against all noble sufferance.
Sic. Pass no further.
Cor. Ha! what is that?
Bru. It will be dangerous to go on: no further.
Cor. What makes this change?
Men. The matter?
Com. Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common?
Bru. Cominius, no.
Cor. Have I had children's voices?
Senat. Tribunes, give way; he shall to the marketplace.
Bru. The people are incens'd against him.
Sic. Stop,
Or all will fall in broil.
Cor. Are these your herd?
Must these have voices, that can yield them now,
And straight disclaim their tongues? What are your offices?

1 made new head: raised a new army 3 composition: coming to terms 5 road: an inroad, raid 20 To . . . restitution: beyond hope of redemption 28 prank them: deck themselves

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?
Have you not set them on?
Men. Be calm, be calm.
Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,
To curb the will of the nobility:
Suffer 't, and live with such as cannot rule
Nor ever will be rul'd.
Bru. Call 't not a plot:
The people cry you mock'd them, and of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd;
Scandal'd the suppliants for the people, call'd them
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.
Cor. Why, this was known before.
Bru. Not to them all.
Cor. Have you inform'd them sithence?
Bru. How! I inform them!
Cor. You are like to do such business.
Bru. Not unlike,
Each way, to better yours.
Cor. Why then should I be consul? By yond clouds,
Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.
Sic. You show too much of that
For which the people stir; if you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.
Men. Let's be calm.
Com. The people are abus'd; set on. This palt'ring
Becomes not Rome, nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I' the plain way of his merit.
Cor. Tell me of corn!
This was my speech, and I will speak 't again,—
Men. Not now, not now.
Senat. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will. My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons:
For the mutable, rank-scented meiny, let them
Regard me as I do not flatter, and
Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd
By mingling them with us, the honour'd number;
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.
Men. Well, no more.
Senat. No more words, we beseech you.
Cor. How! no more!
As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs
Coin words till their decay against those measles,
Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.
Bru. You speak o' the people,
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their infirmity.
Sic. 'Twere well
We let the people know 't.
Men. What, what? his choler?
Cor. Choler!
Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind!
Sic. It is a mind
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.
Cor. Shall remain!
Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute 'Shall'?
Com. 'Twas from the canon.
Cor. 'Shall!'
O good but most unwise patricians! why,
You grave but reckless senators, have you thus
Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory 'shall,' being but
The horn and noise o' the monster's, wants not spirit
To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your ignorance; if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learn'd,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians
If they be senators; and they are no less,
When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate,
And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall,'
His popular 'shall,' against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself!
It makes the consuls base; and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
The one by th' other.
Com. Well, on to the market-place.
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece,—
Men. Well, well; no more of that.
Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power,
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.
Bru. Why, shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice?
Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn
Was not our recompense, resting well assur'd

48 purpos'd: premeditated 55 Scandal'd: slandered 59 sithence: since 64 Each . . . yours: to surpass your doings in every way 68 that: that defect of character 73 yoke: join in service 75 abus'd: deceived set on: incited 77 dishonour'd rub: shameful obstruction falsely: treacherously 85 meiny: multitude 86 Regard . . . flatter: heed my unflattering presentation 89 cockle: noxious weed 100 measles: disease spots

101 tetter: form an eruption on 111 mind: resolved opinion 116 Triton: sea-god 118 from the canon: not authorized by law 122 Given: allowed Hydra: the many-headed monster 124 horn and noise: noisy horn 127 vail . . . ignorance: let your folly submit 127, 128 awake . . . lenity: arouse yourselves from your dangerous mildness 130 cushions: i.e. seats in the Senate 132 great'st taste: predominant taste 133 palates: smacks of 138 up: established 140 gap of both: cleavage between the two 140, 141 take . . . other: use the one to overthrown the other 154 our recompense: fair payment from us

They ne'er did service for 't. Being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis. Being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. Th' accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the motive
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bosom multiplied digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's like to be their words: 'We did request it;
We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands.' Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares fears; which will in time break ope
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.
Men. Come, enough.
Bru. Enough, with over-measure,
Cor. No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal! This double worship,
Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom,
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech you,—
You that will be less fearful than discreet,
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on 't, that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it, at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison. Your dishonour
Mangles true judgement, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become 't,
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For th' ill which doth control 't.
Bru. H'as said enough.
Sic. H'as spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.
Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!
What should the people do with these bald tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench. In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet be said it must be meet,

155 press'd: enlisted 156 navel: vital center 157 thread: pass through 162 All . . . unborn: causelessly motive: occasion; cf. n. 164 bosom multiplied; cf. n. 165, 166 Let . . . words: let their actions explain what they are likely to say 167 poll: number 174 over-measure: excess 177 What . . . withal: may all divine and human sanctities attest my final assertion 180 conclude: come to a decision 183 unstable slightness: petty whims purpose so barr'd; where rational action is thus obstructed 185 less . . . discreet: prudent rather than timid 186, 187 That . . . on 't: whose devotion to the essentials of good government exceeds your fear of innovations in politics 189 jump: put in hazard 191 multitudinous tongue: i.e. voting power of the rabble 196 H'as: he has 198 answer: abide the penalty 200 despite: malice 203 greater bench: senate 204 what's . . . be: inevitably necessity, however unfitting

And throw their power i' the dust.
Bru. Manifest treason!
Sic. This a consul? no.
Bru. The ædiles, ho!

Enter an Ædile.

Let him be apprehended.
Sic. Go, call the people; [Exit Ædile.] in whose name, myself
Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.
Cor. Hence, old goat!
All. We'll surety him.
Com. Ag'd sir, hands off.
Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.
Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Enter a rabble of Plebeians with the Ædiles.

Men. On both sides more respect.
Sic. Here's he that would take from you all your power.
Bru. Seize him, ædiles!
All. Down with him!—down with him!—
2. Sen. Weapons!—weapons!—weapons!—
They all bustle about Coriolanus.
Tribunes!—patricians!—citizens!—What ho!—
Sicinius!—Brutus!—Coriolanus!—Citizens!
All. Peace!—Peace!—Peace!—Stay!—Hold!—Peace!
Men. What is about to be?—I am out of breath;
Confusion's near; I cannot speak. You, tribunes
To the people! Coriolanus, patience!
Speak, good Sicinius.
Sic. Hear me, people; peace!
All. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace!— Speak, speak, speak.
Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
Martius would have all from you; Martius,
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.
Men. Fie, fie, fie!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.
Sen. To unbuild the city and to lay all flat.
Sic. What is the city but the people?
All. True,
The people are the city.
Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd
The people's magistrates.
All. You so remain.
Men. And so are like to do.
Com. That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation,
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.
Sic. This deserves death.
Bru. Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce,
Upon the part o' the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Martius is worthy
Of present death.
Sic. Therefore lay hold of him;

210 ædiles: ediles of the people, assistants to the tribunes 213 Attach: arrest innovator: agitator 217 surety: vouch for 252 distinctly ranges: stretches out intact in separate buildings

Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.
Bru. Ædiles, seize him!
All Ple. Yield, Martius, yield!
Men. Hear me one word;
Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.
Æd. Peace, peace!
Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friends,
And temperately proceed to what you would
Thus violently redress.
Bru. Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous
Where the disease is violent. Lay hands upon him,
And bear him to the rock. Coriolanus draws his sword.
Cor. No, I'll die here.
There's some among you have beheld me fighting:
Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.
Men. Down with that sword! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.
Bru. Lay hands upon him.
Men. Help Martius, help,
You that be noble; help him, young and old!
All. Down with him!—down with him! Exeunt.

In this mutiny the Tribunes, the Ædiles, and the People are beat in.

Men. Go, get you to your house; begone, away!
All will be naught else.
2. Sen. Get you gone.
Cor. Stand fast;
We have as many friends as enemies.
Men. Shall it be put to that?
Sen. The gods forbid!
I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.
Men. For 'tis a sore upon us
You cannot tent yourself: begone, beseech you.
Com. Come, sir, along with us.
Cor. I would they were barbarians,—as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd,—not Romans,—as they are not,
Though calv'd i' the porch o' the Capitol,—
Men. Begone;
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue;
One time will owe another.
Cor. On fair ground
I could beat forty of them.
Men. I could myself
Take up a brace o' the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.
Com. But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call'd foolery when it stands
Against a falling fabric. Will you hence,
Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters and o'erbear
What they are us'd to bear.
Men. Pray, you, begone.
I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little: this must be patch'd
With cloth of any colour.
Com. Nay, come away.
Exeunt Coriolanus and Cominius.
Patri. This man has marr'd his fortune.
Men. His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for 's power to thunder, His heart's his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. A noise within.
Here's goodly work!
Patri. I would they were a-bed!
Men. I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance!
Could he not speak 'em fair?

Enter Brutus and Sicinius with the rabble again.

Sic. Where is this viper
That would depopulate the city and
Be every man himself?
Men. You worthy tribunes,—
Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
Than the severity of the public power.
Which he so sets at nought,
1. Cit. He shall well know
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.
All. He shall, sure on 't.
Men. Sir, sir,—
Sic. Peace!
Men. Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt
With modest warrant.
Sic. Sir, how comes 't that you
Have help to make this rescue?
Men. Hear me speak:
As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults.
Sic. Consul! what consul?
Men. The Consul Coriolanus.
Bru. He consul!
All. No, no, no, no, no.
Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people,
I may be heard, I would crave a word or two,
The which shall turn you to no further harm
Than so much loss of time.
Sic. Speak briefly then;
For we are peremptory to dispatch
This viperous traitor. To eject him hence
Were but one danger, and to keep him here
Our certain death; therefore it is decreed
He dies to-night.
Men. Now the good gods forbid
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deserved children is enroll'd
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam

261 rock Tarpeian; cf. n. 277 seen me: seen me do 285 naught: ruined 292 cause: disorder, disease 297 litter'd: whelped, born like beasts 301 One . . . another: a balance will be struck between this unlucky time and one that will be more favorable 306 beyond arithmetic: incalculable 308 fabric: building 309 tag: rabble 310 interrupted: obstructed

314, 315 this . . . colour: we must use the roughest remedies 323 does: he does 328 speak 'em fair: conciliate them 336 severity: i.e. exposure to severity 344 cry havoc: give the signal for indiscriminate slaughter 345 With . . . warrant: as moderation warrants 357 turn you to: occasion you 360 peremptory: resolved 368 dam: mother (of breasts)

Should now eat up her own!
Sic. He's a disease that must be cut away.
Men. O! he's a limb that has but a disease;
Mortal to cut it off; to cure it easy.
What has he done to Rome that's worthy death?
Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost,—
Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath
By many an ounce,—he dropp'd it for his country;
And what is left, to lose it by his country,
Were to us all, that do 't and suffer it,
A brand to th' end o' the world.
Sic. This is clean kam.
Bru. Merely awry: when he did love his country
It honour'd him.
Men. The service of the foot,
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.
Bru. We'll hear no more.
Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence,
Lest his infection, being of catching nature,
Spread further.
Men. One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds to 's heels. Proceed by process;
Lest parties—as he is belov'd—break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.
Bru. If it were so,—
Sic. What do ye talk?
Have we not had a taste of his obedience?
Our ædiles smote? ourselves resisted? Come!
Men. Consider this: he has been bred i' the wars
Since a' could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In bolted language; meal and bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer by a lawful form,—
In peace,—to his utmost peril.
1. Sen. Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.
Sic. Noble Meneius,
Be you then as the people's officer.
Masters, lay down your weapons.
Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the market-place. We'll attend you there:
Where, if you bring not Martius, we'll proceed
In our first way.
Men. I'll bring him to you.
[To the Senators.] Let me desire your company. He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.
Sen. Pray you, let's to him.
Exeunt omnes.

372 Mortal: producing death 378 suffer: permit 379 brand: mark of infamy 380 clean kam: absolutely perverse 381 Merely: completely 383–385 The ... was; cf. n. 392 unscann'd: rash, thoughtless 393 pounds: pound-weights process: legal method 394 parties: factions 397 talk: say 402 bolted: sifted

Scene Second

[The Same. A Room in Coriolanus's House]
Enter Coriolanus with Nobles.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight; yet will I still
Be thus to them.
Noble. You do the nobler.
Cor. I muse my mother
Does not approve me further, who was wont
To call them woollen vassals, things created
To buy and sell with groats, to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace or war.

Enter Volumnia.

I talk of you:
Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me
False to my nature? Rather say I play
The man I am.
Vol. O! sir, sir, sir,
I would have had you put your power well on
Before you had worn it out.
Cor. Let go.
Vol. You might have been enough the man you are
With striving less to be so: lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions if
You had not show'd them how you were dispos'd,
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.
Cor. Let them hang.
Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter Menenius with the Senators.

Men. Come, come; you have been too rough, something too rough;
You must return and mend it.
Sen. There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.
Vol. Pray be counsell'd.
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.
Men. Well said, noble woman!
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that
The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.
Cor. What must I do?
Men. Return to the tribunes.
Cor. Well, what then? what then?
Men. Repent what you have spoke.
Cor. For them! I cannot do it to the gods;

4 precipitation: steepness 5 Below ... sight: lower than eyesight can reach 8 muse: wonder 10 woollen vassals: coarsely dressed underlings 11 groats: four-penny coins 13 ordinance: rank 22 Let go: No more of that 25 thwartings: cf. n. 35 Cleave ... midst: break in two 37 as little apt: as unbending 41 but: except

Must I then do 't to them?
Vol. You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
I' the war do grow together: grant that, and tell me,
In peace what each of them by th' other lose,
That they combine not there.
Cor. Tush, tush!
Men. A good demand.
Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
The same you are not,—which, for your best ends,
You adopt your policy,—how is it less or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war, since that to both
It stands in like request?
Cor. Why force you this?
Vol. Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you,
But with such words that are but rooted in
Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth.
Now this no more dishonours you at all.
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune and
The hazard of much blood.
I would dissemble with my nature where
My fortunes and my friends at stake requir'd
I should do so in honour: I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general louts
How you can frown than spend a fawn upon 'em,
For the inheritance of their loves and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.
Men. Noble lady!
Come, go with us; speak fair; you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.
Vol. I prithee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it,—here be with them,—
Thy knee bussing the stones,—for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th' ignorant
More learned than the ears,—waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now humble as the ripest mulberry
That will not hold the handling: or say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power and person.
Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours;
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.
Vol. Prithee now,
Go, and be rul'd; although I know thou hadst rather
Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf
Than flatter him in a bower.

Enter Cominius.

Here is Cominius.
Com. I have been i' the market-place; and, sir, 'tis fit
You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness or by absence: all's in anger.
Men. Only fair speech.
Com. I think 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.
Vol. He must, and will.
Prithee now, say you will, and go about it.
Cor. Must I go show them my unbarbed sconce?
Must I with my base tongue give to my noble heart
A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do 't:
Yet, where there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Martius, they to dust should grind it,
And throw 't against the wind. To the marketplace!
You have put me now to such a part which never
I shall discharge to the life.
Com. Come, come, we'll prompt you.
Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.
Cor. Well, I must do 't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quir'd with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks, and school-boys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips, and my arm'd knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms! I will not do 't,
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.
Vol. At thy choice then:
To beg of thee it is my more dishonour
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let
Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness, for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list,
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me,

51 absolute: positive, peremptory 53 but . . . speak: except under the command of necessity 54 policy: craft 57 combine: join 62 adopt: adopt as 65 stands . . . request: is equally valuable force: urge 67 lies . . . on: is incumbent upon you 68 by . . . instruction: as your nature teaches you 70, 71 are . . . tongue: have their roots no deeper than your tongue; cf. n. 72 Of . . . to: unapproved by 74 take in: get possession of 75 put . . . fortune: force you to risk the fortune of war 79 I am: I am at stake 81 general louts: the good-for-nothings of the community 83 safeguard: for the security 84 that want: the want of their loves 87, 88 Not . . . past; cf. n. 90 this bonnet: that which Coriolanus wears 91, 92 And . . . stones; cf. n. 95 Which often: a conciliatory gesture which you are to repeat often 100 as they: as for them

105 were: would be 106 free: abundantly 111 bower: abode of pleasure 114 make . . . party: collect many supporters 121 unbarbed sconce: bared head 124 this single plot: my own person 127 which: as 128 discharge . . . life: perform naturally 137 quir'd: harmonized 138 virgin: nurse-maid's 140 Tent: encamp take up: fill 141 The . . . sight: my eyes 145 surcease to honour: cease to have respect for 149 my . . . dishonour: more dishonor for me 150 thou: for thee to beg 150–152 let . . . stoutness: let my anxiety concerning thy dangerous obstinacy give place to such pride as thou feelest

But owe thy pride thyself.
Cor. Pray, be content:
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home belov'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul,
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I' the way of flattery further.
Vol. Do your will.
Exit Volumnia.
Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you: arm yourself
To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.
Cor. The word is 'mildly.' Pray you, let us go:
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.
Men. Ay, but mildly.
Cor. Well, mildly be it then. Mildly! Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Same. The Forum]
Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects
Tyrannical power: if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the spoil got on the Antiates
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.

What, will he come?
Æd. He's coming.
Bru. How accompanied?
Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.
Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
Set down by the poll?
Æd. I have, 'tis ready.
Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?
Æd. I have.
Sic. Assemble presently the people hither;
And when they hear me say, 'It shall be so,
I' the right and strength o' the commons,' be it either
For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say, fine, cry 'fine,'—if death, cry 'death,'
Insisting on the old prerogative
And power i' the truth o' the cause.
Æd. I shall inform them.
Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.
Æd. Very well.

155 owe: own 158 mountebank: act the quack vendor for 159 Cog: cheat 165 arm yourself: prepare 1 affects: aims at 3 Enforce: press 4 on: at the expense of 13 by the poll: by individual names 15 by tribes: cf. n. 27 present: immediate

Sic. Make them be strong and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give 't them.
Bru. Go about it.
[Exit Ædile.]
Put him to choler straight. He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction: being once chaf'd, he cannot
Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks
What's in his heart; and that is there which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius, with others.

Sic. Well, here he comes.
Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an hostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knave by the volume. The honour'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among 's!
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!
1. Sen. Amen, amen.
Men. A noble wish.

Enter the Ædile with the Plebeians.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.
Æd. List to your tribunes; audience; peace! I say.
Cor. First, hear me speak.
Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho!
Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present?
Must all determine here?
Sic. I do demand,
If you submit you to the people's voices,
Allow their officers, and are content
To suffer lawful censure for such faults
As shall be prov'd upon you?
Cor. I am content.
Men. Lo! citizens, he says he is content:
The warlike service he has done, consider; think
Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.
Cor. Scratches with briers,
Scars to move laughter only.
Men. Consider further,
That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier: do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds,
But, as I say, such as I become a soldier,
Rather than envy you.
Com. Well, well; no more.
Cor. What is the matter,
That being pass'd for consul with full voice
I am so dishonour'd that the very hour
You take it off again?
Sic. Answer to us.
Cor. Say, then: 'tis true, I ought so.
Sic. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take

34, 35 have ... contradiction: indulge his love of contradiction in full measure 37 looks: tends, is calculated 41 piece: coin 42 bear ... volume: submit to be called knave interminably 53 this present: the present occasion 54 determine: end 57 Allow: acknowledge 70 accents: cf. n. 72 envy: evidence hostility to 80 contriv'd: designed

From Rome all season'd office, and to wind
Yourself into a power tyrannical;
For which you are a traitor to the people.
Cor. How! Traitor!
Men. Nay, temperately; your promise.
Cor. The fires i' the lowest hell fold in the people!
Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune!
Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,
In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in
Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say
'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free
As I do pray the gods.
Sic. Mark you this, people?
All. To the rock!—to the rock with him!
Sic. Peace!
We need not put new matter to his charge:
What you have seen him do, and heard him speak,
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him; even this,
So criminal and in such capital kind,
Deserves th' extremest death.
Bru. But since he hath
Serv'd well for Rome,—
Cor. What do you prate of service?
Bru. I talk of that, that know it.
Cor. You!
Men. Is this the promise that you made your mother?
Com. Know, I pray you,—
Cor. I'll know no further:
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,
Vagabond exile, flaying, pent to linger
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage for what they can give,
To have 't with saying 'Good morrow.'
Sic. For that he has,—
As much as in him lies,—from time to time
Envied against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power, as now at last
Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That doth distribute it; in the name o' the people,
And in the power of us the tribunes, we,
Even from this instant, banish him our city,
In peril of precipitation
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates: i' the people's name,
I say, it shall be so.
All. It shall be so.—It shall be so.—Let him away.—
He's banish'd, and it shall be so.
Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common friends,—
Sic. He's sentenc'd; no more hearing.
Com. Let me speak:
I have been consul, and can show for Rome
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good with a respect more tender,
More holy, and profound, than mine own life,
My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,
And treasure of my loins; then if I would Speak that—
Sic. We know your drift: speak what?
Bru. There's no more to be said but he is banish'd,
As enemy to the people and his country.
It shall be so.
All. It shall be so,—it shall be so.
Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate
As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air, I banish you;
And here remain with your uncertainty!
Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,
Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders; till at length
Your ignorance,—which finds not till it feels,—
Making but reservation of yourselves,—
Still your own foes,—deliver you as most
Abated captives to some nation
That won you without blows! Despising,
For you, the city, thus I turn my back:
There is a world elsewhere.
Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius with others. They all shout and throw up their caps.
Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!
All. Our enemy is banish'd—he is gone!—Hoo! oo!
Sic. Go, see him out at gates, and follow him,
As he hath follow'd you, with all despite;
Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard
Attend us through the city.
All. Come, come,—let's see him out at gates! come!
The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Come! Exeunt.

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Rome. Before a Gate of the City]
Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell: the beast
With many heads butts me away. Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd
To say extremity was the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could bear;
That when the sea was calm all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,
When most struck home,—being gentle, wounded, craves
A noble cunning: you were us'd to load me
With precepts that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them.
Vir. O heavens! O heavens!
Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman,—
Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,

81 season'd: time-honored 86 fold in: encompass 87 injurious: insulting 88 Within: although within 101 capital kind: death-deserving measure 112 pent: imprisoned linger: starve slowly 116 To have 't: though I could have it 119 Envied: been malignant 121 not: not merely 123 doth: do; cf. n.

139 estimate: reputation 151 remain: do you remain uncertainty: inconstancy of mind 157 Making . . . of: exempting from banishments none but 159 Abated: crestfallen S.d. with others; cf. n. 7–9 fortune's . . . cunning: cf. n. 14 red pestilence: plague

And occupations perish!
Cor. What, what, what!
I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat. Cominius,
Droop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife! my mother!
I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are salter than a young man's,
And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime general,
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sad women
'Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My mother, you wot well
My hazards still have been your solace; and
Believe 't not lightly,—though I go alone
Like a lonely dragon, that his fen
Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen,—your son
Will or exceed the common or be caught
With cautelous baits and practice.
Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee awhile: determine on some course,
More than a wild exposture to each chance
That starts i' the way before thee.
Cor. O the gods!
Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of us,
And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send
O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needer.
Cor. Fare ye well:
Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full
Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruis'd: bring me but out at gate.
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground you shall
Hear from me still; and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.
Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep.
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.
Cor. Give me thy hand:
Come. Exeunt.

15 occupations: mechanical employments 18 Resume: recover 28 fond: as fond, as foolish 34 or . . . common: either do some deed of fame 35 With . . . practice: by the snares and treachery of wily adversaries 36 first: first and only, eminent 39 exposture: exposure 45 repeal: recall 47 advantage: opportunity to profit by circumstances 48 needer: him who should utilize the advantage 51 wars' surfeits: strains from military service 54 noble touch: proved nobility 58 me formerly: my former self 59 worthily: as worthily spoken

Scene Second

[The Same. A Street near the Gate]

Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius and Brutus, with the Ædile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further.
The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.
Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done
Than when it was a-doing.
Sic. Bid them home;
Say their great enemy is gone, and they
Stand in their ancient strength.
Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Ædile.]
Here comes his mother.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Sic. Let's not meet her.
Bru. Why?
Sic. They say she's mad.
Bru. They have ta'en note of us: keep on your way.
Vol. O! y' are well met. The hoarded plague o' the gods
Requite your love!
Men. Peace, peace! be not so loud.
Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—
Nay, and you shall hear some. [To Brutus.] Will you be gone?
Vir. [To Sicinius.] You shall stay too. I would I had the power
To say so to my husband.
Sic. Are you mankind?
Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame? Not but this fool.
Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that strook more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?
Sic. O blessed heavens!
Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise words;
And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what; yet go:
Nay, but thou shalt stay too: I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.
Sic. What then?
Vir. What then!
He'd make an end of thy posterity.
Vol. Bastards and all.
Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!
Men. Come, come: peace!
Sic. I would he had continu'd to his country
As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.
Bru. I would be had.
Vol. 'I would he had!' 'Twas you incens'd the rabble:
Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.
Bru. Pray, let's go.
Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:

2 have sided: to have enlisted themselves 16 The hoarded . . . gods: every plague the gods have stored up 20 some: a part 23 say so: i.e. command his presence mankind: savage, cf. n. 26 foxship: foxlike cunning 27 strook: struck 31 what: something 33 Arabia: the Arabian desert 43 noble knot: i.e. bond of faithful service

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:
As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son,—
This lady's husband here, this, do you see,—
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.
Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.
Sic. Why stay we to be baited
With one that wants her wits? Exeunt Tribunes.
Vol. Take my prayers with you.
I would the gods had nothing else to do
But to confirm my curses! Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to 't.
Men. You have told them home,
And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?
Vol. Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself,
And so shall starve with feeding. Come, lets go.
Leave this faint puling and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.
Exeunt [Volumnia and Virgilia].
Men. Fie, fie, fie! Exit.

Scene Third

[A Highway between Rome and Antium]
Enter a Roman and a Volsce.

Rom. I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name I think is Adrian.

Vols. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em: know you me yet?

Vols. Nicanor? No.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vols. You had more heard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well appeared by your tongue. What's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state to find you out there: you have well saved me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrections: the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vols. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again. For the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vols. Coriolanus banished!

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vols. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vols. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vols. A most royal one: the centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in th' entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily will met, and most glad of your company.

Vols. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Antium. Before Aufidius' House]
Enter Coriolanus, in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium. City,
'Tis I that made thy widows: many an heir
Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars
Have I heard groan and drop: then, know me not,
Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with stones
In puny battle slay me.

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,
Where great Aufidius lies. Is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state
At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?

Cit. This, here before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir. Farewell.
Exit Citizen.

O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosoms seems to wear one heart,
Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise,
Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love
Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissension of a doit, break out
To bitterest enmity: so, fellest foes,
Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep.
To take the one the other, by some chance,
Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends
And interjoin their issues. So with me:
My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon

58 With: by 61 confirm: note down for execution 64 told . . . home: said all there is to say 68 faint puling: weak whining; cf. n. 9 favour: face appeared: made to appear, manifested 10 note: instruction 20 ripe aptness: complete readiness 22 glowing: i.e. like a spark 27 The day: the state of affairs

31 in no request of: unvalued by 32 cannot choose: cannot fail to appear well 38, 39 distinctly billeted: carefully enrolled entertainment: receipt of pay on foot: under arms 44 my part: the words I should say 3 'fore my wars: confronting me in battle 7 Save: God preserve 10 lies: lodges 16 thy . . . turns: how inconstant you are 17 bosom seems: cf. n. 19 twin: are joined like twins 21 dissension . . . doit: dispute over the value of half a farthing 22 fellest: fiercest 23 passions: violent emotions 24 To take . . . other: cf. n. 26 interjoin their issues: intermarry their children (to make the league perpetual). 27 hate: cf. n.

This enemy town. I'll enter: if he slay me,
He does fair justice; if he give me way,
I'll do his country service. Exit.

Scene Fifth

[The Same. A Hall in Aufidius' House]
Music plays. Enter a Servingman.

1. Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.]

Enter another Servingman.

2. Serv. Where's Cotus? my master calls for him. Cotus! Exit.

Enter Coriolanus.

Cor. A goodly house: the feast smells well; but I
Appear not like a guest.

Enter the First Servingman.

1. Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray, go to the door. Exit

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment,
In being Coriolanus.

Enter Second Servant.

2. Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

2. Serv. 'Away!' Get you away.

Cor. Now, th' art troublesome.

2. Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter Third Servingman. The first meets him.

3. Serv. What fellow's this?

1. Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house: prithee, call my master to him.

3. Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

3. Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

3. Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

3. Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you; pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function; go, and batten on cold bits.
Pushes him away from him.

3. Serv. What, you will not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

2. Serv. And I shall. Exit Second Servingman.

3. Serv. Where dwell'st thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

3. Serv. 'Under the canopy!'

Cor. Ay.

3. Serv. Where's that?

Cor. I' the city of kites and crows.

3. Serv. 'I' the city of kites and crows!' What an ass it is! Then thou dwell'st with daws too?

Cor. No; I serve not thy master.

3. Serv. How sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay; 'tis an honester service than to meddle with thy mistress.
Thou prat'st, and prat'st: serve with thy trencher.
Hence. Beats him away.

Enter Aufidius with the [Second] Servingman.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

2. Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence com'st thou? what wouldst thou? Thy name? Why speak'st not? Speak, man: what's thy name?

Cor. [Unmuffling.] If, Tullus,
Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity
Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?
Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in 't; though thy tackle's torn,
Thou show'st a noble vessel. What's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown. Know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not. Thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Martius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volsces,
Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service,
The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country are requited
But with that surname; a good memory
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;
The cruelty and envy of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;
And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be
Whoop'd out of Rome. Now this extremity
Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of hope,—
Mistake me not,—to save my life; for if
I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world
I would have 'voided thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge
Thine own particular wrongs and stop those maims
Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,
And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it,
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee, for I will fight
Against my canker'd country with the spleen
Of all the under fiends. But if so be

24 way: scope, opportunity 11 companions: rascals 21 avoid: get out of 29 Follow ... function: do your proper business batten: fatten yourself 36 canopy: sky

41 daws: jackdaws, fools 46 trencher: wooden platter 62 tackle: rigging of ship 72 memory: reminder 79 Whoop'd: hooted 84 full quit of: fully avenged on 86 heart of wreak: vengeful heart 87, 88 maims ... shame: disgraceful losses of men or territory 92 canker'd: malevolent spleen: anger

Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes
Th' art tir'd, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice;
Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,
Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate,
Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

Auf. O Martius, Martius!
Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart
A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say, ' 'Tis true,' I'd not believe them more
Than thee, all noble Martius. Let me twine
Mine arms about that body, where against
My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,
And scarr'd the moon with splinters: here I clip
The anvil of my sword, and do contest
As hotly and as nobly with thy love
As ever in ambitious strength I did
Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,
I lov'd the maid I married; never man
Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw
Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee,
We have a power on foot; and I had purpose.
Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,
Or lose mine arm for 't. Thou hast beat me out
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since
Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me;
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat,
And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Martius,
Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that
Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy, and, pouring war
In the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'er-bear. O! come; go in,
And take our friendly senators by the hands,
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,
Who am prepar'd against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have
The leading of thine own revenges, take
Th' one half of my commission, and set down,
As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness, thine own ways;
Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,
Or rudely visit them in parts remote,
To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:
Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy;
Yet, Martius, that was much. Your hand: most welcome! Exeunt.

Enter two of the Servingmen.

1. Serv. Here's a strange alteration!

2. Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me his clothes made a false report of him.

1. Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2. Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.

1. Serv. He had so; looking as it were,—would I were hanged but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2. Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: he is simply the rarest man i' the world.

1. Serv. I think he is; but a greater soldier than he you wot on.

2. Serv. Who? my master?

1. Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

2. Serv. Worth six on him.

1. Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2. Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town our general is excellent.

1. Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Enter the Third Servingman.

3. Serv. O slaves! I can tell you news; news, you rascals.

Both. What, what, what? let's partake.

3. Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lief be a condemned man.

Both. Wherefore? wherefore?

3. Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general, Caius Martius.

1. Serv. Why do you say 'thwack our general?'

3. Serv. I do not say, 'thwack our general'; but he was always good enough for him.

2. Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends: he was ever too hard for him: I have heard him say so himself.

1. Serv. He was too hard for him,—directly to say the truth on 't: before Corioli he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado.

2. Serv. As he had been cannibally given, he might have boiled and eaten him too.

1. Serv. But, more of thy news.

3. Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end o' the table; no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with 's hand, and turns up the white o' th' eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the

94 prove ... fortunes: try your fortune further 100 tuns: huge barrels 105 A root ... envy: one of the old sources of my hate 109 where against: against which 110 grained ash: spear-shaft of tough ash 111 clip: embrace 117 Sigh'd ... breath: uttered sincere love sighs 118 dances: makes leap rapt: enraptured 122 brawn: brawny arm 123 out: outright 128 wak'd: I have awaked 133 o'er-bear: bear all before us; cf. n. 139 absolute: perfect 141 set down: determine

S.d. Enter ... Servingmen: cf. n. 153 gave me: misgave me, made me suspect 156 set up: start spinning 164, 165 he ... on: the man you know of, i.e. Audifidius; cf. n. 175 let's partake: let us share it 179 thwack: beat 186 directly: candidly 187 scotched: slashed notched: cut carbonado: steak prepared for broiling 190 boiled: cf. n. 192 made on: made much of, pampered 196 sanctifies ... hand: fondles his hand as if it were a saint's relic 196, 197 turns ... eye: gazes upward in reverence bottom: fundamental part whole table. He'll go, he says, and sowl the porter of Rome gates by the ears: he will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled.

2. Serv. And he's as like to do 't as any man I can imagine.

3. Serv. Do 't! he will do 't; for—look you, sir—he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir—as it were—durst not—look you, sir—show themselves—as we term it—his friends, whilst he's in directitude.

1. Serv. Directitude! what's that?

3. Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

1. Serv. But when goes this forward?

3. Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum strook up this afternoon; 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2. Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

1. Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; mulled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men.

2. Serv. 'Tis so: and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckholds.

1. Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

3. Serv. Reason: because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in! Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

[Rome. A Public Place]
Enter the two Tribunes, Sicinius and Brutus.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;
His remedies are tame i' the present peace
And quietness o' the people, which before
Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends
Blush that the world goes well, who rather had,
Though they themselves did suffer by 't, behold
Dissentious numbers pestering streets, than see
Our tradesmen singing in their shops and going
About their functions friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. We stood to 't in good time. Is this Menenius?
Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he. O! he is grown most kind
Of late. Hail, sir!
Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd
But with his friends: the commonwealth doth stand,
And so would do, were he more angry at it.
Men. All's well; and might have both much better, if
He could have temporiz'd.
Sic. Where is he, hear you?
Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife
Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

All. The gods preserve you both!
Sic. Good den, our neighbours.
Bru. Good den to you all, good den to you all.
1. Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees,
Are bound to pray for you both.
Sic. Live, and thrive!
Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd Coriolanus
Had lov'd you as we did.
All. Now the gods keep you!
Both Tri. Farewell, farewell. Exeunt Citizens.
Sic. This is a happier and more comely time
Than when these fellows ran about the streets
Crying confusion.
Bru. Caius Martius was
A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent,
O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,
Self-loving,—
Sic. And affecting one sole throne,
Without assistance.
Men. I think not so.
Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
If he had gone forth consul, found it so.
Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome
Sits safe and still without him.

Enter on Ædile.

Æd. Worthy tribunes,
There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,
Reports, the Volsces with two several powers
Are enter'd in the Roman territories,
And with the deepest malice of the war
Destroy what lies before 'em.
Men. 'Tis Aufidius,
Who, hearing of our Martius' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world;
Which were inshell'd when Martius stood for Rome,
And durst not once peep out.
Sic. Come, what talk you of Martius?
Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be
The Volsces dare break with us.
Men. Cannot be!
We have record that very well it can,
And three examples of the like hath been
Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Lest you shall chance to whip your information,

199, 200 by . . . table: the whole table uniting both in requesting and granting 200 sowl: drag 202 leave . . . polled: leave headless bodies where he passes 207 directitude: error for 'discreditude,' discredit (?) 210 in blood: in fine fettle 211 conies: rabbits 213 presently: at once 214 parcel: part 217 nothing: good for nothing 220 audible: noisy (?), quick of hearing (?) vent: opportunity for action 221 mulled: insipid, like warmed and sweetened wine 222 insensible: sluggish, insensitive 228 Reason: that is natural 230 rising: getting up from table 2 remedies: means of reinstatement tame: languid, ineffectual; cf. n. 4 hurry: turbulence 7 pestering: blocking up 9 friendly: like good friends

15 But with: except among 32 comely: gracious 34 Crying confusion: shouting for anarchy 39 affecting . . . throne: aiming at individual sovereignty 42 by this: by this time to . . . lamentation: to the sorrow of us all 43 gone forth: come out, finally become found: have found 54 Thrusts . . . horns: cf. n. 55 inshell'd: drawn within the shell stood for: was champion of 57 what: why

And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.
Sic. Tell not me:
I know this cannot be.
Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the senate-house: some news is coming,
That turns their countenances.
Sic. 'Tis this slave.—
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes: his raising;
Nothing but his report.
Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd
Sic. What more fearful?
Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths—
How probable I do not know—that Martius,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,
And vows revenge as spacious as between
The young'st and oldest thing.
Sic. This is most likely!
Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish
Good Martius home again.
Sic. The very trick on 't.
Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more atone
Than violent'st contrariety.

Enter [another] Messenger.

Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Caius Martius,
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already
O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter Cominius.

Com. O! you have made good work!
Men. What news? what news?
Com. You have holp to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the city leads upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses,—
Men. What's the news? what's the news?
Com. Your temples burned in their cement, and
Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore.
Men. Pray now, your news?—
You have made fair work, I fear me. Pray, your news?
If Martius should be join'd with Volscians,—
Com. If?
He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than Nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.
Men. You have made good work,
You, and your apron-men; you that stood so much
Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!
Com. He'll shake
Your Rome about your ears.
Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!
Bru. But is this true, sir?
Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resist
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is 't can blame him?
Your enemies, and his, find something in him.
Men. We are all undone unless
The noble man have mercy.
Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do 't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf
Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they Should say, 'Be good to Rome,' they charg'd him even
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.
Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, 'Beseech you, cease.'—You have made fair hands,
You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!
Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.
Tribunes. Say not we brought it.
Men. How! Was 't we? We lov'd him; but, like beasts
And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,
Who did hoot him out o' the city.
Com. But I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of mn, obeys his points
As if he were his officer: desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clusters.
And is Aufidius with him? You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head
Which will not prove a whip: as many coxcombs
As you threw caps up will he tumble down,

72 coming: cf. n. 84, 85 And vows ... thing; cf. n. 91 atone: grow reconciled 97 O'erborne ... way: advanced like a wave 101 holp: helped 102 leads: leaden roofs 103 to: before 105 temples ... cement: cf. n. 106 franchises: public rights whereon ... stood: which you asserted confin'd ... bore: reduced to absolute nullity

115 brats: mere children 119 apron-men: artisans, dressed in aprons 120 voice of occupation: workmen's opinion 128 other: otherwise 129 smilingly: gladly who resist: those who resist 139 charg'd: would be urging; cf. n. 141 show'd: would appear 145 made fair hands: done fine work 146 crafted; cf. n. fair: with beautiful results 152 clusters: crowds 155 roar ... again: yell with pain as he returns 156 second ... men: the most famous man except Coriolanus points: instructions 157–159 desperation ... against them; cf. n. 166 coxcombs: fools' heads

And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.
Omnes. Faith, we hear fearful news.
1. Cit. For mine own part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity.
2. Cit. And so did I.
3. Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.
Com. Y' are goodly things, you voices!
Men. You have made
Good work, you and your cry! Shall 's to the Capitol?
Com. O! ay; what else? Exeunt both.
Sic. Go, masters, get you home; be not dismay'd:
These are a side that would be glad to have
This true which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.
1. Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i' the wrong when we banished him.
2. Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home. Exeunt Citizens.
Bru. I do not like this news.
Sic. Nor I.
Bru. Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth
Would buy this for a lie!
Sic. Pray let us go. Exeunt Tribunes.

Scene Seventh

[A Camp at a small distance from Rome]
Enter Aufidius with his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?
Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but
Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table, and their thanks at end;
And you are darken'd in this action, sir,
Even by your own.
Auf. I cannot help it now,
Unless, by using means, I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier,
Even to my person, than I thought he would
When first I did embrace him; yet his nature
In that's no changeling, and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.
Lieu. Yet, I wish, sir,—
I mean for your particular,—you had not
Join'd in commission with him; but either
Had borne the action for yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.
Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows not
What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state,
Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone
That which shall break his neck or hazard mine,
Whene'er we come to our account.
Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?
Auf. All places yields to him ere he sits down;
And the nobility of Rome are his:
The senators and patricians love him too:
The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal as hasty
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature. First he was
A noble servant to them, but he could not
Carry his honours even; whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints
The happy man; whether defect of judgment,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace
Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controll'd the war; but one of these,
As he hath spices of them all, not all,
For I dare so far free him, made him fear'd,
So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a merit
To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues
Lie in th' interpretation of the time;
And power, unto itself most commendable,
Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair
To extol what it hath done.
One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail.
Come, lets away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,
Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. Exeunt.

Act Fifth

Scene First

[Rome. A Public Place]
Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus (the two Tribunes), with Others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said
Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him
In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:
But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him;
A mile before his tent fall down, and knee
The way into his mercy. Nay, if he coy'd
To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.
Com. He would not seem to know me.

169 coal: hot ember 181 cry: pack (of hounds) Shall 's: shall we 184 a side: members of a party (i.e. patricians) 5 darken'd: dimmed in glory action: campaign 6 your own; your own troops 7 using means: employing treachery 12 no changeling: i.e. still what it always was 15 particular: personal advantage 16 commission: authority 17 borne . . . yourself: taken the whole command yourself

23 bears . . . fairly: behaves honorably in all respects 25 achieve: conquer 26–28 yet . . . account; cf. n. 29 carry: take by force 30 sits down: besieges 36, 37 osprey . . . nature; cf. n. 39 even: steadily 40 out . . . fortune: as a result of constant good fortune taints: sullies 42 disposing: exploiting 44 Not to be: not capable of being 44, 45 not moving . . . cushion; cf. n. 46 austerity and garb: austere manner 48 spices . . . not all: some flavor of all these faults, but not in full degree 49 free: acquit 50 So: and therefore (i.e. because feared) 50, 51 but . . . utterance; cf. n. 52 Lie in: depend upon 53–55 Cf. n. 57 Rights . . . falter; cf. n. 3 particular: personal relation 5 knee: crawl on your knees 6 coy'd: held back, showed reluctance

Men. Do you hear?
Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name.
I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops
That we have bled together. Coriolanus
He would not answer to; forbad all names;
He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire
Of burning Rome,
Men. Why, so: you have made good work!
A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome,
To make coals cheap: a noble memory!
Com. I minded him how royal 'twas to pardon
When it was less expected: he replied,
It was a bare petition of a state
To one whom they had punish'd.
Men. Very well.
Could he say less?
Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard
For 's private friends: his answer to me was,
He could not stay to pick them in a pile
Of noisome musty chaff: he said 'twas folly,
For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt
And still to nose th' offence.
Men. For one poor grain or two!
I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child,
And this brave fellow too, we are the grains:
You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt
Above the moon. We must be burnt for you.
Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid
In this so-never-needed help, yet do not
Upbraid 's with our distress. But, sure, if you
Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
More than the instant army we can make,
Might stop our countryman.
Men. No; I'll not meddle.
Sic. Pray you, go to him.
Men. What should I do?
Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome towards Martius.
Men. Well; and say that Martius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard; what then?
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? say 't be so?
Sic. Yet your good will
Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.
Men. I'll undertake 't:
I think he'll hear me. Yet, to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.
He was not taken well; he had not din'd:
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We pout upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive; but when we have stuff'd
These pipes and these conveyances of our blood
With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
Than in our priestlike fasts: therefore, I'll watch him
Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.
Bru. You know the very road into his kindness,
And cannot lose your way.
Men. Good faith, I'll prove him,
Speed how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge
Of my success. Exit.
Com. He'll never hear him.
Sic. Not?
Com. I tell you he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome, and his injury
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him;
'Twas very faintly he said 'Rise'; dismiss'd me
Thus, with his speechless hand: what he would do
He sent in writing after me, what he would not,
Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain
Unless his noble mother and his wife,
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Volscian Camp before Rome. The Guards at their stations]
Enter Menenius to the Watch or Guard.

1. Wat. Stay! whence are you?
2 Wat. Stand! and go back.
Men. You guard like men; 'tis well; but, by your leave,
I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.
1. Wat. From whence?
Men. From Rome.
1. Wat. You may not pass; you must return: our general
Will no more hear from thence.
2. Wat. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.
Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.
1. Wat. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.
Men. I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read
His fame unparallel'd, haply amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends—
Of whom he's chief—with all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,
I have tumbled past the throw, and in his praise

13 forbad: prohibited the use of 15 o': out of 18 rack'd: strained themselves, worked desperately; cf. n. 19 coals: cinders, charcoal 20 minded: reminded 22 bare: threadbare, poor 26 offer'd: presumed 31 nose: smell offence: nuisance, offensive matter 41 instant: capable of being raised at once 47 towards: in relation to 51 grief-shot: pierced with grief 54, 55 after . . . well; proportionate to the goodness of your intention 58 unhearts: dispirits 59 taken well: propitiously encountered

66 dieted to: fed up auspiciously for 71 Speed: turn out 72 Of . . . success: how I shall fare 75 in gold: on golden throne 78 faintly: coldly 79, 80 what . . . conditions; cf. n. 83 Unless: unless in the efforts of 14 lots of blanks; cf. n. 17 passable: valid 20 book: record, that which reports 22 verified my friends: shown my friends to be my friends; cf. n. 23 size: exaggeration 24 lapsing: slipping into falsehood 25 subtle: temptingly level 26 throw: distance aimed at

Have almost stamp'd the leasing. Therefore, fellow,
I must have leave to pass.

1. Wat. Faith, sir, if you have told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore go back.

Men. Prithee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.

2. Wat. Howsoever you have been his liar—as you say you have—I am one that, telling true under him, must say you cannot pass. Therefore go back.

Men. Has he dined, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1. Wat. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am as thy general is.

1. Wat. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

1. Wat. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

1. Wat. My general cares not for you. Back, I say: go, lest I let forth your half-pint of blood; back, that's the utmost of your having: back!

Men. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,—

Enter Coriolanus with Aufidius.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, you companion, I'll say an errand for you: you shall know how that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou standest not i' the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swound for what's to come upon thee. [To Coriolanus.] The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

27 stamp'd the leasing: confirmed actual falsehood 34 factionary . . . party: an active adherent 36 telling . . . him: speaking truth in his service 43 out: out of 44 violent . . . ignorance: folly of mob violence 45 front: meet 47 dotant: dotard 52 out of: beyond the reach of 54 estimation: esteem 58, 59 the utmost . . . having: the most you shall get 62 say . . . for you: make a report about you 64 Jack guardant: good-for-nothing sentry office: officiously detain 65 entertainment: reception 66, 67 more . . . spectatorship: which will still more prolong your public ignominy 68 swound: swoon 69 synod: conference 74 your: i.e. the Roman 77 block: block of wood, blockhead

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away!

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs
Are servanted to others: though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar,
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather
Than pity note how much. Therefore, begone:
Mine ears against your suits are stronger than
Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee,
Take this along; I writ it for thy sake, [Gives a paper.]
And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,
I will not hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius,
Was my belov'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st!

Auf. You keep a constant temper.

Exeunt [Coriolanus and Aufidius].

Mane[n]t the Guard and Menenius.

1. Wat. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

2. Wat. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much power. You know the way home again.

1. Wat. Do you hear how we are shent for keeping your greatness back?

2. Wat. What cause, do you think, I have to swound?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, y' are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! Exit.

1. Wat. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

2. Wat. The worthy fellow is our general: he's the rock, the oak, not to be wind-shaken. Exit Watch.

Scene Third

[The Tent of Coriolanus]
Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow
Set down our host. My partner in this action,
You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly
I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends
You have respected; stopp'd your ears against
The general suit of Rome; never admitted
A private whisper; no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man,
Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,
Lov'd me above the measure of a father;
Nay, godded me indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him; for whose old love I have,
Though I show'd sourly to him, once more offer'd
The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only
That thought he could do more. A very little

81 servanted: made servants 82 properly: personally remission: forgiveness, mercy; cf. n. 83–85 That . . . much; cf. n. 87 for: because 96 shent: scolded 101 He . . . another; cf. n. 102 be . . . long: may you remain long in your present wretched state 3 plainly: candidly, honestly 4 borne: conducted 7 general . . . Rome: petitions of all Rome 13 godded: defied

I have yielded to; fresh embassies and suits,
Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter
Will I lend ear to. Ha! what shout is this? Shout within.
Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow.
In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter Virgilia, Volumnia, Valeria, young Martius, with Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour'd mould
Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand
The grandchild to her blood. But out, affection!
All bond and privilege of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.
What is that curtsy worth? or those doves' eyes,
Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not
Of stronger earth than others. My mother bows,
As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod; and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession, which
Great nature cries, 'Deny not.' Let the Volsces
Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never
Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand
As if a man were author of himself
And knew no other kin.
Vir. My lord and husband!
Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.
Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd
Makes you think so.
Cor. Like a dull actor now,
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say
For that, 'Forgive our Romans.' O! a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear, and my true lip
Hath virgin'd it e'er since. You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted. Sink, my knee, i' the earth; Kneels.
Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.
Vol. O! stand up bless'd;
Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee, and unproperly
Show duty, as mistaken all this while
Between the child and parent. [Kneels.]
Cor. What's this?
Your knees to me! to your corrected son!
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun,
Murd'ring impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.
Vol. Thou art my warrior;

20 Nor ... friends: neither from the state nor from private friends 24 in ... hand: led by the hand 37 gosling: young goose 41 These ... same: i.e. I look upon you with different feelings 42 thus chang'd: in mourning garb; cf. n. 45 out: at loss for the proper words 55 duty: dutifulness, respect more ... show: cf. n. 59 unproperly: abnormally 60 as mistaken: as if the obligation of deference had been misunderstood 63 corrected: yielding to correction, submissive 64 hungry: sterile (?), voracious (?) 65 Fillip: hit against 67 Murd'ring: annulling 68 slight work: a trivial task

I holp to frame thee. Do you know this lady?
Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle
That's curdied by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple: dear Valeria!
Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours, [Pointing to the Child.]
Which by th' interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.
Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform
Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst prove
To shame unvulnerable and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee!
Vol. Your knee, sirrah.
Cor. That's my brave boy!
Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself
Are suitors to you.
Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:
The things I have forsworn to grant may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not
Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not
To allay my rages and revenges with
Your colder reasons.
Vol. O! no more, more;
You have said you will not grant us anything;
For we have nothing else to ask but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness. Therefore, hear us.
Cor. Aufidius, and you Volsces, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?
Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment
And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since they exile. Think with thyself
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which should
Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,
Constrains them weep and shake with fear and sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child to see
The son, the husband, and the father tearing
His country's bowels out. And to poor we
Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy; for how can we,
Alas! how can we for our country pray,
Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory,
Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse, or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calamity, though we had
Our wish, which side should win; for either thou

73 curdied: congealed 74 dear Valeria: cf. n. 76 by ... time: when full growth has shown what he is 79 inform: inspire 81 stick: stand conspicuous 82 sea-mark: beacon flaw: squals of wind 83 eye: take as guide 92 capitulate: make terms 101 fail in: disappoint us in 106 state of bodies: physical health bewray: disclose 114 we: us 115 capital: fatal 120 or: either 124 which: in determining which.

Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
And bear the palm for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on Fortune till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts
Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country than to tread—
Trust to 't, thou shalt not—on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.
Vir. Ay, and mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.
Boy. A' shall not tread on me:
I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.
Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.]
Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volsces whom you serve, you might condemn us,
As poisonous to your honour: no; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volsces
May say, 'This mercy we have show'd; the Romans,
'This we receiv'd'; and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, 'Be bless'd
For making up this peace!' Thou know'st, great son,
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses;
Whose chronicle thus writ: 'The man was noble,
But with his last attempt he wip'd it out,
Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
To th' ensuing age abhorr'd.' Speak to me, son!
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a nobleman
Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speak you:
He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou, boy:
Perhaps thy childishness will move him more
Than can our reasons. There is no man in the world
More bound to 's mother; yet here he lets me prate
Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in thy life
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she—poor hen! fond of no second brood—
Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say my request's unjust,
And spurn me back; but if it be not so,
Thou art not honest, and the gods will plague thee,
That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
To a mother's part belongs. He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.
To his surname Coriolanus longs more pride
Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end;
This is the last: so we will home to Rome,
And die among our neighbours. Nay, behold's.
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny 't. Come, let us go:
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance. Yet give us our dispatch:
I am hush'd until our city be a-fire,
And then I'll speak a little.
Cor. O, mother, mother!
Holds her by the hand silent.
What have you done? Behold! the heavens do ope,
The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother! mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome;
But, for your son, believe it, O believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But let it come.
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidius,
Were you in my stead, would you have heard
A mother less, or granted less, Aufidius?
Auf. I was mov'd withal.
Cor. I dare be sworn you were:
And, sir, it is no little thing to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
What peace you'll make, advise me: for my part,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you: and pray you,
Stand to me in this cause. O mother! wife!
Auf. [Aside.] I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour
At difference in thee: out of that I'll work myself a former fortune.
[The ladies make signs to Coriolanus.]
Cor. Ay, by and by;
But we will drink together; and you shall bear
A better witness back than words, which we,
On like conditions, would have counterseal'd.
Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
To have a temple built you: all the swords
In Italy, and her confederate arms,
Could not have made this peace. Exeunt.

125 foreign recreant: one whose treachery has made him a foreigner 131 determine: end 133 end: destruction 142 Not ... be: not to yield to womanly weakness 153 all-hail: formal acclamation 160 attempt: undertaking it: his nobility 163 fine strains: special refinements 165 cheeks ... air; cf. n. 166, 167 And yet ... oak; cf. n. 173 prate: talk without result 174 one ... stocks: a prisoner who has nothing free but his voice 175 courtesy: particular favor

180 honest: honourable 184 longs: belongs 189 for fellowship: to keep us company 190 Does ... strength: has stronger arguments in favor of our petition 195 hush'd: silent 204 most mortal: with most mortal results 206 convenient: a fitting 209 withal: therewith 212 sweat compassion: weep with pity 215 Stand to: support 219 a ... fortune: a position as great as formerly 222 A better witness: i.e. a formal document 223 If conditions had been reversed, should have been glad to confirm strongly 226 her ... arms: the weapons of Italy's allies

Scene Fourth

[Rome. A Public Place]
Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

Men. See you yond coign o' the Capitol, yond corner-stone?
Sic. Why, what of that?
Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope in 't. Our throats are sentenced and stay upon execution.
Sic. Is 't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?
Men. There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Martius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.
Sic. He loved his mother dearly.
Men. So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corslet with his eye; talks like a knell, and his 'hum!' is a battery. he sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.
Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.
Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is long of you.
Sic. The gods be good unto us!
Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house:
The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune,
And hale him up and down; all swearing, if
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home,
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?
Mess. Good news, good news! the ladies have prevail'd,
The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Martius gone.
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not th' expulsion of the Tarquins.
Sic. Friend,
Art thou certain this is true? Is 't most certain?
Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire:
Where have you lurk'd that you make doubt of it?
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide,
As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you!
Trumpets, hautboys, drums beat, all together.
The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes,
Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
Make the sun dance. Hark you! A shout within.
Men. This is good news:
I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes, such as you,
A sea and land full. You have pray'd well to-day:
This morning for ten thousand of your throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!
Sound still with the shouts.
Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,
Accept my thankfulness.
Mess. Sir, we have all
Great cause to give great thanks.
Sic. They are near the city?
Mess. Almost at point to enter.
Sic. We'll meet them,
And help the joy. Exeunt.

Enter two Senators, with Ladies, passing over the Stage, with other Lords.

Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!
Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:
Unshout the noise that banish'd Martius;
Repeal him with the welcome of his mother;
Cry, 'Welcome, ladies, welcome!'
All. Welcome, ladies,
Welcome! A flourish with drums and trumpets.
[Exeunt.]

Scene Fifth

[Corioli. A Public Place]
Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants

Auf. Go tell the lords o' the city I am here:
Deliver them this paper: having read it,
Bid them repair to the market-place; where I,
Even in theirs and in the commons' ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse
The city ports by this hath enter'd, and
Intends to appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words: dispatch.
[Exeunt Attendants.]

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' faction.

Most welcome!
1. Con. How is it with our general?
Auf. Even so
As with a man by his own alms empoison'd,
And with his charity slain.
2. Con. Most noble sir,
If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.
Auf. Sir, I cannot tell:

1 coign: keystone 6 stay upon: await 9 differency: difference 15 engine: piece of artillery 16 corslet: breastplate 17 talks . . . battery: cf. n. 18 state: chair of state as . . . Alexander: like a statue of Alexander the Great 19 finished . . . bidding: as good as done when he commands it 20 throne: enthrone himself 22 in . . . character: as he is 25 long of: on account of 28 respected: heeded 34 by inches: by slow torture 37 are dislodg'd: have broken camp 44 blown: swollen; cf. n. 46 sackbuts: bass wind instrument, trombones psalteries: stringed instruments, dulcimers

47 Make . . . dance; cf. n. S.d. Cf. n. 66 fires: bonfires 67 Unshout: cancel and retract by your shouts Scene Five Corioli; cf. n. 6 city ports: gates of the city 8 purge: clear 16 parties: to take part

We must proceed as we do find the people.
3. Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst
'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either
Makes the survivor heir of all.
Auf. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admits
A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd
Mine honour for his truth: who being so heighten'd,
He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends; and, to this end,
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free.
3. Con. Sir, his stoutness
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping,—
Auf. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for 't, he came unto my hearth;
Presented to my knife his throat: I took him;
Made him joint-servant with me; give him way
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freshest men; serv'd his designments
In mine own person; holp to reap the fame
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance, as if
I had been mercenary.
1. Con. So he did, my lord:
The army marvell'd at it; and, in the last,
When we had carried Rome, and that we look'd
For no less spoil than glory,—
Auf. There was it;
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him.
At a few drops of women's rheum, which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action: therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

Drums and trumpets sound, with great shouts of the people.

1. Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.
2. Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear
With giving him glory.
3. Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.
Auf. Say no more:

21 difference: dispute 24 pretext: design 25 good construction: justification 27 By flattery he increased his power in his new environment 30 free: independent 37 way: freedom of action 39 files: troops 40, 41 serv'd . . . person: personally assisted him in his designs 42 end: garner, store away 45 wag'd: rewarded countenance: patronizing favor 48 in the last: finally 52 my sinews . . . stretch'd: I shall exert all my force 53 rheum: tears, liquid secretion 57 post: messenger 63 at . . . vantage: as soon as favorable opportunity arises 66 along: prostrate 67 After . . . pronounc'd: your statement of his case 68 His reasons: what he might urge in his behalf

Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

All Lords. You are most welcome home.
Auf. I have not deserv'd it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?
All. We have.
1. Lord. And grieve to hear 't.
What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines; but there to end
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge, making a treaty where
There was a yielding, this admits no excuse.
Auf. He approaches: you shall hear him.

Enter Coriolanus, marching with drums and colours; the Commoners being with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted and
With bloody passage led your wars even to
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home
Do more than counterpoise a full third part
The charges of the action. We have made peace
With no less honour to the Antiates
Than shame to the Romans; and we here deliver,
Subscrib'd by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' the senate, what
We have compounded on.
Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.
Cor. Traitor! How now?
Auf. Ay, traitor, Martius.
Cor. Martius!
Auf. Ay, Martius, Caius Martius. Dost thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name,
Coriolanus in Corioli?
You lords and heads o' the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up,
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome,
I say 'your city,' to his wife and mother;
Breaking his oath and resolution like
A twist of rotten silk, never admitting
Counsel o' the war, but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory,
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at others.
Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?
Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears.
Cor. Ha!

78 fines: penalties 80 benefit . . . levies: profits of war answering: repaying; cf. n. 81 treaty: compromise 82 yielding: complete defeat of the enemy 85 infected: affected, contaminated 88 prosperously . . . attempted: my attempts have prospered 92 we have: which we have 97 compounded: agreed 112 twist: skein 112, 113 never . . . war: permitting no council of war 115 That pages: so that young boys men of heart: valiant men

Auf. No more.
Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave!
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords,
Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion—
Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him, that Must bear my beating to his grave—shall join
To thrust the lie unto him.
1. Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.
Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volsces; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me. Boy! False hound!
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That, like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli:
Alone I did it. Boy!
Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
'Fore your own eyes and ears?
All Consp. Let him die for 't.
All People. Tear him to pieces.—Do it presently.—He killed my son.—My daughter.—He killed my cousin Marcus.—He killed my father.
2. Lord. Peace, ho! no outrage: peace!
The man is noble and his fame folds in
This orb o' the earth. His last offences to us
Shall have judicious hearing. Stand, Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.
Cor. O that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!
Auf. Insolent villain!
All. Consp. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!

Draw all the Conspirators, and kill Martius, who falls. Aufidius stands on him.

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold!
Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.
1. Lord. O Tullus!
2. Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.
3. Lord. Tread not upon him, masters; all be quiet.
Put up your swords.
Auf. My lords, when you shall know,—as in this rage,
Provok'd by him, you cannot,—the great danger
Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours
To call me to your senate, I'll deliver
Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.
1. Lord. Bear from hence his body;
And mourn you for him! Let him be regarded
As the most noble corse that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.
2. Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.
Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up:
Help, three o' the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully;
Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he
Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.
Assist. Exeunt, bearing the body of Martius. A dead march sounded.

FINIS

122 Too ... it: swollen with indignation till my breast cannot contain it 125 notion: intelligence 126 that: who 134 Flutter'd: put to fight 147 judicious: judicial, legal Stand: stay, hold

162 did owe you: promised to bring upon you, rendered you liable to 164 deliver: demonstrate 178 Trail: drag on the ground in sign of mourning 179 unchilded: slain the children of

NOTES

I.i.27. 2. Cit. The Folio gives this line to 'All.' The later speeches of the Second Citizen, beginning with that at line 46, are transferred by Capell and other editors to the First Citizen on the ground that the Second Citizen has shown himself friendly to Martius. He is, however, a convinced supporter of the people's rights.

I.i.79. To scale 't a little more. 'Scale' is probably used in the sense of put it on the scales, weigh its meaning. Compare 'Scaling' in II.iii.257. Theobald has been followed by most editors in emending to 'stale.'

I.i.94. Which ne'er came from the lungs. A quiet reflective smile with nothing boisterous about it.

I.i.96. taintingly. Modern editors agree in emending to 'tauntingly,' but the belly is not taunting. To taint means to make a successful hit in tilting.

I.i.103. The counsellor heart. The heart was supposed to be the seat of reason. Compare line 128.

I.i.152. Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run. You who are in the worst physical condition for running (or other activity). A rascal was a lean, inferior deer, whereas stags were said to be 'in blood' when in good condition. Compare IV.v. 226.

I.i.159, 160. That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion, Make yourselves scabs. There is a pun on 'scabs': (a) scabby sores, (b) good-for-nothing citizens.

I.i.167, 168. you are no surer, no. Than is the coal of fire upon the ice. The Thames River was frozen over in the winter of 1608 (a rare phenomenon), and fires were built upon the ice. This figure has therefore been used in dating the play.

I.i.169-171. Your virtue is, To make him worthy whose offence subdues him, And curse that justice did it. Your kindness shows itself only in espousing the cause of the punished delinquent and in cursing the justice which made him suffer.

I.i.273, 274. disdains the shadow Which he treads on at noon. 'The sun being vertical at noon, a man treads on his own shadow then.' (Arden ed.)

I.ii.31. Corioli. The name had been gallicized by Amyot into 'Corioles.' It is retained in this form by North and usually in the Shakespeare Folio. (In the stage direction at the opening of this scene the Folio spells it 'Coriolus.')

I.iii.13. his brows bound with oak. Crowned with a wreath of oak leaves. Plutarch (North) records that in an early battle the young Martius saved the life of a Roman soldier. 'Hereupon, after the battle was won, the Dictator did not forget so noble an act, and therefore first of all he crowned Martius with a garland of oaken boughs. For whosoever saveth the life of a Roman, it is a manner among them to honour him with such a garland.'

I.iv.18. No, nor a man that fears you less than he. Logical syntax requires 'more' instead of 'less.' Shakespeare frequently makes slips of this sort.

I.iv.40. Against the wind a mile. Let the infection be so great as to carry a mile against the wind.

I.iv.48. As they us to our trenches follows. As they are now following us to our trenches. Instances of the old northern English plural in –s abound in Shakespeare.

I.iv.66, 67. Thou wast a soldier Even to Cato's wish. This passage is a close adaptation of North's words: 'For he was even such another as Cato would have a soldier and a captain to be, not only terrible and fierce to lay about him, but to make the enemy afeared with the sound of his voice and grimness of his countenance.' Shakespeare's transfer of the speech to the mouth of a contemporary of Coriolanus produces a striking anachronism, since Martius lived some three hundred years before Cato the Censor (234-149 B.C.).

I.v.6, 7. doublets that hangmen would Bury with those that wore them. An allusion to the Elizabethan custom which made the garments of executed prisoners a perquisite of the hangman. Doublets (jackets) which a hangman would refuse to take would not be worth the plunders' while to steal.

I.vi.6. The Roman gods. O you, the gods of Rome! It is not necessary to alter 'The' to 'Ye,' as is commonly done. The reading of the text is an authorized vocative construction in Elizabeth English.

I.vi.91. [Soldiers.] O, me alone! Make you a sword of me! The Folio prints the line without indication of speaker, but it is difficult to explain it as part of Martius' speech.

I.viii.15, 16. Wert thou the Hector That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny. 'Progeny' means race or stock, and 'whip' the scourge with which punishment is inflicted: 'If you were Hector, the most formidable warrior of your boasted race.' Allusion is made, of course, to the asserted descent of the Romans from the Trojans.

I.ix.35. tent themselves with death. Make death the means of cleansing themselves from festering ingratitude.

I.ix.51. Let him be made an overture for the wars. Tyrwhitt and most modern editors alter 'an overture' to 'a coverture,' without much assisting the interpretation of the line. The Folio text appears to mean, 'Let an offer of warlike employment be made to him (the parasite).' When soldiers adopt the effeminate ways of courtiers, let us recruit our armies among the latter class.

II.i.34-36. O that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves. 'The original fable of Æsop, reproduced by Phædrus, IV. 10, was that Jupiter was furnished every man with two wallets, one hanging down on his breast and containing his neighbour's faults, which are always before his eyes, and the other hanging down his back out of sight, and filled with his own faults.' (Arden ed.) A variation of the fable is found in Troilus and Cressida, III.iii.151 f., where Ulysses says:

> 'Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
> Wherein he puts alms for oblivion.'

II.i.43. a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying Tiber in 't. This passage apparently suggested Lovelace's famous lines (To Althæa from Prison):

> 'When flowing cups run swiftly round
> With no allaying Thames.'

II.i.45-47 one that converts more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. Better acquainted with the last hour of the night than the first hour of the morning.

II.i.50-52. I cannot say your worships have delivered the matter well when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables. I cannot compliment you on your statement of the case against Martius when the larger part of what you say cries out 'ass!' against you—convicts you of asininity.

II.i.55. the map of my microcosm. My face, Menenius' microcosm or little world was himself and his face the map or chart which summarized its characteristics.

II.i.57 bisson conspectuities. No other example of 'conspectuities' appears to be known. It is doubtless an intentionally pretentious coinage from Latin conspectus, sight. 'The Folio spelling of 'bisson' is 'beesome.'

II.i.71, 72. come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table than a necessary bencher in the Capitol. It is well known that you are better fitted to be a jesting table-companion than a serviceable senator.

II.i.133. the repulse of Tarquin. Plutarch says (North): 'The first time he went to the wars, being but a stripling, was when Tarquin surnamed the proud (that had been king of Rome, and was driven out for his pride . . .) did come to Rome with all the aid of the Latins, and many other people of Italy . . . who with a great and a mighty army had undertaken to put him into his kingdom again.' The battle referred to, the last of four attempts to restore King Tarquin, occurred in 499 B.C. Shakespeare makes Cominius tell the story of Martius' exploits on this occasion. See II.ii.92 ff.

II.i.134. there's nine that I know. Shakespeare often seems resentful of mathematical precision. One would expect a total of ten here. Some commentators improbably suggest that Menenius makes a fresh count to himself, ending with 'One i' the neck,' etc.

II.i.165. My gracious silence. Mr. Case (Arden ed.) suggests that Shakespeare may have derived this pretty nickname of Virgilia from North's translation of Plutarch's Life of Numa, where it is stated that the hero 'taught the Romans to reverence one of [the Muses] above all the rest, who was called Tacita, as ye would say Lady Silence.'

II.i.173. I know not where to turn. I retain, doubtfully, the arrangement of modern editors. The Folio gives lines 171 and 172 to Cominius, not Coriolanus, which would better explain Volumnia's words. if 171 and 172 really belongs to Coriolanus, it is possible that 'I know . . . turn' should also be assigned to him and Volumnia's speech begin 'O! welcome home,' which commences a new line in the Folio.

II.i.177. A curse begin at very root on 's heart. May a curse strike home at once to the most vital part! The common emendation, 'begnaw' for 'begin,' is unnecessary.

II.i.S.d. Enter Brutus and Sicinius. That is, they now come forward.

II.i.222, 223. He cannot temperately transport his honours From whence he should begin and end. He cannot, as a self-restrained man could, derive honor from both the beginning and the completion of his performances. He cannot go an equable pace and conclude with the same honors with which he begins.

II.i.258-260. This, as you say, suggested At some time when his soaring insolence Shall teach the people. If we time our incitement to some occasion when his insolence shall confirm it in the people's mind. instead of 'teach' Hanmer suggested 'touch' and Theobald 'reach.' The former is a very plausible correction, but not inevitable.

II.ii.97, 98. he fought Beyond the mark of others. In fighting he surpassed all that others could do. Compare note on II.i.133.

II.ii.110. He lurch'd all swords of the garland. Evidence for the date of Coriolanus has been found in the fact that Ben Jonson appears to have imitated this passage in the last speech of his Silent Woman (1609 or 1610), where Truewit says: 'Well, Dauphine, you have lurch'd your friends of the better half of the garland.'

II.iii.S.d. Enter two of the Citizens. The Folio indicates the number as 'three' and assigns the speeches at lines 64, 68, 71, and 81 to 3. Cit.; but Coriolanus alludes to them as 'a brace' (l. 62) and 'two worthy voices' (l. 85).

II.iii.109. wolfish toge. Wolf's toga, or garment. Why should I stand here like a wolf in sheep's clothing? The first Folio has 'Wooluish tongue,' and the later Folios 'Woolvish gowne.' One of the best of many emendations is 'woolless toge.'

II.iii.253. And Censorinus, that was so surnam'd. This line is omitted by the Folio, evidently by inadvertence, since 254 makes no sense immediately after 252. The present line is Delius' emendation, based upon the words of North in the opening passage of the Life of Coriolanus, which Brutus' speech paraphrases closely. North translates: 'Of the same house were Publius and Quintus, who brought Rome their best water they had by conducts. Censorinus also came of that family, that was so surnamed because the people had chosen him Censor twice.' It may be that the Folio printer was confused by two consecutive lines beginning with 'And,' and accidentally omitted the first.

III.i.162. motive. Johnson's emendation for 'natiue' of the Folio.

III.i.164, 165. How shall this bosom multiplied digest The senate's courtesy? This is the Folio reading, which editors have unjustifiably emended. 'This bosom multiplied' means this composite bosom, the bosom of this conglomerate rabble. Compare King Lear V.iii.52–55:

> 'the old and miserable king . . .
> Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
> To pluck the common bosom on his side.'

Shakespeare frequently uses 'bosom' for the seat of digestion, or rather the part of the body in which indigestion makes itself felt; thus in 2 Henry IV I.iii.95-102:

> 'O thou fond many! . . .
> So, so, thou common dog, didst thou disgorge
> Thy glutton bosom of the loyal Richard.'

III.i.261. the rock Tarppeian. A part of the Capitoline hill, down which condemned criminals were cast to death.

III.i.383-385. The service of the foot, Being once gangren'd, is not then respected For what before it was. Menenius is elaborating his statement in lines 371, 372, that the 'disease' in Coriolanus, which causes the plebeians to dislike him, is curable. Brutus, however, interrupts him.

III.ii.25. The thwartings of. Theobald's emendation. The Folio reads 'The things of,' which does not make sense. In line 41, below, 'Theobald has again been followed in substituting 'herd' for the 'heart' of the Folio.

III.ii.70, 71. such words that are but rooted in Your tongue. The Folio spells 'roated,' which can be interpreted as 'roted,' learned by rote, parrot-like; but one would then expect the following preposition to be 'on' rather than 'in.'

III.ii.87, 88. Not what is dangerous present, but the loss Of what is past. Not only apply a healing salve to the present danger, but also save what you have already lost. 'Salve' in line 86 has a different sense with each of the object clauses.

III.ii.91, 92. And thus far having stretch'd it,—here be with them.—Thy knee bussing the stones. Stretching your conciliatory gestures to the point (do this to please their mood) of letting your knee caress the paving stones.

III.iii.15. Have you collected them by tribes? This, like the counting of votes 'by the poll' (line 13), was a device to give weight to the plebeian vote. North says: 'And first of all the Tribunes would in any case (whatsoever became of it) that the people would proceed to give their voices by Tribes, and not by hundreds: for by this means the multitude of the poor needy people (and all such rabble as had nothing to lose, and had less regard of honesty before their eyes) came to be of greater force (because their voices were numbered by the poll) than the noble honest citizens, whose persons and purse did dutifully serve the commonwealth in their wars.' The division of Roman citizens into tribes (originally three, finally thirty-five) was democratic, while the division into 193 hundreds (centuriæ) was based upon property qualifications.

III.iii.70. accents. Theobald's universally accepted emendation for the Folio's 'Actions.'

III.iii.123. doth. An old (southern) plural. The second folio normalized it to 'doc.'

III.iii.S. d. with others. The Folio gives this in the remarkably corrupted form, 'with Cumalijs' (i.e. cum aliis). The 'others' are the rest of the patricians. The next word, 'They,' refers to the plebeians.

IV.i.7. fortune's blows, When most struck home,—being gentle, wounded, craves A noble cunning. 'When Fortune strikes her hardest blows, to be wounded, and yet continue calm, requires a generous policy.' (Johnson.) The construction of the sentence is suddenly changed in the middle (anacoluthon): 'fortune's blows,' originally intended as subject, is left hanging as an 'absolute nominative,' and a new subject, 'being gentle,' is introduced.

IV.ii.24. mankind. Sicinius uses the word in the invidious sense in which it was applied to women: virago-like. Volumnia in the next line takes it as meaning 'human' in contrast with the 'foxship' of Sicinius.

IV.ii.68. Leave this faint puling. Volumnia addresses Virgilia, who is weeping silently.

IV.iv.17. Whose double bosoms seems to wear one heart. The verbal plural in –s (cf. note on I.iv.48), perhaps here used with some idea of the apparent unity of the 'double bosoms.'

IV.iv.24. To take the one the other. Construe with 'plots' in line 23: plots by which the one hopes to get the better of the other.

IV.iv.27. My birth-place hate I. For 'hate' the Folio misprints 'haue.'

IV.v.133. o'er-bear. The Folio has 'o're-beate,' which a few editors defend.

IV.v.S. d. Enter two of the Servingmen. That is, the Servingmen, who have been auditors, now advance. Compare II.i.S. d.

IV.v.164. but a greater soldier than he you wot on. The Folio reading is 'but a greater soldier than he, you wot one,' i.e., you know one greater soldier (Aufidius) than he. This can be justified, but Dyce's emendation, as given in the text, seems preferable. In any case the servants are speaking cautiously, drawing each other out.

IV.v.190. boiled. Culinary editors, led by Pope, alter to 'broiled,' since that is the proper treatment of a 'carbonado' steak.

IV.vi.2. tame i' the present peace. Theobald added the preposition. The Folio reads: 'His remedies are tame,. the present peace.'

IV.vi.54. Thrusts forth his horns again. The allusion is to the action of a snail. See next line.

IV.vi.72. some news is coming. Rowe has been usually followed in altering 'coming' to 'come,' but Shakespeare is fond of the conception of news as gradually unfolded by 'sequent messengers,' whose reports vary and cause uncertainty or suspense. Compare Othello I.ii41 and the opening of the following scene in that play; also 2 Henry IV I.i.

IV.vi.84, 85. And vows revenge as spacious as between The young'st and oldest thing. Vows to include every living thing in his revenge.

IV.vi.105. Your temples burned in their cement. Subjected to such conflagration that even the mortar will be consumed. As always in Shakespeare, 'cement' is accented on the first syllable.

IV.vi.139, 140. they charg'd him even As those should do that had deserv'd his hate. By asking him to spare Rome his friends would be making common cause with his foes.

IV.vi.146. you have crafted fair. A pun on 'crafted' is involved: (a) advanced the crafts' interests, (b) shown your craft.

IV. vi.157, 158. desperation Is all the policy, strength, and defence, That Rome can make against them. All that Rome can do against them in the way of either negotiation, offence, or defence is a desperate hope.

IV.vii.26-28. yet he hath left undone That which shall break his neck or hazard mine, Whene'er we come to our account. The allusion appears to be to Plutarch's statement that, after Coriolanus had led his army to within forty furlongs of Rome and made great demands on behalf of the Volsci, he omitted to press his advantage and allowed the Romans a respite of thirty days in which to make their answer. 'This,' says North, 'was the first matter wherewith the Volsces (that most envied Martius' glory and authority) did charge Martius with. Among those, Tullus was chief.'

IV.vii.36, 37. As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it By sovereignty of nature. The osprey, or fishhawk, was supposed to have a natural power of fascinating fishes. Editors quote several contemporary statements of the belief; e.g., Peele's Battle of Alcazar II.iii.:

> 'I will provide thee with a princely osprey,
> That, as she flieth over fish in pools,
> The fish shall turn their glittering bellies up.'

IV.vii.44, 45. not moving From the casque to the cushion. His nature or disposition not adapting itself to suit the properties of conduct in time of war and time of peace respectively. The casque is the symbol of the warrior, the cushion of the senator. Compare III.i.130 and stage direction at opening of II.ii.

IV.vii.51, 51. but he has a merit To choke it in the utterance. His merit is so great that condemnation of his fault should be silenced ere fully uttered.

IV.vii.53-55. And power, unto itself most commendable, hath not a tomb so evident as a chair To extol what it hath done. Power, though (when considered absolutely) most worthily attained, is never so near its grave as when the successful man, seated in the chair of authority, seeks to justify the means by which he has risen.

IV.vii.57. Rights by rights falter. One conception of justice hampers another. For 'falter' (Dyce's emendation) the Folio reads 'fouler.' Johnson proposed 'founder.'

V.i.18. rack'd. The word is spelled 'wrack'd' in the Folio; and there is probably a play on the sense of 'rack'd' as explained in the footnote and 'wrack'd,' brought all to wrack and ruin.

V.i.79-81. what he would do He sent in writing after me, what he would not, Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions. He sent a written statement of what he would and would not do, requiring an oath of unconditional acceptance of these conditions.

V.ii.14. it is lots to blanks. It is more likely than not. Lots were the drawings in a lottery, blanks those that carried no prize. The Arden editors have a learned not upon this phrase, the meaning of which is not so simple as it appears.

V.ii.22. I have ever verified my friends. The Folio reading, 'verified,' gives a reasonable sense. Many emendations have, however, been proposed and adopted; e.g., magnified, amplified, glorified.

V.ii.82, 83. my remission lies In Volscian breasts. In exercising clemency I am no free agent, but must be governed by the feelings of the Volsci.

V.ii.83-85. That we have been familiar, Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much. I shall rather be ungrateful in forgetting our old familiarity than by dwelling upon it allow my pity to be aroused.

V.ii.101. He that hath a will to die by himself fears it not from another. One who, like Menenius, would be wiling to slay himself is beyond caring for the death threats of the Watch. Compare line 58, above.

V.iii.42, 43. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang'd Makes you think so. Virgilia purposely misconstrues her husband's words. The great alteration, she says, which sorrow has caused in our appearance makes you think you can't believe your eyes.

V.iii.55, 56. Of thy deep duty more impression show Than that of common sons. Wishing to emphasize his dutiful respect, Coriolanus bids his knee, not simply touch the ground, but sink into it and leave a deep imprint.

V.iii.74. dear Valeria. In Plutarch it is she who suggests to Volumnia and Virgilia the visit to Coriolanus' camp. North speaks of her thus: 'Valeria, Publicola's own sister; the self same Publicola, who did such notable service to the Romans, both in peace and wars, and was dead also certain years before, as we have declared in his life. His sister Valeria was greatly honoured and reverenced among all the romans; and did so modestly and wisely behave herself, that she did not shame nor dishonour the house she came of.'

V.iii.165. To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air The allusion is doubtless to the common indication of the winds (north, south, etc.) in old maps as issuing from cherubs' swollen cheeks. In Richard II, III.iii.56–58, Shakespeare speaks of

> 'the elements
> Of fire and water, when their thundering shock
> At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.'

V.iii.166, 167. And yet to charge the sulphur with a bolt That should but rive an oak. And yet, with all your terrible show, to commit no inhumanity.

V.iv.17. talks like a knell, and his 'hum! is a battery. His conversation bodes death, and his exclamation of impatience is like the sound of cannon.

V.iv.44. Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide. The allusion is to the rush of the incoming tide through the old London bridge, which consisted of twenty arches. The same figure is found in Lucrece, II. 1667–1671:

> 'As through an arch the violent roaring tide
> Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
> Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride.
> Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast;
> In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past.'

V.iv.48. Make the sun dance. An old popular belief was that the sun danced for joy on Easter morning. It is alluded to by many writers of Shakespeare's time.

V.iv.S.d. Some editors make a new scene of the next six lines.

V.v.S.d. Corioli. The text of this scene is inconsistent in locating it, first at Antium, the Volscian capital, and later at Corioli. Professor Gordon's explanation is highly satisfactory: 'Editors are divided whether to place this scene in Antium or Corioli. We should expect it to be Antium. Plutarch makes it Antium. But in line 104 it is explicitly said to be Corioli. On the other hand, ll.57, 84, 91, all point to Antium. We hear in l. 50 that it was Aufidius's native town, which seems to have been Antium (I.vi.72); in l. 84 that Coriolanus has come back to the place he started from, which was Antium; in l. 91 that peace had been made with honour to "the Antiates."`The solution seems to me to be this. Shakespeare meant the scene to be Antium, and wrote with Antium in his mind until he came to Aufidius's speech in l. 102. There he was carried away by the magnificent opportunity of placing "Coriolanus in Corioli" (l. 104), and for the rest of the scene thought rather of Corioli than of Antium.'

V.v.80, 81. answering us With our own charge. Paying us back only the amount of our expenditure, bringing in no profit. Compare lines 88–89, where Coriolanus estimates that the gains from the expedition amount to one-third more than the costs. The point is that no large indemnity had been secured from the Romans.

The Text of the Present Edition

The text to the present volume is based, by permission of the Oxford University Press, upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig. Craig's text has been carefully collated with the Shakespeare Folio of 1623, and the following deviations have been introduced:

1. The stage directions of the Folio have been restored. necessary words and directions, omitted by the Folio, are added within square brackets.

2. Punctuation and spelling have been normalized to accord with modern English practice; e.g., anything, everything, warlike, priestlike, hostler, carcasses, scandal'd (instead of any thing, every thing, war-like, priest-like, ostler, carcases, scandall'd). Generally the changes introduced, both in punctùation and in spelling, effect a closer approximation to the Folio form. The form Martius, invariable in the Folio and in North, is restored passim in place of Marcius. The Folio abbreviation 'Y' are' is likewise replaced instead of the varying 'you 're,' 'ye 're,' or 'you are' of modern editions.

3. The frequent elisions, characteristic of the Folio text and often necessary for scansion of the lines, have generally been retained; e.g., th' expulsion, th' accusation, is 't, we'll, o' (for of or on), 's (for is, his, or us), etc.

4. The following changes of text have been introduced, nearly always in accordance with Folio authority. The readings of the present edition precede the colon, while Craig's readings follow it:

I.i.22 All: First Cit.
46 2. Cit.: First Cit. (So also in lines 52, 66, 80, 92, 101, 110, 113, 118, 134, 140, 149, 161.)
96 taintingly: tauntingly
117 you'st: you'll
ii.34 prepar'd: prepared
iii.2 should: would
iv.48 follows: follow'd
vi.6 The Roman: Ye Roman 39 burnt: burn'd
ix.51 an overture: a coverture

II.i.13 Both: Sic. / Bru.

37 Both: Bru.
204 begin; begnaw
177 virgilia: Valeria
255 their war: the war
ii.7 hath: have
iii.36 the: a(misprint?)
98 bountiful: bountifully
104 farther: further
109 wolfish: woolvish
110 does: do
119 moe: more
156 loves: love
163 us'd: used
III.i.85 meiny (Meynie F): many
93 lack: lack'd
100 their: they
164 bosom multiplied: bisson multitude

401 a' (a F): he
ii.25 thwartings (things F): thwarting
37 as little: of mettle
137 quir'd: quired
138 an eunuch: a eunuch
iii.86 fold in: fold-in 123 doth: do
IV.i.8 home,—being: home, being 29 'em: them
ii.27 strook: struck (So also in IV.v.231)
iii.9 appeared: approved
iv.17 seems: seem
v.110 an hundred: a hundred 190 boiled: broiled
vi.62 hath: have
72 coming: come
vii.30 yields: yield
V.ii.22 verified: glorified
iii.168 nobleman: noble man
iv.17 'hum!': hum
v.116 others: other

The Life of Timon of Athens

Edited by
STANLEY T. WILLIAMS

Dramatis Personae

TIMON of Athens
LUCIUS, LUCULLUS, SEMPRONIUS } flattering Lords
VENTIDIUS, one of Timon's false Friends
APEMANTUS, a churlish Philosopher
ALCIBIADES, an Athenian Captain
POET, PAINTER, JEWELLER, MERCHANT [AND MERCER]
CERTAIN SENATORS
CERTAIN MASQUERS [Ladies dressed as Amazons]
CERTAIN THIEVES
[FLAVIUS, Steward to Timon]
FLAMINIUS, [LUCILIUS], SERVILIUS } Servants to Timon
CAPHIS, PHILOTUS, TITUS, LUCIUS, HORTENSIUS } Several Servants to Usurers [and to the Lords]
[PHRYNIA, TIMANDRA } Mistresses to Alcibiades]
CUPID
WITH DIVERS OTHER SERVANTS AND ATTENDANTS
[SERVANTS OF VENTIDIUS, AND OF VARRO AND ISIDORE (TWO OF TIMON'S CREDITORS)
THREE STRANGERS
AN OLD ATHENIAN
A PAGE
A FOOL]

SCENE—Athens, and the neighbouring Woods.

The Life of Timon of Athens

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The basic legend of Shakespeare's Timon of Athens began in antiquity. Early in the fifth century B. C., Timon's picturesque misanthropy was a theme of Greek comic poets. The hero of The Misanthrope, by Phrynichus, remarks: 'I live like Timon. I have no wife, no servant, I am irritable and hard to get on with. I never laugh, I never talk, and my opinions are all my own.' From the uncertain realms of casual allusion emerge two later Greek portrayals of the character of Timon: The story of the misanthrope in Plutarch's Life of Antonius, and Lucian's comic dialogue, Timon the Misanthrope.[1]

How much Plutarch had already yielded Shakespeare we know; here were the geneses of Julius Cæsar, Coriolanus, and Antony and Cleopatra. And if it is believed that Timon of Athens was written at about the same time as the last-named tragedy, it is conceivable that the full possibilities of the Timon legend were brought home to Shakespeare in the very act of composing Antony and Cleopatra. The dramatist's reliance upon this source is suggested by the following excerpt: 'Antonius, he forsooke the citie and companie of his friends, and built him a house in the sea, & dwelt there, as a man that banished himself from all mens company: saying that he would leade Timons life because he had the like wrong offered him, that was before offered vnto Timon: and that for the vnthankfulnesse of those he had done good vnto, and whom he tooke to be his friends, he was angrie with all men, and would trust no man. This Timon was a citizen of ATHENS, that liued about the war of PELOPONNESUS, as appeareth by Plato & Aristophanes comedies: in the which they mocked him, calling him a viper and malicious man vnto mankind, to shun all other mens companies, but the companie of young Alcibiades, a bold and insolent youth, whom he would greatly feast and make much of, and kissed him very gladly. Apemantus wondering at it, asked him the cause what he meant to make so much of that young man alone, and to hate all others: Timon answered him, I do it, said he, because I know that one day he shall do great mischiefe vnto the ATHENIANS.[2] This Timon sometimes would haue Apemantus in his companie, because he was much like of his nature and conditions, and also followed him in manner of life. On a time when they solemnly celebrated the feasts called Choæ at ATHENS, (to wit, the feasts of the dead where they make sprinklings and sacrifices for the dead) and that they two then feasted together by them selues, Apemantus said vnto the other: O here is a trim banquet Timon. Timon answered again: Yea, said he, so thou wert not here.[3] It is reported of him also, that this Timon on a time (the people being assembled in the market place about dispatch of some affaires) got vp into the pulpit for Orations, where the Oratours commonly vse to speake vnto the people: and silence being made, euery man listening to heare what he would say, because it was a wonder to see him in that place, at length he began to speake in this manner: My Lords of ATHENS, I haue a litle yard at my house where there groweth a figge tree, on the which many citizens have hanged themselues: and because I meane to make some building on the place, I thought good to let you all vnderstand it, that before the figge tree be cut downe, if any of you be desperate, you may there in time go hang your selues.[4] He died in the citie of HALES, and was buried vpon the sea side. Now it chanced so, that the sea getting in, compassed his tombe round about, that no man could come to it: and vpon the same was written this Epitaph:

> Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soule bereft: Seeke not my name: a plague consume you wicked wretches left.

It is reported that Timon himselfe, when he liued, made this Epitaph: for that which is commonly rehearsed, was not his, but made by the Poet Callimachus:

> Here lye I Timon, who aliue all liuing men did hate: Passe by and curse thy fill: but passe, and stay not here thy gate—

It will be observed that the themes of this ancient story have been much expanded and enriched by Shakespeare. The 'vnthankfulnesse of those he had done good vnto,' elaborated, becomes the motif for Timon's perversion; and 'young Alcibiades,' with his hatred for Athens, dominates the underplot. Were proof needed, the epitaphs show Shakespeare's dependence upon Plutarch. They are quoted in juxtaposition, but are contradictory. The inclusion of both instead of the selection of one must be due to inadvertence or misunderstanding on the part of the poet. In fact, the more the passage in Plutarch is studied the more certainly does it appear that this or a later work based upon Plutarch, such as Painter's Palace of Pleasure (1566),[5] is the dynamic or inspirational source of our play.

Nevertheless, certain incidents can be attributed neither to Plutarch nor Painter. Of basic principles and ideas Plutarch is the source; for other episodes and character portraiture the responsibility is elsewhere. It is probable that one such source was an old Elizabethan comedy of Timon of Athens, acted about 1600. More or less faithful analogues may be found in the old

1 Definite references to Timon occur in the comedies of Aristophanes, Plato, and Antiphanes. He is later mentioned by Roman writers, notably Cicero, Seneca, the Elder Pliny, and Strabo. Strabo was the first to allude to Timon's early life of affluence. It is quite certain that the legend had general currency. For full compilations of classical and Elizabethan allusions to the Timon story the reader is referred to Dr. Ernest Hunter Wright's monograph, The Authorship of Timon of Athens, Columbia University Press, 1910, and W. H. Clemons; The Sources of Timon of Athens, in the Princeton University Bulletin, September, 1904.

2 For Alcibiades' part in Timon of Athens, see III. v.; IV. iii; V. iv. Plutarch's Life of Alcibiades refers to him as Timon's friend.

3 See Timon of Athens, IV. iii. 307 ff.

4 For Shakespeare's use of the incident of the fig-tree, see Timon of Athens, V. i. 229-236.

5 The twenty-eighth novel of Painter's Palace of Pleasure is of The strange and beastly nature of Timon of Athens, based upon Plutarch, and adding only the particular that Timon lived in a desert. We know that the Palace of Pleasure furnished the source of All's Well that Ends Well, and that it influenced Romeo and Juliet. It is, accordingly, unlikely that Shakespeare was unfamiliar with the novel of Timon of Athens. The exact porportion of Shakespeare's reference, in writing the tragedy, to Plutarch or Painter is, of course, indeterminable. Perhaps the most reasonable conclusion concerning the matter is that he retained a general recollection of Painter, but that a copy of Plutarch lay before him as he wrote.

play for the following incidents: Timon's betrayal by the parasites; the mock-banquet; Timon's exile; the finding of the gold; and, though less certainly, the episodes of the Old Athenian and Ventidius. Since these incidents occur also in Lucian's Dialogues,[6] such evidence proves only that Shakespeare drew either from one or both of these sources. But the mock-banquet and the all-sacrificing steward are to be found in the old play and not in Lucian. In the portion of the old play's mock-banquet scene here reprinted (IV. v.), the reader will find much in substance and spirit worthy of comparison with the corresponding scene in Shakespeare's play (III. vi.).

(Act IV, Scene V.)

Timon, Laches, Obba, Philargurus, Gelasimus, Pseudocheus, Demeas, Eutrapelus: Hermogenes, Stilpo, Speusippus come awhile after.

Tim. Furnish the table, sette on dainty cheare;
Timon doth bidde his friends their last farewell.
Phil. Thou wisely dost; it is too late to spare
When all is spent; whom the gods woulde haue
To lieu but poorely, let him bee content.
Tim. What man is hee can wayle the losse of wealthe,
Guarded with such a friendly company?
Ill thriue my gold, it shall not wring one teare
From these mine eies, nor one sigh from my hearte:
My friends sticke close to mee, they will not starte.
Dem. Is hee madde? wee. knew him not this morning.
Hath hee soe soone forgotte an injury?

• • • • • •

Enter Timon

Tim. O happy mee, equall to Joue himselfe!
I going touche the starres. Breake out, O joy,
And smother not thyselfe within my breast!
Soe many friends, soe many friends I see;
Not one hathe falsifi'de his faith to mee.
What, if I am opprest with pouretie?
And griefe doth vexe mee? fortune left mee poore?
All this is nothing: they releeue my wants;
The one doth promise helpe, another golde,
A thirde a friendly welcome to his house
And entertainement; eache man actes his parte;
All promise counsaile and a faithfull hearte.
Gelas. Timon, thou art forgettefull of thy feast.
Tim. Why doe yee not fall to? I am at home:
Ile standing suppe, or walking, if I please.—
Laches, bring here the artichokes with speede.—
Eutrapelus, Demeas, Hermogenes,
I'le drinke this cuppe, a healthe to all your healths!
Lach. Conuerte it into poison, O ye gods!
Let it bee ratsbane to them! [Aside.
Gelas. What, wilt thou haue the legge or els the winge?
Eutr. Carue yee that capon.
Dem. I will cutte him up,
And make a beaste of him.
Phil. Timon, this healthe to thee.
Tim. Ile pledge you, sir.
These artichokes doe noe mans pallat please.
Dem. I loue them well, by Joue.
Tim. Here, take them, then!
[Stones painted like to them; and throwes them at them.
Nay, thou shalt haue them, thou and all of yee!
Yee wicked, base, perfidious rascalls,
Thinke yee my hate's soe soone extinguished?
[Timon beates Herm. aboue all the reste.
Dem. O my heade!
Herm. O my cheekes!
Phil. Is this a feaste?
Gelas. Truly, a stony one.
Stil. Stones sublunary haue the same matter with the heauenly.
Tim. If I Joues horridde thunderbolte did holde
Within my hande, thus, thus would I darte it!
[He hitts Herm.
Herm. Woe and alas, my braines are dashed out!
Gelas. Alas, alas, twill neuer bee my happe,
To trauaile now to the Antipodes!
Ah, that I had my Pegasus but here!
I'de fly away, by Joue.
[Exeunt (all except Tim. and Lach.)
Tim. Yee are a stony generation,
Or harder, if ought harder may bee founde;
Monsters of Scythia inhospitall,
Nay, very diuells, hatefull to the gods.
Lach. Master, they are gone.
Tim. The pox goe with them;
And whatsoe're the horridde sounding sea
Or earthe produces, whatsoe're accurs'd
Lurks in the house of silent Erebus,
Let it, O, let it all sprawl forth here! here,
Cocytus, flowe, and yee blacke foords of Styx!
Here barke thou, Cerberus! and here, yee troopes
Of cursed Furies, shake your firy brands!
Earth's worse than hell: let hell chaunge place with earth,
And Plutoes regiment bee next the sunne!
Lach. Will this thy fury neuer bee appeas'd?
Tim. Neuer, neuer it; it will burne for euer:
It pleases mee to hate. Goe, Timon, goe,
Banishe thyselfe from mans society;
Farther than hell fly this inhumane city:
If there bee any exile to bee had,
There will I hide my heade. [Exit.
Lach. Ile follow thee through sword, through fire, and deathe;
If thou goe to the ghosts, Ile bee thy page,
And lacky thee to the pale house of hell:
They misery shall make my faith excell. [Exit.

6 The amount of Shakespeare's obligation to Timon the Misanthrope in Lucian's Dialogues has been rather widely disputed. When Shakespeare's play was written there existed no English translation of Lucian's Dialogues. Unless the tale of Shakespeare's Greek is discredited, he cannot be believed conversant with the original. If he was influenced it must have been through existent French or Italian translations. Shakespeare's tragedy includes no passages traceable to Lucian which cannot as readily be ascribed to the old play or another source of later date than Lucian. Yet the absence of evidence has failed to convince certain critics that Shakespeare was not directly affected by the Dialogues. 'The Timon of Shakespeare,' says W. H. Clemons, 'is not the Timon of the academic production; still less is it like the Timon of the popular Elizabethan stories. In the depth and tone of his misanthropy, Lucian's Timon is the true type of Shakespeare's Timon.' (Princeton University Bulletin, September, 1904, 219.) The same writer also calls attention to the likeness in Timon's apostrophes to the gold in Lucian and in Shakespeare (IV. iii. 25 ff.).

Besides similarity of spirit in the two scenes, much has been made of the possible reminiscence of Shakespeare's line: 'One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones' (III. vi. 115). Shakespeare's use of the mock-banquet and of the loyal steward, when no such precedent exists in Lucian, argues strongly for his dependence upon the old comedy of Timon. Steevens and Malone believed in this indebtedness. Dyce, the editor of the comedy, did not investigate the matter deeply. 'I leave to others,' he says in his introduction, 'a minute discussion of the question, whether or not Shakespeare was indebted to the present piece. I shall merely observe, that I entertain considerable doubts of his having been acquainted with a drama, which was certainly never performed in the metropolis, and which was likely to have been read only by a few of the author's particular friends, to whom manuscripts of it had been presented.' But the inability to state positively that Shakespeare knew the play hardly lessens the significance of the strong parallelism between it and the tragedy. Almost certainly it was a source of Timon of Athens.

Besides relying upon these established sources it is conceivable that Shakespeare enjoyed also an acquaintance with certain secondary sources, and it is possible that his interest in the Timon story was increased by its currency in his own time. In Elizabethan literature Timon was regarded as a legitimate and clearly defined type. Robert Greene alludes to him, and Dekker and Nash slur at 'Timonists.' The character crept into Lyly, and Shakespeare himself, in Love's Labour's Lost (IV. iii. 170), has an apt reference to the misanthrope: 'And critic Timon laugh at idle toys.' It is possible, though by no means probable, that Shakespeare had read two plays of the Renaissance, Boiardo's Il Timone (written about 1494) and Galeotto del Caretto's play of the same name (written about 1497). Both these plays follow Lucian closely, and add little to the Timon story except an underplot. No hint of this underplot is found in the tragedy. As Lucian's version of the tale is reflected in Boiardo and Caretto, so Painter's story has been followed by Sir Richard Barckley in his Discourse on the Felicitie of Man (1598). Although Shakespeare may well have been familiar with this book, it is clear that he took nothing from it that he might not have had from Painter's Palace of Pleasure.

History of the Play

Problematic in sources and authorship, Timon of Athens has, in addition, a unique history as a printed and acted play. No quartos exist; the play was first printed in the Folio of 1623 in the section of the Tragedies between Romeo and Juliet and Julius Cæsar. On November 8, 1623, it was entered by the publishers upon the Stationers' Register as one of the plays 'not formerly entered to other men.'[7] The date of composition of Shakespeare's part can be determined only by internal evidence. Various years have been suggested between 1606 and 1610. The general likeness of the tragedy, in story and tone, to King Lear and Coriolanus fix it rather definitely in this period; while the theory that the idea of Timon occurred to Shakespeare while working on Antony and Cleopatra (see Sources of the Play) would place it about 1607-1608, a date upon which there has been some measure of agreement.

The dramatic history of Timon of Athens confirms the usual opinion of readers that it is not well suited for representation on the stage. It is, indeed, surprising that dramatic annals record no performance of the play, in its original form, even with only slight alterations, until towards the close of the eighteenth century. During the last quarter of the seventeenth century, however, there began to appear versions and alterations of the tragedy. Some of these included changes designed merely to please the taste of the time; others cut or expanded the original until it was almost unrecognizable; but all retain the central theme of Timon's misanthropy and much, also, of the indelible influence of Shakespeare. These versions, then, together with a few revivals of the play in its original form, constitute the stage-history of Timon of Athens.[8]

Probably the first performance of an alteration of Timon of Athens occurred in December, 1678, at Dorset Garden, when Thomas Shadwell's version of the play was acted under the title of Timon of Athens, or The Man-Hater. Thomas Betterton (1635?-1710) played the rôle of Timon. In the Dedication Shadwell says he has made the history of Timon 'into a play.' What changes he thought necessary to accomplish this result may be seen in the following excerpts from Genest: Shadwell 'introduces two ladies,—the one, with whom Timon was on the point of marriage, deserts him in his adversity—the other, whom he had himself deserted, sticks to him to the last—this love business is far from an improvement—Shadwell has likewise spoilt the character of Flavius, and made him desert his master. . . . Considerable additions are made to the part of Apemantus, but on the whole it is altered for the worse—in the 2d act, he is called a snarling stoick. . . .' In the same act Shadwell also 'introduces some proper observations on bad poetry, applicable to his own times.' The Jew of Venice (1701) refers to the unpopularity of this production, but Genest declares it to have been the first of many performances of the play: 'It was afterwards revived, and continued on the acting list for many years—Downes indeed says it pleased the Court and City generally.'[9] At least five other productions of Shadwell's version took place between 1678 and 1745. On June 27, 1707, it was acted at the Haymarket Theatre with John Mills (d. 1736) as Timon and John Verbruggen (1688-1707) as Apemantus. Barton Booth (1681-1733) played Alcibiades, while the two female parts, unknown to Shakespeare, of Evandra and Melissa, were taken, respectively, by Mrs. Mary Porter (d. 1765) and Mrs. Bradshaw. Shadwell's version was also known in Ireland, for a record has survived of a performance at the Smock Alley Theater, Dublin, in the year 1715. The next[10] English performance of this version occurred on December 8, 1720, at Drury Lane Theatre, Mills this time acting the part of Apemantus and Booth that of Timon. It was again seen at Covent Garden on May 1, 1733,[11] with James Quin (1693-1766) as

7 No record exists of the acting of Timon of Athens before 1623. Nevertheless, the stage directions seem to indicate that the play had been acted. It is possible that the tragedy was presented without success, and was soon withdrawn.

8 The editor has in preparation a monograph supplying further details of the stage-history of the play and also some account of its history in Continental theatres.

9 The success of this version was due partially to the masque added by Henry Purcell.

10 An amateur performance of Timon of Athens was given at the Clerkenwell charity school on February 6, 1711. John Honeycott, the master of the school, 'with the children of the school, publicly acted the play called "Timon of Athens," and by tickets signed by himself had invited several people to it.' For this venture Honeycott was rebuked by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, the trustees of the school. (Notes and Queries 7th s. iii. See also Secretan's Life of Robert Nelson, London, 1860, 130.) Whether this was the original play or Shadwell's version is conjectural.

11 The influence of the play upon the stage at this time is evidenced by the performance on December 5, 1733, of a comedy of three acts, with songs, dealing with the theme of Timon and his false friends, called Timon in Love, or The Innocent Theft. This trifle was ascribed to C. J. Kelly.

Apemantus. In connection with the next performance at Drury Lane on March 20, 1740, Genest says that the piece had not been acted in three years, but no record is at hand to prove the inference that the play was acted in 1737. At this revival of 1740 Quin again played Apemantus; Milward was Timon; Henry Woodward (1714-1777) acted the rôle of the Poet; and Mrs. Hannah Pritchard (1711-1768) had the part of Melissa. Shadwell's version was acted again, apparently for the last time, on April 20, 1745, at the Covent Garden Theatre.

A composite version, based upon both Shakespeare and Shadwell, was published in 1768, by James Dance, known to the stage as James Love. This play was acted at about the same time at Richmond in a theatre built by the author and his brother. No record exists, apparently, of a London performance, but Biographia Dramatica says that the Richmond production was 'well received.'

An important eighteenth century alteration of Timon of Athens was that written by Richard Cumberland, leader of the school of Sentimental Drama. This saccharine version, in which Timon has a daughter Evanthe, beloved by Alcibiades, was acted at Drury Lane on December 4, 1771. Horace Walpole, who saw this production, thought that Cumberland had 'caught the manners and diction of the original so exactly' that it was 'full as bad a play as it was before he corrected it.' Radical changes from Shakespeare occur throughout the play, and the fifth act is almost entirely Cumberland's. In fact, Doran notes that this Timon has 'more of Cumberland and less of Shakespeare than the public could welcome.'

Shakespeare and Shadwell formed the basis for still another eighteenth century alteration by Thomas Hull (1728-1808), acted at Covent Garden Theatre on May 13, 1786. Joseph Holman (1764-1817) played Timon and Richard Wroughton (1748-1822) was 'a very good Apemantus.' Hull himself played the part of Flavius, and Mrs. Inchbald (1753-1821) that of Melissa. This production, too, was unsuccessful. It ought, says The European Magazine for May, 1786, 'to be consigned to oblivion.' 'The play,' says Biographia Dramatica, 'has been coldly received and has not been printed.'

The nineteenth century found less interest in new versions of Timon of Athens than in reviving the original play, often with elaborate scenic effects. But the play was always, as a whole, unsuccessful, and it becomes increasingly difficult not to acquiesce heartily in Sheridan's remark that 'it is calculated for the closet only, and cannot produce a great effect in representation.' Similarly Macready writes in his Diary: 'Looked at Timon of Athens, but it is (for the stage) only an incident with comments on it. The story is not complete enough—not furnished, I ought to say, with the requisite varieties of passion for a play; it is heavy and monotonous.' The first revival of the play in this century was Edmund Kean's at Drury Lane on October 28, 1816. George Lamb, in his Advertisement to this production, stated: 'The present attempt has been to restore Shakespeare on the stage, with no omissions than such as the refinement of manners rendered necessary.' Kean had the title rôle, and it was certainly due to his genius that the play was acted seven times. B. W. Proctor, in his Life of Edmund Kean, praises the effectiveness of the play's latter dialogues when vitalized by Kean's passion, but says that even 'Kean was unable, by dint of his own single strength, to make it popular.' Writing in like vein, the editor of The New Monthly Magazine for December, 1816, declares that 'till the conclusion of the third act he [Kean] had very little opportunity of distinguishing himself.' The same magazine also says that 'the tragedy [is] got up in splendid style; the banquet scene in particular is superb.'

Thirty-five years later, on September 15, 1851, at Sadler's Wells, Samuel Phelps 'produced with great splendor Shakespeare's Timon of Athens, and again made a tremendous effect on playgoers generally in the character of Timon. Old habitués and the critics who remembered Edmund Kean in this character all said Phelps surpassed him.' This production was acted about forty times between its first night and the following Christmas.

On October 11, 1856, Phelps revived the production with new scenery 'not only archæologically correct, but picturesquely beautiful.' Alcibiades' attack upon Athens was 'a masterpiece of effect and contrivance.' This and the earlier rendering of the play concluded 'with a beautiful seaside view, where the tomb of Timon is the conspicuous object, before which the army of the invader is drawn up in reverence.' Frank Marshall, in the Henry Irving Shakespeare, says: 'Francis Guest Tomlins, secretary of the original Shakespeare Society, instituted comparisons between the Shakespearean revivals at Sadler's Wells and those by Charles Kean at the Princess's, wholly to the credit of the former. At the head of the Princess's was a showman who as lavishly illustrates Pizarro as Macbeth; at that of Sadler's Wells was an artist who assigned fervour and genius predominance over archæology.' This production of Timon pleased Professor Morley, who has recorded his impressions in his Journal of a London Playgoer. 'Timon of Athens,' he says, 'is always a poem to the Sadler's Wells audience.' Of Phelps' performance in the rôle of Timon he adds: 'His . . . acting treats the character as an ideal, as the central figure in a mystery. As the liberal Athenian lord, his gestures are large, his movements free—out of himself everything pours, towards himself he will draw nothing.'

When Timon of Athens was next acted is uncertain. The Atheneum of May 28, 1904, says that Charles Calvert, the actor-manager, staged the tragedy about twenty years after Phelps' production, at Manchester. Professor Ward, however, in his list of Calvert's Shakespearean revivals, begun at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, in 1864, does not include Timon of Athens. It is quite possible, then, that the next performance of the play was that at Stratford-on-Avon, in the annual series of Shakespearean plays undertaken by F. R. Benson, beginning Monday, April 18, 1892. Timon of Athens was acted three times during the week, once on Friday, and twice on Saturday, the poet's birthday. A three-act version was given. Timon was again produced, apparently in similar form, in London, at the Court Theatre, on May 18, 1904, when it enjoyed a run of some ten nights. The London Times of May 19 praises the production, but notes that there is 'no "female interest" in the play, and [that] even the ladies Timandra and Phrynia "mistresses to Alcibiades" have been on this occasion virtually reduced to dumb-show.' In conclusion the reviewer adds: 'There is a lovely ballet, and a Cupid who might have strayed out of Offenbach's Belle Hélène.' Altogether the Times finds this Timon 'an olio of attractions.' On the other hand, The Atheneum declares that the performance possessed 'little interest beyond that of curiosity.'

Perhaps the earliest performance of Timon of Athens in America occurred when an adaptation by N. H. Bannister was acted for the first time at the Franklin Theatre in New York City on April 8, 1839. We are told that Richard Mansfield considered the production of the tragedy, but no proof is available that the play has been recently acted on the American stage except in a series of performances by Mr. Frederick Warde when on tour in 1910.

Authorship of the Play

The exact circumstances of the writing of Timon of Athens will probably remain conjectural, but that the play is not wholly Shakespeare's creation is certain. Double authorship is constantly proclaimed by singularities of workmanship and by technical problems involving inconsistencies in character and action. Regular and highly irregular verse, rhymed and unrhymed lines, dignified prose and prose that is absurdly flat follow each other in capricious fashion. Poetry as lofty as that of King Lear is linked to doggerel, and scenes unquestionably written by Shakespeare suddenly become inane under the influence of another hand. By means of internal evidence of this character scholars have tried to determine how much of the play was written by Shakespeare and how much by the unknown assistant.

The ascriptions differ in detail, but there is some agreement regarding the portions of the tragedy attributable to Shakespeare. About the first one hundred and seventy-five lines of the play are admittedly his (I. i. 1-203). In the passage between the entrance of Apemantus and that of Alcibiades (I. i. 204-266) only the first ten lines have generally been assigned to Shakespeare.[12] The rest of the scene (267-315) was probably written by Shakespeare, with the exception of about eighteen lines of dialogue between the two lords and Apemantus (286-302).[13] Bad verse and blunders have marked the second scene as non-Shakespearean.[14] The first scene of the second act is Shakespeare's (II. i.). The second scene of this act is, by substantial agreement, conceded to be Shakespeare's as far as the entrance of Apemantus and the Fool (II. ii. 1-57),[15] and there is approximately similar agreement that the episode introduced by this entrance is spurious (58-130).[16] The remainder of the scene, approximately (131-253), is usually attributed to Shakespeare except ten prose lines that intrude upon the verse (203-209).[17] The first three scenes of the third act are probably interpolations (III. i., ii, iii.).[18] The commonplace fourth scene is not genuine (III. iv.),[19] nor is the ill-motivated scene showing Alcibiades before the Senate (III. v.). In the sixth scene (III. vi.) I think we can safely assign only Timon's denunciation (83-115) to Shakespeare, though more considerable portions have sometimes been ascribed to him.[20] 'From the fourth act on,' as Wright says, 'the play may be called Shakespere's.' The first scene of this act is almost certainly his (IV. i.) and about the first thirty lines of the second scene (IV. ii. 1-32) may possibly have been touched by his hand.[21] The important third scene (IV. iii.) has evoked marked differences of opinion. Although it is generally conceded that almost the first three hundred lines are Shakespeare's (IV. iii. 1-316), the exact ending of the interpolated passage that follows (316 ff.) is disputed. Fleay would end it at about line 375, and others have adopted his conclusion; Wright, however, believes that Shakespeare's hand is not again discernible until about line 389. The rest of this episode, as far as the entrance of the Banditti, is conceded to be Shakespeare's (389-424). It has been customary to regard a few lines at the opening and a few lines at the closing of the Banditti episode as spurious, but it is quite possible that the whole passage is genuine (425-485).[22] The rest of the scene is probably interpolated (486-569).[23] The first scene of the fifth act with the possible exception of the introduction (1-52) was written by Shakespeare.[24] The second and fourth scenes are likewise his; only the third scene bears no trace of his workmanship.[25]

Concerning the double authorship of Timon of Athens there have arisen three distinct theories:

(1) Timon of Athens of the Folio represents Shakespeare's work as interpolated and corrupted by the players. In his lectures of 1815, Coleridge stated his belief that the play was Shakespeare's throughout, and that when first written it was one of the Poet's most complete performances.[26] He explained the unusual versification on the ground that the play had been injured by the actors, and was of the opinion that the editors of 1623 saw only a mutilated copy of the original.[27] This theory would be more tenable if there existed positive proof that the play was frequently acted before 1623. But such proof is not to be had. Opportunity for interpolation by the players was almost certainly limited. This theory has, generally speaking, given way before more vigorous hypotheses.

(2) Shakespeare rewrote or revised an earlier Timon of Athens, the work of an inferior dramatist. This theory, having its genesis in a belief of Farmer's that there had been an earlier popular play with Timon as a hero, was first advanced by Knight in 1838: 'Timon was a play originally produced by an artist very inferior to Shakespeare, [and] probably retained possession of the stage for some time in its first form; . . . It has come down to us not wholly rewritten but so far remodelled that entire scenes of Shakespeare have been substituted for entire scenes of the elder play.'[28] Delius gave this theory its fullest development in 1867.[29]

12 Fleay was supported in this belief by Hudson, Rolfe, Gollancz, and White. Wright thinks it likely that Shakespeare was the author of the entire passage.

13 Concerning this passage Fleay argued that the unknown author retained the two lords on the stage to jeer at Apemantus, preparing more naturally for the cynic's entrance in the next scene, when he appears 'dropping after all, discontentedly, like himself.' (I. ii. S. d.) Wright considers the passage Shakespeare's.

14 Among other crudities and errors, Wright mentions the following: Ventidius desires to pay his debt to Timon, thus nullifying the dramatic effect of Timon's later request for Ventidius' aid; and in the last act, senators are announced but do not enter.

15 Fleay, Hudson, Rolfe, Gollancz, White, and Wright agree on this point of division.

16 In this passage occurs a typical problem: The Steward urges the duns to await Timon's answer, and with the words, 'Pray, draw near,' is escorting them off, when Apemantus approaches. Whereupon, one of the duns says, 'Stay, stay!' The Steward leaves, but the duns remain throughout the next episode. Johnson suggests that at this point an entire scene is missing.

17 Wright advances the theory that all of these lines, save one, are Shakespeare's. Gollancz believes lines 57-127 (approximately) to be non-Shakespearean.

18 Wright develops an ingenious theory that the first two of these scenes are Shakespeare's. White holds that Shakespeare wrote some dozen lines in the first scene (III. i. 45-58).

19 Three characters, Titus, Hortensius, and Philotus, appear here for the only time in the play. The introduction of a character called Lucius, apparently not the Lucius of the next act, is also puzzling.

20 Hudson assigns to Shakespeare all lines spoken while Timon is on the stage (24-100).

21 Hudson and Wright include these lines in their ascriptions, but Fleay and Rolfe do not.

22 Hudson maintains that Shakespeare wrote approximately the first four hundred and sixty-four lines of this scene.

23 Wright ascribes to Shakespeare approximately lines 498-529 and 552-565.

24 Wright thinks it possible that Shakespeare wrote these lines, since they constitute the introduction to his own scene.

25 A characteristic problem occurs in this act in connection with the entrance of the Poet and Painter. At IV. iii. 373, Apemantus says: 'Yonder comes a poet and a painter.' Yet these characters do not actually enter until about two hundred lines later at the beginning of the fifth act. Thus the leisurely approach of the Poet and Painter becomes an absurdity. To meet the difficulty Hudson substituted 'parcel of soldiers' for 'poet and painter.' Wright explains the confusion by declaring that Apemantus' words occur in a spurious passage; in this case the premature announcement was made by the interpolator.

26 This was the conviction of many German scholars, among them Schlegel, Gervinus, and Ulrici. Elze, however, believed that parts of the play were due to an old Timon (William Shakespeare, 1876); Wendlandt thought that Shakespeare had left part of the play in rough draft (Jahrbuch, 1888); Kullmann suggested that there had been three authors (Archiv für Litteraturgeschichte, 1892); and Bulthaupt ascribed only a small part of the play to Shakespeare. 'I conjecture,' says Ulrici, ' . . . that Shakespeare originally made a rapid and hurried sketch of "Timon of Athens," only that this was done with greater hurry and carelessness than usual . . . but that subsequently—after the piece had been brought upon the stage—he found himself nevertheless obliged to work out some parts with more care.' (Shakespeare's Dramatic Art, Vol. I., p. 523.)

27 A passage in the third act (III. iii. 34-36) may be interpreted as a satire upon the Puritans. Coleridge considered this an actor's interpolation.

28 Pictorial Edition, 1838.

29 Jahrbuch der deutschen Shakespeare Gesellschaft, 1867, pp. 335 ff.

With slight divergences of opinion Delius' view has been supported by the Cambridge Editors, Staunton, Dyce, Nicholson, Evans, and others. 'The original play,' say the first of these, 'on which Shakespeare worked, must have been written, for the most part, either in prose or in very irregular verse.' Evans' comment may be taken as typical of the theory: 'We assume that during his reading of Plutarch Shakespeare's attention was arrested by the story of Timon; that it struck him that the character of Timon might be made effective for the stage, and not having time or inclination to work up a complete plot into a regular five-act play he availed himself of a "Timon" which was in the hands of the theatre at the time. . . . Accordingly he rewrote about half of it, and hastily revised the rest, leaving this for the most part untouched, but inserting or altering a few lines or phrases here and there. But before he had had time to give the whole a final revision it was called for by the manager, and hurried upon the boards. These assumptions will account both for the general unity of the plan as well as for the signs of incomplete revision observable here and there.[30] In quality of argument, and in the support afforded it by eminent scholars, this theory will probably remain important. It has, however, been overshadowed by the third hypothesis.

(3) Shakespeare wrote the main portions of Timon of Athens—which was completed or revised by an inferior dramatist. Verplanck, the American scholar, led the way for this theory in 1847, when he wrote: 'It is like . . . a work left incomplete and finished by another hand, inferior, though not without skill, and working on the conceptions of the greater master.' In the same connection he adds: 'The hypothesis which I should offer . . . is this: Shakespeare adopted the canvas of Timon's story as a fit vehicle for poetic satire . . . while, as to the rest, he contented himself with a rapid and careless composition of some scenes and probably on others (such as that of Alcibiades with the Senate) contenting himself with simply sketching out the substance of an intended dialogue to be afterwards elaborated.'[31] In 1869 this conception of the authorship was further discussed by Tschischwitz.[32] The theory culminated in 1874 in the analysis and argument of Fleay who stated strongly his confidence in Shakespeare's priority.[33] He concludes his Essay as follows: 'The essential part of this paper is the proof that the Shakespere part of this play was written before the other part.' Among the critics who have, in the main, subscribed to this theory are Rolfe, Hudson, Deighton, Gollancz, and Furnivall. Hudson declares that 'whatsoever may be judged of this theory in other respects it seems to make clear work with the question why there should be in this case so great discrepancy of style and execution joined with such general unity of purpose and movement.'[34] Apropos of the second theory, that Shakespeare revised an earlier play, the same critic says: 'Shakespeare's approved severity of taste and strength of judgment at that period of his life, together with his fulness and availability of resource, would hardly have endured to retain certain parts in so crude and feeble a state as we here find them.'[35] This belief in Shakespeare's priority has grown, and, unless some new subversive evidence appears, can hardly be shaken.[36]

Although the dual authorship of Timon of Athens has been long admitted, comparatively little has been done to identify the second author. The inferior parts of the play have been variously ascribed—with meagre evidence, in every case—to Thomas Heywood (d. 1650?), George Wilkins (fl. 1607), John Day (fl.1606), and Cyril Tourneur (1575?-1626). Verplanck surmises that when the play was wanted by Heming and Condell 'some literary artist like Heywood was invited to fill up the accessory and subordinate parts of the play upon the author's own outline, and this was done, or attempted to be done, in the manner of the great original, as far as possible, but with distinction of his varieties of style.[37] Delius believed that both Pericles and Timon showed the hand of George Wilkins, but his evidence is unconvincing.[38] Wright, in commenting upon this latter theory, declares, with reason, that 'the nearer a reviewer comes to thinking that George Wilkins wrote the regular though wooden verse of the first two acts of Pericles, the farther he will be from a belief that the same man wrote the highly irregular verse of the interpolations in Timon.'[39]

Fleay does not press his theory strongly, but points out that in ratio of rhyme to blank verse, irregularities of length, and double endings, Timon of Athens resembles closely The Revenger's Tragedy (1607) by Tourneur. He notes that Tourneur is fond of quoting Latin.

Fleay subjoins passages from The Revenger's Tragedy which he finds to be in exactly the strain of the unknown author of Timon of Athens,[40] and states positively his belief that 'Cyril Tourneur was the only person connected with the King's Company who could have written the other part of the play.'[41] It should be observed that Fleay's identification of Tourneur as reviser of Timon loses force if Tourneur's authorship of The Revenger's Tragedy be denied.

30 The Works of William Shakespeare edited by Henry Irving and Frank A. Marshall, Introduction to Timon of Athens.

31 The Illustrated Shakespeare, edited by G. C. Verplanck (New York, 1847), Introduction to Timon of Athens.

32 Jahrbuch, 1869, 160-197.

33 Transactions of the New Shakspere Society, 1874.

34 Shakespeare's Complete Works, edited by H. N. Hudson, Introduciton to Timon of Athens.

35 Ibid.

36 E. H. Wright, in The Authorship of Timon of Athens, elaborates upon the theory of Shakespeare's priority. Reasoning that nine lines of a ten-line prose passage (II. ii. 198-209) are genuine, Wright is enabled to advance the theory that the germane scenes are also Shakespeare's (III. i., and III. ii.). If these two scenes are spurious, as they have been usually considered, Shakespeare's share of the play has been inadequately motivated. If, on the other hand, these two scenes are from his pen, Shakespeare himself has motivated Timon's misanthropy, and his priority in composition is rendered more likely. (A second apparent gap in the play has been the lack of motivation for the assistance given Timon by Alcibiades. Wright shows how the interpolator tried to close this gap, and suggests how Shakespeare himself may have planned to fill it.) As an additional argument for Shakespeare's priority Wright also notes that every point at which the play follows a source 'falls within a scene that Shakespeare wrote—that every episode or line for which a source is known comes from his pen.' In concluding his argument for Shakespeare's priority Wright says: 'Ten spurious scenes and passages scattered through Shakspere's play and filling one third of it; and Shakspere never using them, never counting on them, never, except to suggest one (III. vi. 51: "Alcibiades is banished.") making a mention of them,—unaware of them. Lift them bodily from the play, and not a word will tell that they were ever in it. The fact is final. Those scenes and passages were no nucleus around which Shakspere built his play. They were extensions to the play he had already built.'

37 The Illustrated Shakespeare, edited by G. C. Verplanck, (New York, 1847), Introduction to Timon of Athens.

38 Jahrbuch, 1867, p. 175.

39 The Authorship of Timon of Athens, p. 101.

40 Dodsley's Edition, pp. 322, 384.

41 See Transactions of the New Shakspere Society, 1874, pp. 138-139.

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Athens. A Hall in Timon's House]
Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and Mercer, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.
Pain. I am glad you're well.
Poet. I have not seen you long: how goes the world?
Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.
Poet. Ay, that's well known:
But what particular rarity? what strange,
Which manifold record not matches? See,
Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power
Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.
Pain. I know them both; th' other's a jeweller.
Merch. O, 'tis a worthy lord!
Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.
Merch. A most incomparable man, breath'd, as it were,
To an untirable and continuate goodness:
He passes.
Jew. I have a jewel here—
Merch. O, pray, let's see't: for the Lord Timon, sir?
Jew. If he will touch the estimate: but, for that—
Poet. 'When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,
It stains the glory in that happy verse
Which aptly sings the good.'
Merch. [Looking at the jewel.] 'Tis a good form.
Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.
Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication
To the great lord.
Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.
Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes
From whence 'tis nourish'd: the fire i' the flint
Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame
Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies
Each bound it chafes. What have you there?
Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?
Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.
Let's see your piece.
Pain. 'Tis a good piece.
Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.
Pain. Indifferent.
Poet. Admirable: how this grace
Speaks his own standing! what a mental power
This eye shoots forth! how big imagination
Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture
One might interpret.
Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.
Here is a touch; is 't good?
Poet. I'll say of it,
It tutors nature: artificial strife
Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators [who pass over the stage].

Pain. How this lord is follow'd!
Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man!
Pain. Look, moe!
Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug
With amplest entertainment: my free drift
Halts not particularly, but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice
Infects one comma in the course I hold;
But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.
Pain. How shall I understand you?
Poet. I will unbolt to you.
You see how all conditions, how all minds,
As well of glib and slippery creatures as
Of grave and austere quality, tender down
Their services to Lord Timon: his large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tendance
All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer
To Apemantus, that few things love better
Then to abhor himself: even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.
Pain. I saw them speak together.
Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o' the mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states: amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame,
Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her;
Whose present grace to present slaves and servants
Translates his rivals.
Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.
Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on.
All those which were his fellows but of late,
Some better than his value, on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.
Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?
Poet. When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants

SCENE ONE. S. d. and Mercer; cf. n. 2 long: for a long time 4 grows: grows older; cf. n. 6, 7 what strange, etc.: what unusual event 12 fix'd: certain 13 breath'd: inured 14 continuate: lasting 15 passes: surpasses 18 touch the estimate: pay the price of which it is valued 19 'When we for recompense,' etc.; cf. n. 23 water: lustre 24 rapt: transported 29–31 our gentle flame . . . chafes; cf. n. 33 present-ment: dedication; cf. n. 36 comes off: turns out 37 Indifferent: reasonably well 39 standing: position (?); cf. n. 41 to the dumbness, etc.; cf n. 46 artificial strife: vying of art with nature

50 moe: more 52 shap'd out: imagine 53 beneath world: world below 54 drift: aim 55 particularly: at any individual person 56 wide sea of wax; cf. n. levell'd: designed (?); cf. n. 58 forth on: forward 59 tract: tract 61 unbolt: disclose 67 properties: appropriates tendance: service 68 glass-fac'd: reflecting, like a mirror, the looks of another 76 Is rank'd with all deserts: has men of all kinds standing in rows 78 states: fortunes 80 personate: represent 81 wafts: beckons 82 present salves: immediate slaves 83 Translates: transforms to scope: to the purpose 87 steepy: difficult to ascend 88, 89 would . . . condition; cf. n. 94 sacrificial: having the character of sacrifice offered to a god 97 marry: by Mary, an oath

Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.
Pain. 'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show,
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's
More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well
To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter Lord Timon, addressing himself courteously to every suitor. [A Messenger from Ventidius talking with him; Lucilius and other servants following.]

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?
Mess. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;
His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing,
Periods his comfort.
Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well:
I am not of that feather to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know him
A gentleman that well deserves a help:
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt and free him.
Mess. Your lordship ever binds him.
Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;
And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Fare you well.
Mess. All happiness to your honour! Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.
Tim. Freely, good father.
Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.
Tim. I have so: what of him?
Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.
Tim. Attends he here, or no? Lucilius!
Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.
Old Ath. This fellow here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd
Than one which holds a trencher.
Tim. Well, what further?
Old Ath. One only daughter have I, no kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I prithee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.
Tim. The man is honest.
Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself;
It must not bear my daughter.
Tim. Does she love him?
Old Ath. She is young and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.
Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?
Luc. Ay, my good lord; and she accepts of it.
Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world
And dispossess her all.
Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?
Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future, all.
Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long:
To build his fortune I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter:
What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
And make him weigh with her.
Old Ath. Most noble lord,
Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.
Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.
Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: never may
That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not ow'd to you! Exit [with old Athenian].
Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!
Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon:
Go not away. What have you there, my friend?
Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech
Your lordship to accept.
Tim. Painting is welcome.
The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
He is but outside: these pencil'd figures are
Even such as they give out. I like your work,
And you shall find I like it: wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.
Pain. The gods preserve ye!
Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your hand;
We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel
Hath suffer'd under praise.
Jew. What, my lord! dispraise?
Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd,
It would unclew me quite.
Jew. My lord, 'tis rated
As those which sell would give: but you well know,
Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters. Believe 't, dear lord,
You mend the jewel by the wearing it.
Tim. Well mock'd.

Enter Apemantus.

Merch. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue,
Which all men speak with him.
Tim. Look, who comes here: will you be chid?

104 moral: allegorical 106 pregnantly: clearly 107 mean eyes: eyes of inferiors 110 five talents: cf. n. 111 strait: exacting 114 Periods: brings to an end 136 more rais'd: of higher station 137 holds a trencher: serves at table 142 dearest: utmost 145 her resort: visiting her by way of courtship 147–150 The man is honest . . . daughter: cf. n.

150 bear: carry as a consequence 152 apt: pliable 153 precedent: early 160 all: altogether 166 bond in men: obligation of affection among men 168 weigh: equivalent in wealth 170 Pawn: if you pledge 184 give out: profess to be 185 wait attendance: remain near 190, 191 Hath . . . dispraise: cf. n. 194 unclew: ruin 196 As . . . give: cf. n. 198 by: according to

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.
Merch. He'll spare none.
Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus!
Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;
When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest.
Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.
Apem. Are they not Athenians?
Tim. Yes.
Apem. Then I repent not.
Jew. You know me, Apemantus?
Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by thy name.
Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus?
Apem. Of nothing so much as that I am not like Timon.
Tim. Whither art going?
Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.
Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.
Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.
Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?
Aptem. The best, for the innocence.
Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?
Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.
Pain. You're a dog.
Apem. Thy mother's of my generation:
what's she, if I be a dog?
Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?
Apem. No; I eat not lords.
Tim. An thou shouldst, thou'dst anger ladies.
Apem. O, they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.
Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.
Apem. So thou apprehendest it: take it for thy labour.
Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?
Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.
Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?
Apem. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet!
Poet. How now, philosopher!
Apem. Thou liest.
Poet. Art not one?
Apem. Yes.
Poet. Then I lie not.
Apem. Art not a poet?
Poet. Yes.
Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow.
Poet. That's not feigned; he is so.
Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!
Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?
Apem. Even as Apemantus does now; hate a lord with my heart.
Tim. What, thyself?
Apem. Ay.
Tim. Wherefore?
Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord.
Art not thou a merchant?
Merch. Ay, Apemantus.
Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!
Merch. If traffic do it, the gods do it.
Apem. Traffic's thy god; and thy god confound thee!

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.

Tim. What trumpet's that?
Mes. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse,
All of companionship.
Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.
[Exeunt some Attendants.]
You must needs dine with me: go not you hence
Till I have thank'd you: when dinner's done,
Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter Alcibiades with the rest [of his Company].

Most welcome, sir!
Apem. So, so, there!
Aches contract and starve your supple joints!
That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,
And all this courtesy! The strain of man's bred out
Into baboon and monkey.
Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed
Most hungerly on your sight.
Tim. Right welcome, sir!
Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time
In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.
Exeunt [all except Apemantus].

Enter two Lords.

First Lord. What time o' day is 't, Apemantus?
Apem. Time to be honest.
First Lord. That time serves still.
Apem. The most accursed thou, that still omitt'st it.
Sec. Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast?
Apem. Ay, to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools.
Sec. Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.
Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.
Sec. Lord. Why, Apemantus?
Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.
First Lord. Hang thyself!
Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend.
Sec. Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence!
Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o' the ass.
[Exit.]
First Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come shall we in,
And taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.
Sec. Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold,
Is but his steward: no meed, but he repays
Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return exceeding
All use of quittance.
First Lord. The noblest mind he carries

208 When . . . honest; cf. n. 223 innocence: stupidity 232 An: if 235 apprehension: interpretation 238 plain-dealing; cf. n. 239 doit: a former Dutch coin, equivalent to half a farthing, a trifle 261 That . . . lord; cf. n.

269 All of companionship: all belonging to one party 277 Aches; cf n. starve: paralyze 279 strain: stock bred out: degenerated 282 hungerly: hungrily 284 depart: take leave of one another 289 serves: affords an opportunity 301 unpeaceable: quarrelsome 303 opposite: hostile 304 outgoes: exceeds 306 Plutus; cf.n. 307 meed: gift 310 use of quittance: customary requital

That ever govern'd man.
Sec. Lord. Long may he live in fortunes!
Shall we in?
First Lord. I'll keep you company. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same. A Banqueting-room in Timon's House.]
Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in: and then, Enter Lord Timon, the States, the Athenian Lords, Ventidius which Timon redeemed from prison. [Enter Alcibiades. Flavius and other attending.] Then comes, dropping after all, Apemantus, discontentedly, like himself.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon,
hath pleas'd the gods to remember my father's age,
And call him to long peace.
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents,
Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.
Tim. O, by no means,
Honest Ventidius; you mistake my love:
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.
Ven. A noble spirit!

[They all stand ceremoniously looking on Timon.]

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony was but devis'd at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray, sit; more welcome are yet to my fortunes
Than my fortunes to me. [They sit.]
First Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.
Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it! hang'd it, have you not?
Tim. O, Apemantus, you are welcome.
Apem. No;
You shall not make me welcome:
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.
Tim. Fie, thou'rt a churl; ye've got a humour there
Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.
They say, my lords, 'Ira furor brevis est';
But yond man is ever angry.
Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does niether affect company,
Nor is he fit for 't, indeed.
Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil, Timon:
I come to observe; I give thee warning on 't.
Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou'rt an Athenian, therefore, welcome: I myself would have no power; prithee, let my meat make thee silent.
Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should Ne'er flatter thee. O you gods, what a number
Of men eat Timon, and he sees 'em not!
It grieves me to see so many dip their meat
In one man's blood; and all the madness is,
He cheers them up too.
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men:
Methinks they should invite them without knives;
Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
There's much example for 't; the fellow that
Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges
The breath of him in a divided draught.
Is the readiest man to kill him: 't has been prov'd.
If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals,
Lest they should spy my wind-pipe's dangerous notes;
Great men should drink with harness on their throats.
Tim. My lord, in heart, and let the health go round.
Sec. Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.
Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! he keeps his tides well.
Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.
Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner,
Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire:
This and my food are equals; there's no odds:
Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apemantus's Grace

'Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;
I pray for no man but myself:
Grant I may never prove so fond,
To trust man on his oath or bond,
Or a harlot for her weeping,
Or a dog that seems a-sleeping,
Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.
Amen. So fall to 't:
Rich men sin, and I eat root.'

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich they good heart, Apemantus!
Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.
Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.
Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends.
Alcib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best friend at such a feast.
Apem. Would all those flatterers were thine enemies, then, that then thou mightst kill 'em and bid me to 'em!
First Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.
Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf, and thus far I confirm you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em? they were the most needless creatures living should we ne'er have use for 'em, and

Scene Two, S. D. States: princes which: whom dropping after all: lingering 22, 23 confess'd . . . not; cf. n. 28 humour: disposition 30–45; cf. n. 30 'Ira furor brevis est'; cf. n. 33 affect: like 35 apperil: risk 39 power: i.e., to make you silent 47 Methinks . . . knives; cf. n. 48 Good: that would be good 54 dangerous notes: signs of vulnerability 55 harness: armor 56 in heart: cheer up 67 fond: foolish 74 dich: do it 79 bleeding-new: freshly killed 86 perfect: satisfied 89, 90 charitable title: name of endearment from: from among would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 100

'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere 't can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drink, Timon.

Sec. Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes, 105
And, at that instant, like a babe, sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

Third Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem Much! Sound Tucket.

Tim. What means that trump? 110

Enter Servant.

How now!

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies! What are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, 115 which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon! and to all
That of his bounties taste! The five best senses
Acknowledge thee their patron, and come freely 120
To gratulate thy plenteous bosom: th' ear,
Taste, touch, and smell, pleas'd from thy table rise;
They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance:
Music, make their welcome! [Exit Cupid.] 125

First Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you're beloved.

[Music.] Enter Cupid with the masque of Ladies [as] Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!
They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. 130
We make ourselves fools, to disport ourselves,
And spend our flatteries, to drink those men
Upon whose age we void it up again
With poisonous spite and envy.
Who lives, that's not depraved or depraves? 135
Who dies, that bears not one spurn to their graves
Of their friend's gift?
I should fear those that dance before me now
Would one day stamp upon me: 't has been done;
Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 140

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of Timon; and to show their loves each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

101, 102 O joy ... born: cf. n. 104 Thou weep'st ... Timon: cf. n. 106 sprung up: stirred within us, quickened S. d. Tucket: trumpet call S. d. Enter Cupid: cf. n. 121 gratulate: salute 126 ample: fully S. d. with ... Amazons: cf. n. 127 Hoy-day: exclamation of surprise 128 mad women: cf. n. 129, 130 Like madness ... root: cf. n. 133 void ... up: vomit 135 depraved: vilified depraves: vilifies 136, 137 spurn ... gift: contemptuous blow received from a friend 140 Cf. n.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,
Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto 't and lustre,
And entertain'd me with mine own device: 145
I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. Faith, for the worst is filthy, and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet 150
Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord.

Exeunt [Cupid and Ladies].

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord?

Tim. The little casket bring me hither. 155

Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside.] More jewels yet!
There is no crossing him in 's humour;
Else I should tell him—well, i' faith, I should—
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.
'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind, 160
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. Exit.

First Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

Sec. Lord. Our horses!

Enter Flavius [with the casket].

Tim. O, my friends! I have one word to say to you; 165
Look you, my good lord,
I must entreat you, honour me so much
As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it,
Kind my lord.

First Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,— 170

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate
Newly alighted and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour, 175
Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.

Tim. Near! why, then, another time I'll hear thee:
I prithee, let's be provided to show them entertainment.

Flav. [Aside.] I scarce know how.

Enter another Servant.

Sec. Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius, 180
Our of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.

How now! what news? 185

Third Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman,

143 kind: gracious 148, 149 hold taking: endure handling doubt: fear 150 idle: trifling banquet: dessert 151 Attends: which awaits 159 Cf. n. 160, 161 Tis pity ... mind; cf. n. mind: magnanimity 168 advance: do honor to (by taking it into your possession) 174 fairly: courteously 176 near: intimately 177 Cf. n. 184 entertain'd: accepted

Lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd,
Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffer:
Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good.
His promises fly so beyond his state
That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes
For every word: he is so kind that he now
Pays interest for 't; his land's put to their books.
Well, would I were gently put out of office,
Before I were forc'd out!
Happier he that has no friend to feed
Than such that do e'en enemies exceed.
I bleed inwardly for my lord. Exit.

Tim. You do yourselves
Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits.
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

Sec. Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

Third Lord. O, he's the very soul of bounty!

Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave
Good words the other day of a bay courser
I rode on. It is yours, because you lik'd it.

Third Lord. O, I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know no man
Can justly praise, but what he does affect:
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own:
I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords. O, none so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give:
Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living
Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, defil'd land, my lord.

First Lord. We are so virtuously bound—

Tim. And so
Am I to you.

Sec. Lord. So infinitely endear'd,—

Tim. All to you. Lights, more lights!

First Lord. The best of happiness,
Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, Lord Timon!

Tim. Ready for his friends. Exeunt Lords.

Apem. What a coil's here!
Serving of becks and jutting-out of bums!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:
Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,
I would be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'll nothing: for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon thee; and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou givest so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper shortly: what needs these feasts, pomps, and vain-glories?

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better music. Exit.

Apem. So:
Thou wilt not hear me now; thou shalt not then;
I'll lock thy heaven from thee.
O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! Exit

194 yield: grant 204 such: such friends 207 bate: deduct 218 I'll call to you; cf. n. 220 visitations: visits 228 defil'd; cf. n. 229 bound: under obligation 237 coil: fuss 238 Offering of obeisances and excessive bowing 239 legs; cf. n.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE SECOND

[Athens. A room in a Senator's House]

Enter a Senator [with papers in his hand].

Sen. And late five thousand: to Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand; besides my former sum,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not.
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold:
If I would sell my horse and buy twenty moe
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon;
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straight,
And able horses. No porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter Caphis.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?

Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to Lord Timon;
Importune him for my moneys; be not ceas'd
With slight denial; nor then silenc'd, when—
'Commend me to your master'—and the cap
Plays in the right hand, thus: but tell him,
My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn
Out of mine own; his days and times are past,
And my reliances on his fracted dates
Have smit my credit: I love and honour him,
But must not break my back to heal his finger:
Immediate are my needs; and my relief
Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone:
Put on a most importunate aspect,
A visage of demand; for, I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing,
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,
Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir.

248 paper: bonds 252 come . . . music; cf. n. 255 heaven: salvation, good advice 1 late: lately 10 No porter, etc.; cf. n. 11 still: always 12 hold: continue 17 be not ceas'd: do not allow yourself to be silenced 21 uses: needs 23 fracted: broken 27 turn'd: flung back 31 his: its (that of the bird to which it belongs); cf. n.

Sen. 'I go, sir!' Take the bonds along with you,
And have the dates in compt.
Caph. I will, sir.
Sen. Go. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same. A Hall in Timon's House]
Enter Steward [Flavius] with many bills in his hand.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,
That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of riot: takes no account
How things go from him; nor resumes no care
Of what is to continue: never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel:
I must be round with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter Caphis, [and the Servants of] Isidore and Varro.

Caph. Good even, Varro. What,
You come for money?
Var. Serv. Is 't not your business too?
Caph. It is: and yours too, Isidore?
Isid. Serv. It is so.
Caph. Would we were all discharged!
Var. Serv. I fear it.
Caph. Here comes the lord!

Enter Timon, and his Train [Alcibiades, Lords, and Others].

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again,
My Alcibiades. With me? what is your will?
Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.
Tim. Dues! Whence are you?
Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.
Tim. Go to my steward.
Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new days this month:
My master is awak'd by great occasion
To call upon his own, and humbly prays you
That with your other noble parts you'll suit
In giving him his right.
Tim. Mine honest friend,
I prithee but repair to me next morning.
Caph. Nay, good my lord,—
Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.
Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord,—
Isid. Serv. From Isidore:
He humbly prays your speedy payment.
Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—
Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks
And past.
Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord;
And I am sent expressly to your lordship.
Tim. Give me breath.
I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;
I'll wait upon you instantly. [Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords.]
[To Flavius.] Come hither: pray you,
How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd
With clamorous demands of date-broke bonds,
And the detention of long-since-due debts,
Against my honour?
Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this business:
Your importunacy cease till after dinner,
That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.
Tim. Do so, my friends.
See them well entertained. [Exit.]
Flav. Pray, draw near. Exit.

Enter Apemantus and Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with
Apemantus: let's ha' some sport with 'em.
Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.
Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!
Var. Serv. How dost, fool?
Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?
Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.
Apem. No, 'tis to thyself. [To the Fool.]
Come away.
Isid. Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.
Apem. No, thou stand'st single; thou'rt not on him yet.
Caph. Where's the fool now?
Apem. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers' men! bawds between gold and want!
All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?
Apem. Asses.
All Serv. Why?
Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.
Food. How do you, gentlemen?
All Serv. Gramercies, good fool: how does your mistress?
Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth!
Apem. Good! gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.
Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain! what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apemantus?
Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.
Page. Prithee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.
Apem. Canst not read?
Page. No.
Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this is Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd.

36 compt: reckoning, for the calculation of interest due 4 resumes: takes 5, 6 never mind, etc.: cf. n. 7 hear, till feel: listen to warnings till the actual disaster befalls him 8 round: plain 12–14 Varro . . . Isidore: cf. n. 15 discharged: paid 18 we'll forth again: cf. n. 25 To the succession of new days: from one day to another 26 occasion: particular need 28 parts: endowments suit: be consistent 31 but: only repair: return

47 date-broke: overdue 51 unagreeable: unsuitable 69 No, thou . . . yet: cf. n. 71 He: he who 79 Gramercies: God-a-mercy, God reward you 81 Corinth: (allusively) house of ill fame 84 captain: a familiar term of address

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish, —a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone. Exit.

Apem. E'en so thou outrunn'st grace.
Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; would they served us!

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it, then, that we may account thee a whoremaster and a knave; which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime 't appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones moe than 's artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lack'st.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord Timon.

Enter Timon and Steward [Flavius].

Apem. Come with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime the philosopher.

[Exeunt Apemantus and Fool.]

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon.

Exeunt [Servants].

Tim. You make me marvel; wherefore, ere this time,
Had you not fully laid my state before me,
That I might so have rated my expense
As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me,
At many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:
Perchance some single vantages you took,
When my indisposition put you back;
And that unaptness made your minister,
Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord,
At many times I brought in my accounts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off,
And say, you found them in mine honesty.
When for some trifling present you have bid me
Return so much, I have shook my head and wept;
Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you
To hold your hand more close: I did endure
Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you in the ebb of your estate
And your great flow of debts. My loved lord,
Though you hear now, too late!—yet now's a time—
The greatest of your having lacks a half
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone,
And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues: the future comes apace:
What shall defend the interim? and at length
How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a word:
Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone!

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood,
Call me before the exactest auditors,
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our offices have been oppress'd
With riotous feeders, when our vaults have wept
With drunken spilth of wine, when every room
Hath blaz'd with lights and bray'd with minstrelsy,
I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Prithee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!
How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants
This night englutted! Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?
Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon!
Ah, when the means are gone that buy this praise,
The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers,
These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:
No villainous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.
Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,
To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart;
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men and men's fortunes could I frankly use
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts.

Tim. And in some sort these wants of mine are crown'd,
That I account them blessings; for by these
Shall I try friends: you shall perceive how you
Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

98 to Lord Timon's: cf. n. 118 sometime: at times 119 philosopher, etc.: cf. n. 134 rated: alloted 135 As . . . means: as my means permitted 137 propos'd: spoke 139 vantages: opportunities 140 indisposition: disinclination 141 And made that disinclination your agent

152 Prompted . . . in: reminded . . . of 154 yet now's a time; cf. n. 155 The most you have is but half enough 168 husbandry: management; cf. n. 170 set me on: put me to proof: test 171 offices: parts of house-buildings devoted to purely household matters 173 spilth: spilling 179 bits: portions 180 englutted: swallowed up 187 are couch'd: go into hiding 192 Secure: set at ease 194 argument: summary of subject-matter of a book (figuratively) contents 195 frankly: freely 197 Assurance bless: may the actual fact justify 198 crown'd: glorified

Enter three Servants.

Serv. My lord? my lord?

Tim. I will dispatch you severally: you, to Lord Lucius: to Lord Lucullus you: I hunted with his honour to-day; you, to Sempronius: Commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Flav. [Aside.] Lord Lucius, and Lucullus? hum!

Tim. [To another Servant.] Go you, sir, to the senators—
Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have
Deserv'd this hearing—bid 'em send o' the instant
A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,
For that I knew it the most general way,
To them to use your signet and your name,
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot
Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,—
But yet they could have wish'd—they know not—
Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—'tis pity:—
And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks and these hard fractions,
With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them!
Prithee, man, look cheerly. These old fellows
Have their ingratitude in them hereditary:
Their blood is cak'd, 'tis cold, it seldom flows:
'Tis lack of kindly warmth they are not kind;
And nature, as it grows again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.
[To a Servant.] Go to Ventidius. [To Flavius.]
Prithee, be not sad;
Thou art true and honest; ingeniously I speak,
No blame belongs to thee. [To Servant.] Ventidius lately
Buried his father, by whose death he's stepp'd
Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents: greet from me;
Bid him suppose some good necessity
Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd
With those five talents. [Exit Servant. To Flavius.]
That had, give't these fellows
To whom 'tis instant due. Ne'er speak, or think
That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would I could not think it: that thought is bounty's foe;
Being free itself, it thinks all others so. Exeunt.

Act Third ❧ Scene First

[Athens. A Room in Lucullus's House]
Flaminius waiting to speak with a Lord [Lucullus] from his master, enters a servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night. Flaminius, honest Flaminius; you are very respectively welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant.] And how does that honourable, complete, freehearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir: and what hast thou there under they cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Falm. Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he? Alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on 't; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less; and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his: I ha' told him on 't, but I could ne'er get him from 't.

Enter Servant with Wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise.
Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly, prompt spirit—give thee thy due—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. [To the Servant.] Get you gone, sirrah. [Exit Servant.] Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is 't possible the world should so much differ,
And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness,
To him that worships thee! [Throwing back the money.]

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. Exit Lucullus.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scald thee!
Let molten coin be thy damnation,

204 severally: separately 212, 213 Of whom . . . hearing; cf. n. o' the instant: immediately 221 corporate: belonging to a body of persons 222 at fall: at a low ebb 227 intending: pretending 228 fractions: fragments 229 half-caps; half-courteous salutes cold-moving: frigid 240 ingeniously: ingenuously 250 instant: immediately 254 free: liberal

7 respectively: particularly 9 complete: accomplished 25 honesty: generosity 31 towardly: docile 39 solidares: small coins, shillings (?) wink at: seem not to see 42 And we alive that liv'd; cf. n. 47 molten coin; cf. n.

Thou disease of a friend, and not himself!
Has friendship such a faint and milky heart,
It turns in less than two nights? O you gods,
I feel my master's passion! This slave, unto his honour,
Has my lord's meat in him:
Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poison?
O, may diseases only work upon 't!
And, when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature
Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! Exit.

Scene Second

[The Same. A Public Place]
Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

Sec. Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to 't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How!

Sec. Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on 't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in 't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have receivd some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Servil. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord;
I have sweat to see his honour. My honoured lord!

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir.
Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend. [Going.]

Servil. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Servil. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me;
He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Servil. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.
If his occasion were not virtuous,
I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Doth thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Servil. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to disfurnish myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do—the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done 't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him?

Servil. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius. Exit Serviluius.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed;
And he that's once denied will hardly speed. Exit.

First Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

Sec. Stran. Ay, too well.

First Stran. Why this is the world's soul; and just of the same piece.
Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him
His friend that dips in the same dish? for, in
My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse;
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet—O, see the monstrousness of man
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!—
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart. But, I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense;
For policy sits above conscience. Exeunt.

51 passion: violent emotion 20 mistook: misdoubted (?) 21 occasion: necessity 22 hap: fortune 37 virtuous: forcible

41 disfurnish: deprive against; on the eve of 43, 44 that I . . . honour; cf. n. 49 conceive . . . fairest: make the most favorable judgment 57 speed: be successful 71 in respect of his: in comparison with his own resources 73 Religion: proper feeling 75 tasted: had experience of the qualities of

Scene Third

[The Same. A Room in Sempronius's House]
Enter a third servant [of Timon's] with Sempronius, another of Timon's friends.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in 't,—hum! 'bove all others?
He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these
Owe their estates unto him.
Serv. My lord,
They have all been touch'd and found base metal, for
They have all denied him.
Sem. How! have they denied him?
Have Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?
And does he send to me? Three? hum!
It shows but little love or judgment in him:
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,
Thrice give him over: must I take the cure upon me?
He has much disgrac'd me in 't; I'm angry at him,
That might have known my place: I see no sense for't,
But his occasions might have woo'd me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e'er received gift from him:
And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll requite it last? No.
So it may prove an argument of laughter
To the rest, and 'mongst lords I be thought a fool.
I'd rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He'd sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;
I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. Exit.
Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic; he crossed himself by 't: and I cannot think but in the end the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear foul! takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire:
Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled
Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead,
Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards
Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their master;
And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. Exit.

8 touch'd: tested as with the touchstone 15 Thrice; cf. n. 21 backwardly: perversely 23 argument: theme 27 courage: inclination 28 faint: timid 30-33 The devil . . . clear; cf. n. 33 set . . . clear: place in an innocent light 34 copies: models 39 wards: bars 41 sure: in safety 43 keep . . . house: remain within doors

Scene Fourth

[The Same. A Hall in Timon's House]
Enter Varro's man [men] meeting others. All Timon's creditors to wait for his coming out. Then enter [servant of] Lucius and Hortensius.

First Var. Serv. Well met; good morrow, Titus and Hortensius.
Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.
Hor. Lucius!
What, do we meet together?
Luc. Serv. Ay, and I think
One business does command us all; for mine
Is money.
Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luc. Serv. And Sir Philotus too!
Phi. Good day at once.
Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.
What do you think the hour?
Phi. Labouring for nine.
Luc. Serv. So much?
Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?
Luc. Serv. Not yet.
Phi. I wonder on 't; he was wont to shine at seven.
Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:
You must consider that a prodigal course
Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear,
'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse;
This is, one may reach deep enough and yet
Find little.
Phi. I am of your fear for that.
Tit. I'll show you how to observe a strange event.
Your lord sends now for money.
Hor. Most true, he does.
Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,
For which I wait for money.
Hor. It is against my heart.
Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes:
And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,
And send for money for 'em.
Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness:
I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.
First Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns: what's yours?
Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.
First Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep; and it should seem by the sum,
Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equall'd.

Enter Flaminius.

Tim. One of Lord Timon's men.
Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

11 at once: to all of you together 21 Is like the sun's; cf. n. recoverable: capable of being retraced 33 shows: appears 37 charge: commission

Flam. No, indeed he is not.
Tit. We attend his lordship: pray, signify so much.
Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit Flaminius.]

Enter Steward [Flavius] in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so? He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.
Tit. Do you hear, sir?
Sec. Var. Serv. By your leave, sir.
Flav. What do ye ask of me, my friend?
Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.
Flav. Ay,
If money were as certain as your waiting,
'Twere sure enough
Why then preferr'd you not your sums and bills,
When your false masters eat of my lord's meat?
Then they could smile and fawn upon his debts,
And take down the interest into their gluttonous maws.
You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;
Let me pass quietly:
Believe 't, my lord and I have made an end;
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.
Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.
Flav. If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you;
For you serve knaves. [Exit.]
First Var. Serv. How! what does his cashiered worship mutter?
Sec. Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great building.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.
Servil. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from 't; for, take 't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him; he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.
Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick:
And, if it be so far beyond his health,
Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.
Servil Good gods!
Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir.
Flam. Within. Servilius, help! my lord! my lord!

Enter Timon, in a rage [Flaminius following].

Tim. What! are my doors oppos'd against my passage?
Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?
The place which I have feasted, does it now,
Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?
Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.
Tit. My lord, here is my bill.
Luc. Serv. Here's mine.
Hor. And mine, my lord.
Both Var Serv. And ours, my lord.
Phi. All our bills.
Tim. Knock me down with 'em: cleave me to the girdle.
Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord,—
Tim. Cut my heart in sums.
Tit. Mine, fifty talents.
Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.
Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours?—and yours?
First Var. Serv. My lord,—
Sec. Var. Serv. My lord,—
Tim. Tear me, take me; and the gods fall upon you!
Exit Timon.
Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate one, for a madman owes 'em. Exeunt.

Enter Timon [and Flavius.]

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves. Creditors? devils!
Flav. My dear lord.—
Tim. What if it should be so?
Flav. My lord,—
Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!
Flav. Here, my lord.
Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius: all:
I'll once more feast the rascals.
Flav. O my lord,
You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table.
Tim. Be't not in thy care: go.
I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide. Exeunt.

Scene Five

[The Same. The Senate House. The Senate sitting.]
Enter three Senators at one door, Alcibiades meeting them [later], with attendants.

First Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's
Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die;
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.
Sec. Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.
Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!
First Sen. Now, captain?
Alcib. I am a humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who in hot blood
Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past depth
To those that without heed do plunge into 't.
He is a man, setting his fate aside,
Of comely virtues:
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice—
An honour in him which buys out his fault—
But, with a noble fury and fair spirit,

95 retentive: confining 98 Put in: advance a claim 104 Knock me down with 'em; cf. n. 115 throw their caps at: give up for lost S.d.; Cf. n. 125 fitly: at a fitting time 126 Sempronius: all; cf. n. 130 to: as to 1 voice: vote 16 fact: deed

Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,
He did oppose his foe:
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but prov'd an argument.
First Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox.
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:
Your words have took such pains as if they labour'd
To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling
Upon the head of valour; which indeed
Is valour misbegot and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born.
He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs
His outsides, to wear them like his raiment, carelessly,
And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill,
What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill!
Alcib. My lord,—
First Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear:
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.
Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me,
If I speak like a captain.
Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threats? sleep upon't,
And let the fores quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy? If there be
Such valour in the bearing, what make we
Abroad? why then, women are more valiant
That stay at home, if bearing carry it;
And the ass more captain then the lion, the fellow
Loaden with irons wiser than the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;
But, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.
To be in anger is impiety;
But who is man that is not angry?
Weigh but the crime with this.
Sec. Sen. You breathe in vain.
Alcib. In vain! his service done
At Lacedæmon and Byzantium
Were a sufficient briber for his life.
First Sen. What's that?
Alcib. I say, my lords, he has done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds!
Sec. Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em;
He's a sworn rioter; he has a sin that often
Drowns him and takes his valour prisoner:
If there were no foes, that were enough
To overcome him: in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages
And cherish factions: 'tis inferr'd to us,
His days are foul and his drink dangerous.
First Sen. He dies.
Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
My lords, if not for any parts in him—
Though his right arm might purchase his own time,
And be in debt to none—yet, more to move you,
Take my deserts to his and join 'em both:
And, for I know your reverend ages love
Security, I'll pawn my victories, all
My honour to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receive 't in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.
First Sen. We are for law: he dies; urge it no more,
On height of our displeasure: friend or brother,
He forfeits his own blood that spills another.
Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords,
I do bescech you, know me.
Sec. Sen. How!
Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.
Third Sen. What!
Alcib. I cannot think but your age has forgot me;
It could not else be I should prove so base
To sue, and be denied such common grace:
My wounds ache at your.
First Sen. Do you dare our anger?
'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.
Alcib. Banish me!
Banish your dotage; banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.
First Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee,
Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,
He shall be executed presently. Exeunt [Senators].
Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough,
that you may live
Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I'm worse than mad: I have kept back their foes,
While they have told their money and let out
Their coin upon large interest, I myself
Rich only in large hurts. All those for this?
Is this the balsam that the usuring senate
Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts.
'Tis honour with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. Exit

19 touch'd: wounded 21 unnoted: undemonstrative (?) 22 behave: control 24 undergo: undertake 34 prefer: show 39 clear: unspotted 40 Valor consists not in revenge but in patience 46 repugnancy: opposition 47 make: do 49 if bearing carry it; cf. n. 50 fellow; cf. n. 56 by mercy: by a merciful condition (?), by your leave (?) 60 breathe in vain: waste your breath 63 briber: advocate

75 factions: factious intrigue inferr'd: alleged 83 for: because 91 spills: destroys 108 Attend: await spirit: anger 112 Only in bone . . . you; cf. n. 114 told: counted 122 lay for hearts; cf. n.

Scene Sixth

[The Same. A Banqueting-room in Timon's House. Music. Tables set out.] Enter divers Friends at several doors.

First Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

Sec. Lord. I also wish it you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

Sec. Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

Sec. Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

Sec. Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.

Sec. Lord. A thousand pieces!

First Lord. What of you?

Third Lord. He sent to me, sir,—Here he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both: and how fare you?

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

Sec. Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men.—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to 't presently.

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

Sec. Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah, my good friend, what cheer?

Sec. Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on 't, sir.

Sec. Lord. If you had sent but two hours before—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance.

The banquet brought in.

Come, bring in all together.

Sec. Lord. All covered dishes!

First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

First Lord. How do you? What's the news?

Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it?

First Lord.
Sec. Lord. } Alcibiades banished!

Third Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

First Lord. How? how?

Sec. Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

Sec. Lord. This is the old man still.

Third Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?

Sec. Lord. It does: but time will—and so—

Third Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.—

You great benefactors sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised: but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another, for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them—be as they are. The rest of your fees, O gods,—the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome. Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes are uncovered and are seen to be full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and lukewarm water
Is your perfection. This is Timon's last;
Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces
[Throwing the water in their faces.]
Your reeking villainy. Live loath'd, and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies,
Cap-and-knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!
Of man and beast the infinite malady
Crust you quite o'er! What, dost thou go?
Soft! take thy physic first—thou too—and thou:—
Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.
[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.]
What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast
Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be
Of Timon man and all humanity! Exit.

Enter the Senators, with other Lords.

First Lord. How now, my lords!

4 tiring: busily engaged; cf. n. 10 many: many of near: important 26 willing: willingly 30, 31 if they will fare . . . sound; cf. n. 43 better remembrance: remembrance of better things

58 toward: at hand 63 spur: incentive, eagerness 65 a city feast: a formal dinner of municipal functionaries 76 fees: property (?) 77 common lag: lowest class 84 knot: band smoke: steam 85 perfection: highest excellence 91 time's flies: flies of a season; cf. II.ii.187 92 minute-jacks; cf. n. 93 infinite: numberless (?) 95 Soft: Stay 100 Of: by

Sec. Lord. Know you the quality of Lord Timon's fury?
Third Lord. Push! did you see my cap?
Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown.
First Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat. Did you see my jewel?
Third Lord. Did you see my cap?
Sec. Lord. Here 'tis.
Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown.
First Lord. Let's make no stay.
Sec. Lord. Lord Timon's mad.
Third Lord. I feel 't upon my bones.
Fourth Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. Exeunt the Senators [and others].

ACT FOURTH

SCENE FIRST

[Without the Walls of Athens.]
Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee. O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves, dive in the earth,
And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent!
Obedience fail in children! Slaves and fools,
Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,
And minister in their steads! To general filths
Convert, o' the instant, green virginity!
Do 't in your parents' eyes! Bankrupts, hold fast;
Rather than render back, out with your knives,
And cut your trusters' throats! Bound servants, steal!
Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,
And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed;
Thy mistress is o' the brothel! Son of sixteen,
Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire:
With it beat out his brains! Piety and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,
Domestic awe, night-rest and neighbourhood
Instruction, manners, mysteries and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs and laws,
Decline to your confounding contraries,
And let confusion live! Plagues incident to men,
Your potent and infectious fevers heap
On Athens, ripe for stroke! Thou cold sciatica,
Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their manners! Lust and liberty
Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,
That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,
And drown themselves in riot! Itches, blains,
Sow all the Athenian bosoms, and their crop
Be general leprosy! Breath infect breath,
That their society, as their friendship, may
Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee
But nakedness, thou detestable town!
Take thou that too, with multiplying bans!
Timon will to the woods, where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.
The gods confound—hear me, you good gods all!—
The Athenians both within and out that wall!
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high and low!
Amen. Exit.

103 Push: Pshaw 106 humour: caprice 115 stones; cf. n. 6 filths: strumpets 7 Convert: turn 9 render back: repay 12 pill: plunder 14 lin'd: stuffed 17 Domestic awe: respect for parents neighbourhood: neighborly feeling 18 mysteries: crafts 20 confounding: ruinous 25 liberty: license 28 blains: sores 32 merely: entirely 34 multiplying: increasing bans: curses

SCENE SECOND

[Athens. Timon's House]
Enter Steward [Flavius], with two or three servants.

First Serv. Hear you, master steward, where's our master?
Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?
Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.
First Serv. Such a house broke!
So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and not
One friend to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him!
Sec. Serv. As we do turn our backs
From our companion thrown into his grave,
So his familiars to his buried fortunes
Slink all away; leave their false vows with him,
Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty,
Walks, like contempt, alone. More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.
Third Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery;
That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow: leak'd in our bark,
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.
Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say,
As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
'We have seen better days.' Let each take some.
Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more:
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.
[They] embrace and part several ways.
O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us.
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt?
Who would be so mock'd with glory? or to live
But in a dream of friendship?
To have his pomp and all what state compounds
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends?
Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart,
Undone by goodness. Strange, unusual blood,
When man's worst sin is he does too much good!

38 out: without 4 recorded: taken to witness 12 familiars . . . fortunes: those who were so intimate with his now buried prosperity 15 A beggar devoted by fortune to a homeless life 17 fellows: comrades S. d. several ways: in different directions 36 to live: desire to live 38 all . . . compounds; cf. n. 41 blood: temper

Who then dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.
My dearest lord, blest, to be most accurs'd,
Rich only to be wretched, thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord!
He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat
Of monstrous friends;
Nor has he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it.
I'll follow and inquire him out:
I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold I'll be his steward still. Exit

Scene Third

[Woods and Cave near the Sea-shore]
Enter Timon in the Woods [from the Cave]

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
Infect the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb,
Whose procreation, residence and birth,
Scarce is dividant, touch them with several fortunes,
The greater scorns the lesser: not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune
But by contempt of nature.
Raise me this beggar, and deny't that lord,
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
The beggar native honour.
It is the pasture lards the rother's sides,
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,
In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, 'This man's a flatterer'? If one be,
So are they all; for every grize of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: all is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures
But direct villainy. Therefore, be abhorr'd
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield me roots! [Digging.]
Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate
With thy most operant poison! What is here?
Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods,
I am no idle votarist: roots, you clear heavens!
Thus much of this will make black white, foul fair,
Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward valiant.
Ha, you gods! why this? what this, you gods? Why, this
Will lug your priests and servants from your sides,
Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads:
This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs'd;
Make the hoar leprosy ador'd; place thieves,
And give them title, knee, and approbation,
With senators on the bench: this is it
That makes the wappen'd widow wed again;
She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores
Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices
To the April day again. Come, damned earth,
Thou common whore of mankind, that putt'st odds
Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
Do thy right nature. March afar off. Ha! a drum? thou'rt quick,
But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go, strong thief,
When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand:
Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some gold.]

Enter Alcibiades, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; and Phrynia and Timandra.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak.
Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart,
For showing me again the eyes of man!
Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee,
That art thyself a man?
Tim. I am 'Misanthropos,' and hate mankind.
For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,
That I might love thee something.
Alcib. I know thee well,
But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.
Tim. I know thee too; and more than that I know thee
I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules:
Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;
Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine
Hath in her more destruction than thy sword
For all her cherubin look.
Phry. Thy lips rot off!
Tim. I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns
To thine own lips again.
Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?
Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give:
But then renew I could not like the moon;
There were no suns to borrow of.
Alcib. Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?
Tim. None, but to maintain my opinion.
Alcib. What is it, Timon?
Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man: if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!
Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.
Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.
Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.
Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.
Timan. Is this the Athenian minion, whom the world Voic'd so regardfully?
Tim. Art thou Timandra?
Timan. Yes.
Tim. Be a whore still; they love thee not that use thee;
Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.
Make use of thy salt hours: season the slaves
For tubs and baths; bring down rose-cheeked youth

49 monstrous: unnatural 50 to supply his life: the necessities of life 5 dividant: divided 9 Raise me . . . lord; cf. n. 12 rother's: ox's; cf. n. 16 grize: step 17 smooth'd: flattered 18 oblique: indirect 22 semblable: counterpart 23 fang: seize 25 operant: potent 27 idle: empty votarist: votary; cf. n. 32 Pluck . . . heads; cf. n. stout: strong 38 wappen'd: stale (?)

39, 40 spital-house . . . cast the gorge at: hospital patients or victims of ulcerous sores would loathe 44 Do . . . nature; cf. n. 45 quick: living (a pun) 48 earnest: money paid as an instalment to secure a bargain 54 'Misanthropos': Hater of Mankind; cf. n. 56 something: somewhat 58 strange: unacquainted 61 gules: the heralidic term for red 63 fell: deadly 79 in some sort: in a way 83 minion: darling 84 Voic'd: acclaimed regardfully: respectfully 89 salt: wanton

To the tub-fast and the diet.
Timan. Hang thee, monster!
Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits
Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon,
The want whereof doth daily make revolt
In my penurious band: I have heard and griev'd
How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,
Forgetting they great deeds, when neighbour states,
But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them—
Tim. I prithee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.
Alcib. I am thy friend and pity thee, dear Timon.
Tim. How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?
I had rather be alone.
Alcib. Why, fare thee well:
Here is some gold for thee.
Tim. Keep it, I cannot eat it.
Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap—
Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?
Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause.
Tim. The gods confound them all in they conquest, and
Thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!
Alcib. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That by killing of villains thou wast born to conquer
My country.
Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go on;
Be as a planetary plague, when Jove
Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison
In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one
Pity not honour'd age for his white beard;
He is a usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron;
It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek
Make soft thy trenchant sword; for those milkpaps,
That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe,
Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy;
Think it a bastard whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,
And mince it sans remorse. Swear against objects;
Put armour on thine ears and on thine eyes,
Whose proof nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,
Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers:
Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent,
Confounded by thyself! Speak not, be gone.
Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I'll take the gold thou giv'st me,
Not all they counsel.
Tim. Dost thou or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee!
Phr. } Give us some gold, good Timon: hast thou more?
Timan. }
Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,
And to make whores, a bawd. Hold up, you sluts,
Your aprons mountant: you are not oathable;
Although, I know, you'll swear, terribly swear
Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues
The immortal gods that hear you; spare your oaths,
I'll trust to your conditions: be whores still;
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke,
And be no turncoats: yet may your pains, six months,
Be quite contrary: and thatch your poor thin roofs
With burdens of the dead;—some that were hang'd,
No matter:—wear them, betray with them: whore still;
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face:
A pox of wrinkles!
Phr. } Well, more gold. What then?
Timan. }
Believe 't, that we'll do anything for gold.
Tim. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man; strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,
That he may never more false title plead,
Nor sound his quillets shrilly: hoar the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of flesh
And not believes himself: down with the nose,
Down with it flat; take the bridge quite away
Of him that, his particular to foresee,
Smells from the general weal: make curl'd-pate ruffians bald;
And let the unscarr'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you: plague all,
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection. There's more gold:
Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave you all!
Phr. } More counsel with more money, bounteous
Timan. } Timon.
Tim. More whore, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.
Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens! Farewell, Timon:
If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.
Tim. If I hope well, I'll never see thee more.
Alcib. I never did thee harm.
Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.
Alcib. Call'st thou that harm?
Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take
Thy beagles with thee.
Alcib. We but offend him. Strike!
[Drum beats.] Exeunt [Alcibiades, Phrynia, and Timandra].
Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry! Common mother, thou, [Digging.]
Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,
Teems, and feeds all; whose self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,
Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venom'd worm,
With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine;
Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate,

91 To the tub-fast and the diet; cf. n. 97 penurious: poverty-stricken 99 neighbour: neighboring 108 on: in 117 planetary plague; cf. n. 121 counterfeit: deceitful 122 habit: demeanor 125 window-bars: latticed open-work of the bodice bore at: show themselves to 129 whom: who 130 doubtfully: ambiguously 131 sans: without objects: objects of commiseration 133 proof: impenetrability 136 confusion: destruction 140 Dost ... not: whether you do or not 143 Enough ... bawd; cf. n. 145 mountant: rising oathable: fit to swear a true oath

149 conditions: characters 154, 155 and thatch ... dead; cf. n. 166 quillets: verbal niceties hoar: make mouldy flamen: priest 170 particular: personal interest 171 Smells from: loses the scent of 177 grave: bury 185 hope well: attain my hope 190 beagles: small variety of hound, used contemptuously of women 199 crisp: wavy, with clouds 200 Hyperion; cf. n.

From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root!
Ensear thy fertile and conceptious womb,
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man!
Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented!—O, a root! dear thanks!—
Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas;
Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips!

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague, plague!
Apem. I was directed hither: men report
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.
Tim. 'Tis then because thou dost not keep a dog,
Whom I would imitate: consumption catch thee!
Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected;
A poor unmanly melancholy sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit? and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods
By putting on the cunning of a carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'lt observe
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bade welcome,
To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again,
Rascals should have 't. Do not assume my likeness.
Tim. Were I like thee I'd throw away myself.
Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself,
A madman so long, now a fool. What, think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? will these moss'd trees,
That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels
And skip when thou point'st out? will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure the o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures
Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks
To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer mere nature; bid them flatter thee;
O, thou shalt find—
Tim. A fool of thee. Depart.
Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.
Tim. I hate thee worse.
Apem. Why?
Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.
Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a caitiff.
Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?
Apem. To vex thee.
Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.
Dost please thyself in 't?
Apem. Ay.
Tim. What! a knave too?
Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'dst courtier be again,
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives incertain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.
Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.
Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog.
Hadst thou, like us from our first swath, proceeded
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drudges of it
Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd thyself
In general riot, melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust, and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary,
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment,
That numberless upon me stuck as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows: I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy nature did commence in sufference, time
Hath made thee hard in 't. Why shouldst thou hate men?
They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
To some she beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence, be gone!
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.
Apem. Art thou proud yet?
Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.
Apem. I, that I was
No prodigal.
Tim. I, that I am one now:
Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it. [Eating a root.]
Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast. [Offering him a root.]
Tim. First mend my company; take away thyself.

202 conceptious: fruitful 206 marbled: shining like marble 209 liquorish: pleasant 210 unctuous: oily 211 consideraton: regard for higher things 217 infected: affected 222 perfumes: perfumed mistresses 224 cunning: profession carper: censurer 226 hinge: bend 227 observe: pay court to 228 strain: quality 238 warm: heated moderately 239 page: follow like a page 241 Candied: crystallized with frost caudle: serve as a warm drink 244 wreakful: revengeful 246 Answer mere nature: cf. n.

256–259 Always ... too; cf. n. 268 Far worse than the worst condition of life when accompanied by content 270 breath: voice, advice 273 swath: swaddling-clothes 273, 274 proceeded ... degrees; cf. n. 275 drudges; cf. n. 281 confectionary: maker of sweet-meats 283 frame: provide with 285 have: i.e., and now have brush: violence 289 sufferance: suffering 290 hard in: hardened to 292 rag: term of contempt, a shabby person 295 hereditary: by heredity 305 That: would that

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.
Tim. 'Tis not well mended so, it is but botch'd; 310
If not, I would it were.
Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?
Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.
Apem. Here is no use for gold. 315
Tim. The best and truest;
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.
Apem. Where liest o' nights, Timon?
Tim. Under that 's above me.
Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus? 320
Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it.
Tim. Would poison were obedient and knew my mind!
Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?
Tim. To sauce thy dishes. 325
Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: when thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity; in thy rags thou know'st none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it. 330
Tim. On what I hate I feed not.
Apem. Dost hate a medlar?
Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.
Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever 335 know unthrift that was beloved after his means?
Tim. Who, without those means thou talk'st of, didst thou ever know beloved?
Apem. Myself.
Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to 340
keep a dog.
Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?
Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, 345
Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?
Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.
Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?
Apem. Ay, Timon. 350
Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee t' attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when peradventure thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would 355
torment thee, and still thou livedst but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wert 360
thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse: wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard: wert thou a leopard, thou wert german to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life: all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence absence. What beast couldst thou be, 365 that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation!
Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here: the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts. 370
Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?
Apem. Yonder comes a poet and a painter: the plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again. 375
Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than Apemantus.
Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.
Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon!
Apem. A plague on thee! thou art too bad to curse. 380
Tim. All villains that do stand by thee are pure.
Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.
Tim. If I name thee,
I'll beat thee; but I should infect my hands.
Apem. I would my tongue could rot them off! 385
Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog!
Choler does kill me that thou art alive;
I swound to see thee.
Apem. Would thou wouldst burst!
Tim. Away, 390
Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry I shall lose
A stone by thee. [Throws a stone at him.]
Apem. Beast!
Tim. Slave!
Apem. Toad! 395
Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!
I am sick of this false world, and will love nought
But even the mere necessities upon 't.
Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave;
Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat 400
Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph,
That death in me at others' lives may laugh.
[Looking on the gold.]
O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce
'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler
Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars! 405
Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,
Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow
That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,
That solder'st close impossibilities,
And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue, 410
To every purpose! O thou touch of hearts!
Think thy slave, man, rebels; and by thy virtue
Set them into confounding odds, that beasts
May have the world in empire!
Apem. Would 'twere so! 415
But not till I am dead. I'll say thou'st gold:
Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.
Tim. Throng'd to!
Apem. Ay.
Tim. Thy back, I prithee. 420
Apem. Live, and love thy misery!

310, 311 'Tis not . . . would it were; cf. n. 312 What . . . Athens; cf. n. 328 curiosity: fastidiousness 330 medlar; cf. n. 336 unthrift: prodigal after; cf. n. 348 confusion: ruin 358, 359 wert thou the unicorn, etc.; cf. n. 359 confound: destroy 362–364 wert thou . . . life; cf. n. 363 german: akin 364 remotion: keeping away

373 Yonder . . . painter; cf. n. 378 cap: chief 388 swound: swoon 399 presently: immediately 403 dear: used intensively 405 Hymen; cf. n. 409 close: closely (?) 411 touch: touchstone

Tim. Long live so, and so die! Exit Apemantus.
I am quit.
Moe things like men? Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter the Banditti.

First Ban. Where should he have this gold?
It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder;
the mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends,
drove him into this melancholy.
Sec. Ban. It is noised he hath a mass of treasure.
Third Ban. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for 't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve
it, how shall's get it?
Sec. Ban. True; for he bears it not about him; 'tis hid.
First Ban. Is not this he?
All. Where?
Sec. Ban. 'Tis his description.
Third Ban. He; I know him.
All. Save thee, Timon.
Tim. Now, thieves?
All. Soldiers, not thieves.
Tim. Both too; and women's sons.
All. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.
Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.
Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;
Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;
The oaks bear mast, the briers scarlet hips;
The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush
Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?
First Ban. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water,
As beasts and birds and fishes.
Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;
You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con
That you are thieves profess'd, that you work not
In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft
In limited professions. Rascal thieves,
Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape,
Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
Moe than you rob: take wealth and lives together;
Do villainy, do, since you protest to do 't,
Like workmen. I'll example you with thievery:
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stol'n
From general excrement: each thing's a thief:
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power
Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves; away!
Rob one another. There's more gold. Cut throats:
All that you meet are thieves: to Athens go,
Break open shops; nothing can you steal,
But thieves do lose it: steal not less for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoe'er!
Amen.
Third Ban. Has almost charmed me from my profession by persuading me to it.
First Ban. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.
Sec. Ban. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.
First Ban. Let us first see peace in Athens: there is no time
so miserable but a man may be true. Exeunt Thieves.

Enter the Steward [Flavius] to Timon.

Flav. O you gods!
Is yond despised and ruinous man my lord?
Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!
What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made!
What viler thing upon the earth than friends
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!
How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd to love his enemies!
Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me than those that do!
Has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him, and, as my lord,
Still serve him with my life. My dearest master!

[Timon comes forward.]

Tim. Away! what art thou?
Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?
Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;
Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee.
Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.
Tim. Then I know thee not:
I never had an honest man about me, I; all
I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains
Flav. The gods are witness,
Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.
Tim. What, dost thou weep? come nearer; then I love thee,
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st
Flinty mankind, whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!
Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,
To accept my grief and whilst this poor wealth lasts
To entertain me as your steward still.
Tim. Had I a steward
So true, so just, and now so comfortable?
It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.
Let me behold thy face. Surely this man
Was born of woman.
Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
You perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man—mistake me not—but one;
No more, I pray,—and he's a steward.

423 quit: rid of you 426 ort: fragment 427 falling-from: desertion 430 assay: trial 432 shall's: shall we 439 Now: how now 446 mast: fruit of the beach, oak, or chestnut hips: fruit of the wild rose 448 mess: dish (of food) 452 thanks ... con: be grateful 455 limited: restricted 461 protest: vow 462 example: furnish with instances 466, 467 whose liquid ... tears: cf. n. 468 composture: manure 485 true: honest 490 alteration of honour: change to dishonor 494 rarely: finely 494, 495 How rarely ... enemies: cf. n. 496, 497 Grant ... that do: cf. n. 514 give: shed tears 515 thorough: through 519 entertain: maintain, use 521 comfortable: helpful 525 exceptless: making no exception

How fain would I have hated all mankind!
And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save thee,
I fell with curses.
Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou mightst have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters,
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true—
For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure—
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usuring kindness and as rich men deal gifts,
Excepting in return twenty for one?
Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast
Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd false times when you did feast:
Suspect still comes when an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living; and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish, that you had power and wealth
To requite me by making rich yourself.
Tim. Look thee, 'tis so! Thou singly honest man,
Here, take: the gods out of my misery,
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy;
But thus condition'd: thou shalt build from men,
Hate all, curse all, show charity to none,
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow 'em,
Debts wither 'em to nothing: be men like blasted woods,
And may diseases lick up their false bloods!
And so, farewell, and thrive.
Flav. O, let me stay
And comfort you, my master.
Tim. If thou hatest
Curses, stay not: fly, whilst thou'rt blest and free:
Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee. Exit.

ACT FIFTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

[The Woods. Before Timon's Cave]
Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true that he's so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our loves to him in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation: only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too, tell him of an intent that's coming towards him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will or testament which argues a great sickness in his judgement that makes it.

Enter Timon from his Cave.

Tim. [Aside.] Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him: it must be a personating of himself; a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. [Aside.] Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:
Then do we sin against our own estate,
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True;
When the day serves, before black-corner'd night,
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. [Aside.] I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's gold,
That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple
Than where swine feed!
'Tis thou that rigg'st the bark and plough'st the foam,
Settlest admired reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey!
Fit I meet them. [Coming forward.]

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master!

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men?

Poet. Sir,
Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friends fall'n off,
Whose thankless natures—O abhorred spirits!
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What! to you,
Whose start-like nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being! I am rapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

543 suspect: suspicion 547 unmatched: matchless 554 singly: uniquely 557 thus condition'd: on these conditions 3, 4 hold for: prove 11 try: test

15 purposes: plans 25 deed of saying: performance of promise 32 personating: representing 33 discovery: showing 42 black-corner'd; cf. n. 52 Fit: it is fitting that 63 rapt: beside myself

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see 't the better:
You, that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen and known
Pain. He and myself
Have travail'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.
Tim. Ay, you are honest men.
Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.
Tim. Most honest men! Why, how shall I requite you?
Can you eat roots, and drink cold water? no.
Both. What we can do, we'll do, to do you service.
Tim. Ye're honest men: ye've heard that I have gold;
I am sure you have: speak truth; ye're honest men.
Pain. So it is said, my noble lord: but therefore
Came not my friend nor I.
Tim. Good honest men! Thou draw'st a counterfeit
Best in all Athens: thou'rt indeed the best;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.
Pain. So, so, my lord.
Tim. E'en so, sir, as I say. And, for thy fiction,
Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth
That thou art even natural in thine art.
But for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,
I must needs say you have a little fault:
Marry, 'tis not monstrous in you; neither wish I
You take much pains to mend.
Both. Beseech your honour
To make it known to us.
Tim. You'll take it ill.
Both. Most thankfully, my lord.
Tim. Will you, indeed?
Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.
Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave
That mightily deceives you.
Both. Do we, my lord?
Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,
Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom: yet remain assur'd
That he's a made-up villain.
Pain. I know none such, my lord.
Poet. Nor I.
Tim. Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold,
Rid me these villains from your companies:
Hang them or stab them, drown them in a draught,
Confound them by some course, and come to me,
I'll give you gold enough.
Both. Name them, my lord, let's know them.
Tim. You that way, and you this, but two in company:
Each man apart, all single and alone,
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.
If, where thou art two villains shall not be,
Come not near him. [To the Poet.] If thou would'st not reside
But where one villain is, then him abandon.
Hence, pack! there's gold; you came for gold, ye slaves:
[To Painter.] You have done work for me, there's payment: hence!
[To Poet.] You are an alchemist, make gold of that:
Out, rascal dogs!
[Beats them out, and then returns into his cave.]

Enter Steward [Flavius], and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;
For he is set so only to himself
That nothing but himself which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.
First Sen. Bring us to his cave:
It is our part and promise to the Athenians
To speak with Timon.
Sec. Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs
That fram'd him thus: time, with his fairer hand,
Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us to him,
And chance it as it may.
Flav. Here is his cave.
Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends. The Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter Timon out of his Cave.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a cauterizing to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!
First Sen. Worthy Timon,—
Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.
Sec. Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.
Tim. I thank them, and would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.
First Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators will one consent of love
Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.
Sec. Sen. They confess
Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross;
Which now the public body, which doth seldom
Play the recanter, feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of it own fail, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,
Together with a recompense more fruitful
Then their offence can weigh down by the dram;
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.
Tim. You witch me in it,
Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

81 counterfeit: likeness 83 lively: to the life 87 natural: pun on 'natural,' a fool 101 cog: cheat 102 patchery: roguery 104 made-up: consummate 109 draught: cesspool 119 pack: depart

125 set . . . to himself: wrapped up in himself 129 part: particular business 133 fram'd: moulded 135 The . . . him: may restore him to his former self 162 hath . . . withal: has, besides, a realization 163 it: its fail: offence 164 sorrow'd render: confession of sorrow 171 witch: bewitch

First Sen. Therefore so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens—thine and ours—to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority: so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.
Sec. Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword
Against the walls of Athens.
First Sen. Therefore, Timon,—
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir; thus:—
If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged and our youth
I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not,
And let him take 't at worst; for their knives care not
While you have throats to answer: for myself
There's not a whittle in the unruly camp
But I do prize it at my love before
The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.
Flav. Stay not; all's in vain.
Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still;
Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!
First Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country, and am not
One that rejoices in the common wrack,
As common bruit doth put it.
First Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen,—
First Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.
Sec. Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.
Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them, that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them:
I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath
Sec. Sen. I like this well; he will return again.
Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it: tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whoso please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself. I pray you, do my greeting.
Flav. Trouble him no further; thus you still shall find him.
Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Who once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.
Lips, let sour words go by and language end:
What is amiss plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works and death their gain!
Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign. Exit Timon.
First Sen. His discontents are unremovably
Coupled to nature.
Sec. Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear peril.
First Sen. It requires swift foot. Exeunt.

178 Allow'd: sanctioned 199 whittle: small clasp-knive 202 prosperous: propitious 208 nothing: oblivion, death 213 wrack: ruin 214 bruit: rumor 227 prevent: escape 229 close: enclosure 232 in . . . degree: one after another according to rank

Scene Second

[Before the Walls of Athens]
Enter two other Senators, with a Messenger.

First Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files
As full as they report?
Mess. I have spoke the least:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.
Sec. Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.
Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend,
Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends: this man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported
His fellowship i' the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.
First Sen. Here come our brothers.

Enter the other Senators [from Timon].

Third Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring
Doth choke the air with duty. In, and prepare:
Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes the snare. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Woods. Timon's Cave, and a rude Tomb seen]
Enter a Soldier in the Woods, seeking Timon.

Sold. By all description this should be the place.
Who's here? speak, ho! No answer! What is this?

234 take . . . haste: make haste 242 embossed: foaming 252 strain: exert to the utmost 1 painfully discover'd: told distressing tidings files: ranks 8 in general part: in the public cause

Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span:
Some beast read this; there does not live a man.
Dead, sure; and this his grave. What's on this tomb
I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure skill,
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days.
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. Exit.

Scene Fourth

[Before the Walls of Athens]

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades with his Powers before Athens.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach. Sounds a parley.

The Senators appear upon the Walls.

Till now you have gone on and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice; till now myself and such
As slept within the shadow of your power
Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd
Our sufferance vainly. Now the time is flush,
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries of itself, 'No more:' now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,
And pursy insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight.
First Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.
Sec. Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promis'd means:
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.
First Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom
You have receiv'd your grief: nor are they such
That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.
Sec. Sen. Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame that they wanted cunning in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,—
If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loathes,—take thou the destin'd tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.
First Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, it is not square to take,
On those that are, revenges: crimes like lands
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle and those kin
Which, in the bluster of thy wrath, must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.
Sec. Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to 't with thy sword.
First Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope,
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou'lt enter friendly.
Sec. Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we
Have seal'd thy full desire.
Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:
Those enemies of Timon's and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more: and, to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.
Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.
Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.
[The Senators descend, and open the gates.]

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And on his grave-stone this insculpture, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcibiades reads the epitaph.

Alcib. 'Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name: a plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!
Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:
Pass by, and curse they fill; but pass and stay not here thy gait.'
These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets which

3 outstretch'd his span: reached the limit of his life 4 read; cf. n. 6 character: writing 7 travers'd arms: folded arms, reversed arms (?) 8 flush: full 9 marrow: vigor 12 pursy: short-winded 15 griefs: grievances conceit: fancy 22 promis'd means: means of promises (?) 31 motives: agents 32 that . . . excess: at their excessive folly 35 tithed: involving the slaughter of a tenth

39 spotted: stained 41 square: proper 44 without: outside 52 hew to 't: cut the way to it 54 rampir'd: fortified against an attack 55 So: if only 62 seal'd: brought to completion 64 uncharged: unattacked ports: gates 67 atone: set at one 69 quarter: lodging place 71 render'd: surrendered 72 At . . . answer: to pay the full penalty 77 insculpture: carved inscription 80–84 Here . . . gait; cf. n. 80 corse: corpse 86 brain's flow: tears

From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon, of whose memory
Hereafter more. Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword,
Make war breed peace, make peace stint war, make each
Prescribe to other as each other's leech.
Let our drums strike. Exeunt.

FINIS

93 stint: stop 94 leech: physician

Notes

Dramatis Personæ. In the First Folio the last page of Timon of Athens bears the caption: 'The Actors' Names.' Additions to this list of characters have been placed in brackets. In the Folio Sempronius' name occurs twice. Ventidius is known as Ventigius; Philotus as Philo; and Hortensius as Hortensis.

I.i.S. d. Enter . . . and Mercer. The stage direction of the Folio has been restored. Many modern editors have changed it to read: Enter . . . Merchant, and others . . ., omitting the 'Mercer.' Whether or not the 'Mercer' speaks during the scene is not made clear by the test of the Folio, since each speech is preceeded by Mer., which may represent, equally well, either 'Merchant' or 'Mercer.'

I.i.4. It wears, sir, as it grows. A half-facetious reply to the Poet's greeting: as the world grows older it wears away.

I.i.19. 'When we for recompense,' etc. A stage direction might be added: 'Reciting to himself,' or 'Reading from his poems.'

I.i.29-31. our gentle flame . . . chafes. The poet's fancy is self-inspired, and, like a swift stream, it flies away from every boundary which it chafes. 'Bound' refers to the banks of the stream; against these the current 'chafes,' but speeds onward.

I.i.33. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir. 'As soon as my book has been presented to Lord Timon.' (Johnson.) In Shakespeare's day, as later, the success of a book often depended upon its patron.

I.i.38, 39. how this grace Speaks his own standing! How truly the gracefulness of this figure expresses the dignity of the original!

I.i.41, 42. to the dumbness of the gesture One might interpret. To the mute eloquence of this gesture one might easily supply words. This line may allude to the 'interpreter' whose function was to explain the action of the puppet-shows.

I.i.56. In a wide sea of wax. The usual explanation that reference is made to use among the ancients of writing-tablets covered with wax, is not wholly satisfactory.

I.i.56-59. no levell'd malice . . . behind. 'Shakespeare's meaning is, my poem is not a satire written with any particular view, or levelled at any single person; I fly like an eagle into the general expanse of life, and leave not, by any private mischief, the trace of my passage.' (Johnson.) Keightley conjectures that a lacuna exists after 'hold.'

I.i.88, 89. would . . . condition. 'Would find a striking parallel in our state.' (Schmidt.) Of various interpretations this seems most convincing. However, it is possible that by 'condition' the painter means 'art'; specifically, 'the art of painting.'

I.i.110. five talents. About six thousand dollars. A talent was approximately twelve hundred dollars.

I.i.147-150. The man is honest . . . daughter. 'The meaning of the first line the poet himself expains, or rather unfolds, in the second. "The man is honest!"—True; and for that very cause, and with no additional or extrinsic motive, he will be so. No man can be justly called honest, who is not so for honesty's sake, itself including its reward.' (Coleridge.)

I.i.190, 191. Hath . . . dispraise. Timon's statement that the jewel has been embarrassingly praised or valued is misunderstood by the jeweller; he interprets 'under praise' as 'dispraise.'

I.i.196. As . . . give. At a figure which those who sell would be willing to pay.

I.i.208. When . . . honest. Until you become a dog and these knaves become honest,—remote contingencies!

I.i.238. plain-dealing. An allusion to the proverb, 'Plain-dealing is a jewel, but they that use it die beggars.'

I.i.261. That I had no angry wit to be a lord. It is possible that the adjective 'angry' is corrupt. As it stands in the text the line seems to express the annoyance of Apemantus at the idea that angry self-derision should not be aroused in him at the fact of his being a lord.

I.i.277. Aches. To be scanned as a dissyllable.

I.i.306. Plutus, the god of gold. The Greek personification of riches. He was supposed to have been blinded by Zeus so that he might distribute his gifts without choice.

I.ii.22, 23. confess'd . . . not. In all likelihood an allusion to the proverb of Shakespeare's time: 'Confess and be hanged.'

I.ii.30-45. They say . . . too. It is difficult to state whether these lines, and others in the play, should be printed as poetry or as prose. Certain modern editors give them as Prose.

I.ii.30. 'Ira furor brevis est.' 'Wrath is a brief madness. Horace, Epistles, Book I.ii.62.

I.ii.47. Methinks they should invite them without knives. The Elizabethan guests were accustomed to bring their knives to feasts. (Ritson.)

I.ii.101, 102. O joy, . . . born. Timon's tears of joy choke and seem to belie the very happiness that provokes them.

I.ii.104. Thou weep'st to make them drink, Timon. The tears you shed so bountifully would be a suitable beverage for the flatterers (rather than the wine they swill). Or, perhaps, the remark is merely a sneer at the incongruity of Timon's weeping while his guests drink.

I.ii.S. d. Enter Cupid. I.e., the 'forerunner,' a boy dressed to personate the god of love; as in As You Like It, V. iv, one personates Hymen, the god of marriage.

I.ii.S. d. with the masque of Ladies [as] Amazons. The masque, a form of histrionic spectacle, was much in vogue during the early seventeenth century. There are masque-like features in Henry VIII, The Winter's Tale, and The Tempest, all written within a few years of Timon of Athens. No stage direction occurs at this point in the Folio. Instead, the words clearly required here are by anticipation added to the stage directions after lines 117 and 126. The former reads: 'Sound Tucket. Enter the Maskers of Amazons, with Lutes in their hands, dauncing and playing;' and the latter: 'Enter Cupid with the Maske of Ladies.'

I.ii.128. they are mad women. This line may reflect the Puritan spirit of the time. Stubbes' Anatomie of Abuses (1583), speaks of 'Dauncers thought to be madmen.' 'There were (saith Ludovicus Vives) from far countries certain men brought into our parts of the world, who, when they saw men daunce, ran away marvellously affraid, crying out and thinking them mad.'

I.ii.129, 130. Like madness . . . root. 'Just such madness is the glory of this life as the pomp of this feast appears when compared with the philosopher's frugal repast of a little oil and a few roots.' (Clarke.)

I.ii.140. Men shut their doors against a setting sun. A proverbial saying, the sense of which is illustrated by a passage in Bacon's essay on Friendship (1625): 'L. Sylla, when he commanded Rome, raised Pompey, after surnamed the Great, to that height, that Pompey vaunted himself for Sylla's over-match. For when he had the consulship for a friend of his against the pursuit of Sylla, and that Sylla did a little resent thereat, and began to speak great, Pompey turned upon him again, and in effect bade him be quiet, for that more men adored the sun rising, than the sun setting.'

I.ii.159. When all . . . could. There is a quibble on 'cross'd,' and 'crossing' in line 157. 'Cross'd' probably refers to the cross upon many coins of the day. Hence, 'to be crossed' or 'to bear a cross' was a joking expression meaning 'to have ready cash.' Or the quibble may refer to the crossing out of a debt on the creditor's books.

I.ii.160, 161. 'Tis pity . . . mind. In order that bounty might be able to foresee the evils and miseries about to attack it.

I.ii.177. The meaning is illustrated by a parallel passage in Julius Cæsar, III.i.6-8:

> 'O Cæsar, read mine first; for mine's a suit
> That touches Cæsar nearer . . .
> Cæs. What touches us ourself shall be last serv'd.'

I.ii.218. I'll call to you. Sandys in the Shakespeare Society Papers (vol.iii., p. 23), says that the expression 'I'll call to (i.e., at) your house' is still (1846) employed in the West of England.

I.ii.228. defil'd. Used here with a play on 'pitch'd.' Cf. Henry IV, Part I, II.iv.372, 373: 'Pitch . . . doth defile.'

I.ii.239. legs. Used here with a play upon the two senses of 'limbs' and 'bowings.'

I.ii.252. come . . . music. 'Come again in a better tone of mind.'

II.i.10. No porter at his gate. In Elizabethan days the porter was a stern guardian. Cf. Thomas Dekker's A Knight's Conjuring: 'You mistake, if you imagine that Plutoe's porter is like one of those big fellows that stand like gyants at lordes gates.'

II.i.31, 32. When every feather . . . gull. When every creditor has his proper due, Lord Timon will be stripped. 'Gull' is used with a play upon the meanings of 'unfledged bird' and 'dupe.'

II.ii.5, 6. never . . . kind. Never was mind made to be so unwise, and yet so kind.

II.ii.12-14. Varro . . . Isidore. The servants are addressed by their masters' names.

II.ii.18. we'll forth again. It was an Elizabethan custom to hunt both before and after dinner. While at Kenilworth Castle Queen Elizabeth hunted afternoons.

II.ii.69. No, thou . . . yet. When Apemantus says 'thou' he speaks to the servant of Varro; 'thou'rt' is addressed to the servant of Isidore.

II.ii.98. to Lord Timon's. Almost certainly an error if this scene is laid in Timon's house. Perhaps, however, the action occurs in the street outside.

II.ii.119. philosopher, etc. The 'philosopher's stone' or 'great elixir' was, in alchemy, a soluble, solid substance supposed to have the property of transmuting baser metals into silver or gold, and of prolonging life. Cf. Henry IV, Part 2, III.ii.289, 290.

II.ii.154. yet now's a time. Flavius means that, although too late to save Timon, there is at least an opportunity now to acquaint him with true conditions.

II.ii.168. If . . . falsehood. Zeugma makes the line awkward. Flavius means: 'If you question my thrift or suspect me of falsehood.'

II.ii.212, 213. Of whom . . . hearing. 'By whom, by reason of my previous services, I expect my request ('hearing') to be honored, even to the extent of the State's fullest resources.'

III.i.42. And we alive that liv'd? In this brief time. 'That we, who only yesterday saw Timon's friends at his feet, should to-day see them spurning him after this man's fashion.'

III.i.47. Let molten coin be thy damnation.

'And ladles full of melted gold
Were poured down their throats.'
—Old Ballad, 'The Dead Man's Song.'

Possibly the allusion is to the fate of Marcus Crassus, down whose throat the Parthians poured melted gold.

III.ii.43, 44. that I . . . honour. Of the many explanations of this passage that of Steevens is the best: 'By purchasing what brought me little honour, I have lost the more honourable opportunity of supplying the wants of my friend.'

III.iii.15. Thrice. Johnson's reading. The Folio has 'Thriue,' which some modern editors have adopted. In such a case the allusion would be to the rich and indifferent physician who flourishes at the expense of his patient. Cf. Webster, Duchess of Malfi, III.v.7-9

'physicians thus,
With their hands full of money use to give o'er
Their patients.'

III.iii.30-33. The devil . . . clear. The devil did not appreciate the significance of making man politic. By it he defeated his own purpose, for the villainies of man will, by comparison, make him appear innocent.

III.iv.21. Is like the sun's. 'Like him in blaze and splendour' (Johnson.)

III.iv.104. Knock me down with 'em, etc. A quibble upon 'bills' in the sense of weapons (i.e., a kind of long-handled axe).

III.iv.S. d. Enter Timon [and Flavius]. This represents the modern editors' conception of the action. According to the Folio, Flavius does not leave the stage at line 74, and Timon, reentering at the present point, finds him still there.

III.iv.126. Sempronius: all. In the First Folio this portion of the line reads: Sempronius Vllorxa: All. Of the many conjectures concerning this puzzling corruption the least improbable seems to be that 'Vllorxa' is a printer's error for the name of another character, possibly Ventidius.

III.v.49. if bearing carry it. 'If endurance is the greater virtue.'

III.v.50. fellow. As in the First Folio. Johnson's plausible reading is 'felon.'

III.v.112. Only in bone . . . you. 'That you may live to be mere skeletons, and scare men from looking at you.' (Clarke.)

III.v.122. lay for hearts. 'Endeavour to win popular affection.' (Clarke.)

III.vi.4. tiring. 'A metaphorical application of the language of falconry, in which a hawk was said to tire upon the refuse of her prey, which the falconer threw to her as reward and encouragement.' 'An hawke Tyryth upon rumpes. She fedyth on all manere of flesshe. She gorgith whan she fyllyth her gorge wyth meete.' (The boke of hawkynge, huntyng, and fysshynge by Julianna Berners, ciij.)

III.vi.30, 31. if they will fare . . . sound. If the anticipated trumpet signal is so harshly delayed. Dinner was announced in great households by the sounding of trumpets. CF. Othello, IV.ii.192.

III.vi.92. minute-jacks. Contemptible fellows who change their minds every minute. It is possible that the word has reference to the 'Jacks-of-the-Clock,' figures that struck the bells in the old clocks.

III.vi.115. stones. There is no evidence in this play that stones were thrown at the guests. In the old play, Timon, stones are painted to resemble artichokes and are hurled at the parasites. It is possible that this line is reminiscent of the older play. See Sources of the Play, pp. 1335-1337.

IV.ii.38. and all what state compounds. 'All that goes to make up state.'

IV.iii.9. Raise me . . . lord. 'Give elevation to a beggar, but deny it to a lord.'

IV.iii.12. rother's. Singer's emendation for 'Brothers' of the Folio. Holloway's General Provincial Dictionary mentions the 'rother market' of Stratford-on-Avon. The sentence, as printed in the Folio runs: 'It is the Pastour Lards, the Brothers sides, The want that makes him leaue.'

IV.iii.27. idle votarist. Timon means, presumably: 'My vows of hate for human wealth are not insincere. The discovery of gold will not send me back to the life I have forsworn.'

IV.iii.32. Pluck . . . heads. An old custom of drawing away the pillows of dying men to render their deaths easier, and, sometimes, for the inhuman purpose of hastening their departures.

IV.iii.44. Do thy right nature. 'Lie in the earth where nature laid thee.' (Johnson.)

IV.iii.54. 'Misanthropos.' North's Plutarch has this marginal note: 'Antonius followeth the life and example of Timon Misanthropos, the Athenian.'

IV.iii.91. To the tub-fast and the diet. An allusion to the sweating cure used by the Elizabethans.

IV.iii.117. planetary plague. A reference to a common belief of the time that plagues and pestilences were often due to the malignant influence of the planets. Cf. King Lear, I.ii.115, 116: 'By an enforced obedience of planetary influence.' Cf. also Troilus and Cressida, I.iii.96-98:

'but when the planets
In evil mixture to disorder wander,
What plagues and what portents! . . .'

IV.iii.143. Enough . . . bawd. 'Enough to make a whore leave whoring, and a bawd leave making whores.' (Johnson.)

IV.iii.154, 155. and thatch . . . dead. 'Cover your thin heads with false hair taken from dead bodies.' Shakespeare repeatedly attacks the practice of wearing false hair.

IV.iii.200. Hyperion. A Titan, the father of Helios, the sun-god. The name is used here, as elsewhere, for the sun itself.

IV.iii.246. Answer mere nature. 'Cope with nature in all its stark rigour.' (Deighton.) Cf. King Lear, III.iv.99, 100: 'Answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.'

IV.iii.256-259. Always . . . too. Timon means that to vex another is the function of a fool or a villain. He has hitherto thought of Apemantus as a fool; Apemantus' 'Ay' leads him to think him also a knave, or villain.

IV.iii.273, 274. proceeded . . . degrees. Technical terms used at English universities.

IV.iii.275. drudges. Mason's reading for 'drugges.' The New English Dictionary, quoting Huloet (1552) says: 'Drudge, or drugge, or vile servant in a house, whych doth all the vyle service.'

IV.iii.310, 311. 'Tis not . . . would it were. 'Even then (when mended by lack of my company) your company, being the company of yourself alone, cannot be said to be well mended, but only to be clumsily patched, a mere piece of botchery; if not, I wish you might find it so.'

IV.iii.312. What . . . Athens. What commission do you wish to give me for Athens?

IV.iii.330. medlar. The fruit of the tree Mespilus Germanica, which is like a small brown-skinned apple and is eaten when in a soft, pulpy state. It is used in this passage, as elsewhere in Shakespeare, with a pun upon the word 'meddler.'

IV.iii.336. after his means. 'After' may have the significance of 'according to,' or the phrase may mean: 'after his means are gone.'

IV.iii.358, 359. wert thou the unicorn , etc. 'It was supposed that unicorns, in their fury, would rush at their enemy blindly, strike their horn against a tree, stick fast, and so be killed.' Cf. Julius Cæsar, II.i.215: 'Unicorns may be betray'd with trees.'

IV.iii.362-364. wert thou . . . life. If you were a leopard, you would be akin to the lion, and your spots would be the cause of your death. The line alludes to the jealousy of the lion, which tolerates no rival.

IV.iii.373. Yonder comes a poet and a painter. This mistake is typical of the confused text of the play. The poet and the painter do not enter until the next act. See Authorship of the Play, footnote 15.

IV.iii.405. Hymen. The Greek god of marriage and of the marriage song named after him.

IV.iii.466, 467. whose liquid . . . tears. Alluding to the influence of the moon upon the tides. There existed, too, a popular belief that the moon influenced the weather. In Hamlet (I.i.132), the moon is called the 'moist star.'

IV.iii.494, 495. How rarely . . . enemies. 'How admirably does the injunction to love one's enemies accord with the fashion of the times!' (Rolfe.)

IV.iii.496, 497. Grant . . . that do. 'Let me rather woo or caress those that would mischief, that profess to mean me mischief, than those that really do me mischief under false professions of kindness.' (Johnson.) Cf. the Spanish proverb: 'Defend me from my friends, and from my enemies I will defend myself.'

V.i.42. black-corner'd night. 'Night shrouding all with the darkness of black corners.'

V.iii.4. read. The Folio reading. Warburton suggested 'rear'd,' implying that the rude tomb could not have been erected by man. If 'read' is accepted two interpretations are possible: (1) The line may be part of an inscription on the tomb, or (2) it may be a contemptuous comment from the soldier: 'Let a beast read this; there is no man present who can do so!'

V.iv.80-84. Here . . . gait. These lines are a combination of two epitaphs, both appearing in North's Plutarch. Lines 81 and 82 are clearly contradictory. See Sources of the Play, pp. 1335 and 1336.

The Text of the Present Edition

Only the Folio text of Timon of Athens has survived. The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. In almost every case the stage directions of the Folio have been restored. A few obvious errors in these have been corrected. Necessary or helpful modern stage directions have been added within square brackets.

2. Craig's punctuation has been normalized, as well as the spelling of a very few words: e.g., villainy (villany), court'sies (curtsies), basin (bason), again (agen).

3. Various changes in wording have been made, usually with the purpose of following more closely the Folio text. In the following list of verbal variations from Craig's text, the new readings precede the colon, while Craig's versions are given after it. When concerned in the change, the Folio authority has been indicated.

[Dramatis Personæ] F (Spelling modernized and modern additions bracketed): Dramatis Personæ (entirely modern).

I.i.50 moe F: more So also: II.i.7; II.ii.117; IV.iii.400, 439
186 ye F: you So also: III.iv.46
290 most F: more
302 o' the ass F: of an ass
ii. 34 for 't F: for it
42 sees 'em not F: sees them not
102 ere 't F: ere it
122 Taste, touch, and smell: Taste, touch, smell
124 They're F: They are
139 't has F: it has
158 tell him—well, i' faith, I should—: tell him well, i' faith, I should,
204 Than such that do F: Than such as do
II.ii.207 'em F: them
239 ingeniously F: ingenuously
III.i.26 from 't F: from it
ii. 48 done 't F: done it
iii. 24 and 'mongst lords I be thought a fool: and I 'mongst lords be thought a fool. ['I' not in Folio.]
25 I'd F: I had 26 He'd: He had
iv. 59 ye F: you
v.50 fellow F: felon
113 I'm F: I am
vi. 22 of you F: you (misprint)
IV.ii.36 to live F: so live
45 blest F: bless'd See also: IV.iii.544
iii. 32 heads F: head
230 bade F: bid
351 t' attain F: to attain
475 not F: no
498 Has F: He hath
507 me, I; all: me; ay all
V.i.4 he's F: he is 15 travail F: travel
70 travail'd F: travell'd
117 would'st F: would
119 you F: ye
163 it F: its 168 blot F: block
iii. 4 read F: rear'd
there F: here

Pericles, Prince of Tyre

Edited by
ALFRED R. BELLINGER

Dramatis Personae

ANTIOCHUS, King of Antioch
PERICLES, Prince of Tyre
HELICANUS } two Lords of Tyre
ESCANES }
SIMONIDES, King of Pentapolis
CLEON, Governor of Mitylene
CERIMON, a Lord of Ephesus
THALIARD, a Lord of Antioch
PHILEMON, Servant to Cerimon
LEONINE, Servant to Dionyza
MARSHAL
A PANDAR
BOULT, his servant

THE DAUGHTER OF ANTIOCHUS
DIONYZA, Wife to Cleon
THAISA, Daughter to Simonides
MARINA, Daughter to Pericles and Thaisa
LYCHORIDA, Nurse to Marina
A BAWD

LORDS, LADIES, KNIGHTS, GENTLEMEN, SAILORS, PIRATES, FISHERMEN, AND MESSENGERS

DIANA
GOWER, as Chorus

SCENE—In various Mediterranean countries.

Pericles, Prince of Tyre

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The ultimate source of the story is undoubtedly a pagan Greek romance, probably by a writer of Asia Minor or Egypt, certainly later than the second century B.C., and certainly earlier than the sixth century A.D. It apparently falls somewhere in the first three centuries of the Christian era. The story is laid in the time of Antiochus the Great (second century B.C.), and, though it is full of historical inaccuracies, as will be seen from the notes, it preserves enough reminiscence of the actual conditions to make it almost certain that it came from an age before the break-up of the Roman empire had obliterated all memory of the preceding Greek empire in Asia. The Greek original, of a type familiar from other works, is lost, but it is represented by a great number of Latin manuscripts, bearing the general title Historia Apollonii regis Tyrii, which are more or less close translations with a certain amount of later Christian coloring. These vary considerably in content and in age, the earliest being of the ninth century, but the main outline of the story is constant, and is that reproduced in Pericles, Prince of Tyre. The original Latin version probably dates from the fifth century A.D. At least two editions were printed before 1500. In the twelfth century, Godfrey of Viterbo used the story in his Pantheon, a verse chronicle of events, beginning with Adam. It was partly from this work that Gower borrowed the tale. It was also included, in the thirteenth or fourteenth century, by the anonymous compiler of the Gesta Romanorum, which is the basis of Twine's version. From one or other of the Latin manuscripts, from the Pantheon, and from the Gesta Romanorum, a multitude of variants arose, in a dozen different languages.

John Gower, an English poet, contemporary with Chaucer, wrote, about 1390, the Confessio Amantis (first printed, by Caxton, in 1483), a collection of tales illustrating the seven deadly sins. In the Eighth Book, which deals with lechery, occurs the case of Antiochus and his daughter, which serves as an introduction to the whole story of Apollonius. It is written in rhymed tetrameter, like most of the Gower choruses in the play. In lines 271-273 he states his obligation to Godfrey of Viterbo:

> 'Of a Cronique in daies gon,
> The which is cleped [named] Pantheon,
> In loves cause I rede thus'—

But he is also influenced by the Latin narrative. There are several instances of his agreement with the Historia Apollonii regis Tyrii where he differs from Godfrey, besides certain changes for which he is himself responsible. Gower is one of the immediate sources of the play; the other is 'The Patterne of Painefull Aduentures, Containing the most excellent, pleasant, and variable Historie of the strange accidents that befell vnto Prince Apollonius, the Lady Lucina his wife and Tharsia his daughter. Wherein the vncertaintie of this world, and the fickle state of mans life are liuely described. Gathered into English by Laurence Twine Gentleman. Imprinted at London by William How. 1576.'[1] This is a translation of the Gesta Romanorum version. Twine was an Oxford graduate of some repute as a poet, but, except for the song (cf. n. on V.i.88) and three rhymed riddles in this work, his poetry has disappeared. No copies of the original edition are known to exist, but it was reprinted, once without date, and again in 1607.

As Gower had professed to follow Godfrey, so the play opens with an acknowledgment of Gower as its literary father. This announcement is made through the introduction of the poet himself, talking a villainous counterfeit Middle English, as Chorus. Like Gower, the playwright uses a second source as well, but, in this case, Twine's novel furnished only a few passages. The interview between Cleon and Dionyza, for example (IV.iii., cf. n.), is modelled on the novel, and not on the poem. Here and there incidents and phrases show Twine's influence, but Gower must be acknowledged to be the chief source. When the two differ as to the names of characters, the play (except in the case of Cerimon) prefers the form given by Gower. But there is some originality in the matter of names. Stranguilio, Arthestrathes, and Athenagoras become Cleon, Simonides, and Lysimachus respectively—metri causa, one would suppose. Leonine, the keeper of the brothel in Gower (his name doubtless reminiscent of the Latin leno) becomes Dionyza's servant, whose earlier name was Theophilus. Boult is invented by the playwright. Gower leaves the hero's wife namesless and calls the daughter Thaise; Thaisa[2] now becomes the mother, while the daughter is named Marina,[3] from her birth at sea. Most important of all, the prince himself, hitherto consistently known as Apollonius, becomes Pericles. It is possible that there may be some recollection of the great Athenian statesman, though there is little enough similarity, but it seems more likely that the name was suggested by Pyrocles, the hero of the romance, The Countesse of Pembroke's Arcadia written by Philippe Sidnei, published in 1590. There are other instances of similarity (e.g. I.i.10, 11, cf. n.) which make it probable that Sidney's book was fresh in the playwright's mind.

The consideration of George Wilkins' novel is reserved for Authorship of the Play.

The History of the Play

The literary history of the play begins with the following entry in the Stationers' Registers, in the year 1608:

> 20 Maij
> Entered [to Edward Blount] for his copie under thandes of

1 The title is so given by Sidney Lee (Oxford facsimile of Pericles, p. 8), apparently on the assumption that it was identical with the later editions except for the imprimatur. The title given in the Stationers' Registers is 'The most excellent variable and pleasant history of the strange adventures of Prince Apollonius, Lucina his wife, and Tharsa his daughter.'

2 In Act III, Scene iv, the Quartos read Tharsa; Twine's name for the daughter was Tharsia.

3 But the Quartos of 1609 and 1611 have MARIANA on the title-page.

Sir George Buck knight and Master Warden Seton A booke called. The booke of Pericles prynce of Tyre vjd.

But Blount did not publish the play, for what reason cannot be determined. It was published in 1609 by Henry Gosson, in two quarto editions. The title-pages of these are identical, but numerous small differences in the text make it clear that one is a reprint of the other. The question of precedence is discussed, by P. Z. Round, in the introductions to the Quarto Facsimiles printed by Pretorius in 1886. He decides, as do the Cambridge editors, in favor of the British Museum copy C. 12h. 5. (distinguished by the first stage direction Enter Gower, while the other has Eneer Gower) as the First Quarto, and that decision is adopted in the present edition.[4] The Quartos of 1609 were followed by another in 1611, a fourth in 1619, a fifth in 1630, which exhibits two varieties of title-page, and a sixth in 1635. Although excluded from the First Folio, of 1623, and the Second Folio, of 1632, it was included in the second impression of the Third Folio, of 1664, and in the Fourth Folio, of 1685. The first critical edition was that of Nicolas Rowe, in 1709, republished in 1714. Pope rejected the play as spurious, and the next editor of a collective edition to publish it was Malone, in 1780. In 1734, however, two separate 12mo editions appeared, one by R. Walker, the other by J. Tonson. All editors since, escept J. Keightley, in 1864, have printed it. The text of the first Quartos is very corrupt. Not only are misprints common, but occasionally passages of prose are printed in lines like verse, and very often blank verse is run together like prose, or divided without the slightest attention to meter. It seems likely that the source of the text was a shorthand copy, made at a performance. This would explain not only the confusion of prose and verse, but certain verbal errors as well (e.g. Pompey for pompae II.ii.31). Whatever the source, it is sufficiently apparent that no qualified person reviewed the text before its first printing. Nor did it have the benefit of comparison with a correct copy thereafter, for the subsequent history of the text is a course of careless mistakes, varied with unintelligent corrections, until the last state thereof is worse than the first. Occasionally, but very rarely, a true reading is found in one of the later editions. Rowe began the laudable attempt to make the play intelligible. In this he was followed by Steevens and Malone, who attacked the multitudinous problems with a praise-worthy courage and industry. Very little was overlooked, and every edition since their time has borne the marks of their learned labors. But it was the style of their time for editors to allow themselves licenses in regard to emendation which stricter critical standards would not approve. At times they restore rather what the dramatist ought to have written than what he did write. The state of the text, and the character of the non-Shakespearean parts of the play lend themselves only too readily to emendations of that sort, so that many passages in the Steevens-Malone editions are pretty certainly not what the author wrote, though they are unquestionably much smoother reading. This would do no harm, if it had not proved so much easier to adopt their results than to form a new text out of the original chaos, that many an unsound conjecture has received the sanction of continued repetition, and become an established part of the play. The result has been assisted by the fact that the critics do not always look for authority before they argue, and more than one ingenious deduction has been made from a conjecture mistaken for a fact. A scholarly, detailed reëxamination of the early copies will untimately yield a better text than is now available.

The first edition presupposes that the play had already been acted. It is generally conceded that it had been acted before the entry in the Stationers' Registers in 1608. Evidence that it was produced as early as 1606 is presented by T. S. Graves (cf. n. on I. iv. 95). The first reference to it was in 1609, in an anonymous rhyme. Several other seventeenth century notices of it strayed into print, but the only two that are worth repeating are the reference of Ben Jonson in 'Come leave the loathed stage' to 'some mouldy tale like Pericles,' and the couplet from Dryden's prologue to Davenant's Circe:

> 'Shakespeare's own Muse her Pericles first bore,
> The Prince of Tyre was elder than the Moore.'

Dryden, then, explained the defects of the piece on the ground of Shakespeare's inexperience. In this he was wrong. Jonson merely testifies that the play had more success than it deserved, which would, indeed, be evident enough from the profusion of quarto editions. We hear of its production on May 24, 1619, at the Court, in honor of the French ambassador, and, on June 10, 1631, at the Globe Theatre 'upon the cessation of the plague.' There is no doubt that there were many successful performances of which there is no record. According to Downes,[5] Betterton was 'highly applauded' for his acting in the title rôle, probably in 1659. During the Restoration period, it fell into oblivion, whence it has seldom emerged. In 1738, George Lillo recast the drama, starting with the present Act IV, but making a three-act play of it. The change benefits the play somewhat, in the points of unity and decency, but the new matter is weak. This composite piece, named Marina, was presented at the Covent Garden Theatre in 1738. It was acted three times. On October 14, 1854, Pericles, with Gower omitted and the brothel scenes expurgated, was produced by Phelps, who took the title rôle. It was received with much enthusiasm, but it is impossible to read the laudatory accounts of Henry Morley and Douglas Jerrold without suspecting that some of their interest was due to the novelty of the production. An account of this performance is given in The Henry Irving Shakespeare, Vol. VIII, pp. 264, 265. On October 20, 1882, Pericles was presented at Munich, accompanied by music written for the occasion. The genuine parts seem to have been highly successful. It has more recently been included in the repertory of Sir F. R. Benson's company at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon.

Authorship of the Play

During the first century of the play's life, no doubt of its authenticity was expressed except by its exclusion from the First and Second Folios. Rowe included it in his edition of 1709, but

4 It should be noted that the facsimile of the First Quarto in the Bodleian Library, published, in 1905, by Sidney Lee, differs from the British Museum copy. The Oxford facsimile has the following divergent readings:

II Gower 24 And hid in Tent to murdered him (Q1 And had intent to murder him; Q2 And hid intent to murder him). (This is noted by the Cambridge editors.)

II.i.110 pary (Q1 & 2 pray)

II.i.111 yeat (Q1 & 2 yet)

II.i.136 di'e (Q1 do'e; Q2 di'e)

V.i.34 sight, hee will (Q1 sight see, will; Q2 sight, hee will)

These differences are not important, but the coincidences with the Second Quarto suggest that a full collation of the seven other known copies of the First Quarto would be desirable.

5 Roscius Anglicanus, p. 18. This was before the formation of Sir William Davenant's company, in which Betterton's great reputation was made.

it was rejected by Pope as spurious, and that view prevailed until Malone, in 1780, in his Supplement to Steevens' Shakespeare of 1778, argued that it was a genuine, though youthful, production of Shakespeare. Steevens at first dissented, but finally, in 1790, adopted the theory of a double authorship. With few exceptions, scholars have now agreed that Pericles is only partly the work of Shakespeare, and it is included among his later plays. This leaves three questions for discussion: 1. How much of it is attributable to Shakespeare? 2. Who wrote the rest? 3. Did Shakespeare's contribution precede or follow the work of the other author or authors?

1. The general opinion is that the largely or wholly Shakespearean part begins with Act III, Scene i, that is, that he is the author of the portion dealing with the fortunes of Marina. This is the conclusion to which Tennyson came, anticipating the editors by some years, and his reading of the parts he considered genuine seems to have carried conviction to his hearers. It is also the conclusion of Swinburne, who expresses the utmost enthusiasm for the portion he accepted. But there is still divergence of opinion as to whether Shakespeare had any hand in the first two acts, and whether he wrote all of the last three. Of course, those who hold that his original play on the story of Marina was later completed by another writer—a theory to be discussed presently—must deny him any share in the drama before Marina appears. H. D. Sykes,[6] finding parallels to Wilkins rife in Acts I and II, would therefore insist that Shakespeare had no hand in them, while Frank Harris,[7] in a burst of enthusiasm over the speech beginning

See where she comes apparell'd like the spring

(I.i.12)

concludes that the whole work is Shakespeare's. As a matter of fact, neither of these methods is admissible. If it be once granted, as Sykes maintains, that Shakespeare worked over another writer's play, nothing less than proof that every line of a certain part is the work of the other writer will suffice to prove that Shakespeare has not touched that part at all; while the fact that there are fine passages in the first two acts cannot prove that he wrote the absurdities of Act II, Scene v, for instance, which Steevens condemns so roundly. Coleridge once remarked that Shakespeare's share in the play could be recognized 'even to half a line,' but as he never recorded which half lines he meant, and as subsequent critics show no disposition to agree, it is safest to conclude merely that there are some passages, before the appearance of Marina, which are worthy of the master, but that there are many which are certainly unworthy of him. In the latter half of the play, there are two parts which challenge attention, the Gower choruses and the brothel scenes. It will be observed that the Gower choruses of Acts IV and V, with the exception of that before Act IV, Scene ii, are in pentameter instead of tetrameter, and it has been argued that Shakespeare wrote the five foot lines, but not the four foot: a clear distinction, which though it cannot be considered proved, has enough confirmation from the substance of the choruses to be probable. The brothel scenes are generally held to be by a second or even a third hand. The origin of this theory is a natural desire to believe that Shakespeare did not write scenes so repellent. But extreme measure would be necessary to take all the objectionable scenes out of Shakespeare, and a candid reading of the ones in this play will show that there is considerable restraint about them, as well as a definite purpose; the illustration of Marina's virtue by the blackness of her surroundings. There are, moreover, definitely Shakespearean touches in such quantity that it is rather the part of prejudice than of scholarship to deny his authorship of them. The only other portion whose authenticity is denied is the vision of Diana (V.i. 270-279). Fleay regarded it as spurious, like the vision in Cymbeline, Act V, Scene iv, and recent editors have quoted him with approval. But, whatever may be the reasons for rejecting the passage in Cymbeline, it is hard to see why they should be held to apply also to this. The episode cannot be interpolated, for it occurs in the sources and is certainly essential to the plot; and it is so far superior in technique to the average of the non-Shakespearean parts that there seem to be no good grounds for assigning it to the author of them. Even Sykes, an indefatigable searcher for the traces of Wilkins, can find little evidence of him in the rest of Acts III, IV, and V. Our conclusion, then, is that Shakespeare is responsible for occasional passages of the first two acts, and for practically all the rest of the play, excepting the tetrameter Gower choruses.

2. Setting aside, for the moment, the brothel scenes, there are two serious contestants for the authorship of the rest of the play: George Wilkins and Thomas Heywood. Wilkins, of whom practically nothing is known, is certainly the author of a comedy entitled The Miseries of Enforced Marriage (1607),[8] besides collaborating with Day and Rowley in The Travells of Three English Brothers (1607).[9] The prose works that bear his name are: The Three Miseries of Barbary; Plague, Famine, Civil War (1603); Jests to Make you Merrie; with the conjuring up of Cock Watt the walking Spirit of Newgate, written in collaboration with Dekker (1607); and, most important for us, The Painful Adventures of Pericles, Prince of Tyre (1608). A pamphlet entitled Two Unnatural Murders (1605) and the play, A Yorkshire Tragedy, published in 1608 with Shakespeare's name attached, have been conjecturally ascribed to him,[10] as also some part in Law Tricks,[11] published in 1608 under Day's name, and in Timon of Athens[12] (1607-1608?). It will be seen that he was a man of varied, if meagre, talents. There can be no doubt of the close connection between the novel and the play. The title-page of the former announces it to be 'The true History of the Play of Pericles,' and the similarities are continual and self-evident. Delius[13] advanced the theory that Wilkins had written the original play, which was revised by Shakespeare, in 1608, whereupon Wilkins produced his novel, which he calls, in the dedication, the 'poore infant of my braine.' It purported to be founded on the play alone, but actually followed also the reprint of Twine's novel in 1607. Delius held that the phrase 'poore infant of my braine' was intended by Wilkins to refer to his origination of the play; he adduced further evidence from a comparison with The Miseries of Enforced Marriage and those parts of Timon which he took to be Wilkins', finding likenesses, in their common artistic mediocrity, in the mixture of rhyme, blank verse and prose, and in the technique of both prose and verse. Fleay[14] stated rather than proved metrical similarities

6 Sidelights on Shakespeare, Stratford-upon-Avon, 1919, pp. 141-203.

7 The Women of Shakespeare, London, 1911, pp. 231 ff.

8 Reprinted in Hazlitt's Dodsley, Vol. IX.

9 Published with Day's works by G. A. Bullen, 1881.

10 H. D. Sykes, op. cit. pp. 77-98.

11 Robert Boyle, Transactions of the New Shakespeare Society, 1882, pp. 323-340.

12 N. Delius, Jahrbuch der Deutschen Shakespeare-Gesellschaft, 1867, pp. 335-361. This has little evidence to justify it, and has received no subsequent support.

13 Jahrbuch, 1868, pp. 175-204.

14 Transactions of the New Shakespeare Society, 1874, pp. 195-241.

looking to the same conclusion, and his result was reinforced, though his method was condemned, by Robert Boyle,[15] who added similarities of language, of substance, and of technique. All this evidence is reviewed, with additions, by H. D. Sykes,[16] who stresses particularly Wilkins' ellipses and his frequent use of verbal antithesis. He has extended the search to the other works of Wilkins, certain and supposed, and has, indeed, collected an imposing number of parallel passages. Moreover, he has made a detailed comparison between the novel and the play, and come to the conclusion that the novel was written before the play, instead of following it. He is obliged, however, by the evidence of the title-page, to assume that Wilkins delayed its publication until after the play, revised by Shakespeare, had been produced. For this he gives no reason. He cites the case of Pericles' harp-playing (cf. II.v.28 and n.), and maintains, besides the greater inherent probability of an Elizabethan play made from a novel than of a novel made from a play, that the passages in common are actually parts of the novel introduced by Wilkins into the play. His arguments are plausible, but not overwhelming. In general it may be said that the case for Wilkins is founded, first on the connection between the novel and the play, and, second, on similarities, largely of language, with Wilkins' other works.

In 1908, D. L. Thomas[17] suggested as the first author of Pericles the prolific Thomas Heywood. Thomas attacks the theory of Delius and Boyle, without doing it perfect justice, perhaps, but in a way to show certain weaknesses in it: the fact, for instance, that verbal likenesses are somewhat unsatisfactory unless they accompany likenesses of dramatic technique, and that, to be convincing, the champions of Wilkins ought to show that Pericles is verbally more like his works than like those of any other contemporary playwright. Thomas' own argument is largely concerned with dramatic devices, and the larger questions of conception, style and technique. He also cites twenty-three of what he calls 'dictional parallels' between Pericles and plays of Heywood, but they are not striking, nor is the number large, considering that two dozen of Heywood's plays are left. The arguments from construction and treatment of incidents are more convincing, but, in the end, they go rather to prove that Heywood could have written Pericles than that he did. The question cannot be considered settled until other possibilities have been examined as exhaustively as Wilkins and Heywood, but, at present, the weight of evidence is still in favor of the former.

The brothel scenes are considered as a separate problem by those who regard them as non-Shakespearean. Fleay recognized their superiority to the parts which he assigned to Wilkins, and, to avoid the difficulty, suggested Rowley (with whom Wilkins had collaborated before) as their author. Walker had already suggested Dekker, faute de mieux. J. M. Robertson[18] argues for Chapman, as a corollary to his thesis that Chapman wrote similar parts of Measure for Measure. But here, the result of the argument is rather possibility than probability. No real similarity with Dekker or Rowley has been brought forward, and the case for Chapman is merely inferred from other conjectural conclusions. Of course, if we admit the scenes to be Shakespeare's, the problem disappears.

3. We have already seen that Sykes believes Pericles to be a revision by Shakespeare of another's play. This was the view expressed by Steevens and by Coleridge, who did not name the original author, and it has received the support of many commentators since. A bolder theory, but one with many advocates, is that of Fleay, who believed that Shakespeare originally wrote The Story of Marina[19]—that is, the greater part of the last three acts, and then laid it aside, for some reason or other, when it was completed by Wilkins and Rowley. The source of this supposition seems to be a feeling that Shakespeare would have disdained to work over so dull a performance as that of the other author. But for him to have written these acts, whether intending them for the beginning and end, as A. H. Smyth believes,[20] or for the end alone, as they actually became, seems unlikely in the extreme. In either case, it means that Shakespeare deliberately chose a theme which did not readily admit of dramatic unity, and wrote a piece, too short for presentation, with the conclusion complete, and, therefore, as hard as possible for anyone to fill out. To a piece of work so preposterous, in the strict sense of the word, so useless for theatrical purposes, so unsuitable for publication, the history of literature affords, I think, no parallel.[21] Surely the natural explanation is the right one, and we have here, as Coleridge conjectured,[22] an illustration of 'the way in which Shakespeare handled a piece he had to refit for representation.'

15 Op. cit.

16 Op. cit. pp. 141-203.

17 Englische Studien, 1908, pp. 210-239. The article has received the polite dissent of subsequent scholars.

18 The Shakespeare Canon, London, 1923. Part II, pp. 165, 184, 186.

19 The part of the play is printed as a whole by Fleay in the Transactions of the New Shakespeare Society for 1874, pp. 211-241. It is preceded (pp. 195-209) by a discussion of his reasons for believeing it to be Shakespeare's original production.

20 Pericles and Apollonius, Philadelphia 1898, p. 68.

21 K. Deighton. Introduction to Pericles, The Arden Shakespeare.

22 H. C. Robinson's Diary, Dec. 28, 1810.

Act First

Enter Gower.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come,
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eves, and holy-ales;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives:
The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rimes,
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might
Waste it for you like taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat,
The fairest in all Syria,
I tell you what mine authors say.
This king unto him took a fere,
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of face
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad child, worse father! to entice his own
To evil should be done by none.
By custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin.
The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame,
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:
Which to prevent, he made a law,
To keep her still, and men in awe,
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testify.
What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify. Exit.

Scene First

[Antioch. A Room in the Palace]
Enter Antiochus, Prince Pericles, and Followers.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise. Music.
Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter Antiochus' Daughter.

Per. See, where she comes apparell'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence
Sorrow were ever rac'd, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
You gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflam'd desire in my breast
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!
Ant. Prince Pericles,—
Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
And which, without desert, because thine eye
Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
Yon sometime famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
Tell thee with speechless tongues and semblance pale,
That without covering, save yon field of stars,
Here they stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist.
Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must;
For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.
I'll make my will then; and as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,
Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did;
So I bequeath a happy peace to you
And all good men, as every prince should do;
My riches to the earth from whence they came,
[To the Daughter of Antiochus.]
But my unspotted fire of love to you.
Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow.
Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion then;
Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,

Act First; cf. n. Enter Gower; cf. n. 6 ember-eves; cf. n. holy-ales: holidays; cf. n. 9 purchase: gain 10 Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius: and the more ancient a good thing, the better 17, 18 Cf. n. 20 Cf. n. 21 fere: mate 22, 23 Cf. n. 24 heaven: i.e. God 25, 26 Cf. n. 28 should: which should 32 frame: go 36 still: always 38 told not: not being guessed 40 Cf. n. 1 Young Prince of Tyre; cf. n. receiv'd: learned

8 Lucina: the goddess of childbirth 9 glad her presence: make her personality glad 10, 11 Cf. n. 13, 14 Cf. n. 16 curious: delicate, particular as: as though 17 rac'd: razed, done away with 27 Hesperides; cf. n. 40 For going on: for fear of going into

As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.
Daugh. Of all say'd yet, mayst thou prove prosperous!
Of all say'd yet, I wish thee happiness!
Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,
Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage.

The Riddle

'I am no viper, yet I feed
On mother's flesh which did me breed;
I sought a husband, in which labour
I found that kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild,
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
As you will live, resolve it you.'

Sharp physic is the last: but, O you powers!
That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill:
But I must tell you now my thoughts revolt;
For he's no man on whom perfections wait
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings,
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hearken;
But being play'd upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime.
Good sooth, I care not for you.
Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
For that's an article within our law,
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd:
Either expound now or receive your sentence.
Per. Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown;
For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts
Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd
By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for 't.
Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's their will;
And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit,
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.
All love the womb that their first being bred,
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.
Ant. [Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found the meaning;
But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,
Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel off your days;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty days longer we do respite you;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son:
And until then your entertain shall be
As doth befit our honour and your worth. Manet Pericles solus.
Per How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
When what is done is like a hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight!
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain you were not so bad
As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
Where now you're both a father and a son,
By your untimely claspings with your child,—
Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father;—
And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
By the defiling of her parent's bed;
And both like serpents are, who though they feed
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
Will shun no course to keep them from the light.
One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke.
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame:
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear. Exit

Enter Antiochus.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for which we mean
To take his head.
He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner;
And therefore instantly this prince must die,
For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends us there?

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. Doth your highness call?
Ant. Thaliard,
You're of our chamber, and our mind partakes
Her private actions to your secrecy;
And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold;
We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him:
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?
Thal. My lord, 'tis done.
Ant. Enough.

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself telling your haste.

59 Of all say'd yet: more than all who have assayed yet; cf. n. 65–70 Cf. n. 82 sense: senses 94 braid: upbraid 97–101 Cf. n. 101 would: which would 101 Copp'd: peaked 103 poor worm: mole 104 Cf. n. 110 Cf. n. 112 gloze: use fair words

114–117 Cf. n. 121 entertain: entertainment 137 Blush: who blush 142 targets: shields put off: turn aside 155 partakes: imparts 164 telling your haste: explaining the cause of your haste

Mess. My lord, Prince Pericles is fled. [Exit.]
Ant. [To Thaliard.] As thou
Wilt live, fly after; and, as an arrow shot
From a well-experienc'd archer hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return
Unless thou say 'Prince Pericles is dead.'
Thal. My lord,
If I can get him within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure enough: so, farewell to your highness.
Ant. Thaliard, adieu! [Exit Thaliard.]
Till Pericles be dead,
My heart can led no succour to my head. Exit.

Scene Second

[Tyre. A Room in the Palace]

Enter Pericles with his Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us.—[Aside] Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
Be my so us'd a guest, as not an hour
In the day's glorious walk or peaceful night—
The tomb where grief should sleep—can breed me quiet?
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,
And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here;
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.
Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now and cares it be not done.
And so with me: the great Antiochus,—
'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great can make his will his act,—
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;
Nor boots it me to say I honour him,
If he suspect I may dishonour him;
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.
With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
And with the ostent of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state,
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subject punish'd that ne'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,—
Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by and defend them,—
Make both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before, that he would punish.

Enter [Helicanus and] all the Lords to Pericles.

1. Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!
2. Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
Peaceful and comfortable.

172 length: range Scene Second S. d. Enter Pericles; cf. n. 4 us'd: familiar 8 that that 10 joy: gladden 16 cares: takes care 19 can . . . act: that he can perform his will 21 boots it me: does it avail me 26 ostent: show

Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king that flatter him;
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,
To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err:
When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees. [Kneeling.]
Per. All leave us else; but let your care o'erlook
What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.]
Helicanus, thou
Hast mov'd us; what seest thou in our looks?
Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.
Per. If there be such a dart in prince's frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?
Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence
They have their nourishment?
Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.
Hel. I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.
Per. Rise, prithee, rise;
Sit down; thou art no flatterer:
I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!
Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?
Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.
Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,
That minister'st a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me then: I went to Antioch,
Where as thou know'st, against the face of death
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate
Are arms to princes and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest, hark in thine ear, as black as incest;
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth; but thou know'st this,
'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me I hither fled,
Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and, being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.
I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years.
And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth,
That I should open to the listening air
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,
To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,
To lop that doubt he'll fill this land with arms,
And make pretence of wrong that I have done him;

50 lading: cargo 75 Attend: listen to 79 Are arms: such as are arms 83 smooth: flatter 88 succeed: come next 91 doubt it: suspect 94 unlaid ope: undiscovered

When all, for mine, if I may call 't, offence,
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:
Which love to all, of which thyself art one,
Who now reprov'st me for it,—
Hel. Alas! sir.
Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,
Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest, ere it came;
And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve for them.
Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,
Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
Who either by public war or private treason
Will take away your life.
Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.
Per. I do not doubt thy faith;
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?
Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being and our birth.
Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tarsus
Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee,
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had and have of subjects' good
On thee I'll lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both.
But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,
Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The Same. An Antechamber in the Palace]
Enter Thaliard solus.

Thal. So this is Tyre, and this the court. Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hanged at home: 'tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for it; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one. Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter Helicanus, Escanes, with other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
Further to question me of your king's departure:
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.
Thal. [Aside.] How! the king gone!
Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch—
Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?
Hel. Royal Antiochus—on what cause I know not—
Took some displeasure at him, at least he judg'd so;
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,
To show his sorrow he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.
Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
But since he's gone, the king it sure must please:
He 'scap'd the land, to perish at the sea.
I'll present myself. [Aloud.] Peace to the lords of Tyre.
Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.
Thal. From him I come,
With message unto princely Pericles;
But since my landing I have understood
Your lord hath betook himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.
Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to see us:
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Tarsus. A Room in the Governor's House]

Enter Cleon the Governor of Tarsus, with [Dionyza] his wife and others.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?
Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;
For who digs hills because they do aspire
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord! even such our griefs are;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes,
But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.
Cle. O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;
That if heaven slumber while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And, wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.
Dio. I'll do my best, sir.
Cle. This Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds,
And the strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at;

97 for ... offence: for my offence, if I may call it so 122 Intend: turn thee: Helicanus 128 orbs: spheres 129 Time shall never overcome this truth in us both 130 shine: brightness, glory 3 he was a wise fellow; cf. n. 7 indenture: contract

15, 16 Why ... depart: why he wished to depart without the leave of you who love him 34 Cf. n. Scene Fourth Tarsus; cf. n. 5 aspire: mount up 8, 9 Cf. n.

Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were stor'd full to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.
Dio. O! 'tis too true.
Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,
These mouths, whom but of late earth, sea, and air
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise;
Those palates who, not yet two summers younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it;
Those mothers who, to nousle up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?
Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.
Cle. O! let those cities that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears:
The misery of Tarsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?
Cle. Here.
Speak out they sorrows which thou bring'st in haste,
For comfort is too far for us to expect.
Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore,
A portly sail of ships make hitherward.
Cle. I thought as much.
One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours. Some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.
Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.
Cle. Thou speak'st like him 's untutor'd to repeat:
'Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.'
But bring they what they will and what they can,
What need we fear?
The ground's the lowest and we are half way there.
Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.]
Cle. Welcome is peace if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter Pericles with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be like a beacon fir'd to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets:
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;
And these our ships, you happily may think
Are like the Troyan horse was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.
All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.
Per. Arise, I pray you, rise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.
Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when—the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen—
Your Grace is welcome to our town and us.
Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here awhile,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

Exeunt.

Act Second

Enter Gower.

Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, iwis, to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tarsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he speken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb Show.

Enter at one door Pericles talking with Cleon; all the Train with them. Enter, at another door, a Gentleman, with a letter to

26 jetted: walked proudly 42 nousle: foster, train up 61 portly: stately 70 Where there is no glory in overcoming

83 consist: insist 92 happily: haply, perhaps 93 the Troyan horse; cf. n. 95 Cf. n.
2 iwis: certainly, indeed 9 The good: i.e. Pericles conversation: behavior 10 benison: blessing 12 writ: holy writ, Gospel truth

Pericles; Pericles shows the letter to Cleon; Pericles gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exit Pericles at one door, and Cleon at another.

Good Helicane hath stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labours; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive,
And to fulfil his prince' desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tarsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, doing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease;
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above and deeps below
Make such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe is wrack'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tost.
All perishen of man, of pelf,
Ne aught escapen'd but himself;
Till Fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad;
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower, this longs the text. [Exit.]

Scene First

[Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side]

Enter Pericles wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left my breath
Nothing to think on but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1. Fish. What, ho, Pilch!

2. Fish. Ha! come and bring away the nets.

1. Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!

3. Fish. What say you, master?

1. Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanion.

3. Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now.

1. Fish. Alas! poor souls; it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3. Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpoise how he bounced and tumbled? they say they're half fish, half flesh; a plague on them! they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1. Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones; I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; a' plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. [Aside.] A pretty moral.

3. Fish. But master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2. Fish. Why, man?

3. Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. [Aside.] Simonides!

3. Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. [Aside.] How from the finny subject of the sea
These fishers tell the infirmities of men;
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve or men detect!
[Aloud.] Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2. Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? if it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and nobody look after it.

Per. Y' may see the sea hath cast me on your coast.

2. Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,
In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball
For them to play upon entreats you pity him;
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1. Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging then we can do with working.

2. Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes then?

Per. I never practised it.

2. Fish. Nay then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for 't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know,
But what I am want teaches me to think on;
A man throng'd up with cold; my veins are chill,
And have no more of life than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray you see me buried.

1. Fish. Die, quoth-a? Now, gods forbid 't! And I have a gown here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for all day, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

23 full bent with sin: bent upon sin 35 All perishen of man: all the men perish pelf: property 38 glad: gladness 40 longs: makes too long (?), belongs to (?) Scene First Pentapolis; cf. n. S. d. Enter three Fishermen; cf. n. 12 Pilch; cf. n. 17 with a wanion: with a vengeance

48 may men approve: may put men to the test 50–51 Cf. n. 56 tennis-court; cf. n.

2. Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg?
Per. I did but crave.
2. Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.
Per. Why, are your beggars whipped, then?
2. Fish. O! not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.
[Exit with Third Fisherman.]
Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!
1. Fish. Hark you, sir; do you know where ye are?
Per. Not well.
1. Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.
Per. The good Simonides do you call him?
1. Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves to be so called for his peaceable reign and good government.
Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?
1. Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love.
Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires,
I could wish to make one there.
1. Fish. O! sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul,—

Enter the two Fishermen, drawing up a net.

2. Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! bots on 't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour.
Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.
Thanks, Fortune, yet, that after all my crosses
Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself;
And though it was mine own, part of my heritage,
Which my dead father did bequeath to me,
With this strict charge, even as he left his life,
'Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield
'Twixt me and death';—and pointed to this brace;
'For that it sav'd me, keep it; in like necessity—
The which the gods protect thee from!—it may defend thee.'
It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it;
Till the rough seas, that spare not any man,
Took it in rage, though, calm'd, have given 't again.
I thank thee for 't; my shipwrack now's no ill,
Since I have here my father gave in his will.
1. Fish. What mean you, sir?
Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,
For it was sometime target to a king;
I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly,
And for his sake I wish the having of it;
And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,
Where with it I may appear a gentleman;
And if that ever my low fortune's better,
I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.
1. Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?
Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.
1. Fish. Why, do 'e take it; and the gods give thee good on 't!
2. Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters; there are certain condolements, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them.
Per. Believe 't, I will.
By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel;
And spite of all the rupture of the sea,
This jewel holds his building on my arm:
Unto thy value will I mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases.
2. Fish. We'll sure provide; thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair, and I'll bring thee to the court myself.
Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will!
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.]

Scene Second

[The Same. A public Way. Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Ladies, Lords, &c.]
Enter Simonides, with attendants, and Thaisa.

King. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?
1. Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present themselves.
King. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at. [Exit a Lord.]
Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.
King. It's fit it should be so; for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself:
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renowns if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain
The labour of each knight in his device.
Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

The first Knight passes by.

King. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?
Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop reaching at the sun;
The word, Lux tua vita mihi.
King. He loves you well that hold his life of you.

86 beadle: a parish officer with power over petty offenders 102 joust and tourney; cf. n. 105, 106 what . . . soul; cf. n. 109 bots: a disease of horses; bots on 't: an oath on the analogy of 'plague on it' 113 And though: and I thank thee though 117 brace; cf. n. 120 kept: lived, stayed 124 my father gave: what my father gave 127 target; cf. n.

133 pay your bounties: repay your generosity 138, 139 made up . . . waters: brought up through the waves 140 condolements: satisfactions for loss vails: gratuities 144 In spite of all the sea's destructive power 145 holds his building: keeps its place 146 thy: the jewel's 150 bases: horseman's ornamental skirt 3 stay: await 4 Return them: announce to them 14, 15 Cf. n. 15 labour: achievements 17 prefer: present 21 Lux . . . mihi: Thy light my life

The Second Knight.

Who is the second that presents himself?
Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady;
The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu por dulzura que por fuerza.

Third Knight.

King. And what's the third?
Thai. The third of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chivalry;
The word, Me pompæ provexit apex.

Fourth Knight.

King. What is the fourth?
Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside down;
The word, Qui me alit me extinguit.
King. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,
Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

Fifth Knight.

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds,
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

Sixth Knight [Pericles].

King. And what's
The sixth and last, the which the knight himself
With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?
Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is
A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac spe vivo.
King. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.
1. Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For, by his rusty outside he appears
To have practis'd more the whipstock then the lance.
2. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.
3. Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.
King. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming; we'll withdraw
Into the gallery.
[Exeunt.]

Great shouts, and all cry, 'The mean knight!'

27 Piu ... fuerza: More by sweetness than by force; cf. n. 31 Me ... apex: The crown of glory has drawn me on 34 Qui ... extinguit: Who feeds me extinguishes me 37 environed with: surrounded by 38 touchstone; cf. n. 39 Sic ... fides: So should faith be tested 45 In ... vivo: In this hope I live 50 commend: commendation 54 triumph: public festivity 55 He has let his armour rust on purpose 58 Cf. n. S.d. mean: of undistinguished appearance

Scene Third

[The Same. A Hall of State. A Banquet prepared]
Enter the King and Knights from tilting [Thaisa, Ladies, Lords, and Attendants].

King. Knights,
To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:
You are princes and my guest.
Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.
Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.
King. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast,—
For, daughter, so you are,—here take your place;
Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.
Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.
King. Your presence glads our days; honour we love,
For who hates honour, hates the gods above.
Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place.
Per. Some other is more fit.
1. Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen
That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envy the great nor shall the low despise.
Per. You are right courteous knights.
King. Sit, sir; sit.
Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,
These cates resist me, she but thought upon.
Thai. [Aside.] By Juno, that is queen of marriage,
All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury,
Wishing him my meat. [Aloud.] Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.
King. He's but a country gentleman;
He has done no more than other knights have done;
He has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.
Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.
Per. Yon king's to me like to my father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence.
None that beheld him, but like lesser lights
Did vail their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.
King. What, are you merry, knights?
Knights. Who can be other in this royal presence?
King. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim,
As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,
We drink this health to you.

17 And ... scholar; cf. n. 23 Sir ... place; cf. n. 31 If I but think of her, these delicacies tempt me not; cf. n.

Knights. We thank your Grace.
King. Yet pause awhile;
Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?
Thai. What is it
To me, my father?
King. O, attend, my daughter:
Princes in this should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them;
And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at.
Therefore to make his entrance more sweet,
Here say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.
Thai. Alas! my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold;
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.
King. How!
Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.
Thai. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.
King. And further tell him, we desire to know of him,
Of whence he is, his name, and parentage.
Thai. The king, my father, sir, has drunk to you.
Per. I thank him.
Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.
Thai. And further he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.
Per. A gentleman of Tyre, my name, Pericles;
My education been in arts and arms;
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwrack, driven upon this shore.
Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.
King. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time which looks for other revels.
Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse with saying this,
'Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,'
Since they love men in arms as well as beds. They dance.
So this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
Come, sir;
Here's a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip,
And that their measures are as excellent.

59 countervail: equal 67, 68 Cf. n. 69 entrance: joining in our festivity 70 standing-bowl: bowl with a standard 76 move: anger 87–91 Cf. n. 88 been: has been 98 on: at 100 address'd: dressed 101 Will: You will 103 Loud music: the clash of their armor 105 So this was well ask'd: I did well to ask this 107 breathing: exercising

Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord.
King. Oh! that's as much as you would be denied
Of your fair courtesy. They dance.
Unclasp, unclasp;
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
[To Pericles.] But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct
These knights unto their several lodgings! Yours, sir,
We have given order be next our own.
Per. I am at your Grace's pleasure.
[King.] Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at;
Therefore each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best. [Exeunt.]

Scene Fourth

[Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House]
Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free;
For which, the most high gods not minding longer
To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated in a chariot
Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with him,
A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,
That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.
Esca. 'Twas very strange.
Hel. And yet but justice; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.
Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

1. Lord. See, not a man in private conference
Or council has respect with him but he.
2. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.
3. Lord. And curst be he that will not second it.
1. Lord. Follow me then. Lord Helicane, a word.
Hel. With me? and welcome. Happy day, my lords.
1. Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.
Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not your prince you love.
1. Lord. Wrong not yourself then, noble Helicane;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolv'd he lives to govern us,
Or dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral,
And leave us to our free election.
2. Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure:
And knowing this kingdom is without a head,

112, 113 Cf. n. 121 level: aim 123 To-morrow let all do their best at wooing 3 minding: being minded 9, 10 Cf. n. 11 ador'd: which adored 26 you: whom you 32–34 Cf. n. 35 strongest . . . censure: most likely in our opinion

(Like goodly buildings left without a roof
Soon fall to ruin) your noble self,
That best know how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.
Omnes. Live, noble Helicane!
Hel. Try honour's cause, forbear your suffrages:
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.
A twelvemonth longer let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.
1. Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;
And since Lord Helicane enjoineth us,
We with our travels will endeavour.
Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:
When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands. [Exeunt.]

Scene Fifth

[Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace]
Enter the King reading of a letter at one door; the Knights meet him.

1. Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.
King. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,
That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.
1. Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?
King. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied
Her to her chamber that 'tis impossible.
One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;
This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.
3. Knight. Loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves.
[Exeunt Knights.]
King. So,
They are well dispatch'd; now to my daughter's letter.
She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;
I like that well: nay, how absolute she's in 't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!
Well, I do commend her choice;
And will no longer have it be delay'd.
Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

King. To you as much! Sir, I am beholding to you
For your sweet music this last night: I do
Protest my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony
Per. It is your Grace's pleasure to commend,
Not my desert.
King. Sir, you are music's master.
Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.
King. Let me ask you one thing.
What do you think of my daughter, sir?
Per. A most virtuous princess.
King. And she is fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.
King. Sir, my daughter thinks very well of you;
Ay, so well that you must be her master,
And she will be your scholar: therefore look to it.
Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.
King. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.
Per. [Aside.] What's here?
A letter that she loves the knight from Tyre!
'Tis the king's subtilty to have my life.
Oh, seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.
King. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art
A villain.
Per. By the gods, I have not:
Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.
King. Traitor, thou liest.
Per. Traitor!
King. Ay, traitor,
Per. Even in his throat, unless it be the king,
That calls me traitor, I return the lie.
King. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.
Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy
King. No?
Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you.
Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?
King. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?—
I am glad on 't, with all my heart. Aside.
[Aloud.] I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections

37 Like: as 44 Take I: if I take 47 forbear: bear in patience 55 He's a fool who will not yield to wisdom 3, 4 Cf. n. 10, 11 Cf. n.

25 beholding: indebted 28 Cf. n. 45 subtilty: crafty plot 49 bent all offices: directed all his endeavors 53 levy: aim at 63 relish'd: had a taste 71 Resolve: inform 76 peremptory: determined

Upon a stranger?—who, for aught I know,
May be, nor can I think the contrary,
As great in blood as I myself.— Aside.
[Aloud.] Therefore, hear you, mistress; either frame
Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,
Either be rul'd by me, or I'll make you—
Man and wife:
Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it too;
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And for further grief,—God give you joy!
What! are you both pleas'd?
Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.
Per. Even as my life, my blood that fosters it.
King. What! are you both agreed?
Ambo. Yes, if 't please your majesty.
King. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed;
And then with what haste you can get you to bed.

Exeunt.

Act Third

Enter Gower.

Now sleep yslacked hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'erfed breast
Of this most pompous marriage-feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
Are the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded. Be attent;
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine fancies quaintly eche;
What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

[Dumb Show.]

Enter Pericles and Simonides, at one door with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter: Pericles shows it Simonides; the Lords kneel to Pericles. Then enter Thaisa with child, with Lychorida a nurse: the King shows her the letter; she rejoices: she and Pericles take leave of her father, and depart.

By many a dern and painful perch,
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coigns,
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence
That horse and sail and high expense
Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre,—
Fame answering the most strange inquire—
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these:
Antiochus and his daughter dead;
The men of Tyrus on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Yravished the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
'Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?'
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen, with child, makes her desire,—
Which who shall cross?—along to go.
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut: but Fortune's mood
Varies again: the grisled north
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and, well-a-near!
Does fall in travail with her fear;
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I nill relate, action may
Conveniently the rest convey,
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The seas-toss'd Pericles appears to speak. [Exit.]

Scene First

Enter Pericles, a-shipboard.

Per. The God of this great vast rebuke these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep. O, still
Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench
Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes. O, how, Lychorida,
How does my queen? Thou storm, venomously
Wilt thou spit all thyself? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard. Lychorida! Lucina, O
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails!

Enter Lychorida [with an Infant].

95 Ambo: both 97 Cf. n. 1 yslacked hath the rout: hath quieted the company 5 eyne: eyes 6 fore: before 8 And are the more blithe for their dryness 13 eche: eke out 15-19 Cf. n. 21 stead: help 22 Report answering the most widespread inquiry 32 dooms: judgments 35 Yravished: delighted 36 can: 'gan, began to 45 half . . . cut: they have made half the voyage 51 well-a-near!: well-a-day! 53 fell: fierce 55 nill: will not; cf. n. 55-57 action . . . told; cf. n. Scene First; cf. n. 1 rebuke these surges; cf. n.

Now, Lychorida!
Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I
Am like to do: take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.
Per. How, how, Lychorida?
Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.
Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here below
Recall not what we give, and therein may
Vie honour with you.
Lyc. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.
Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blusterous birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for
Thou art the rudeliest welcome to this world
That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows!
Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb; even at the first
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here. Now, the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon 't!

Enter two Sailors.

1. Sail. What courage, sir? God save you!
Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw;
It hath done to me the worst. Yet for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh new seafarer,
I would it would be quiet.
1. Sail. Slack the bolins there! thou wilt not, wilt thou?
Blow, and split thyself.
2. Sail. But sea-room, and the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.
1. Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard: the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.
Per. That's your superstition.
1. Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.
Per. As you think meet. Most wretched queen!
Lyc. Here she lies, sir.
Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear;
No light, no fire: th' unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze;
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining lamps, the belching whale
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells! O Lychorida!
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.
[Exit Lychorida.]
2. Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitumed ready.
Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?
2. Sail. We are near Tarsus.
Per. Thither, gentle mariner,
Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?
2. Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.
Per. O! make for Tarsus.
There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus; there I'll leave it
At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner;
I'll bring the body presently. Exit [followed by Sailors].

Scene Second

[Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House]
Enter Lord Cerimon, with a Servant [and some Persons who have been shipwrecked].

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my lord call?
Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men;
'T has been a turbulent and stormy night.
Ser. I have been in many; but such a night as this
Till now I ne'er endur'd.
Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return;
There's nothing can be minister'd to nature
That can recover him. [To Philemon.] Give this to the 'pothecary,
And tell me how it works. [Exeunt all except Cerimon.]

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Good morrow.
2. Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.
Cer. Gentlemen,
Why do you stir so early?
1. Gent. Sir,
Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook as the earth did quake;
The very principals did seem to rend,
And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.
2. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;
'Tis not our husbandry.
Cer. O, you say well.
1. Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
'Tis most strange,

17 conceit: understanding 27–29 We . . . you; cf. n. 31 Even . . . charge: for the sake of the baby 40 can . . . quit: thy safe delivery can atone for 44 flaw: squall 48 bolins: bowlines 50 But sea-room and: only give us sea-room, and though 50 cloudy billow: waves like clouds 52 Cf. n.

74 suddenly: swiftly 76 bitumed: pitched 80 thy . . . Tyre: your present course towards Tyre 85 At . . . nursing: to be carefully nursed Scene Second Ephesus; cf. n. 19 principals: frame-work 23 husbandry: thrifty habits 26 tire: bed furnishings

Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.
Cer. I hold it ever,
Virtue and cunning were endowments greater
Than nobleness and riches; careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend,
But immortality attends the former,
Making a man a god. 'Tis known I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have—
Together with my practice—made familiar
To me and to my aid the blest infusions
That dwells in vegetives, in metals, stones;
And can speak of the disturbances
That nature works, and of her cures; which doth give me
A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and death.
2. Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth
Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:
And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even
Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never decay.

Enter two or three [Servants] with a chest.

Serv. So; lift there.
Cer. What's that?
Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss up upon our shore this chest:
'Tis of some wrack.
Cer. Set it down; let's look upon 't.
2. Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.
Cer. Whate'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight;
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,
'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.
2. Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.
Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bottomed!
Did the sea cast it up?
Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.
Cer. Wrench it open.
Soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense.
2. Gent. A delicate odour.
Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.
O you most potent gods! what's here? a corse!
2. Gent. Most strange!
Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; blam'd and entreasur'd
With full bags of spices! A passport too!
Apollo, perfect me in the characters!
'Here I give to understand,
If e'er this coffin drives a-land,
I, King Pericles, have lost
This queen worth all our mundane cost.
Who finds her, give her burying;
She was the daughter of a king:
Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity!'
If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe! This chanc'd to-night.
2. Gent. Most likely, sir.
Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look, how fresh she looks. They were too rough
That threw her in the sea. Make a fire within;
Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet. [Exit Second Servant.]
Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The o'erpress'd spirits. I heard of an Egyptian,
That had nine hours lien dead,
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Enter one with napkins and fire.

Well said, well said; the fire and cloths.
The rough and woeful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, beseech you.
The viol once more;—how thou stirr'st, thou block!
The music there! I pray you, give her air.
Gentlemen,
This queen will live; nature awakes, a warmth
Breathes out of her; she hath not been entranc'd
About five hours. See how she 'gins to blow
Into life's flower again.
1. Gent. The heavens
Through you increase our wonder and sets up
Your fame for ever.
Cer. She is alive! behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Doth appear, to make the world twice rich. Live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
Rare as you seem to be! She moves.
Thai. O dear Diana!
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?
2. Gent. Is not this strange?
1. Gent. Most rare.
Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours!
Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.
Get linen; now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come;
And Æsculapius guide us!

They carry her awway. Exeunt omnes.

Scene Third

[Tarsus. A Room in Cleon's House]
Enter Pericles, at Tarsus, with Cleon and Dionyza [and Lychorida, carrying the infant Marina].

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone;
My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus stands

37 physic: the art of healing 40 aid: assistant; cf. n. 51 pain: care 74 corse: corpse 76 entreasur'd: stored up 78 Apollo, enable me to read the writing

88 to-night: last night 94 usurp: encroach 96 o'erpress'd: overcome 97 lien: lain 110 sets; cf. n. 117 twice rich; cf. n. 120, 121 Cf. n. 127 is mortal: would be fatal 128 Æsculapius: god of healing

In a litigious peace. You and your lady
Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods
Make up the rest upon you!
Cer. Your shakes of fortune, though they haunt you mortally,
Yet glance full wanderingly on us.
Dion. O your sweet queen!
That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,
To have bless'd mine eyes with her!
Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar
As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end
Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina—whom,
For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so—here
I charge your charity withal, leaving her
The infant of your care, beseeching you
To give her princely training, that she may be
Manner'd as she is born.
Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think
Your Grace, that fed my country with your corn—
For which the people's prayers still fall upon you—
Must in your child be thought on. If neglection
Should therein make me vile, the common body,
By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty;
But if to that my nature need a spur,
The gods revenge it upon me and mine,
To the end of generation!
Per. I believe you;
Your honour and your goodness teach me to 't,
Without your vows. Till she be married, madam,
By bright Diana, whom we honour, all
Unscissor'd shall this hair of mine remain,
Though I show ill in 't. So I take my leave.
Good madam, make me blessed in your care
In bringing up my child.
Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect
Than yours, my lord.
Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.
Cle. We'll bring your Grace e'en to the edge o' the shore;
Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and
The gentlest winds of heaven.
Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O! no tears,
Lychorida, no tears:
Look to your little mistress, on whose grace
You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord. [Exeunt.]

Scene Fourth

[Ephesus. A Room in Cerimon's House]
Enter Cerimon and Thaisa.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,
Lay with you in your coffer; which are
At your command. Know you the character?
Thai. It is my lord's.
That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember,
Even on my eaning time; but whether there
Deliver'd, by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say. But since King Pericles,
My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to,
And never more have joy.
Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak,
Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you.
Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.
Exit [with Cerimon].

Act Fourth

Enter Gower.

Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and settled to his own desire.
His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana there a votaress.
Now to Marina bend your mind,
Whom our fast-growing scene must find
At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters; who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place
Of general wonder. But, alack!
That monster envy, oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's knife
And in this kind hath our Cleon
One daughter, and a wench full grown,
Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid
Hight Philoten, and it is said
For certain in our story, she
Would ever with Marina be:
Be 't when she weav'd the sleided silk
With fingers, long, small, white as milk,
Or when she would with sharp needle wound
The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; when to the lute
She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
That still records with moan; or when
She would with rich and constant pen
Vail to her mistress Dian; still
This Philoten contends in skill
With absolute Marina: so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow
Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All priases, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks

3 litigious: questionable 5 upon: to 6–9 Cf. n. 8 full wanderingly: wide of their mark 24 neglection: neglect 25 the common body: the citizens 39 respect: care 43 mask'd Neptune: the mighty sea appearing calm

6 eaning time: time of bringing forth 9 Cf. n. 10 vestal livery: cf. n. 14 your date expire: you die 16 heart and place: the very center 18 Hight: named 21 sleided: raw 26 night-bird: nightingale 27 records: sings 29 Vail: do homage 31 absolute: perfect 32 the dove of Paphos: cf. n. 34, 35 All . . . given: cf. n. 35 darks: obscures

In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare
For good Marina, that her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter.
The sooner her vile thought to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead:
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow. The unborn event
I do commend to your content:
Only I carried winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rime;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way.
Dionyza doth appear,
With Leonine, a murtherer. Exit.

Scene First

[Tarsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore]
Enter Dionyza, with Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do 't:
'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing i' the world so soon,
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,
Which is but cold, inflaming love i' thy bosom,
Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which
Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.
Leon. I'll do 't; but yet she is a goodly creature.
Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. Here
She comes weeping for her only mistress' death.
Thou art resolv'd?
Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter Marina, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy green with flowers; the yellows, blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave,
While summer days doth last. Ay me! poor maid,
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends.
Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?
How chance my daughter is not with your? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing; you have
A nurse of me. Lord! how your favour's chang'd
With this unprofitable woe. Come,
Give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it.
Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach. Come,
Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.
Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.
Dion. Come, come;
I love the king your father, and yourself,
With more than foreign heart. We every day
Expect him here; when he shall come and find
Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken
No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you;
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.
Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.
Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you.
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at least.
Remember what I have said.
Leon. I warrant you, madam.
Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while;
Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood:
What! I must have care of you.
Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.
[Exit Dionyza.]
Is this wind westerly that blows?
Leon. South-west.
Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.
Leon. Was 't so?
Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors, galling
His kingly hands haling ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck.
Leon. When was this?
Mar. When I was born:
Never were waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber. 'Ha!' says one, 'wilt out?'
And with a dropping industry they skip
From stem to stern; the boatswain whistles, and
The master calls, and trebles their confusion.
Leon. Come; say your prayers.
Mar. What mean you?
Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious,
For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.
Mar. Why will you kill me?
Leon. To satisfy my lady.
Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?
Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.
I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature; believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly;
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her any profit,

36 All attention to the grace of Philoten 44 pregnant: ready 45 Prest: prepared 47-50 Cf. n. 6 nicely: scrupulously 14 Tellus: Earth 15 green: grave 21 Whirring: hurrying 23 How chance: how comes it 25 of: in favour: face 27 it: them 28 quick: invigorating 29 stomach: spirits

37 to all reports: equal to all reports 40 courses: interests 52 softly: slowly 61 haling: pulling 68 canvas-climber: seaman 69 dropping: dripping wet

Or my life imply her any danger?
Leon. My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do 't.
Mar. You will not do 't for all the world, I hope.
You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that fought;
Good sooth, it show'd well in you; do so now;
Your lady seeks my life; come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker.
Leon. I am sworn,
And will dispatch.

Enter Pirates.

1. Pirate. Hold, villain! [Leonine runs away.]
2. Pirate. A prize! a prize!
3. Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part.
Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.
Exit [Marina, carried by Pirates].

Enter Leonine.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes;
And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go;
There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,
And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further;
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. Exit.

Scene Second

[Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel]
Enter the three Bawds [i.e. Pandar, Bawd, and Boult].

Pand. Boult.
Boult. Sir?
Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants; we lost too much money this mart by being too wenchless.
Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.
Pand. Therefore, let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.
Bawd. Thou sayst true; 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as, I think, I have brought up some eleven—
Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?
Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.
Pand. Thou sayst true; they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.
Boult. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market. Exit.
Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.
Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?
Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.
Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.
Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Enter Boult, with the Pirates and Marina.

Boult. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?
1. Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.
Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.
Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?
Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refused.
Bawd. What's her price, Boult?
Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.
Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.
[Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.]
Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry, 'He that will give most, shall have her first.' Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.
Boult. Performance shall follow. Exit.
Mar. Alack, that Leonine was so slack, so slow!
He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates—
Not enough barbarous—had not o'erboard thrown me
For to seek my mother!
Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?
Mar. That I am pretty.
Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.
Mar. I accuse them not.
Bawd. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.
Mar. The more my fault
To 'scape his hands where I was like to die.
Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.
Mar. No.
Bawd. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?
Mar. Are you a woman?
Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?
Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.
Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling; I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.
Mar. The gods defend me!

93 well favour'd: handsome 103 Half-part: I demand my share 105 Valdes; cf. n. Scene Second Mitylene; cf. n. 4 mart: market time 21 pooped: deceived 23 chequins: sequins, gold coins

24 give over: give up (the life) 28 wages not: is not equal 30 hatched; cf. n. S. d. Enter Boult, etc.; cf. n. 38 gone through: struck a bargain 39 earnest: advance payment 45 bated one doit: reduced a farthing 48 raw: unskilled entertainment: occupation

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boult's returned.

[Re-enter Boult.]

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' the hams?

Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay, he; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. [To Marina.] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers; seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O! take her home, mistress, take her home; these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayst true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,—

Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so?

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town; report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou has the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,
Untied I still my virgin knot will keep.
Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana?
Pray you, will you go with us? Exeunt.

101 sign: inn sign, Marina 107 mere: sure 112 which . . . warrant: the way which she is entitled to go

Scene Third

[Tarsus. A Room in Cleon's House]
Enter Cleon and Dionyza.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon.

Dion. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,
I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady!
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o' the earth
I' the justice of compare. O villain Leonine!
Whom thou hast poison'd too;
If thou hadst drunk to him 't had been a kindness
Becoming well thy fact; what canst thou say
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,
To foster it, nor ever to preserve.
She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?
Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play.'

Cle. O! go to. Well, well,
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think
The pretty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then;
Yet none does know but you how she came dead,
Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.
She did distain my child, and stood between
Her and her fortunes; none would look on her,
But cast their gazes on Marina's face,
Whilst ours was blurted at and held a malkin
Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;
And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And even yet we mourn; her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us

Scene Third: cf. n. 10 I' . . . compare: by just comparison 12 drunk to: toasted (in poison) 13 fact: misdeed 17 cross: deny 19 attribute: reputation 26 open: reveal 29–32 To . . . sources: whoever could approve such a crime, though not party to it, must be base 36 distain: put a stain upon 39 blurted: mocked malkin: slattern 40 the time of day: a civil greeting thorough: through 43 greets: gratifies

At whose expense 'tis done.
Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.
Dion. You are like one that superstitiously
Do swear to the gods that winter kills the flies;
But yet I know you'll do as I advise. [Exeunt.]

Scene Fourth

[Before the Monument of Marina at Tarsus]
[Enter Gower.]

Gower. Thus time we waste, and long leagues make short;
Sail seas in cockles, have, an wish but for 't;
Making—to take your imagination—
From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you
To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you,
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Helicanus goes along. Behind
Is left to govern it, you bear in mind,
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate.
Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought
This king to Tarsus, think his pilot thought,
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like motes and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

[Dumb Show.]
Enter Pericles at one door with all his Train; Cleon and Dionyza at the other. Cleon shows Pericles the tomb; whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. [Exeunt Cleon and Dionyza.]

Gower. See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'ershower'd,
Leaves Tarsus and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs;
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyza.
[Reads inscription on Marina's monument.]

The fairest, sweet'st, and best lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year:
She was of Tyrus the king's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter.
Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' th' earth:
Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd,
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:
Wherefore she does, and swears she'll never stint,
Make raging battery upon shores of flint.

No visor does become black villainy
So well as soft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day
In her unholy service. Patient then,
And think you now are all in Mitylen. Exit.

Scene Fifth

[Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel]
Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Did you ever hear the like?
2. Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.
1. Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing?
2. Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall's go hear the vestals sing?
1. Gent. I'll do anything now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting forever. Exeunt.

Scene Sixth

[The Same. A Room in the Brothel]
Enter the three Bawds.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.
Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation; we must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindess of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil if he should cheapen a kiss of her.
Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.
Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!
Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on 't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus, disguised.
Boult. We should have both lord and lown if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter Lysimachus.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?
Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!
Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

53 harpy: cf. n. 56, 57 Cf. n. 1 waste: do away with 2 have, an wish but for 't: have what we but wish for 4 bourn: boundary 18 think his pilot thought: imagine your thought is his pilot 19 steerage: voyage 30 tempest: storm of mental anguish his . . . vessel: the vessel of his life

39 Thetis: goddess of the sea 42 stint: cease 3 Priapus: the god of fertility and generation 6 fitment: duty has me: has, forsooth 7 quirks: subtle arguments, quibbles 9 cheapen: bargain for 12 green-sickness: anæmia 15 lown: loon, menial 18 to-bless: bless entirely

Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity! have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed if she had but—

Lys. What, prithee?

Boult. O! sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. [Exit Boult.]

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never plucked yet, I can assure you.—

[Enter Boult with Marina.]

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you; leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave; a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. [To Marina.] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together.

Lys. Go thy ways. [Exeunt Bawd and Pandar. Boult retires to the door.] Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to 't so young? Were you a gamester at five or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into 't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

33 report ... to be chaste: reputation of being chaste 53 paced: trained 54 manage: control 60 but ... offend: without offense 71 parts: qualities

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place; come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;
If put upon you, make the judgment good
That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this? Some more; be sage.

Mar. For me,
That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune
Hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came,
Diseases have been sold dearer than physic,
O that the gods
Would set me free from this unhallow'd place,
Though they did change me to the meanest bird
That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think
Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.
Had I brought hither a corrupted mind,
Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee;
Persever in that clear way thou goest,
And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The good gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten
That I came with no ill intent, for to me
The very doors and windows savour vilely.
Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and
I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.
Hold, here's more gold for thee.
A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost
Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Boult. [Advancing.] I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avaunt! thou damned door-keeper. Your house,
But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink and overwhelm you. Away! [Exit.]

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O! abominable.

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up forever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

83 If put upon you: if honor was bestowed upon you (and not inherited) 101 be you thoughten: think 104 piece of virtue: virtuous creature 116 cope: firmament

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure; crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures; away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not got the way of womenkind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! [Exit.]

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Prithee, tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art,
Since they do better thee in their command.
Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend
Of hell would not in reputation change;
Thou art the damned door-keeper to every
Coystril that comes inquiring for his Tib,
To the choleric fisting of every rogue
Thy ear is liable, thy food is such
As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do anything but this thou doest. Empty
Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth;
Serve by indenture to the common hangman:
Any of these ways are yet better than this;
For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak,
Would own a name too dear. O that the gods
Would safely deliver me from this place!
Here, here's gold for thee.
If that thy master would gain by me,
Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,
With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast;
And I will undertake all these to teach.
I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again,
And prostitute me to the basest groom
That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee; if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But, amongst honest women.

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come; I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. Exeunt.

133 malleable: able to be moulded 139 Marry, come up: out upon you! 140 with . . . bays: with all the trimmings 150 Since they benefit thee in their employ 151 pained'st: most tortured 154 Coystril: knave 155 choleric fisting: angry buffets 167 Would . . . dear: would think his race too good

Act Fifth

Enter Gower.

Marina thus the brothel 'scapes, and chances
Into an honest house, our story says.
She sings like one immortal, and she dances
As goddess-like to her admired lays;
Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her neeld composes
Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,
That even her art sisters the natural roses;
Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry;
That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain
She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place,
And to her father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost,
Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd
Here where his daughter dwells: and on this coast
Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd
God Neptune's annual feast to keep; from whence
Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense,
And to him in his barge with fervour hies.
In your supposing once more put your sight
Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark:
Where what is done in action—more, if might—
Shall be discover'd; please you, sit and hark. Exit.

Scene First

[On board Pericles' ship, off Mitylene. A pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it; Pericles within it, reclined on a couch]
Enter Helicanus; to him two Sailors.

1. Sail. Where is Lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.
O! here he is.—
Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene,
And in it is Lysimachus, the governor,
Who craves to come aboard. What is your will?

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

2. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen, there is some of worth would come aboard; I pray, greet him fairly.

Enter Lysimachus [with Attendants].

1. Sail. Sir,
This is the man that can, in aught you would,
Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

5 Deep . . . dumbs: she silences profound scholars neeld: needle 7 sisters: is near akin to, very like 8 inkle, silk: linen or silk thread (used in embroidery) 9 That: so that 16 striv'd: outdid itself 21 supposing: imagination 22 heavy: sad 23 more, if might: more would be shown if it were possible 24 discover'd: displayed Scene First, cf. n. 9 some of worth: some important person 12 in aught you would: about anything you want

Lys. You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it to know of whence you are.
Hel. First, what is your place?
Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.
Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man who for three months hath not spoken
To anyone, nor taken sustenance
But to prorogue his grief.
Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?
Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.
Lys. May we not see him?
Hel. You may;
But bootless is your sight: he will not speak
To any.
Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.
Hel. Behold him. [Pericles discovered.] This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this.
Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve you! Hail, royal sir!
Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.
Lord. Sir,
We have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.
Lys. 'Tis well bethought.
She questionless with her sweet harmony
And other chosen attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts
Which now are midway stopp'd:
She is all happy as the fair'st of all,
And with her fellow maids is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side. [Whispers Attendant, who goes out.]
Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit,
That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindess
We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you,
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.
Lys. O, sir, a courtesy,
Which if we should deny, the most just God
For every graff would send a caterpillar,
And so inflict our province. Yet once more
Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.
Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you;
But see, I am prevented.

[Enter Attendant, with Marina, and a young Lady.]

Lys. O, here's
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is 't not a goodly present?

27 prorogue: prolong 28 distemperature: disturbance of mind 34 bootless . . . sight: it will not profit you to see him 39, 40 Cf. n. 47 questionless: undoubtedly 49, 50 Cf. n. 53 abuts against: borders on 55 effectless: useless 56 That . . . name: that promises recovery 63 graff: graft (of trees) 64 inflict: afflict 65 at large: fully

Hel. She's a gallant lady.
Lys. She's such a one, that were I well assur'd
Came of a gentle kind and noble stock,
I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.—
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.
Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided
That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffer'd to come near him.
Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous!

The Song.

Lys. Mark'd he your music?
Mar. No, nor look'd on us.
Lys. See, she will speak to him.
Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.
Per. Hum! ha! [Pushes her away.]
Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet; she speaks,
My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward Fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude.—[Aside.] I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, 'Go not till he speak.'
Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?
Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,
You would not do me violence.
Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.
You're like something that—. What country-woman?
Here of these shores?
Mar. No, nor of any shores;
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.
Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;
Her stature to an inch; as wandlike-straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,
The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?
Mar. Where I am but a stranger; from the deck
You may discern the place.
Per. Where were you bred?

78 artificial feat: feat of art S. d. The Song: cf. n. 101 equivalent: equally powerful 103 awkward: adverse

And how achiev'd you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe?
Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem
Like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.
Per. Prithee, speak;
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou lookest
Modest as justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd truth to dwell in. I will believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible; for thou lookest
Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?
Didst thou not say when I did push thee back,—
Which was when I perceiv'd thee,—that thou cam'st
From good descending?
Mar. So indeed I did.
Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou saidst
Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,
If both were open'd.
Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.
Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl; yet thou dost look
Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?
Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.
Mar. My name is Marina.
Per. Oh! I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.
Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.
Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.
Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power,
My father, and a king.
Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?
Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.
Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?
Motion!—Well; speak on. Where were you born?
And wherefore call'd Marina?
Mar. Call'd Marina
For I was born at sea.
Per. At sea! what mother?
Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king,
Who died the minute I was born,
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft
Deliver'd weeping.

Per. O stop there a little.
This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep
Did mock sad fools withal. This cannot be
My daughter, buried.—Well; where were you bred?
I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you.
Mar. You scorn: believe me, 'twere best I did give o'er.
Per. I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:
How came you in these parts? where were you bred?
Mar. The king my father did in Tarsus leave me,
Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murther me; and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do 't,
A crew of pirates came and rescu'd me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be
You think me an imposture; no, good faith;
I am the daughter to King Pericles,
If good King Pericles be.
Per. Ho, Helicanus!
Hel. Calls my lord?
Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general; tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?
Hel. I know not; but
Here's the regent, sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.
Lys. She never would tell
Her parentage. Being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.
Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain,
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. Oh come hither,
Thou that begett'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus,
And found at sea again. O Helicanus!
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us; this is Marina.
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.
Mar. First, sir, I pray,
What is your title?
Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now
My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest you said
Thou hast been godlike perfect:
The heir of kingdoms, and another like
To Pericles thy father.
Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.
Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; th' art my child.
Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus;

129 to owe: by possessing 136 relation: tale 137 To: even as far as 149 warrant: assure 151, 152 If . . . endurance: cf. n. 155 Extremity out of act: so that extreme peril cannot strike 185 Deliver'd: told

193 by the syllable: every syllable 198 woo'd: solicited 199 drawn: i.e. his sword 235 perfect: correct 238 Is it: does it require 242 th' art my child; cf. n.

She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have been,
By savage Cleon; she shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge
She is thy very princess. Who is this?
Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.
Per. I embrace you.
Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens! bless my girl. But hark! what music?
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to dote,
How sure you are my daughter. But, what music?
Hel. My lord, I hear none.
Per. None!
The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.
Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.
Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?
Lys. Music, my lord? I hear.
Per. Most heavenly music:
It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine eyes; let me rest. [Sleeps.]
Lys. A pillow for his head!
So, leave him all. Well, my companion friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.

Diana [appears to Pericles as in a vision].

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus; hie thee thither,
And do upon mine altar sacrifice.
There, when my maiden priests are met together,
Before the people all,
Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife;
To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call
And give them repetition to the life.
Or perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe;
Do it, and happy; by my silver bow!
Awake, and tell thy dream! [Disappears.]
Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee! Helicanus!
Hel. Sir?
Per. My purpose was for Tarsus, there to strike
The inhospitable Cleon: but I am
For other service first: toward Ephesus
Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee why.
[To Lysimachus.] Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,
And give you gold for such provision
As our intents will need?
Lys. Sir,
With all my heart; and when you come ashore,
I have another suit.
Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter, for it seems
You have been noble towards her.
Lys. Sir, lend me your arm.
Per. Come, my Marina.
[Exeunt.]

244 should: was reported to 246 justify: prove 252 beholding: appearance 255 dote: be bewildered 264 nips: arrests 267–269 Well . . . you; cf. n. S. d. Diana; cf. n. 275 crosses: trials 276 to the life: exact 277 Or: either 280 argentine: silvery 286 eftsoons: soon 292 suit: petition; cf. n.

Scene Second

[Enter Gower.]

Gower. Now our sands are almost run;
More a little, and then dumb.
This, my last boon, give me,
For such kindness must relieve me,
That you aptly will suppose
What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
What minstrelsy, and pretty din,
The regent made in Mitylen
To greet the king. So he thriv'd,
That he is promis'd to be wiv'd
To fair Marina; but in no wise
Till he had done his sacrifice,
As Dian bade: whereto being bound,
The interim, pray you, all confound.
In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd,
And wishes fall out as they're will'd.
At Ephesus the temple see,
Our king and all his company.
That he can hither come so soon,
Is by your fancy's thankful doom. [Exit.]

Scene Third

[The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; Thaisa standing near the altar, as high priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; Cerimon and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending]
[Enter Pericles, with his Train; Lysimachus, Helicanus, Marina, and a Lady.]

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,
I here confess myself the King of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.
At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess!
Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus
Was nurs'd with Cleon, whom at fourteen years
He sought to murder; but her better stars
Brought her to Mitylene, 'gainst whose shore
Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us,
Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she
Made known herself my daughter.
Thai. Voice and favour!
You are, you are—O royal Pericles!— [She faints.]
Per. What means the nun? she dies! help, gentlemen!
Cer. Noble sir,
If you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.
Per. Reverend appearer, no;
I threw her overboard with these very arms.
Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.
Per. 'Tis most certain.
Cer. Look to the lady. O, she's but overjoy'd.
Early in blustering morn this lady was

5 aptly: readily 12 he: Pericles 14 confound: consider gone 15 In feather'd briefness: swiftly as wings 20 thankful doom: decision for which I am thankful Scene Third The Temple of Diana at Ephesus; cf. n. 11 Riding: modifies 'us' 15 Cf. n.

Thrown upon this shore. I op'd the coffin,
Found there rich jewels; recovered her, and plac'd her
Here in Diana's temple.
Per. May we see them?
Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,
Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is Recovered.
Thai. O! let me look!
If he be none of mine, my sanctity
Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,
But curb it, spite of seeing. O! my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you spake,
Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest,
A birth, and death?
Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!
Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd.
Per. Immortal Dian!
Thai. Now I know you better.
When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king my father gave you such a ring. [Shows a ring.]
Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness
Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well,
That on the touching of her lips I may
Melt and no more be seen. O! come, be buried
A second time within these arms.
Mar. My heart
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom. [Kneels to Thaisa.]
Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of they flesh, Thaisa;
Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina,
For she was yielded there.
Thai. Bless'd, and mine own!
Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!
Thai. I know you not.
Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,
I left behind an ancient substitute.
Can you remember what I call'd the man?
I have nam'd him oft.
Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.
Per. Still confirmation!
Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.
Now do I long to hear how you were found,
How possibly preserv'd, and whom to thank,
Besides the gods, for this great miracle.
Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man,
Through whom the gods have shown their power, that can
From first to last resolve you.
Per. Reverend sir,
The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?
Cer. I will, my lord,
Beseech you first, go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her;
How she came plac'd here in the temple;
No needful thing omitted.
Per. Pure Dian! bless thee for thy vision, and
Will offer night-oblations to thee. Thaisa,
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now
This ornament
Makes me look dismal will I clip to form,
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify.
Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,
My father's dead.
Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there, my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days;
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay
To hear the rest untold. Sir, lead 's the way. [Exeunt.]

Gower.

In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard
Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:
In Pericles, his queen, and daughter, seen—
Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen—
Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,
Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.
In Helicanus may you well descry
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty.
In reverend Cerimon there well appears
The worth that learned charity aye wears.
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
That him and his they in his palace burn:
The gods for murder seemed so content
To punish; although not done, but meant.
So on your patience evermore attending,
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending. [Exit.]

FINIS

27 recovered: revived 31 you: for you 45 parted: left 49 That: if 82 bless: I bless 86 His hair and beard 87 Makes: which makes

Notes

Dramatis Personæ. No list occurs in any of the Quartos. It appears first after the play in the Third Folio.

Act First. None of the Quartos have any division into acts and scenes. In the Folios the beginning is marked Actus Primus Scena Prima. Thereafter the acts, but not the scenes, are indicated. The division into scenes is the work of Malone.

I. Prologue. Gower. An English poet, ca. 1330-1408, whose Confessio Amantis contained the story of Pericles. See Sources of the Play, p. 1371. Gower appears at the beginning of each act and at the end of the play, as well as before Act IV, Scene iv, and Act V, Scene ii. He speaks the prologue and the epilogue, and, in the character of Chorus, tells such parts of the tale as cannot be presented on the stage. There is another such prologue, epilogue, and chorus in Henry V, and in other Elizabethan plays outside of Shakespeare: e.g. Marlowe's Doctor Faustus. In Peele's (?) Locrine (ca. 1586) Ate introduces each act with dumb show, and supplies the epilogue. In three plays by Heywood, The Golden Age, The Silver Age, and The Brazen Age, Homer appears as Chorus. The device of a Chorus is apparently one of the features which the Elizabethan drama inherited from the Greek by way of Seneca. But the ancient chorus was present on the stage throughout the play, and its function was to supplement the action by moral observations, or ornament it by purely lyric passages; it was not used, as here, to supply information otherwise inaccessible to the audience.

I. Prologue. 6 ember-eves. The eves of ember days: days in each of the four seasons designated for fasting and prayer. The preceding evenings would be devoted to amusement.

holy-ales. The old editions read Holydayes. Richard Farmer is responsible for the present conjecture, on the analogy of church-ales. The word holy-ales is not known to occur elsewhere, but the editors have followed Farmer in a sentimental desire to preserve the semblance of rhyme, which is the one virtue of this prologue.

I. Prologue. 17, 18. This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat. Twine, at the beginning of the Patterne of Painefull Adventures, writes, 'The most famous and mightie king Antiochus . . . builded the goodly citie of Antiochia in Syria, and called it after his own name, as the chiefest seat of all his dominions.' (Quotations from Twine are according to the text in Shakespeare's Library, Part I. Vol. IV, edited by Hazlitt, London, 1875. Quotations from Gower are according to the edition by G. C. Macaulay, Oxford, 1901.) Antioch, on the river Orontes, was actually founded by Seleucus Nicator in 300 B.C., just after the battle of Ipsus, which assured him control of Asia Minor. It was enlarged by Antiochus Soter (280-261 B.C.), from whom it took its name. To Antiochus the Great (223-187 B.C.), here referred to, it owed only some further additions.

I. Prologue. 20. I tell you what mine authors say. This citation of authority is in imitatin of Gower, e.g.

> 'the grete Antiochus
> Of whom that Antioche tok
> His ferst name, as seith the bok.'
>
> (Confessio Amantis, VIII. 274-276.)
>
> 'This yonge Prince, as seith the bok.'
>
> (Ibid. 574.)
>
> 'And telle as the Croniques sein.'
>
> (Ibid. 1546.)

I. Prologue. 22, 23. Who died and left a female heir, So buxon, blithe, and full of face. Cf. Milton, L'Allegro, 23, 24. 'Filled her with thee, a daughter fair, So buxom, blithe, and debonair.'

I. Prologue. 25, 26. With whom the father liking took, And her to incest did provoke. It may be that this slander on the memory of the great Antiochus originated in the fact that in 196-5 B.C. he married his son Antiochus to his daughter Laodice. This marrying of full brothers and sisters was common enough among the Persian kings, but this is the first instance of the practice among the Greek monarchs of Asia Minor, and it may well have created a scandal.

I. Prologue. 40. As yon grim looks do testify. In the Confessio Amantis, VIII. 363-365, the poet writes that, unless the suitor could guess the riddle,

> 'He scholde in certein lese his hed.
> And thus there weren manye ded,
> Here hevedes stondende [their heads standing] on the gate.'

Evidently Gower here points to the heads of the unlucky suitors, shown on the stage.

I.i.1. Young Prince of Tyre. Tyre and Sidon were, from the earliest times, the chief seaports on the coast of Phœnicia. They were conquered by Alexander the Great, and thereafter were subject to one or other of the Greek dynasties that succeeded him. Tyre passed into the hands of Antiochus the Great for the first time in 221 B.C. For some years it was fought over by him and Ptolemy Philopatris, but, in 199-8 B.C. he got final control of it. It seems to have been governed by a satrap, whose subordinate power may be reflected in the title 'Prince,' which means, here, not the son of a reigning king, but a ruler under the king's authority. It is worth mentioning that in Godfrey of Viterbo's Pantheon, the hero is rex Tyri et Sidonis.

I.i.10, 11. The senate-house of planets all did sit, To knit in her their best perfections. The planets, whose position was supposed to be of prime importance in determining human character and fortune, conspired to make their influence all favorable. Cf. Sidney's Arcadia, Book II (concerning the birth of Pyrocles). 'The senate house of the planets was at no time so set, for the decreeing of perfection in a man.'

I.i.13, 14. Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king Of every virtue gives renown to men! Her mind is the sovereign served by the graces and all the virtues that give renown to men.

I.i.27. Hesperides. The daughters of Atlas, celebrated in Greek mythology, from whose garden Hercules brought back the golden apples which a dragon had guarded. Here, the name is taken to be that of the garden itself. Because of this line, 'Hesperides' appears in the first list of characters as the name of the princess.

I.i.59. Of all say'd yet. This is the Quarto reading. M. Mason conjectures 'In all save that,' meaning that she wishes him well, but does not want him to read the riddle. Mitford conjectures 'Oh false! and yet,' the exclamation addressed to herself because her wishing Pericles well is a betrayal of her father's interest and her own. Steevens, approving Mason's reading, remarks, with point, that one could wish that the only speech the lady makes had been intelligible.

I.i.65-70. The Riddle. Gower's version of the riddle is as follows:

> 'With felonie I am upbore,
> I ete and have it noght forbore
> My modres fleissh, whos housebonde
> My fader forto seche I fonde,
> Which is the Sone ek of my wif.'
>
> (Confessio Amantis, VIII. 405-9)

The Historia Apollonii Regis Tyrii has 'Scelere vehor, maternam carnem vescor, quaero fratrem meum, meae matris filium, uxoris meae virum, nec invenio.' (I am carried away by sin, my mother's flesh I eat, I seek my brother, the son of my mother, the husband of my wife, and find him not.) It must be confessed that the riddle in its present state makes one think very lightly of the ingenuity of the gentlemen whose heads adorned the gate. The belief that young vipers eat their parents goes back to Herodotus III. 190. Cf. Blake, Tiriel,

> 'Serpents, not sons, wreathing around the bones of Tiriel!
> Ye worms of death, feasting upon your aged parents' flesh.'

I.i.97-101. For vice repeated is like the wandering mind, Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself; And yet the end of all is bought thus dear, The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear To stop the air would hurt them. As the wind spreads dust abroad, so the reporter of vice shocks the community. Yet when the wind has passed, people know from what quarter to protect themselves against more dust, and, though the informer may perish for it, people once warned of vice may be on their guard against it.

I.i.104. Kings are earth's gods. As a matter of fact, Antiochus the Great, like all the house of Seleucus, did receive divine honors from his subjects.

I.i.110. Heaven, that I had thy head! No one has yet explained why he did not have his head. If he had made no scruple to execute the previous suitors who had not guessed the riddle, it is astonishing that he hesitated a moment to silence Pericles, whose death was of the utmost importance to him. However, the playwright is not to blame; both Gower and the Gesta Romanorum have this cuious delay of the sentence.

I.i.114-117. Your exposition misinterpreting, We might proceed to cancel off your days; Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise. Since your explanation misinterprets, we might proceed to put you to death, but, judging by your fair appearance, we hope for better things from you, and are inclined to do otherwise.

I.ii. S. d. Enter Pericles with his Lords. This is the reading of the Quarto. Either the Lords must be supposed to go out again at the words Let none disturb us, or Pericles soliloquizes in their presence. After line 34, the direction Enter all the Lords to Pericles is not easily explained if 'his Lords' are supposed to be already on the stage, yet to have them appear and disappear at his first words would be a dramatic absurdity. It is certainly more convenient to follow the directions of Craig, who makes Pericles enter alone, and speak his first words to those without.

I.iii.3. he was a wise fellow. This is a reference to Barnabe Riche's Soldier's Wishe to Britons Welfare, or Captain Skill and Captain Pill, of 1604: 'I will therefore commende the poet Philipides, who being dimaunded by King Lisimachus, what favour he might doe unto him for that he loved him, made this answere to the King, "that your majestie would never impart unto me any of your secrets." '

I.iii.34. But since my landing I have understood. Since is used in a double sense, both temporal and causative. But because after I landed I found out.

I.iv. Tarsus. Tarsus in Cilicia lies about ten miles from the sea of Cyprus, and less than a hundred, in a straight line, from Antioch, though perhaps twice that distance by road. It was a part of Antiochus' empire, and would therefore be no safe refuge for an enemy of his. It is not likely that, at this time, it was under a special satrap, such as the governor here depicted, but it was then, as later, 'no mean city.'

I.iv.8, 9. Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes, But like to groves, being topped they higher rise. If the reading is right, it must mean that, at present, the woes of Tarsus are evident only to the sufferers themselves in the light of their own misfortune, but a comparison with other calamities would make them at once better known and harder to bear. For mischief's Steevens would read mistful; Singer, mistie; Walker, misery's; Kennear, weakness. But mischief commonly means 'calamity.' Topped means 'trimmed at the top,' which makes the trees grow higher.

I.iv.93. the Troyan horse. The huge hollow horse, filled with Greek warriors, which the Trojans unsuspiciously dragged into the town, and which brought about the fall of Troy. The bloody veins are, of course, the soldiers inside, intent on shedding blood. The tale of the Trojan horse is given in Gower, Confessio Amantis, I. 1060-1189.

I.iv.95. Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread. To make bread for your needy citizens. T. S. Graves, in an article entitled On the Date and Significance of Pericles, in Modern Philology for January, 1916, points out that a Venetian ambassador in England is said to have gone 'to a play called Pericles which cost (him) more than 20 crowns.' Among other circumstances bearing on the date, is the fact that late in the year 1606, and early in 1607, the ambassador was attempting to get grain shipped to Venice, to relieve the famine there. It is Mr. Graves' opinoin that the performance of Pericles in question was produced at this time at the expense of the Venetian ambassador, who hoped that the tale of Pericles relieving the distressed citizens would arouse sympathy for his own mission. The arguments of the article are sometimes rather tenuous, but it does furnish an interesting suggestion as to the date of the first performance.

II.i. S. d. Pentapolis. Here understood to be one city, but, in fact, the 'Five Cities' of Cyrene, Apollonia, Berenice, Barca and Asinoë, whose territory comprised the northern part of the district known as Cyrenaica, on the north coast of Africa, to the west of Egypt. In the time of Antiochus, it was a possession of Ptolemy, and had no resident monarch.

II.i. S. d. Enter three Fisherman. The older versions of the story have one fisherman only. The change acquires an added interest from a comparison with the fishermen who appear at the beginning of the Second Act of the Rudens of the Latin dramatist, Plautus. In that case also the scene is on the coast of Cyrenaica, immediately after a great storm in which some of the characters have been shipwrecked. It is another fisherman who draws up out of the sea the wallet containing proof of the heroine's identity, an incident slightly like the netting of the armor in II.i.109. These resemblances may, of course, be accidental, but one is tempted to think that Shakespeare, who was familiar with Plautus (cf. The Comedy of Errors, founded on the Menæchmi, and Hamlet II.ii.394, 395: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light) may have revised this scene, thinking of the similar situation in the Rudens. K. Deighton, in the introduction to Pericles in the Arden Shakespeare, concludes, from considerations of style, that Shakespeare rewrote the scene.

II.i.12. Pilch. The name of an outer garment of skin or leather.

II.i.50-51. This passage certainly means nothing as it stands, and requires somewhat violent emendation before it can mean anything. Steevens conjectures the loss of the last line of Pericles' preceding speech, which he restores as follows:

'The day is rough and thwarts your occupations,'

and then reads:

Second Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? If it be not a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and nobody will look after it.

This has the merit of sense, if not of probability.

II.i.56. tennis-court. The game is, of course, not lawn-tennis, but court-tennis, and Pericles thinks of himself as enclosed on all sides by wind and water. Whatever was the nature of the Greek game of ball, it must be admitted that the phrase is an anachronism in the mouth of a hero of the second century B.C. In Twine's novel, tennis was the game which the king of Pentapolis was playing when Apollonius encountered him. Cf. Sidney's Arcadia, Book V, 'In such a shadow . . . mankind lives . . . that . . . they . . . are like tenis bals tossed by the racket of the higher powers.'

II.i.102. joust and tourney. The episode is transplanted. The joust is, of course, an anachronism. Both Gower and Twine have the tourneying and dancing in connection with the celebration of Pericles' marriage to Thaisa. Cf. Confessio Amantis, VIII. 965. 'Thei jouste first and after daunce.' And Patterne of Painefull Adventures, Chap. VII, 'I may not discourse at large of the liberall challenges made and proclaimed at the tilt, barriers, running at the ring, ioco di can, managing fierce horses, running a foote, and daunsing in armour.' It may have been developed, in the play, in deference to the court of James, which affected mediæval chivalry. The discovery of the armor is an innovantion of our author.

II.i.105, 106. 'Perhaps the meaning may be this: "What a man cannot accomplish he may lawfully endeavor to obtain"; as, for instance, his wife's affections.' (M. Mason.)

II.i.117. brace. Properly armor for the arms. Here apparently extended to mean the whole suit.

II.i.127. target. Properly a light shield. Here the whole suit of armor.

II.ii.14, 15. 'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain The labour of each knight in his device. In the novel, the shields are presented to the princess by the knights' pages, and she passes them to her father, who explains the mottos to her.

II.ii.27. Piu, which is Italian, is an error for the Spanish word Mas.

II.ii.38. touchstone. A flint-like stone on which gold was rubbed and its purity ascertained by the color of the metal rubbed off.

II.ii.58. There is an obvious inversion here. Either we should punctuate, The outward habit by, the inward man, or transpose outward and inward.

II.iii.17. And you're her labour'd scholar. The word scholar suggests that the labor was his, yet the preceding lines imply that art makes the artist, so that labour'd scholar should mean 'carefully wrought creation.'

II.iii.23. Sir, yonder is your place. Cf. Gower, Confessio Amantis, VIII. 711-716:

'At Soupertime natheles
The king amiddes al the pres
Let clepe [called] him up among hem alle,
And bad his Mareschall of halle
To setten him in such degre
That he upon him myhte se.'

II.iii.31. These cates resist me, she but thought upon. Cf. Wilkins' novel: 'Both king and daughter at one instant were so strucke in love with the noblenesse of his woorth that they could not spare so much time to satisfie themselves with the delicacie of their viands for talking of his prayses.'

II.iii.67, 68. And princes not doing so are like to gnats, Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at. When the gnat is killed, one wonders that so small a creature could make so much sound. So it is a matter of wonder that an unworthy prince can make such a stir.

II.iii.87-91. The novel almost exactly reproduces this passage. 'Pericles . . . thus returneth what hee is, that hee was a gentleman of Tyre, his name Pericles, his education beene in Artes and Armes who looking for adventures in the world was by the rough and unconstant Seas most unfortunately bereft both of shippes and men, and after shipwrecke thrown upon that shoare.' This is the first we hear of his looking for adventure; when he left Tyre he was seeking only safety.

II.iii.112, 113. Oh! that's as much as you would be denied Of your fair courtesy. That is as much as to say that you desire not to receive the compliment you deserve.

II.iv.9, 10. A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up Their bodies. Neither Antiochus the Great, nor any other Antiochus of whom history speaks, died in such a manner. Antiochus the Great made his son, Seleucus Philopator, joint king, in 188 B.C., and set out on an expedition to the east from which he never returned.

II.iv.32-34. And be resolv'd he lives to govern us, Or dead, give's cause to mourn his funderal, And leave us to our free election. This is the reading of the Quarto, and is perfectly intelligible without emendation, though the construction is somewhat loose. It means: And we shall be assured that he lives to govern us, or, if he be dead, do you give us opportunity to mourn his funeral and then allow us to elect his successor.

II.v.3, 4. for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake A married life. This little fiction is described by Clarke as 'quite characteristic of the waggish tendency to stratagem shown by the royal old gentleman.'

II.v.10, 11. Diana's livery . . . the eye of Cynthia. Diana is the virgin goddess and also the goddess of the moon, here addressed as Cynthia.

II.v.28. Gower, after his description of the feast of III.iii., has Apollonius exhibit his skill in music (Confessio Amantis, VIII. 777-782):

'He takth the Harpe and in his wise [skill]
He tempreth [tuneth] and of such assise
Singende he harpeth forth withal,
That as a vois celestial
Hem thoghte it souneth in here ere,
As thogh that he an Angel were.'

Variants are given in Wilkins' novel, and in Twine. Some such scene must have been in the playwright's mind, though the play gives no hint of it. Sykes argues from this that the play is founded on the novel (cf. Authorship of the Play, p. 1372), but it is quite as possible that the playwright was following Gower or Twine as that he was following the Wilkins novel. In any case he thought of the incident as part of the plot, and it may have been written into the play and later rejected.

II.v.97. 'I cannot dismiss the foregoing scene, till I have expressed the most supreme contempt of it. Such another gross, nonsensical dialogue would be sought for in vain among the earliest and rudest efforts of the British theatre. It is impossible not to wish that the Knights had horsewhipped Simonides and that Pericles had kicked him off the stage.' (Steevens.)

III. Gower 15-19. By many a dern and painful perch, Of Pericles the careful search By the four opposing coigns, Which the world together joins, Is made with all due diligence. The careful search for Pericles is made with all due diligence through the four corners of the world by many a wild and painful journey. A perch is literally a measure of land, five yards and a half in length.

III. Gower 55-57. action may Conveniently the rest convey, Which might not what by me is told. Action, which could not well convey what I have told, may conveniently convey the rest.

III.i. The critics are generally agreed that Shakespeare's hand first appears in this scene, and that it is mostly, if not entirely, his. Cf. the storm in King Lear III.ii., and at the beginning of The Tempest. He may, however, have retouched passages previous to this.

III.i.1. rebuke these surges. Cf. Matt. 9. 26, 'Then he arose and rebuked the winds and the sea, and there was a great calm.'

III.i.27-29. We here below, Recall not what we give, and therein may Vie honour with you. We mortals do not take back what we give, and, in this respect, may contend for honor with the gods.

III.i.52. Sir, your queen must overboard. Many interesting instances of this common superstition have been discovered, the earliest, apparently, being a passage in Plutarch, who describes how Cato's ship was storm-tossed on his return from Thrace because he refused the pleas of his friends to put the ashes of his brother in another vessel.

III.ii. Ephesus. A town in Lydia on the east coast of the Mediterranean. The fact that it is some six hundred miles from Tyre, and three hundred to the north, is sufficient evidence of the violence of the storm. It was a part of the empire of Antiochus.

III.ii.40. my aid. A reference to the pupil, Machaon, whom Twine makes responsible for Thaisa's recovery.

III.ii.110. sets. Shakespeare frequently employs the old northern English plural ending in -s.

III.ii.117. twice rich. 'Because it is blessed with the sight not only of the cases with golden fringes, but of the jewels that they contain.' (Sykes.) Cf. Arcadia, Book III, 'Her fair lids then hiding her fairer eyes, seemed unto him sweet boxes of mother of pearl, rich in themselves but containing in them far richer jewels.'

III.ii.120, 121. O dear Diana! Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this? The recovery of Thaisa is closely copied from Gower, Confessio Amantis, VIII. 1192-1207:

'Thei leide hire on a couche softe,
And with a scheete warmed ofte
Hire colde brest began to hete,
Hire herte also to flacke and bete.
This Maister hath hire every joignt
With certein oile and balsme enoignt,
And putte a liquour in hire mouth
Which is to fewe clerkes couth, [known]
So that sche coevereth ate laste:
And ferst hire yhen up sche caste,
And whan sche more of strengthe cawhte,
Hire armes bothe forth sche strawhte,
Hield up hire hond and pitously
Sche spak and seide, "Ha, wher am I?
Where is my lord, what world is this?" '

III.iii.6-9. The reading of the First Quarto is: Your shakes of fortune, though they hant you mortally Yet glance full wonderingly on us. The Second changes hant to haunt. This must mean: Your changes of fortune, following you with a fatal persistence, affect us remarkably, also. But this use of wonderingly is strange, and it seems better to follow Steevens in reading wanderingly in the sense of wandering from the mark. Steevens would also read shafts for shakes, and hurt for hant, making a consistent figure.

III.iv.9. We must suppose that the good queen's memory, which had been so shaken that she could not recall the birth of her daughter, had also lost the recollection of her husband's rank and destination. Otherwise, it is hard to see why she did not follow him to Tyre.

III.iv.10. vestal livery. Properly the garb of the virgins who served in the temple of Vesta, goddess of the hearth. Here merely the garb of a priestess of the virgin goddess, Diana.

IV. Gower 32. the dove of Paphos. Paphos, a town in Cyprus, was a seat of the worship of Venus, who was said to have risen from the waves there. Doves were sacred to her as the goddess of beauty.

IV. Gower 34, 35. All praises which are paid as debts And not as given. All praise her as though they owe the praise, not as though they were bestowing it.

IV. Gower 47-50. Only I carried winged time Post on the lame feet of my rime Which never could I so convey Unless your thoughts went on my way. I only conveyed briefly in my verse the idea of the time elapsed, which you would not have understood without my guidance.

IV.i.105. Valdes. Malone remarked that the name may probably have been taken from Don Pedro de Valdes, who was an admiral in the Spanish Armada, and, being captured by Drake in 1588, was imprisoned at Dartmouth.

IV.ii. Mitylene. The chief town of Lesbos, in the Ægean Sea. It revolted from Antiochus and joined the Romans, who had just begun to concern themselves with Asiatic politics.

IV.ii.30. hatched. Closed with a hatch or half door with an open space above, taken as a characteristic of brothels by former editors. But, surely, the context demands a reputable dwelling house.

IV.ii. S. d. Enter Boult, with the Pirates and Marina. Seneca Rhetor (Floruit 15 A.D.) in one of his illustrative law cases (Controversiæ I. 2) gives proof either that this part of the story has an ancient source, or that the situation was not unique, by introducing a virgin, captured by pirates and sold to a procurer.

IV.iii. It is interesting to note the difference between this version and that of Twine in the Patterne of Painefull Adventures, Chapter XII. 'But Stranguilio himselfe consented not to this treason, but so soone as hee heard of the foule mischaunce, beeing as it were a mopte [bewildered], and mated with heauinesse and griefe, he clad himselfe in mourning aray, and lamented that wofull case, saying, Alas, in what a mischiefe am I wrapped? what might I doe, or say herein?—Then casting his eies vp towards heauen, O God said hee, thou knowest that I am innocent from the bloud of silly [innocent] Tharsia, which thou hast to require at Dionisiades handes: and therewithall he looked towards his wife, saying: Thou wicked woman, tell me, how hast thou made away prince Apollonius daughter? thou that liuest both to the slaunder of God, and man? Dionisiades answered in manie wordes euermore excusing herselfe, and, moderating the wrath of Stranguilio, shee counterfeited a fained sorrowe by attiring her selfe and her daughter in mourning apparell.' It will be seen that Cleon and Dionyza differ from Stranguilio and Dionysiades in proportion as they resemble Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. There is something of Lady Macbeth in Dionyza in the scene with Leonine, too. We have excellent evidence, then, for concluding that this is a scene which Shakespeare rewrote from a less elaborate and less dramatic original.

IV.iii.53. harpy. A mythical, malignant fowl with a human face. Dionyza's face deceives the victims whom she destroys with her talons.

IV.iii.56, 57. You are like one that superstitiously Do swear to the gods that winter kills the flies. In fear of the gods you swear that the killing was not of your doing and was beyond your control.

V.i. In performance of 1854 in which Phelps took the part of Pericles, this recognition scene is the only one which called forth the enthusiasm of John Oxenham, who wrote, in the Times, 'This scene was the only opportunity for acting throughout the piece, and Mr. Phelps availed himself of it most felicitously.'

V.i.39, 40. Till the disaster that, one mortal night, Drove him to this. Surely, this is meant to refer to the night when his wife died and his daughter was born.

But it was not that night, but the discovery of his daughter's supposed death that 'drove him to this.' The Quartos read wight for night.

V.i.49, 50. And make a battery through his deafen'd parts Which now are midway stopp'd. And force an entrance to his mind through his ears which are now shut.

V.i. S. d. The Song. Gower merely records the fact that she sang 'lich an angele,' but Twine gives the following song:

'Among the harlots foule I walke,
yet harlot none am I:
The Rose amongst the Thorns grows,
and is not hurt thereby.
The thiefe that stole me, sure I thinke,
is slaine before this time,
A bawd me bought, yet am I not defilde by fleshly crime.
Were nothing pleasanter to me,
than parents mine to know:
I am the issue of a king,
my bloud from kings doth flow.
I hope that God will mend my state,
and send a better day.
Leaue off your teares, plucke vp your heart,
and banish care away.
Shew gladnesse in your countenance,
cast vp your cheerfull eyes:
That God remaines that once of nought created earth and skies.
He will not let in care and thought you still to liue, and all for nought.'

It is impossible to tell how much like this was the song in the play, but it is attractive to think of an incidental lyric by Shakespeare, like Ariel's songs in The Tempest, on the theme 'The rose amongst the thorns grows and is not hurt thereby.' Druing the song, the others withdraw a little.

V.i.151, 152. If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part Of my endurance. If what thou hast endured prove, on consideration, the thousandth part of what I have.

V.i.242. th' art my child. The rediscovery of lost children is a very common feature of the romantic dramas of the Greek New Comedy.

V.i.267-269. Malone suggests that these lines should be given to Marina, and that companion friend should be read, referring to the companion maid of line 85. But it is possible that the whole speech belongs to Helicanus.

V.i.S. d. Diana. This appearance of a god in a dream is characteristic, not of ancient drama, but of ancient romance. In Heliodorus, Æthiopica, III. ii., Apollo and Diana appear to the hero, Calasiris, in a vision and tell him to return to his own country. In Longus, Daphnis and Chloe, IV. 34, Dionysophanes dreams that the Nymphs tell him to exhibit the tokens of Chloe before the people of Mitylene, which leads to the discovery of her identity.

V.i.292. I have another suit. As Pericles surmises, he is about to ask for Marina's hand. In Twine's version, as soon as the governor finds that she is of royal parentage, 'using the benefite of the time,' he kneels to Apollonius without more ado, and rises his prospective son-in-law. In Gower, the idea does not seem to have occurred to him until the celebrations attending Apollonius' entry into Mitylene.

V.iii. S. d. The Temple of Diana at Ephesus. The first shrine on this location goes back to the eighth centure B.C. and stood until the third century A.D. For its importance, cf. Acts 19. 27. It would make a fine scene for the climax of a pagan romance.

V.iii.15. You are, you are—O royal Pericles! Compare the very similar ending of The Comedy of Errors, where the Abbess rediscovers the husband from whom she has been parted at sea.

The text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. The stage directions are those of the First Quarto of 1609, necessary additional words being inserted in square brackets.

2. The punctuation has been altered in many places, and the following changes in spelling have been made: Troyan (Trojan), iwis (I wis), spoken (speken), wanion (wannion), porpoise (porpus), joust (just), curst (crus'd), Oh (O), murtherer (murderer), anything (any thing), forever (for ever), anyone (any one), wandlike-straight (wand-like straight), godlike (god-like), seafarer (sea-farer).

3. The following alterations of the text have been made after collation with the First Quarto, readings of the present edition preceding and those of Craig following the colon. Unless otherwise specified, the readings of this text are those of the First Quarto. F stands for the Third Folio.

I.i.17 rac'd (Q racte): raz'd
I.i.20 have: hath
I.i.38 Here they: They here
I.i.83 man: men
I.i.115 off (F): of
I.ii.106 grieve for them: grieve them
II. Gower 36 escapen'd: escapen
II.i.6 my: me
II.i.73 pray you: pray
II.i.74 forbid 't: forbid
II.i.74 And I: I
II.i.77 all day: holidays
II.i.119 it (Malone): 't
II.i.122 have given: they have given
II.i.124 father gave in his: father's gift in 's
II.i.132 fortune's: fortunes
II.i.139 waters: water
II.i.141 them: it
II.i.142 believe 't: believe it
II.i.144 rupture: rapture
II.i.145 building: biding
II.ii.10 It's: 'Tis
II.ii.34 Qui: Quod
II.ii.37 an: a
II.ii.48 fortunes: fortune
II.iii.12 my: by
II.iii.27 shall: do
II.iii.107 Here's: Here is
II.iii.108 have heard: have often heard
II.iv.14 justice: just
II.iv.26 your: the
II.iv.34 leave: leaves
II.iv.39 know: know'st
II.iv.42 Try: For
II.v.19 nay, how: how
II.v.38 Sir, my daughter: My daughter, sir
II.v.86 I'll: I will
II.v.93 my: or
II.v.97 And then: Then
III. Gower 8 Are: E'er
III. Gower 60 seas-toss'd: sea-tost
III.i.1 The: Then
III.i.28 Vie (Steevens): Use
III.i.50 and: an
III.ii.12 Good morrow: Good morrow, sir
III.ii.41 dwells: dwell
III.ii.53 never: ne'er decay
III.ii.55 What's: What is
III.ii.57 toss up: toss
III.ii.66 bottomed: bitumed
III.ii.70 Wrench: Come, wrench
III.ii.78 in: i'
III.ii.80 drives: drive
III.ii.92 a fire: fire
III.ii.93 my: the
III.ii.96 o'erpress'd: overpress'd
III.ii.98 appliance: appliances
III.ii.110 sets: set
III.ii.117 Doth: Do
III.ii.124 my gentle: gentle
III.iii.6 shakes: shafts, haunt (2d Q): hurt
III.iii.17 leaving: and leave
IV. Gower 23 needle: neeld
IV. Gower 47 carried: carry
IV.i.18 doth: do

IV.i.20 is a: is like a
IV.ii.42 farther: further
IV.ii.94 Ay, he; he: Ay; he
IV.iii.57 Do: Doth
IV.iv.G. 1 long: longest
IV.iv.25 deeds: deed
V.i.9 there is: there's
V.i.10 I pray: I pray ye, him: them
V.i.15 you: you, sir
V.i.49 parts: ports
V.i.64 inflict: affflict
V.i.69 here's: here is
V.i.71 present: presence
V.i.112 You're: You are
V.i.130 If I should: Should I
V.i.133 lookest: look'st
V.i.135 I will believe: I believe
V.i.189 daughter: daughter's
V.i.192 You: You'll, scorn: scorn to
V.i.203 imposture: imposter
V.i.213 Here's: Here is
V.i.236 The: Thou 'rt, like: life
V.i.242 th 'art: thou art
V.i.255 dote: doubt
V.i.263 Music, my lord? I hear: My lord I hear Music
V.i.277 Or perform: Perform
V.ii.21 overboard: o'erboard
V.ii.24 overjoy'd: o'erjoyed
V.ii.37 spake: speak
V.ii.48 sports: sport
V.ii.82 and: I
V.ii.113 punish: punish them
V.ii.115 has: hath

The Tragedy of Cymbeline

Edited by
SAMUEL B. HEMINGWAY

Dramatis Personae

CYMBELINE, King of Britain
CLOTEN, Son to the Queen by a former Husband
POSTHUMUS LEONATUS, a Gentleman, Husband to Imogen
BELARIUS, a banished Lord, disguised under the name of Morgan
GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS } Sons to Cymbeline, disguised under the names of Polydore and Cadwal, supposed Sons to Morgan
PHILARIO, Friend to Posthumus, IACHIMO, Friend to Philario } Italians
A FRENCH GENTLEMAN, Friend to Philario
CAIUS LUCIUS, General of the Roman Forces
A ROMAN CAPTAIN
TWO BRITISH CAPTAINS
PISANIO, Servant to Posthumus
CORNELIUS, a Physician
TWO LORDS OF CYMBELINE'S COURT
TWO GENTLEMEN OF THE SAME
TWO GAOLERS

QUEEN, Wife to Cymbeline
IMOGEN, Daughter to Cymbeline by a former Queen
HELEN, a Lady attending on Imogen

LORDS, LADIES, ROMAN SENATORS, TRIBUNES, A DUTCH GENTLEMAN, A SPANISH GENTLEMAN, A SOOTHSAYER, MUSICIANS, OFFICERS, CAPTAINS, SOLDIERS, MESSENGERS, AND OTHER ATTENDANTS
APPARITIONS

SCENE—Sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Rome.

The Tragedy of Cymbeline

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The name Cymbeline, and the political setting of the play, Shakespeare took from Holinshed's Chronicles of England. The wager-story, which forms the basis of the Imogen plot, is a familiar one in mediæval literature; Shakespeare seems to have been chiefly indebted for this story to the ninth novel of the second day in Boccaccio's Decameron. It is hardly likely that he was familiar with an English version of this story, published possibly in 1603 but probably not before 1620, called Westward for Smelts. Other versions of the story which Shakespeare may, or may not, have known in some sixteenth century English form, are the thirteenth century French romances, King Florus and Fair Jehane,[1] Roman de la Violette, and Roman del conte de Poitiers; a fourteenth century French mystery play; as well as scattered German, Scandinavian, and Gaelic versions. An English play printed in 1589, called The Rare Triumphs of Love and Fortune, may have suggested some names, characters, and incident for Cymbeline, The Winter's Tale, and The Tempest. Beaumont and Fletcher's Philaster resembles Cymbeline in many details; the two plays were written at about the same time, and it is impossible to state definitely which influenced the other. Both plays indicate that a new type of drama was becoming fashionable toward the end of the first decade of the seventeenth century; it is quite conceivable that they were written contemporaneously and in friendly rivalry. The story of Belarius and the kidnapped princes, as well as the final solution of the complicated plot, seems to have been Shakespeare's own invention.[2]

Cimbeline, or Kymbeline, was, according to Holinshed, a descendant of King Lear, and reigned in Britain from 33 B.C. to 2 A.D. He had been educated in Rome and 'knighted' by Cæsar Augustus. His sons were Guiderius and Arviragus. 'Our histories do affirme' that Cymbeline, and his father Tanantius (cf. Cymbeline I.i.36) before him, lived at peace with the Romans, 'and continuallie to them paied the tributes which the Britaines had couenanted with Julius Cæsar to paie, yet we find in the Romane writers that after Julius Cæsar's death . . . the Britaines refused to paie that tribute: whereat Augustus, being otherwise occupied, was content to winke; howbeit . . . at length . . . Augustus made prouision to passe with an armie ouer into Britaine, & was come forward vpon his iournie into Gallia Celtica. . . . But here receiuing aduertisements that the Pannonians . . . and the Dalmations . . . had rebelled (cf. Cymbeline III.i.75–77), he thought it best first to subdue those rebells neere home.' Holinshed is at a loss to know whether to believe 'our histories' or 'the Romane writers,' but he records presently the arrival of an ambassador from Augustus at the court of Cymbeline, who came to bring to the British king the thanks of the emporer 'for that he had kept his allegiance toward the Romane empire.' Later, Guiderius, after his accession, refused to pay a yearly tribute of three thousand crowns. Shakespeare, by attributing this refusal to Cymbeline, hoped to heighten the dramatic and emotional appeal of this singularly mild and uneventful portion of Holinshed's Chronicle.

Posthumus's account of the means whereby the British gained the victory (V.iii.5–62) is taken from Holinshed's Chronicles of Scotland, which describe the sudden defeat of the Danes by the Scots, in the year 976, through the intervention of a husbandman named Hay, and his two sons.

The plot of Boccaccio's novel may be summarized as follows: Bernabo Lomellino of Genoa, stopping at an inn in Paris, boasts of his wife's virtue and devotion. Ambrogiuolo of Piacenza sneers at woman's virtue, and proves by philosophical argument that all women must be unchaste. Man is not chaste; woman is more frail than man; ergo! Entreaty, flattery, and gifts will win any woman. Bernabo repudiates philosophical argument and reaffirms his faith in his wife, Ginevra. The discussion waxes hot. Bernabo, in his anger, wagers his head against a thousand florins that Ambrogiuolo could not tempt Ginevra to sin. Ambrogiuolo accepts the wager, substituting a sum of money for Bernabo's head, and starts for Genoa. Within three months he must return with indisputable proofs of his triumph over Ginevra's virtue. Just as he is despairing of success he meets a poor woman, to whom Ginevra has been kind, and bribes her to send him into Ginevra's chamber, in her chest, on the pretence that she is about to take a journey and wishes to leave her belongings in Ginevra's care. Night comes; he emerges from the chest, notes the situation of the room, its ornaments and pictures, and approaching the bed he admires the lady's beauty and perceives the mole on her left breast. For further evidence he removes a gown, a ring, and a girdle. Bernabo is not moved by the description of the room, nor by the articles of apparel, but is 'struck to the very heart' when Ambrogiuolo reveals his knowledge of the mole. He sets out for home 'most cruelly incensed against his wife,' and sends ahead a servant with a letter asking Ginevra to meet him on the way. The servant is instructed to murder her when he reaches 'a fit place.' Ginevra persuades the servant to let her escape, disguised as a page, and to carry word to his lord that she is dead. As page to a Catalonian lord she sails for foreign lands, and on her journeys encounters Ambrogiuolo and hears him tell, as a jest, the story of his wager. She arranges to have her husband brought over seas to listen as Ambrogiuolo tells this tale to the Sultan. The truth is then revealed, and after the Sultan has condemend Ambrogiuolo to be smeared with honey and eaten by wasps,[3] they all sit down to a sumptuous banquet. It is only in the early part of the tale, the long-drawn-out angry debate which provides some possible motivation for the story, that Boccaccio's plot surpasses Shakespeare's.

1 English translation in Aucassin and Nicolette and Other Mediæval Romances, Everyman's Library Edition, E. P. Dutton.

2 For more detailed discussion of these points see Thorndike: Influence of Beaumont and Fletcher on Shakespeare, Worcester, Massachusetts, 1901, and Dowden: Cymbeline, in The Arden Shakespeare, third edition, London, 1918.

3 This episode of the honey and the wasps, not used by Shakespeare in Cymbeline, is probably the source of the passage in The Winter's Tale (IV. iv. 846 ff.) in which Autolycus threatens the Clown with a similar fate.

History of the Play

Cymbeline was first printed in 1623, at the end of the First Folio, among the tragedies, and under the title, The Tragedie of Cymbeline. The text was taken from a prompt-book copy, and was divided into acts and scenes; but it was so carelessly printed that it is full of obscure and perplexing readings. In this play Shakespeare seems to have had the assistance of a coadjutor, who was responsible for the Vision of Posthumus in Act V, which is not an integral part of the action, and perhaps for portions of the Belarios plot.

The play was probably first produced in 1610; in style, diction, and versification it resembles the two romantic comedies, The Winter's Tale and The Tempest, which appeared in 1610 and 1611, respectively. Dr. Simon Forman, astrologer, quack, and theatre-goer, who in his Book of Plays kept a record of the plays he attended, gives a synopsis of the plot of 'Cimbalin' in an undated entry which follows an entry dated May 15, 1611, recording a performance of 'The Winter's Talle at the glob.' On January 1, 1633/4, 'Cymbeline was acted at court by the King's players. Well likte by the Kinge.'[4]

Irreverent hands were laid upon Cymbeline in 1682 by Tom Durfey, who attempted to fashion it to the taste of his generation under the title, The Injured Princess or The Fatal Wager. The names of the characters are changed—Imogen becomes Eugenia, Posthumus is Ursaces, and Iachimo is Shatillion; new characters are introduced, among them Clarina, who is Eugenia's confidante and daughter of Pisanio, and a drunken friend of Cloten's named Iachimo. Pisanio believes in Imogen's guilt; the lascivious Cloten and his ribald friend kidnap Clarina with evil intent; there is little left of Shakespeare's play but the outline of the plot. This perversion of Cymbeline held the stage until 1720, when Shakespeare's play was produced at the new Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre.

But in 1755 another attempt was made, by Charles Marsh, to refashion the 'old and crude' play; and in 1759 still another. This time the culprit was the Professor of Poetry at Oxford, William Hawkins, M.A., who possessed 'so thorough a veneration for the great Father of the English stage' that he 'retained, in many places, the very language of the original author.' Fortunately 'unprecedented difficulties and discouragements in the theatre' prevented a long run at Covent Garden Theatre. Two years later, in 1761, Garrick made the first of his many appearances as Posthumus in Shakespeare's play. The play ran for sixteen nights, and the Dramatic Censor stated that Garrick's astonishing talents were never more happily exerted. In 1767 and 1770 Mrs. Barry played Imogen to Garrick's Posthumus. John Philip Kemble first played Posthumus in 1785; Mrs. Siddons first appeared as Imogen in 1787; and Charles Kemble, who had appeared as Polydore in 1812 played Posthumus in 1825. Macready played Posthumus in 1818. From the time of Garrick on, Cymbeline seems to have been a favorite play for one-night, benefit performances. Helen Faucit was one of the great Imogens of the middle of the nineteenth century, and Ellen Terry's 'last great part on the Lyceum stage' was the rôle of Imogen in Henry Irving's gorgeous production in 1896. Irving chose to play the part of Iachimo, and seems to have made an indifferent success in the rôle. Popular enthusiasm was devoted to Miss Terry's Imogen and to the setting by Alma Tadema.

While Garrick and the Kembles were using Cymbeline almost yearly in England, the new and struggling theatres in the American colonies and states followed their illustrious example. From 1767 to 1793 eight revivals of Cymbeline occurred along our Atlantic seaboard, three in New York, two in Philadelphia, one in Boston, one in Annapolis, and one in Charleston, South Carolina. One hundred years later Cymbeline again became popular on the American stage. Mary Shaw Hamblin, who died in 1873, was a famous Imogen in the 1860s. Adelaide Neilson in the 1870s, Modjeska in the 1880s, and Margaret Mather in the 1890s kept the play familiar to American audiences. In 1906 Viola Allen again revived it, and in 1923 Edward H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe added it to their repertoire.[5]

4 Dramatic Records of Sir Henry Herbert, Master of the Revels 1623-1673, edited by J. Q. Adams, Yale University Press, 1917.

5 For details concerning the various stage adaptations of the play see Fr. Lücke, Über Bearbeitungen von Shakespeares 'Cymbeline' (Rostock diss., 1909).

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Britain. The Garden of Cymbeline's Palace]
Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns: our bloods
No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.
2. Gent. But what's the matter?
1. Gent. His daughter, and the heir of 's kingdom, whom
He purpos'd to his wife's sole son,—a widow
That late he married,—hath referr'd herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded;
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all
Is outward sorrow, though I think the king
Be touch'd at very heart.
2. Gent. None but the king?
1. Gent. He that hath lost her too; so is the queen,
That most desir'd the match; but not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.
2. Gent. And why so?
1. Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing
Too bad for bad report; and he that hath her,—
I mean that married her, alack, good man!
And therefore banish'd—is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think
So fair an outward and such stuff within
Endows a man but he.
2. Gent. You speak him far.
1. Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself,
Crush him together rather than unfold
His measure duly.
2. Gent. What's his name and birth?
1. Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: his father
Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour
Against the Romans with Cassibelan,
But had his titles by Tenantius whom
He serv'd with glory and admir'd success,
So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus;
And had, besides the gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who in the wars o' the time
Died with their swords in hand; for which their father—
Then old and fond of issue—took such sorrow
That he quit being, and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus Leonatus;
Breeds him and makes him of his bedchamber;
Puts to him all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as 'twas minister'd,
And in 's spring became a harvest; liv'd in court,—
Which rare it is to do,—most prais'd, most lov'd;
A sample to the youngest, to the more mature
A glass that feated them, and to the graver
A child that guided dotards; to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd, her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.
2. Gent. I honour him,
Even out of your report. But pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?
1. Gent. His only child.
He had two sons,—if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it,—the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge
Which way they went.
2. Gent. How long is this ago?
1. Gent. Some twenty years.
2. Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd,
So slackly guarded, and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!
1. Gent. Howsoe'er 'tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.
2. Gent. I do well believe you.
1. Gent. We must forbear. Here comes the gentleman,
The queen, and princess. Exeunt.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur'd you shall not find me, daughter,
After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you; you're my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate; marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.
Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.
Queen. You know the peril:
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections, though the king
Hath charg'd you should not speak together. Exit.
Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy. How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds! My dearst husband,
I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing,—
Always reserv'd my holy duty,—what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world

1–3 our bloods . . . king: cf. n. 3 Still: continually 6 purpos'd: intended to give in marriage 7 referr'd: committed 15 to the bent: according to the inclination 25 him . . . compare: him chosen for comparison 28 speak him far: go far in sounding his praise 29 extend him within himself: cf. n. 34 join his honour: honorably join 35, 36 Cf. n. 38 sur-addition: surname 48 time: *years

54 feated: formed 56 her own price: what she is willing to pay in suffering 58 election: choice 66 swathing: swaddling 67 guess in knowledge: intelligent guess 71 convey'd: stolen 78 forbear: withdraw S.d. cf. n. 81 After the slander: in accord with the ill repute 88 lean'd: should submit 89 inform: teach 93 fetch a turn: take a walk 97 fine: delicately 99 something: somewhat nothing: in no way 100 Always . . . duty: cf. n.

That I may see again.
Post. My queen! my mistress!
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.
My residence in Rome at one Philario's,
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter; thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though ink be made of gall.

Enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you;
If the king come, I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet I'll move him
To walk this way. I never do him wrong
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]
Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!
Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's; take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.
Post. How! how! another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And cere up my embracements from a next
With bands of death!—Remain, remain thou here
[Putting on the ring.]
While sense can keep it on! And, sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles
I still win of you; for my sake wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.
[Putting a bracelet on her arm.]
Imo. O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Post. Alack! the king!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!
If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away!
Thou 'rt poison to my blood.
Post. [To Imogen] The gods protect you
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. Exit.
Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.
Cym. O disloyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st
A year's age on me.
Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation;
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.
Cym. Past grace? obedience?
Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.
Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!
Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle
And did avoid a puttock.
Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; wouldst have made my throne
A seat for baseness.
Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.
Cym. O thou vile one!
Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus:
You bred him as my playfellow, and he is
A man worth any woman, overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.
Cym. What! art thou mad?
Imo. Almost, sir; heaven restore me! Would I were
A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!
Cym. Thou foolish thing!

Enter Queen.

They were again together: you have done
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.
Queen. Beseech your patience. Peace!
Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself some comfort
Out of your best advice.
Cym. Nay, let her languish,
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly! Exit [Cymbeline with Lords].
Queen. Fie! you must give way.

Enter Pisanio.

Here is your servant. How now, sir! What news?
Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.
Queen. Ha!
No harm, I trust, is done?
Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger; they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.
Queen. I am very glad on 't.
Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.
To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together,
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer-back. Why came you from your master?
Pis. On his command: he would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven; left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When 't pleas'd you to employ me.
Queen. This hath been

108 tenderness: sensitiveness 115 Though ... gall; cf. n. 119–121 I never ... offences; cf. n. 127 term: period of time 124 loathness: reluctance 133, 134 cere up ... death; cf. n. 142 see: meet 144 avoid: depart 145 fraught: burden (as of a ship) 149 remainders: those who remain

158 a touch more rare: a more precious emotion 164 puttock: kite 173, 174 overbuys me ... pays; cf. n. 177 neat-herd's: cowherd's 186 advice: consideration 206 bring: escort

Your faithful servant; I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.
Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk awhile.
Imo. [To Pisanio.] About some half-hour hence,
I pray you, speak with me. You shall at least
Go see my lord aboard; for this time leave me. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[The Same]
Enter Cloten and two Lords.

1. Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.
Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
Have I hurt him?
2. Lord. [Aside.] No faith; not so much as his patience.
1. Lord. Hurt him! his body's a passable carcass if he be not hurt; it is a throughfare for steel if it be not hurt.
2. Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.
Clo. The villain would not stand me.
2. Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.
1. Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground.
2. Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!
Clo. I would they had not come between us.
2. Lord. [Aside.] So would I; till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.
Clo. And that she should love this fellow and refuse me!
2. Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.
1. Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.
2. Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.
Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!
2. Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.
Clo. You'll go with us?
1. Lord. I'll attend your lordship.
Clo. Nay, come, let's go togeher.
2. Lord. Well, my lord. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[The same]
Enter Imogen and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores of the haven,
And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost,
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?
Pis. It was his queen, his queen!
Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?
Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.
Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I!
And that was all?
Pis. No, madam; for so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of 's mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.
Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left
To after-eye him.
Pis. Madam, so I did.
Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but
To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle,
Nay, follow'd him till he had melted from
The smallness of a gnat to air, and then
Have turn'd mine eye, and wept. But, good Pisanio,
When shall we hear from him?
Pis. Be assur'd, madam,
With his next vantage.
Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say; ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours
Such thoughts and such, or I could make him swear
The shes of Italy should not betray
Mine interest and his honour, or have charg'd him,
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could
Give him that parting kiss which I had set
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And like the tyrannous breathing of the north
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.
Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd.
I will attend the queen.
Pis. Madam, I shall. Exeunt.

Scene Fourth

[Rome. A Room in Philario's House]
Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain; he was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of; but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue

213 walk: withdraw 1 shift: change 2 reek: steam 7 passable: affording passage 8 throughfare: thoroughfare 9, 10 Cf. n. 11 stand: withstand 23 a good sign: fair to look at 25, 26 Cf. n. 4 As offer'd mercy is; cf. n.

19 left: ceased 20 after-eye: gaze after 22 Cf. n. 23, 24 diminution . . . space: diminution due to space 30 vantage: opportunity 38 encounter: meet orisons: prayers 40–43 Cf. n. 41 charming: having in them a charm to preserve him 2 crescent note: growing reputation 4 admiration: wonder of his endowments had been tabled by his side and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter,—wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own,—words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then, his banishment.

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. Here comes the Briton: let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality.

Enter Posthumus.

I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine; how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences; but, upon my mended judgment,—if I offend not to say it is mended,—my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think. 'Twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken; the one may be sold, or given; or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift; the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours, but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen, too; so your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation I should get ground of your fair mistress, make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something; but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation; and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserves more,—a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly; let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend

5 tabled: set down in a list 7 furnished: equipped 8 makes: establishes 10 Cf. n. 12, 13 words him . . . matter; cf. n. 15–17 the approbation . . . extend him: cf. n. 18, 19 without less quality: with so little rank 23 suits: accords 24 knowing: experience 27 story: tell the story of 29 known together: known each other 31 ever to pay: ever under obligation to pay 33 atone: reconcile 35 importance: matter 37–38 rather . . . experiences; cf. n. 42 confounded: destroyed 45, 46 which . . . report; cf. n. 48 country mistresses: ladies of our own countries 49 upon . . . affirmation; cf. n. 50 constant-qualified: endowed with constancy 51 attemptable: liable to seduction

57 abate: depreciate 59 hand-in-hand: equal 65 rated her: estimated her value 67 enjoys: possesses 71 or . . . or: either . . . or 78 brace: pair 79 casual: subject to chance 83 convince: conquer 85 fear not: fear not for 86 leave here: stop at this point 88 familiar at first: friends from the beginning 93 moiety: half 98 abused: deceived persuasion: belief 107 approbation: confirmation

me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage, against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger: 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of your speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between 's: my mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking; I dare you to this match. Here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours; provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced,—you not making it appear otherwise,— for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve. I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. Exeunt.

Scene Fifth

[Britain. Cymbeline's Palace]
Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers:
Make haste; who has the note of them?

1. Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch. Exeunt Ladies.
Now, Master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay; here they are, madam: [Presenting a small box.]
But I beseech your Grace, without offence,—
My conscience bids me ask,—wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,
Which are the movers of a languishing death,
But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a question: have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how
To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so
That our great king himself doth woo me oft
For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,—
Unless thou think'st me devilish,—is 't not meet
That I did amplify my judgment in
Other conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as
We count not worth the hanging,—but none human,—
To try the vigour of them and apply
Allayments to their act, and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your heart;
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.

Enter Pisanio.

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him
Will I first work: he's for his master,
And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio!
Doctor, your service for this time is ended;
Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To Pisanio] Hark thee, a word.

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has
Strange lingering poisons; I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malice with
A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has
Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs,
Then afterward up higher; but there is
No danger in what show of death it makes,
More than the locking-up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, sayst thou? Dost thou think in time
She will not quench, and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? Do thou work:
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son,
I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then
As great as is thy master; greater, for
His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name
Is at last gasp; return he cannot, nor
Continue where he is; to shift his being
Is to exchange one misery with another,

115 wage: wager 117 a friend; cf. n. 121 custom . . . tongue: manner of speech 123 undergo: maintain 129 lay: wager 135–136 provided . . . entertainment; cf. n. 137 articles: written agreements 146 starve: die of cold 3 note of: directions concerning

15 learn'd: taught 21 conclusions: experiments 24 vigour: power 31 content thee: do not worry 45 prove: test 47 show: appearance 50 effect: outward manifestation 56 quench: cool down 63 shift . . . being: change . . . abode

And every day that comes comes to decay
A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect,
To be depender on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,
So much as but to prop him?
[The Queen drops the box; Pisanio takes it up.]
Thou tak'st up
Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour:
It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death; I do not know
What is more cordial: nay, I prithee, take it;
It is an earnest of a further good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do 't as from thyself.
Think what a change thou chancest on, but think
Thou hast thy mistress still, to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king
To any shape of thy preferment such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women;
Think on my words. Exit Pisanio.
A sly and constant knave,
Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master,
And the remembrancer of her to hold
The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him that
Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers for her sweet, and which she after,
Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd
To taste of too.

Enter Pisanio and Ladies.

So, so;—well done, well done.
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses
Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio:
Think on my words.
Exeunt Queen and Ladies.

Pis. And shall do:
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself; there's all I'll do for you. Exit.

Scene Sixth

[The Same]
Enter Imogen alone.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd: O! that husband,
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: bless'd be those,
How mean so'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be? Fie!

Enter Pisanio and Iachimo.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome,
Comes from my lord with letters.
Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Presents a letter.]
Imo. Thanks, good sir.
You are kindly welcome.
Iach. [Aside.] All of her that is out of door most rich!
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.
Imo. reads: 'He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust. LEONATUS.'
So far I read aloud;
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.
Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones
Upon the number'd beach? and can we not
Partition make with spectacles so precious
'Twixt fair and foul?
Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i' the eye, for apes and monkeys
'Twixt two such shes would chatter this way and
Contemn with mows the other; nor i' the judgment,
For idiots in this case of favour would
Be wisely definite; nor i' the appetite,—
Sluttery to such neat excellence oppos'd
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.
Imo. What is the matter, trow?
Iach. The cloyed will,—
That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub
Both fill'd and running,—ravening first the lamb,
Longs after for the garbage.
Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you? are you well?
Iach. Thanks, madam, well.
[To Pisanio.] Beseech you, sir,
Desire my man's abode where I did leave him;
He's strange and peevish.
Pis. I was going, sir.
To give him welcome. Exit.
Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, beseech you?

65 decay: destroy 67 Cf. n. 74 cordial: reviving 75 earnest: first payment to bind a bargain 79 to boot: in addition 88 remembrancer: reminder 89 hand-fast: marriage contract 91 liegers: ambassadors sweet: lover 92 bend her humour: change her inclination 6-9 most miserable . . . comfort; cf. n.

12 Change you: do you change color? 17 out of door: outwardly visible 19 alone: without rival Arabian bird: phœnix 22 Parthian; cf. n. 37–41 which . . . foul; cf. n. 42 makes: causes 45 mows: grimaces 46 favour: beauty 47 definite: free from hesitation 48–50 Cf. n. 51 trow: I wonder 54 ravening: ravenously devouring 55 after: afterwards 57 raps: transports 60 Desire . . . abode: ask my man to remain 61 strange: a stranger

Iach. Well, madam.
Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is.
Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so gamesome: he is called
The Briton reveller.
Imo. When he was here
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.
Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one,
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton—
Your lord, I mean—laughs from 's free lungs, cries, 'O!
Can my sides hold, to think that man, who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be, will his free hours languish for Assured bondage?'
Imo. Will my lord say so?
Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter:
It is a recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman; but, heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.
Imo. Not he, I hope.
Iach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;
In you,—which I account his beyond all talents,—
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.
Imo. What do you pity, sir?
Iach. Two creatures, heartily.
Imo. Am I one, sir?
You look on me: what wrack discern you in me
Deserves your pity?
Iach. Lamentable! What!
To hide me from the radiant sun and solace
I' the dungeon by a snuff!
Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?
Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on 't.
Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me; pray you,—
Since doubting things go ill often hurts more
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born,—discover to me
What both you spur and stop.
Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Firing it only here; should I—damn'd then—
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands
Made hard with hourly falsehood,—falsehood, as
With labour;—then by-peeping in an eye,
Base and illustrous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.
Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.
Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That from my mutest conscience to my tongue
Charms this report out.
Imo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair,—and fasten'd to an empery
Would make the great'st king double,—to be partner'd
With tom-boys hir'd with that self exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures
That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.
Imo. Reveng'd!
How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,—
As I have such a heart, that both mine ears
Must not in haste abuse,—if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?
Iach. Should he make me
Live like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure.
Imo. What ho, Pisanio!
Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.
Imo. Away! I do condemn mine ears that have
So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable,
Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st; as base as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report as thou from honour, and
Solicit'st here a lady that disdains
Thee and the devil alike. What ho, Pisanio!
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault; if he shall think it fit,

71 sadness: seriousness 73 sad: serious 76 furnaces: exhales as from a furnace 80 proof: experience 91 'tis much: i.e. heaven's bounty is great 92 talents: treasures 98 wrack: ruin 101 to hide me: to hide oneself 102 snuff: candle 112 doubting: suspecting that 114, 115 timely knowing . . . born; cf. n. 115 discover: reveal

121, 122 Takes prisoner . . . here; cf. n. 121 motion: passion 126 by-peeping: looking sidelong 127 illustrous: without lustre 130 Encounter such revolt: meet such apostasy 133–137 Not I . . . out; cf. n. 141 empery: empire 142 Would . . . double: which would double the greatest king's domain partner'd: associated 143 tom-boys: wanton women self: same exhibition: allowance 144 ventures: chance mistresses 146 boil'd stuff: women who have been in the sweating tubs for venereal disease 149 Recoil: fall away 157 ramps: harlots 158 In your despite: in scorn of you 160 runagate: renegade 162 Still . . . sure: always as secretly as faithfully 166 attended: listened to

A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for and a daughter who
He not respects at all. What ho, Pisanio!
Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say.
The credit that thy lady hath of thee
Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness
Her assur'd credit. Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever
Country call'd his; and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.
I have spoken this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your lord
That which he is, new o'er; and he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch
That he enchants societies into him;
Half all men's hearts are his.
Imo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath
Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know cannot err. The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.
Imo. All's well, sir. Take my power i' the court for yours.
Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your Grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord, myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.
Imo. Pray, what is 't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us and your lord,
The best feather of our wing, have mingled sums
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France; 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage. May it please you
To take them in protection?
Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bedchamber.
Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men; I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.
Imo. O! no, no.
Iach. Yes, I beseech, or I shall short my word
By lengthening my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise
To see your Grace.
Imo. I thank you for your pains;
But not away to-morrow!
Iach. O! I must, madam:
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do 't to-night:
I have outstood my time, which is material
To the tender of our present.
Imo. I will write.
Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome. Exeunt.

175 saucy: lascivious mart: traffic 176 stew: brothel 181 credit . . . of: confidence . . . in 187 affiance: confidence 190 truest manner'd: of the soundest morals 191 into: unto 209 Are: who are 214 factor: agent 217 curious: anxious

238 outstood: outstayed material: important 239 tender: presentation 1, 2 when . . . away; cf. n. 3 whoreson jackanapes: rascally coxcomb take me up: scold me 11, 12 curtail, crop; cf. n. 18, 19 Jack-slave: low fellow 21, 22 capon . . . comb on; cf. n. 24 undertake: give satisfaction to 25 companion: rascal

Act Second ❧ Scene First

[Britain. Cymbeline's Palace]
Enter Cloten and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on 't; and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure.
1. Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.
2. Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.
Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?
2. Lord. No, my lord; [Aside.] nor crop the ears of them.
Clo. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction! Would he had been one of my rank!
2. Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.
Clo. I am not vexed more at anything in the earth. A pox on 't! I had rather not be so noble as I am. They dare not fight with me because of the queen my mother. Every Jack-slave hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.
2. Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.
Clo. Sayest thou?
2. Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.
Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.
2. Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.
Clo. Why, so I say.
1. Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?
Clo. A stranger, and I not know on 't!
2. Lord. [Aside.] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.
1. Lord. There's an Italian come; and 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.
Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?
1. Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in 't?

1. Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2. Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool, granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2. Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Exit [Cloten].

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! a woman that
Bears all down with her brain, and this her son
Cannot take two from twenty for his heart
And leave eighteen. Alas! poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd,
A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make. The heavens hold firm
The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind; that thou mayst stand,
To enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land!

Exeunt [Lords].

Scene Second

[A Bedchamber; in one part of it a Trunk]
Imogen [reading] in her bed; a Lady [attending].

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then; mine eyes are weak;
Fold down the leaf where I have left; to bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning,
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I prithee, call me. Sleep has seized me wholly.

[Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods!
From fairies and the tempters of the night
Guard me, beseech ye!

Sleeps. Iachimo [comes] from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense
Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded. Cytherea!
How bravely thou becom'st thy bed, fresh lily,
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss: one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do 't! 'Tis her breathing that
Perfumes the chamber thus; the flame of the taper
Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids,
To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows, white and azure lac'd
With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design,
To note the chamber: I will write all down:
Such and such pictures; there the window; such
Th' adornment of her bed; the arras, figures,
Why, such and such; and the contents o' the story.
Ah! but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory.
O sleep! thou ape of death, lie dull upon her;
And be her sense but as a monument
Thus in a chapel lying. Come off, come off;—

[Taking off her bracelet.]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I' the bottom of a cowslip: here's a voucher;
Stronger than ever law could make: this secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en
The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end?
Why should I write this down, that's riveted,
Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late
The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down
Where Philomel gave up. I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning
May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here. Clock strikes.
One, two three: time, time!

Exit [into trunk].

Scene Third

[An Ante-chamber adjoining Imogen's Apartments]
Enter Cloten and Lords.

1. Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1. Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Willing will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is 't not?

1. Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune. If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited

41 derogation: disparagement 42, 45 derogate: do anything derogatory to rank or position, and (quibblingly) degenerate 45 issues: acts, offspring 52 for his heart: to save his life 56 coining: fabricating 59 he: i.e. Cloten 6 left: stopped 14 Our Tarquin: cf. n. 15 press . . . rushes; cf. n. 16 Cytherea: Venus 19, 20 But kiss . . . do 't; cf. n.

24 windows: eyelids 24, 25 white . . . tinct; cf. n. 25 tinct: color 28 arras: wall-tapestry figures: carvings 29 contents o' the story; cf. n. 34 sense: perception monument: effigy 36 Gordian knot; cf. n. 40 cinque-spotted: having five spots 47 The tale of Tereus; cf. n. 50, 51 that . . . eye; cf. n. 52 this; i.e. this's 53 time; cf. n. 2 turned up ace; cf. n. 11 penetrate: touch the heart thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it: and then let her consider.

Song

'Hark! hark! the lark at heven's gate sings,
And Phœbus 'gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalic'd flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes:
With everything that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise:
Arise, arise!'

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better; if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and calves'-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend. [Exeunt Musicians.]

2. Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early; he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter? Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assail'd her with musics, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new,
She hath not yet forgot him; some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king,
Who lets go by no vantages that may
Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly soliciting, and be friended
With aptness of the season; make denials
Increase your services; so seem as if
You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her
Save when command to your dismission tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless! not so.

[Enter a Messenger.]

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;
The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness forespent on us,
We must extend our notice. Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress,
Attend the queen and us; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen.

Exeunt [all but Cloten].

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
Let her lie still, and dream. By your leave, ho! [Knocks.]
I know her women are about her. What
If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold
Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes
Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up
Their deer to the stand o' the stealer; and 'tis gold
Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief;
Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man. What
Can it not do and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me, for
I yet not understand the case myself.
By your leave. Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. [Aside.] That's more
Than some whose tailors are as dear as yours
Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?

Lady. Ay,
To keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you; sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you
What I shall think is good?—The princess!

Enter Imogen.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest; sister, your sweet hand.

[Exit Lady.]

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble; the thanks I give
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still, I swear I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy
To your best kindness. One of your great knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin:
I will not.

Imo. Fools cure not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal; and learn now, for all,

19 Phœbus: the sun 21 chalic'd: having cup-like blossoms 22 winking: with eyes shut Mary-buds: buds of marigolds 27 consider: requite 28, 29 horse-hairs: fiddle-bows 29 calves'-guts: fiddle-strings unpaved: unstoned, castrated 40 minion: favorite 44 bound: under obligation 46 Prefer: recommend Frame: prepare 53 senseless: incapable of understanding 55 So like you: if it please you 61 his goodness forespent: because of his former goodness

69 line: put money into 71 Diana's rangers: forest-rangers of Diana, nymphs false: betray 72 stand: station of huntsman waiting for game 73 true: honest 81 No more?: nothing else? 93 lay out: expend 98 'twere as deep: it would make as deep an impression 115 verbal: explicit

That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,—
To accuse myself,—I hate you; which I had rather
You felt than make 't my boast.
Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o' the court, it is no contract, none;
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties—
Yet who than he more mean?—to knit their souls—
On whom there is no more dependancy
But brats and beggary—in self-figur'd knot;
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o' the crown, and must not foil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.
Imo. Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom; thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the pint of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
For being preferr'd so well.
Clo. The south-fog rot him!
Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men. How now, Pisanio!

Enter Pisanio.

Clo. 'His garment!' Now, the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently,—
Clo. 'His garment!'
Imo. I am sprighted with a fool,
Frighted, and anger'd worse. Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was they master's, 'shrew me
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think
I saw 't this morning; confident I am
Last night 'twas on mine arm, I kiss'd it;
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.
Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so; go, and search. [Exit Pisanio.]
Clo. You have abus'd me:
'His meanest garment!'
Imo. Ay, I said so, sir:
If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.
Clo. I will inform your father.
Imo. Your mother, too:
She's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of disconent.
Clo. I'll be reveng'd.
'His meanest garment!' Well. Exit.

Scene Fourth

[Rome. Philario's House]
Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would I were so sure
To win the king as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.
Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any, but abide the change of time,
Quake in the present winter's state and wish
That warmer days would come; in these fear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.
Phi. Your very goodness and your company
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus; Caius Lucius
Will do 's commission throughly, and I think
He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.
Post. I do believe—
Statist though I am none, nor like to be—
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæsar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: their discipline,
Now mingled with their courage, will make known
To their approvers they are people such
That mend upon the world.
Phi. See! Iachimo!

Enter Iachimo.

Post. The swifest harts have posted you by land,
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vissel nimble.
Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.
Iach. Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts
And be false with them.
Iach. Here are letters for you.
Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

128 dependancy: consequence (of marriage) 129 self-figur'd: formed by themselves 130 curb'd: restrained enlargement: liberty 131 consequence: succession foil: pollute 133 hilding: rascal for: fit only for squire's cloth: lackey's dress 134 pantler: pantry servant 138 dignified: given dignity 139, 140 made Comparative for: compared with 142 preferr'd: advanced south-fog: cf. n. 146 clipp'd: embraced 152 sprighted with: haunted by 167 action: law-suit

2 bold: confident 4 means: intercession 5 abide: await 7–9 in these . . . debtor: cf. n. 13 throughly: thoroughly 16 grief: suffering 18 Statist: statesman 19 prove: turn out to be 23 order'd: disciplined 26 mingled . . . courage: cf. n. 27 approvers: those who make trial 28 mend . . . world: improve with experience 30 posted: conveyed swiftly 31 corners: quarters from which the wind blows 34 made: caused

Iach. 'Tis very like.
Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court
When you were there?
Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet.
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is 't not
Too dull for your good wearing?
Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which
Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.
Post. The stone's too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.
Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.
Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further, but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.
Post. If you can make 't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours; if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword or mine or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.
Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.
Post. Proceed.
Iach. First, her bedchamber,—
Where I confess I slept not, but profess
Had that was well worth watching,—it was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats or pride; a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on 't was—
Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.
Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.
Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.
Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece
Chaste Dian bathing; never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves; the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.
Post. This is a thing
Which you might from relation likewise reap,
Being, at it is, much spoke of.
Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted; her andirons—
I had forgot them—were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.
Post. This is her honour!
Let it be granted you have seen all this,—and praise
Be given to your remembrance,—the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.
Iach. Then, if you can,
Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!
[Showing the bracelet.]
And now 'tis up again; it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.
Post. Jove!
Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?
Iach. Sir,—I thank her,—that:
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enriched it too. She gave it me, and said
She priz'd it once.
Post. May be she pluck'd it off
To send it me.
Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?
Post. O! no, no, no, 'tis true. Here, take this too;
[Gives the ring.]
It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on 't. Let there be no honour
Where there is beauty; truth where semblance; love
Where there's another man; the vows of women
Of no more bondage be to where they are made
Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.
O! above measure false.
Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or
Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stol'n it from her?
Post. Very true;
And so I hope he came by 't. Back my ring.
Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stolen.
Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.
Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.
'Tis true; nay, keep the ring; 'tis true: I am sure
She would not lose it; her attendants are

43 like: probable 58 easy: compliant 65 question: debate 76 my circumstances: details of my story 85 watching: wakefulness 90 bravely: excellently 90, 91 strive . . . value; cf. n. 104 likely . . . themselves; cf. n. 104–106 the cutter . . . out; cf. n. 111 fretted: embossed 112 winking: blind 114 Depending: leaning brands: torches 122 up: put up 129 outsell: exceed in value 136 basilisk: fabulous serpent, said to kill with its look 140 bondage: binding force 145 probable: provable 150 Render: describe

All sworn and honourable; they induc'd to steal it!
And by a stranger! No, he hath enjoy'd her;
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this; she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.
There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!
Phi. Sir, be patient:
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of—
Post. Never talk on 't;
She hath been colted by him.
Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast,
Worthy the pressing, lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging: by my life,
I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?
Post. Ay, and it doth confirm
Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.
Iach. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetic; never count the turns;
Once, and a million!
Iach. I'll be sworn,—
Post. No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie;
And I will kill thee if thou dost deny
Thou 'st made me cuckold.
Iach. I'll deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal!
I will go there and do 't, i' the court, before
Her father. I'll do something— Exit
Phi. Quite beside
The government of patience! You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.
Iach. With all my heart. Exeunt

Scene Fifth

[The Same. Another Room.]
Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man which I
Did call my father was I know not where
When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools
Made me a counterfeit; yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time; so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this. O! vengeance, vengeance;
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with
A pudency so rosy the sweet view on 't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her
As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O! all the devils!
This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was 't not?
Or less—at first?—perchance he spoke not, but
Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cried 'O!' and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man but I affirm
It is the woman's part; be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be named, nay, that hell knows,
Why, hers, in part, or all; but rather, all;
For even to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice but of a minute old for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them. Yet 'tis greater skill
In a true hate to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better. Exit.

Act Third

Scene First

[Britain. Cymbeline's Palace]
Enter in state, Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords, at one door; and at another, Caius Lucius and Attendants.

Cym. Now say what would Augustus Cæsar with us?
Luc. When Julius Cæsar—whose remembrance yet
Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues
Be theme and hearing ever—was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,—
Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit less
Than in his feats deserving it,—for him
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately
Is left untender'd.
Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be so ever.
Clo. There be many Cæsars
Ere such another Julius. Britain is
A world by itself, and we will nothing pay
For wearing our own noses.
Queen. That opportunity,
Which then they had to take from 's, to resume
We have again. Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors, together with
The natural bravery of your isle, which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With oaks unscaleable and roaring waters,
With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats,
But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of conquest
Cæsar made here, but made not here his brag
Of 'came, and saw, and overcame': with shame—
The first that ever touch'd him—he was carried

158 cognizance: visible sign 163 strong: convincing 171 present: immediate 186 limb-meal: limb from limb 191 pervert: divert 8 nonpareil: one that has no equal 11 pudency: modesty

20 motion: impulse 25 change: variety 26 Nice: lascivious 4 hearing: tidings 21 bravery: defiant spirit 22 paled: fenced 23 oaks; cf. n.

From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping—
Poor ignorant baubles!—on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd
As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof
The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point—
O giglot fortune!—to master Cæsar's sword,
Made Lud's town with rejoicing-fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid. Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no moe such Cæsars; other of them may have crooked noses, but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan; I do not say I am one, but I have a hand. Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free; Cæsar's ambition—
Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch
The sides o' the world—against all colour here
Did put the yoke upon 's; which to shake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar,
Our ancestor was tht Mulmutius which
Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of Cæsar
Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise
Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain which did put
His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar—
Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than
Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy.
Receive it from me, then: war and confusion
In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent
Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
Which he to seek of me again, perforce,
Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect
That the Pannonians and Dalmations for
Their liberties are now in arms; a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons cold:
So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer; if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle; if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better of you; and there's an end.

30 baubles: toys 33 at point: about 34 giglot: harlot 35 Lud's town: London 39 moe: more 40 owe: own 48 injurious: insolent 51 against all colour: with no pretence of right 56 whose use: the operation of which 57 franchise: free exercise 74 he to seek: his seeking 75 keep at utterance: vindicate perfect: well-assured 80 proof speak: trial show

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure and he mine:
All the remain is 'Welcome!' Exeunt

Scene Second

[The Same]
Enter Pisanio, reading of a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery! Wherefore write you not
What monster's her accuser? Leonatus!
O master! what a strange infection
Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian—
As poisonous-tongued as handed—hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal! No:
She's punish'd for her truth, and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-life, such assaults
As would take in some virtue. O my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low as were
Thy fortunes. How! that I should murder her?
Upon the love and truth and vows which I
Have made to thy command? I, her? her blood?
If it be so to do good service, never
Let me be counted serviceable. How look I,
That I should seem to lack humanity
So much as this fact comes to? [Reads.] 'Do 't: the letter
That I have sent her by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity':—O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee. Senseless bauble,
Art thou a feodary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes.
I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Enter Imogen

Imo. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord, Leonatus.
O! learn'd indeed were that astronomer
That knew the stars as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content, yet not
That we two are asunder; let that grieve him,—
Some griefs are med'cinable; that is one of them,
For it doth physic love,—of his content,
All but in that! Good wax, they leave. Bless'd be
You bees that make these locks of counsel! Lovers
And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables. Good news, gods!
[Reads.] 'Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven; what your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your, increasing in love,

88 remain: rest 9 take in: subdue 10 to: in comparison with 17 fact: crime 21 feodary: accomplice 23 I am ignorant: i.e. I shall appear to be ignorant 27 astronomer: astrologer 28 characters: handwriting 30 relish: have a taste 34 For . . . love; cf. n. 36, 37 Lovers . . . alike; cf. n. 39 Cupid's tables: love-letters 41, 42 as you . . . eyes; cf. n.

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.'

O! for a horse with wings! Hearest thou, Pisanio?
He is at Milford-Haven; read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day? Then, true Pisanio,—
Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—
O! let me 'bate,—but not like me; yet long'st,
But in a fainter kind:—O! not like me,
For mine's beyond beyond; say, and speak thick,—
Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing,
To the smothering of the sense,—how far it is
To this same blessed Milford; and, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy as
T' inherit such a haven; but, first of all,
How we may steal from hence, and, for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going
And our return, to excuse; but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse be born or ere begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution, man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers,
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
The run i' the clock's behalf. But this is foolery;
Go bid my woman feigns a sickness; say
She'll home to her father; and provide me presently
A riding-suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man; nor here, nor here,
Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee;
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way. Exeunt.

SCENE THIRD

[Wales. A mountainous Country with a Cave]
Enter [from the Cave] Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys; this gate
Instructs you how to adore the heavens, and bows you
To a morning's holy office; the gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbans on, without
Good morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!

Arv. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill;
Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens and sets off;
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war;
This service is not service, so being done;
But being so, allow'd: to apprehend thus
Draws us a profit from all things we see,
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O! this life
Is nobler than attending for a check,
Richer than doing nothing for a bribe,
Prouder than rusting in unpaid-for silk;
Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd; no life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak; we, poor unfledg'd,
Have never wing'd from view o' the nest, nor know not
What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you
That have a sharper known, well corresponding
With your stiff age; but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance, travelling a-bed,
A prison for a debtor that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching cave shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing;
We are beastly, subtle as the fox for prey,
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat;
Our valour is to chase what flies; our cage
We make a choir, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries
And felt them knowingly; the art o' the court,
As hard to leave as keep, whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery that
The fear's as bad as falling; the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i' the search,
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must curtsy at the censure: O boys! this story
The world may read in me; my body's mark'd
With Roman swords, and my report was once
First with the best of note; Cymbeline lov'd me,
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off; then was I as a tree
Whose boughs did bend with fruit, but, in one night,
A storm or robbery, call it what you will,

50 of mean affairs: an ordinary business 54 'bate: abate, qualify 56 thick: fast 61 inherit: possess 65 Cf. n. 73, 74 sands . . . behalf; cf. n. 78 franklin's: freeholder's 79 you're best: it were best for you 80–82 I see . . . through; cf. n. 1 keep house: stay in the house 5 jet: strut

18, 19 This service . . . allow'd; cf. n. 19 apprehend: understand 22 sharded: with imperfect wings hold: place 24 attending: doing service check: rebuke 27, 28 Cf. n. 31 Haply: perhaps 37 stride a limit: pass a bound 41 pinching: cold 43 beastly: like mere beasts 44 Like: as 55 which . . . search; cf. n. 61 report: reputation 62 with . . . note: among those of highest fame

Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And let me bare to weather.
Gui. Uncertain favour!
Bel. My fault being nothing,—as I have told you oft,—
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
I was confederate with the Romans; so
Follow'd my banishment, and this twenty years
This rock and these demesnes have been my world,
Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven than in all
The fore-end of my time. But, up to the mountains!
This is not hunter's language. He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.
Exeunt [Guiderius and Arviragus].
How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little they are sons to the king;
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine; and, though train'd up thus meanly
I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them
In simple and low things to prince it much
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who
The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out
Into my story: say, 'Thus mine enemy fell,
And thus I set my foot on 's neck;' even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal,—
Once Arviragus,—in as like a figure,
Strikes life into my speech and shows much more
His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous'd.
O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience knows
Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon,
At three and two years old, I stole these babes,
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as
Thou reft'st me of my lands. Euriphile,
Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for nautral father. The game is up. Exit.

Scene Fourth

[Near Milford-Haven]
Enter Pisanio and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand; ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio! man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication; put thyself
Into a havior of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staider senses. What's the matter?
Why tender'st thou that paper to me with
A look untender? If 't be summer news,
Smile to 't before; if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that count'nance still. My husband's hand!
That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point. Speak, man; thy tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.
Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.
Imo. [Reads.] 'Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose; where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour and equally to me disloyal.'
Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper
Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander,
Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose tongue
Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world; kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters. What cheer, madam?
Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
To lie in watch there and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature,
To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to 's bed, is it?
Pis. Alas! good lady.
Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness! Iachimo,
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now methinks
Thy favour's good enough. Some jay of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him:
Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion,
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ripp'd; to pieces with me! O!
Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,
By thy revolt, O husband! shall be thought
Put on for villainy; not born where 't grows,
But worn a bait for ladies.
Pis. Good madam, hear me.

67 hangings: fruits 68 weather: storms 78 fore-end: early part 101–103 in as like . . . conceiving: cf. n.

9 havior: bearing wildness: madness 12 summer: i.e. pleasant 15 drug-damn'd: detestable for its drugs out-craftied: outwitted by craft 16 point: predicament 17 extremity: extreme rigor 31 What: why 34 worms: serpents 35 posting: speeding 38 What cheer: how do you feel? 40 in watch: awake 41 charge: seize 48 favour: appearance jay: showy, light woman 49 Whose mother . . . painting: cf. n. 51 by the walls: in clothes presses 53 seeming: appearance

Imo. True honest men, being heard like false Æneas,
Were in his time thought false, and Sinon's weeping
Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity
From most true wretchedness; so thou, Posthumus,
Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;
Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjur'd
From thy great fail. Come, fellow, be thou honest;
Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou seest him,
A little witness my obedience; look!
I draw the sword myself; take it, and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart.
Fear not, 'tis empty of all things but grief;
Thy master is not there, who was indeed
The riches of it: do his bidding; strike.
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause,
But now thou seem'st a coward.
Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.
Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart
(Something's afore 't; soft, soft! we'll no defence)
[Taking out letters.]
Obedient as the scabbard. What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus
All turn'd to heresy! Away, away!
Corrupters of my faith; you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools
Believe false teachers; though those that are betrayed
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness; and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her
That now thou tir'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prithee, dispatch;
The lamb entreats the butcher; where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.
Pis. O, gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business
I have not slept one wink.
Imo. Do 't, and to bed then.
Pis. I'll wake mine eyeballs first.
Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent?—whereunto I never
Purpose return.—Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?
Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment, in the which
I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.
Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.
Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.
Imo. Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.
Pis. Not so, neither;
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is abus'd; some villain,
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.
Imo. Some Roman courtezan.
Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.
Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?
Pis. If you'll back to the court,—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing!
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.
Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.
Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that sines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in 't;
In a great pool a swan's nest: prithee, think
There's livers out of Britain.
Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow; now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which, t'appear itself, must not yet be
But by self-danger, you should tread a course
Pretty, and full of view; yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh at least
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear
As truly as he moves.

58, 59 Æneas, Sinon; cf. n. 62 proper: honest 66 witness: bear witness to 80 That cravens: that it makes cowardly 82 Obedient: receptive to the sword 83 scriptures: cf. n. 86 stomachers; cf. n. 89 case: condition 90 set up: instigate 93 fellows: equals 94 passage: occurrence 95 strain of rareness: rare impulse 96 disedg'd: satiated 97 tir'st: feedest 98 pang'd: pained dispatch: make haste 106 wake: torture by watching or waking

114 unbent: unprepared, bow unbent 115 elected: chosen 123 tent: probe 132 singular: unmatched 146 Cf. n. 153, 154 I' the . . . in 't; cf. n. 156 livers: people living 160, 161 wear . . . fortune: make your mind as impenetrable as your fortune is dark 162, 163 That . . . self-danger: your identity which cannot yet be revealed without danger to yourself 164 Pretty: fair view: promise

Imo. O! for such means:
Though peril to my modesty, not death on 't,
I would adventure.
Pis. Well, then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear and niceness—
The handmaids of all women, or more truly
Woman it pretty self—into a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel; nay, you must
Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it—but, O! the harder heart,
Alack! no remedy—to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan, and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.
Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.
Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Forethinking this, I have already fit—
'Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them; would you in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him
Wherein you are happy,—which will make him know,
If that his head have ear in music,—doubtless
With joy he will embrace you, for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad,
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplyment.
Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithee, away;
There's more to be consider'd, but we'll even
All that good time will give us; this attempt
I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.
Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box, I had it from the queen,
What's in 't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood. May the gods
Direct you to the best!
Imo. Amen. I thank thee. Exeunt.

174 Command: princely manner of authority niceness: fastidiousness 176 it: its waggish: pert 180 harder: too hard 182 common-kissing Titan: the sun, who kisses everyone 183 laboursome: elaborate trims: apparel 189 Forethinking: anticipating fit: prepared 191 in their serving: with their help 195 happy: skillful 195, 196 which . . . music: cf. n. 198 doubling: in addition to Your means abroad: as for the expenses of your journey 202 diet: feed 203 even: act up to, keep pace with 205 soldier to: enlisted to abide: encounter 209 carriage: abduction 213 distemper: illness To some shade: withdraw to some secluded place

Scene Fifth

[Cymbeline's Palace]

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, Lords [and Attendants].

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.
Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.
Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.
Luc. So, sir: I desire of you
A conduct over land to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you.
Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;
The due of honour in no point omit.
So, farewell, noble Lucius.
Luc. Your hand, my lord.
Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time forth
I wear it as your enemy.
Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.
Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
Till he have crossed the Severn. Happiness! Exit Lucius, &c.
Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours us
That we have given him cause.
Clo. 'Tis all the better;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.
Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely
Our chariots and horsemen be in readiness;
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.
Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.
Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day; she looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty:
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in sufferance. [Exit an Attendant.]
Queen. Royal sir.
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her; she's a lady
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Enter a Messenger.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?
Mes. Please you, sir,

12 your Grace, and you; cf. n. 19 event: outcome 28 fits: behooves ripely: promptly 31 drawn to head: gathered into a military force 42 slight in sufferance: careless in forbearance

Her chambers are all lock'd, and there's no answer
That will be given to the loudest of noise we make.
Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer; this
She wish'd me to make known, but our great court
Made me to blame in memory.
Cym. Her doors lock'd!
Not seen of late! Grant, heavens, that which I fear
Prove false! Exit.
Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.
Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,
I have not seen these two days.
Queen. Go, look after. Exit [Cloten].
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!
He hath a drug of mine; I pray his absence
Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd her,
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is
To death or to dishonour, and my end
Can make good use of either; she being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Enter Cloten.

How now, my son!
Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the king; he rages, none
Dare come about him.
Queen. [Aside.] All the better; may
This night forestall him of the coming day! Exit Qu[een].
Clo. I love and hate her; for she's fair and royal,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded,
Outsells them all. I love her therefore; but Disdaining me and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus slanders so her judgment
That what's else rare is chok'd, and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For, when fools
Shall—

Enter Pisanio

Who is here? What! are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither. Ah! you precious pandar. Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word; or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.
Pis. O! good my lord.
Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.
Pis. Alas! my lord,
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.
Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer,
No further halting; satisfy me home
What is become of her?
Pis. O! my all-worthy lord.
Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is at once,
At the next word; no more of 'worthy lord!'
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is
Thy condemnation and thy death.
Pis. Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]
Clo. Let's see 't. I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.
Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns by this
May prove his travel, not her danger.
Clo. Hum!
Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen!
Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!
Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?
Pis. Sir, as I think.
Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know 't. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man; thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment.
Pis. Well, my good lord.
Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?
Pis. Sir, I will.
Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?
Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.
Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service; go.
Pis. I shall, my lord. Exit.
Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven!—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon—even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time,—the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart,—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined,—which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

84 forestall him of: prevent his living to see 96 packing: departing 102 Close: secretive 111 home: thoroughly 124 Or . . . perish: I must give him this or I shall die 133 undergo: perform

Enter Pisanio [with the clothes].

Be those the garments?
Pis. Ay, my noble lord.
Clo. How long is 't since she went to Milford-Haven?
Pis. She can scarce be there yet.
Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford; would I had wings to follow it. Come, and be true. Exit.
Pis. Thou bidd'st me to my loss; for true to thee
Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed! Exit.

Scene Sixth

[Wales. Before the Cave of Belarius]
Enter Imogen [in boy's clothes].

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one;
I have tir'd myself, and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed; I should be sick
But that my resolution helps me. Milford,
When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think
Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me
I could not miss my way; will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness
Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord!
Thou are one o' the false ones. Now I think on thee,
My hunger's gone, but even before I was
At point to sink for food. But what is this?
Here is a path to 't; 'tis some savage hold;
I were best not call, I dare not call, yet famine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant.
Plenty and peace breeds cowards, hardness ever
Of hardiness is mother. Ho! Who's here?
If anything that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take or lend. Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter.
Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on 't.
Such a foe, good heavens! Exit [to the cave].

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and
Are master of the feast; Cadwal and I
Will play the cook and servant, 'tis our match;
The sweat of industry would dry and die
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs
Will make what's homely savoury; weariness
Can snore upon the flint when resty sloth
Finds the down pillow hard. Now, peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thyself!
Gui. I am throughly weary.
Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave; we'll browse on that,
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.
Bel. [Looking into the cave.] Stay; come not in;
But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.
Gui. What's the matter, sir?
Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon! Behold divineness
No elder than a boy!

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd or bought what I have took. Good troth,
I have stol'n nought, nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat;
I would have left it on the board so soon
As I had made my meal, and parted
With prayers for the provider.
Gui. Money, youth?
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
As 'tis no better reckon'd but of those
Who worship dirty gods.
Imo. I see you're angry.
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should
Have died had I not made it.
Bel. Whither bound?
Imo. To Milford-Haven.
Bel. What's your name?
Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who
Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford:
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fall'n in this offence.
Bel. Prithee, fair youth,
Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd!
'Tis almost night; you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it.
Boys, bid him welcome.
Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty
I bid for you, as I do buy.
Arv. I'll make 't my comfort
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him
After long absence, such is yours: most welcome!
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.
Imo. 'Mongst friends,
If brothers. [Aside.] Would it had been so, that they
Had been my father's sons; then had my prize

172 a voluntary mute to: voluntarily silent respecting 181 labour be his meed: his pains be his reward 6 within a ken: in sight 7 Foundations; cf. n. 12 lapse: fall into sin fulness: prosperity 13 sorer: more grievous 16 even: just 20 clean: entirely 21 hardness: difficulty 22 hardiness: courage 23 civil: civilized 24 Take or lend; cf. n. 27 Such a foe; cf. n. 28 woodman: huntsman 30 match: compact

34 snore upon the flint: sleep on a bed of stones resty: sluggish 54 parted: departed 71 churls: boors 73 cheer: entertainment 77, 78 In honesty . . . buy; cf. n. 83 sprightly: cheerful 86 prize: value, hence importance

Been less, and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.
Bel. He wrings at some distress.
Gui. Would I could free 't!
Arv. Or I, whate'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!
Bel. Hark, boys.
[Whispering.]
Imo. [Aside.] Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves and had the virtue
Which their own conscience seal'd them,—laying by
That nothing-gift of differing multitudes,—
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods!
I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus' false.
Bel. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in:
Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd,
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.
Gui. Pray, draw near.
Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.
Imo. Thanks, sir.
Arv. I pray, draw near. Exeunt.

Scene Seventh

[Rome. A Public Place]
Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

1. Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius pro-consul; and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar!
1. Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?
2. Sen. Ay.
1. Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?
1. Sen. With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be supplyant, the words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers and the time
Of their dispatch.
1. Tri. We will discharge our duty. Exeunt.

87 ballasting: weight 89 wrings: writhes 97, 98 laying by ... multitudes: cf. n. 98 out-peer: surpass 103 hunt: game 6 fall'n-off: revolted 9 commends: delivers 16 supplyant: supplementary

Act Fourth

Scene First

[Wales. The Forest, near the Cave of Belarius]
Enter Cloten.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather,—saving reverence of the word,—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself,—for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber,—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions, yet this imperceiverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may happily be a little angry for my so rough usage, but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe; out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. Exit.

Scene Second

[Before the Cave of Belarius]
Enter [from the Cave] Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. [To Imogen.] You are not well; remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.
Arv. [To Imogen.] Brother, stay here;
Are we not brothers?
Imo. So man and man should be,
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.
Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.
Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well;
But not so citizen a wanton as
To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave me;
Stick to your journal course; the breach of custom
Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by me
Cannot amend me; society is no comfort
To one not sociable. I am not very sick,
Since I can reason of it; pray you, trust me here,
I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.
Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it;
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.
Bel. What! how! how!

2 fit: fittingly 4 saving reverence: begging pardon 5 fitness: inclination (used in an objectionable sense) 10 time: present circumstances 11 general services: public affairs 12 oppositions: combats imperceiverant: undiscerning 15 enforced: ravished 16 spurn: kick 17 happily: perchance 18 power of: control over 11 citizen ... wanton: city-bred spoilt child, "tenderfoot" 13 journal: daily 17 reason: talk 21 How much: however much

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault: I know not why
I love this youth; and I have heard you say,
Love's reason's without reason: the bier at door,
And a demand who is 't shall die, I'd say
'My father, not this youth.'
Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:
Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace.
I'm not their father; yet who this should be
Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.
'Tis the ninth hour o' the morn.
Arv. Brother, farewell.
Imo. I wish ye sport.
Arv. You health. So please you, sir.
Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!
Our courtiers say all's savage but at court:
Experience, O, thou disprov'st report!
The imperious seas breed monsters, for the dish
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still, heart-sick. Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug. [Swallows some.]
Gui. I could not stir him,
He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.
Arv. Thus did he answer me; yet said hereafter
I might know more.
Bel. To the field, to the field!
[To Imogen.] We'll leave you for this time; go in and rest.
Arv. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.
Imo. Well or ill,
I am bound to you. Exit.
Bel. And shalt be ever.
This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had
Good ancestors.
Arv. How angel-like he sings!
Gui. But his neat cookery! he cut our roots
In characters,
And sauc'd our broths as Juno had been sick
And he her dieter.
Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.
Gui. I do note
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.
Arv. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking-elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine!
Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—Who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.
Bel. 'Those runagates!'
Means he not us? I partly know him; 'tis
Cloten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws: hence!
Gui. He is but one. You and my brother search
What companies are near; pray you, away;
Let me alone with him. [Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.]
Clo. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountainers?
I have heard of such. What slave art thou?
Gui. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er than answering
A 'slave' without a knock.
Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.
Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I
An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not
My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,
Why I should yield to thee?
Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?
Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.
Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.
Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.
Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou villain.
Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it; were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,
'Twould move me sooner.
Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I am son to the queen.
Gui. I'm sorry for 't, not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.
Clo. Art not afeard?
Gui. Those that I reverence those I fear, the wise;
At fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clo. Die the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:
Yield, rustic mountaineer. Fight and exeunt.

Enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No companies abroad?
Arv. None in the world. You did mistake him, sure.

30 strain: lineage 35 miracle; cf. n. 48 stir him: move him to tell his story 49 gentle: of gentle birth 65 characters: letters 76 spurs: roots 78 stinking-elder; cf. n. 79 with . . . vine: i.e. as the vine, patience grows 80 great morning: broad day

96 A 'slave': i.e. the epithet 'slave' 105 my clothes; cf. n. 109 precious: arrant varlet: knave 122 mere: sheer 130 proper: own

Bel. I cannot tell; long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour
Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute
'Twas very Cloten.
Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.
Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for defect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear. But see, thy brother.

Enter Guiderius [with Cloten's head].

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse,
There was no money in 't. Not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none;
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head as I do his.
Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen after his own report,
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads where—thank the gods!—they grow,
And set them on Lud's town.
Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us; then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?
Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not
Absolute madness could so far have rav'd
To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing,—
As it is like him,—might break out, and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is 't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering; then, on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.
Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it; howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day; the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.
Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him; I'll throw 't into the creek
Behind our rock, and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. Exit.
Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd.
Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't! though valour
Becomes thee well enough.
Arv. Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursu'd me! Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed; I would revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through
And put us to our answer.
Bel. Well, 'tis done.—
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.
Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him; to gain his colour
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. Exit.
Bel. O thou goddess!
Thou, divine Nature thou, thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys. They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchaf'd, as the rud'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other, valour
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. Solemn music.
Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark! Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!
Gui. Is he at home?
Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Enter Arviragus, with Imogen, [as] dead, bearing her in his arms.

138 snatches: sudden checks 139 absolute: certain 140 very Cloten: Cloten himself 143 fell: fierce 144–147 Being scarce . . . fear: cf. n. 166 For: because 169 safe: sound 171 nothing but mutation: for constant change 179 fetch us in: capture us 184 ordinance: divine decree 189 way long forth: walking forth seem long

195 reck: care 202–204 I would . . . answer: cf. n. 212 gain: restore 220 enchaf'd: excited 225 seen from other: observed in others 226 wildly: without cultivation 231 clotpoll: thick head 241 answer: correspond to accidents: occurrences 242 lamenting toys: lamentation for trifles 243 apes: fools

Bel. Look! here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for.
Arv. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my leaping-time into a crutch,
Than have seen this.
Gui. O, sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so well
As when thou grew'st thyself.
Bel. O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare
Might easiliest harbour in? Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou mightst have made; but ay!
Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy.
How found you him?
Arv. Stark, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek
Reposing on a cushion.
Gui. Where?
Arv. O' the floor,
His arms thus leagu'd; I thought he slept, and put
My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.
Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies with his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.
Arv. With fairest flowers,
While summer lasts and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave; thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor
The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander.
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock would
With charitable bill,—O bill sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument,—bring thee all this;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none,
To winter-ground thy corse.
Gui. Prithee, have done,
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. To the grave!
Arv. Say, where shall's lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.
Arv. Be 't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,
As once to our mother, use like note and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.
Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing; I'll weep, and word it with thee;

251 leaping-time: youth 258 crare: small vessel 260 ay: alas 270 clouted brogues: heavy shoes studded with hobnails 282 ruddock: robin 287 winter-ground: cover for the winter 289 wench-like: womanish 293 shall's: shall we 298 to our mother: i.e. as once we sang our mother like: the same

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.
Arv. We'll speak it then.
Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less, for Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys,
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that; though mean and mighty, rotting
Together, have one dust, yet reverence—
That angel of the world—doth make distinction
Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely,
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.
Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax'
When neither are alive.
Arv. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin. [Exit Belarius.]
Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for 't.
Arv. 'Tis true.
Gui. Come on then, and remove him.
Arv. So, begin.
Gui. 'Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou thy wordly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages;
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.
Arv. 'Fear no more the frown o' the great,
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke:
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.
Gui. 'Fear no more the lightning-flash,
Arv. 'Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Gui. 'Fear not slander, censure rash;
Arv. 'Thou has finished joy and moan:
Both. 'All lovers young, all lovers must
Consign to thee, and come to dust.
Gui. 'No exorciser harm thee!
Arv. 'Nor no withcraft charm thee!
Gui. 'Ghost unlaid forbear thee!
Arv. 'Nothing ill come near thee!
Both. 'Quiet consummation have;
And renowned be thy grave!'

Enter Belarius, with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down.
Bel. Here's a few flowers, but 'bout midnight, more;
The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night
Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces.
You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so
These herblets shall, which we upon you strew.
Come on, away; apart upon our knees.
The ground that gave them first has them again;
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.
Exeunt [Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus].

303 fanes: temple oracles 305 medicine: cure 308 paid: punished 315 Thersites' . . . Ajax'; cf. n. 337 thunder-stone: thunderbolt 341 Consign: subscribe 342 exorciser: conjurer 351 Upon . . . faces; cf. n.

Imogen awakes.

Imo. Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?
I thank you. By yond bush? Pray, how far thither?
'Ods pittikins! can it be six mile yet?
I have gone all night: Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.
[Seeing the body of Cloten.] But, soft! no bedfellow!
O gods and goddesses!
These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the care on 't. I hope I dream;
For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures; but 'tis not so,
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,
I tremble still with fear; but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still; even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.
A headless man! The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shap of 's leg, this is his hand,
His foot Mercurial, his Martial thigh,
The brawns of Hercules, but his Jovial face—
Murder in heaven? How! 'Tis gone. Pisanio,
All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, he darted on thee! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irregulous devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord. To write and read
Be henceforth treacherous! Damn'd Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters, damn'd Pisanio,
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top! O Posthumus! alas!
Where is thy head? where's that? Ay, me! where's that?
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be? Pisanio?
'Tis he and Cloten; malice and lucre in them
Have laid this woe here. O! 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home;
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrider may seem to those
Which chance to find us. O! my lord, my lord.
[Falls on the body.]

Enter Lucius, Captains, [other Officers,] and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending
You here at Milford-Haven with your ships:
They are in readiness.
Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners
And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits,
That promise noble service; and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Sienna's brother.
Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.
Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to 't. Now, sir,
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?
Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision,—
I fast and pray'd for their intelligence,—thus:
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams; which portends
Unless my sins abuse my divination,
Success to the Roman host.
Luc. Dream often so,
And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is here
Without his top? The ruin speaks that sometime
It was a worthy building. How! a page!
Or dead or sleeping on him? But dead rather,
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the boy's face.
Cap. He's alive, my lord.
Luc. He'll, then, instruct us of this body. Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wrack? How came it? Who is it?
Who art thou?
Imo. I am nothing; or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas!
There are no more such masters; I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never
Find such another master.
Luc. 'Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than
Thy master is bleeding. Say his name, good friend.
Imo. Richard du Champ.—[Aside.] If I do lie and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir?
Luc. Thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.
Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same;
Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but be sure
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee. Go with me.
Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an 't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh;

359 'Ods: God's pittikins: diminutive form of pity 368 fumes: vapors 377, 378 Cf. n. 380 Hecuba; cf. n. 382 irregulous: lawless 392 pregnant: obvious 400 To them: in addition to them 405 confiners: inhabitants 419 spongy: wet 421 abuse: pervert 434 demanded: inquired 435, 436 otherwise . . . picture; cf. n. 449 complaining: mourning 456 approve: prove 463 an 't: if it 465 poor pickaxes: i.e. her fingers 467 century: hundred

And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.
Luc. Ay, good youth,
And rather father thee than master thee.
My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties; let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave; come, arm him. Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Cymbeline's Palace]
Enter Cymbeline, Lords, Pisanio [and Attendants].

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her.
[Exit an Attendant.]
A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life's in danger. Heavens!
How deeply you at once do touch me. Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: it strikes me, past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure and
Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.
Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.
1. Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here;
I dare be bound he's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.
Cym. The time is troublesome.
[To Pisanio.] We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
Does yet depend.
1. Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.
Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!
I am amaz'd with matter.
1. Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less
Than what you hear of; come more, for more you're ready:
The want is but to put those powers in motion
That long to move.
Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw;
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not
What can from Italy annoy us, but
We grieve at chances here. Away!
Exeunt [all but Pisanio].
Pis. I heard no letter from my master since
I wrote him Imogen was slain; 'tis strange;
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false I am honest; not true to be true:
These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd;
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. Exit.

Scene Fourth

[Wales. Before the Cave of Belarius]
Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.
Bel. Let us from it.
Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?
Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.
Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going; newness
Of Cloten's death,—we being not known, not muster'd
Among the bands,—may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd, and so extort from 's that
Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on with torture.
Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.
Arv. It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.
Bel. O! I am known
Of many in the army; many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,

470 entertain: take into service 476 partisans: combined spear and battle axe 477 arm him: carry him (i.e. the body of Cloten) in your arms 4 touch: wound 8 present: emergency 18 Hold: consider 22 subjection: service as a subject 23 wants: lacks 26 slip you: let you go jealousy: suspicion 27 depend: remain in suspense 33 amaz'd: confused matter: affairs of importance 35 Cf. n.

48 betid: befallen 51 find: reveal 53 note: notice 8 revolts: rebels 9 During their use: while they can use us 14 render: account 23 quarter'd fires: camp fires 24 cloy'd importantly: crammed with matters of importance 25 upon our note: in noticing us 33 aye: forever

But to be still hot summer's tanlings and
The shrinking slaves of winter.
Gui. Than be so
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.
Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: what thing is it that I never
Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison!
Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel! I am asham'd
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.
Gui. By heavens! I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care, but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans.
Arv. So say I; amen.
Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys!
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead.—[Aside.] The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn,
Till it fly out and show them princes born. Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH

SCENE FIRST

[Britain. The Roman Camp]
Enter Posthumus [with a bloody handkerchief].

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, for I wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you should take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves
For wrying but a little! O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands;
No bond but to do just ones. Gods! if you
Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never
Had liv'd to put on this; so had you sav'd
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck
Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But, alack!
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's love,
To have them fall no more; you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift.
But Imogen is your own; do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey. I am brought hither
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight
Against my lady's kingdom; 'tis enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore good heavens,
Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant; so I'll fight
Against the part I come with, so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me than my habits show.
Gods! put the strength o' the Leonati in me.
To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without and more within. Exit.

SCENE SECOND

[Field of Battle between the British and Roman Camps]
Enter Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army at one door and the Britain army at another; Leonatus Posthumus following like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Then enter again in skirmish, Iachimo and Posthumus; he vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on 't
Revengingly enfeebles me; or could this carl,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne
As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods. Exit.

The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken. Then enter, to his rescue, Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground.
The lane is guarded; nothing routs us but
The villainy of our fears.
Gui. Arv. } Stand, stand, and fight!

Enter Posthumus, and seconds the Britons. They rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hoodwink'd.
Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely; or betimes
Let's reinforce, or fly. Exeunt.

35 tanlings: creatures tanned by the sun 40 thereto so o'ergrown: also so overgrown with hair 43 what thing is it: what a thing it is 54 take . . . care: have . . . protection 64 thinks scorn: despises everything 5 wrying: swerving 7 No bond: there is no obligation 9 put on: instigate 14 elder: of later date 15 Cf. n.

23 weeds: garments suit: dress 25 part: party 30 habits: clothes 32 guise: custom 1 heaviness and guilt: i.e. the weight of guilt 4 carl: peasant 18 hoodwink'd: blindfolded 20 betimes: quickly

Scene Third

[Another Part of the Field]
Enter Posthumus and a Britain Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?
Post. I did:
Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.
Lord. I did.
Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought. The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work
More plentiful than tools to do 't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling
Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damm'd
With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.
Lord. Where was this lane?
Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;
Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd
So long a breeding as his white beard came to,
In doing this for his country; athwart the lane,
He, with two striplings,—lads more like to run
The country base than to commit such slaughter,—
With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,
Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
'Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards. Stand!
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand!' These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many,—
For three performers are the file when all
The rest do nothing,—with this word, 'Stand, stand!'
Accommodated by the place, more charming
With their own nobleness,—which could have turn'd
A distaff to a lance,—gilded pale looks,
Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd coward
But by example,—O! a sin of war,
Damn'd in the first beginners,—'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire, anon
A rout, confusion thick; forthwith they fly
Chickens the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves,
The strides they victors made. And now our cowards—
Like fragments in hard voyages—became
The life o' the need; having found the back door open
Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens! how they wound;
Some slain before; some dying; some their freinds
O'er-borne i' the former wave; ten, chas'd by one,
Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty;
Those that would die or ere resist are grown
The mortal bugs o' the field!
Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys!
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it; you are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rime upon 't,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
'Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane.'
Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. 'Lack! to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend;
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rime.
Lord. Farewell; you're angry. Exit.
Post. Still going?—This is a lord! O noble misery!
To be i' the field, and ask, 'what news?' of me!
To-day how many would have given their honours
To have sav'd their carcasses! took heel to do 't,
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death where I did hear him groan,
Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
That draw his knives i' the war. Well, I will find him;
For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
The part I came in; fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be
Britons must take. For me, my ransom's death;
On either side I come to spend my breath,
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two [British] Captains, and Soldiers.

1. Cap. Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius is taken.
'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.
2. Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave th' affront with them.
1. Cap. So 'tis reported;
But none of 'em can be found. Stand! who is there?
Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.
2. Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell
What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler [then exeunt omnes].

9 strait: narrow 23 country base: country game of prisoners' base 24 fit for: i.e. beautiful enough to be protected by 25 shame: modesty 28 fleet: vanish 28–31 Stand . . . frown: cf. n. 32 confident: in confidence 33 file: body of troops 35 more charming: charming others 45 stoop'd: plunged 45, 46 slaves . . . made: cf. n. 48 life o' the need: what sustained life in time of need

53 or ere: sooner than 54 bugs: terrors 70 noble misery: miserable nobility 78 more: other 80 now: but now 83 hind: menial 92 silly: simple 93 affront: attack 97 seconds: followers 98 answer'd: supported

Scene Fourth

[Britain. A Prison]
Enter Posthumus and [two] Gaoler[s].

1. Gaol. You shall not now be stol'n, you have locks upon you;
So graze as you find pasture.
2. Gaol. Ay, or a stomach. [Exeunt Gaolers.]
Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a way,
I think, to liberty. Yet am I better
Than one that's sick o' the gout, since he had rather
Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd
By the sure physician death, who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd
More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods, give me
The penitent instrument to pick that bolt;
Then, free for ever! Is 't enough I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd more than constrain'd; to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me than my all.
I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement: that's not my desire;
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd it;
'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake:
You rather mine, being yours; and so great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps.]

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, Sicilus Leonatus, father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the two young Leonati, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law:
Whose father then—as men report,
Thou orphans' father art—
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.
Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!
Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world,
As great Sicilius' heir.
1. Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?
Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonati seat, and cast
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?
Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O' the other's villainy?
2. Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain,
That striking in our country's cause
Fell bravely and were slain;
Our fealty and Tenantius' right
With honour to maintain.
1. Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd:
Then Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd?
Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.
Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.
Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity.
Both Bro. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightining, sitting upon an eagle; he throws a thunderbolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low,
Offend our hearing; hush! How dare you ghosts
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:

1 Cf. n. 4 stomach: appetite 12 penitent instrument: instrument of penance 13–19 Cf. n. 16 gyves: fetters 23 abatement: diminished capital 26 stamp: coin 28 You rather . . . yours; cf. n. 32 thunder-master: Jupiter 36 Rates: chides 40 Attending: awaiting 45 Lucina: goddess who assists in childbirth

59 deem: judge 69 geck: fool 77 hardiment: deeds of valor 80 adjourn'd: delayed 82 dolours: sorrows 91 synod: assembly of gods

Be not with mortal accidents oppress;
No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours.
Whom best I love I cross, to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift:
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade!
He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine;
and so, away: no further with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. Ascends.
Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell; the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us; his ascension is
More sweet than our bless'd fields; his royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing and cloys his beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.
All. Thanks, Jupiter!
Sici. The marble pavement closes; he is enter'd
His radiant roof. Away! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest. [The Ghosts] vanish.
Post. [Awakening.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot
A father to me; and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers. But—O scorn!—
Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born:
And so I am awake. Poor wretches, that depend
On greatness' favour dream as I have done;
Wake, and find nothing. But, alas! I swerve:
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,
That have this golden chance and know not why.
What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!
Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise. Reads.

'Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and he embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.'

'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue and brain not; either both or nothing;
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Enter Gaoler.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago.

Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir; but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern-bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink, sorry that you have paid too much; and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness: of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O! the charity of a penny cord; it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debitor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. Your neck, sir, is pen, book and counters; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer; for look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

Gaol. Your death has eyes in 's head, then; I have not seen him so pictur'd: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going but such as wink and will not use them.

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bring'st good news; I am called to be made free.

Gaol. I'll be hang'd, then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead. Exeunt [all but Gaoler].

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O! there were desolation of gaolers an gallowses. I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a perferment in 't. Exit.

104 delighted: delightful 118 as to foot us: as if to seize us in his talons 120 Prunes: preens cloys: claws 123 marble pavement: sky 133 swerve: err 137 book: writing 138 fangled: fond of finery 142 Whenas: when 149 Tongue: speak brain: understand

157 well cooked; cf. n. 159 the dish . . . shot; cf. n. 178 death: i.e. a death's head or skull 180 take upon: pretend 181 jump: risk 182 speed: fare 185 wink: shut their eyes 197 prone: eager 203 hath a preferment; cf. n.

Scene Fifth

[Cymbeline's Tent]
Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, Lords [Officers, and Attendants].

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made
Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart
That the poor soldier that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast
Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.
Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks
Cym. No tidings of him?
Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,
But no trace of him.
Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward; which I will add
[To Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.]
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain,
By whom, I grant, she lives. 'Tis now the time
To ask of whence you are; report it.
Bel. Sir,
In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
Further to boast were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.
Cym. Bow your knees.
Arise, my knights o' the battle: I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius and Ladies.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly
Greet you our victory? you look like Romans,
And not o' the court of Britain.
Cor. Hail, great king!
To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.
Cym. Whom worse than a physician
Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too. How ended she?
Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life;
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd
I will report, so please you: these her women
Can trip me if I err, who with wet cheeks
Were present when she finish'd.
Cym. Prithee, say.
Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you, only
Affected greatness got by you, not you;
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhorr'd your person.
Cym. She alone knew this;
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.
Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love
With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had
Ta'en off by poison.
Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is 't can read a woman? Is there more?
Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had
For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and ling'ring,
By inches waste you; in which time she purpos'd,
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to
O'ercome you with her show; yea, and in time—
When she had fitted you with her craft—to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown;
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected: so,
Despairing died.
Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
1. Lady. We did, so please your highness.
Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming: it had been vicious
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou mayst say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners: Posthumus behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that
The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit
That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter
Of you their captives, which ourself have granted:
So, think of your estate.
Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come; sufficeth,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer;
Augustus lives to think on 't; and so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd; never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like. Let his virtue join
With my request, which I'll make bold your highness
Cannot deny; he hath done no Briton harm,

5 targes: shields 13 search'd: sought 21 Cambria: Wales 35 consider: remember 46 Affected: desired

51 opening: revealing 52 bore in hand: pretended 55 prevented: anticipated 57 delicate: artful 60 mortal mineral: deadly poison 65 fitted: prepared 77 vicious: wrong 82 raz'd: blotted 86 estate: situation 92 sufficeth: it suffices 95 peculiar: personal 99 So tender . . . occasions: so considerate in attending to his duties 100 feat: dextrous virtue: merit

Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.
Cym. I have surely seen him;
His favour is familiar to me. Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own. I know not why nor wherefore
To say, 'live, boy': ne'er thank thy master; live:
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.
Imo. I humbly thank your highness.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet I know thou wilt.
Imo. No, no: alack!
There's other work in hand. I see a thing
Bitter to me as death; your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.
Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me; briefly die their joys
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.
Why stands he so perplex'd?
Cym. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more; think more and more
What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? speak;
Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?
Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me
Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal,
Am something nearer.
Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?
Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.
Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.
Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely.
[Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart.]
Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?
Arv. One sand another
Not more resembles;—that sweet rosy lad
Who died, and was Fidele. What think you?
Gui. The same dead thing alive.
Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not; forbear;
Creatures may be alike; were 't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.
Gui. But we saw him dead.
Bel. Be silent; let's see further.
Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress:
Since she is living, let the time run on
To good, or bad.
[Cymbeline and Imogen come forward.]
Cym. [To Imogen.] Come, stand thou by our side:
Make thy demand aloud.—[To Iachimo.] Sir, step you forth;
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely,
Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall
Winnow the truth from falsehood.—[To Imogen.] On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring.
Post. [Aside.] What's that to him?
Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say
How came it yours?
Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that
Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.
Cym. How! me?
Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that
Which torments me to conceal. By villainy
I got this ring; 'twas Leonatus' jewel,
Whom thou didst banish, and—which more may grieve thee,
As it doth me—a nobler sir ne'er liv'd
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord?
Cym. All that belongs to this.
Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.
Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength;
I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will
Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak.
Iach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!—it was in Rome,—accurs'd
The mansion where!—'twas at a feast—O, would
Our viands had been poison'd, or at least
Those which I heav'd to head!—the good Posthumus,—
What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were; and was the best of all
Amongst the rar'st of good ones;—sitting sadly
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak; for feature laming
The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva,
Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,
A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye.
Cym. I stand on fire.
Come to the matter.
Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. This Posthumus—
Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover—took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom we prais'd,—therein
He was as calm as virtue,—he began
His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in 't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking sots.
Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.
Iach. Your daughter's chastity, there it begins.
He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold; whereat I, wretch,
Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd with him
Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain

118 a thing: i.e. the ring on Iachimo's finger

165 to leave: for leaving 188 sadly: soberly 191 feature: proportion of parts laming: making seem deformed 192 shrine: statue straight-pight: erect 193 Postures . . . nature; cf. n. condition: character 194 shop: storehouse 195 hook of wiving; cf. n. 207 crack'd: uttered boastfully trulls: sluts 208 unspeaking sots: fools incapable of speech 211 as: as if, in comparison 213 Made scruple: expressed doubt

In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phœbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of 's car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design. Well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with simular proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet;—
Oh cunning! how I got it!—nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,—
Methinks I see him now,—

Post. [Coming forward.] Ay, so thou dost,
Italian fiend!—Ay me, most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, anything
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come. O! give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justicer. Thou king, send out
For torturers ingenious; it is I
That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter; villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do 't; the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me; every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and
Be villainy less than 'twas! O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord! hear, hear!

Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,
There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.]

Pis. O, gentlemen, help!
Mine, and your mistress! O! my Lord Posthumus,
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. Help, help!
Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How comes these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O! get thee from my sight:
Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,
The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing: I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods!
I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: 'If Pisanio
Have,' and she, 'given his mistress that confection
Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.'

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her, still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
Of no esteem; I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life, but in short time
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions. Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,
There was our error.

Gui. This is, sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?
Think that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child!
What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. [Kneeling.] Your blessing, sir.

Bel. [To Guiderius and Arviragus.] Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
You had a motive for 't.

Cym. My tears that fall
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord.

Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her it was
That we meet here so strangely; but her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and swore
If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket, which directed him

216 In suit: by suing 221 Of Phœbus' wheel: from the wheel of the chariot of the sun 222 car: chariot 230 practice: stratagem 231 simular: specious 233 renown: good name 234 averring: avouching 248 amend: make seem less vile 253 she herself: i.e. virtue hers 268 staggers: dizziness

276 tune: voice 278 stones of sulphur: thunderbolts 291 temper: compound 305 rock: precipice 314 blame ye not: i.e. am not surprised 315 motive: reason 320 naught: worthless long of: because of 324 troth: truth

To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate
My lady's honour; what became of him
I further know not.
Gui. Let me end the story:
I slew him there.
Cym. Marry, the gods forfend!
I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: prithee, valiant youth,
Deny 't again.
Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it.
Cym. He was a prince.
Gui. A most incivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing princelike; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea
If it could so roar to me. I cut off 's head;
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.
Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law. Thou'rt dead.
Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.
Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.
Bel. Stay, sir king:
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself; and hath
More of thee merited than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for. [To the Guard.] Let his arms alone;
They were not born for bondage.
Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?
Arv. In that he spake too far.
Cym. And thou shalt die for 't.
Bel. We will die all three:
But I will prove that two on 's are as good
As I have given out him. My sons, I must
For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.
Arv. Your danger's ours.
Guil. And our good his.
Bel. Have at it, then, by leave.
Thou hadst, great king, a subject who was call'd Belarius.
Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.
Bel. He it is that hath
Assum'd this age: indeed, a banish'd man;
I know not how a traitor.
Cym. Take him hence:
The whole world shall not save him.
Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons!
Bel. I am too blunt and saucy; here's my knee:
Ere I arise I will prefer my sons;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.
Cym. How! my issue!
Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—
For such and so they are—these twenty years
Have I train'd up; those arts they have as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to 't,
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For that which I did then; beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.
Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
The service that you three have done is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children:
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.
Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius;
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.
Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.
Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp.
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.
Cym. O! what, am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother
Rejoic'd deliverance more. Blest pray you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now. O Imogen!
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.
Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by 't. O my gentle brothers!

339 forfend: forbid 360–362 hath . . . scar for; cf. n. 382 Assum'd: attained 401 pleasure: caprice mere: sole 411 beaten: i.e. my being beaten 412 dear: great 413, 414 shap'd . . . end: fitted my purpose 421, 422 The service . . . tell'st; cf. n. 429 lapp'd: wrapped 431 probation: proof 442 Rejoic'd: joyed in

Have we thus met? O, never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers
When ye were so indeed.
Cym. Did you e'er meet?
Arv. Ay, my good lord.
Gui. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continued so, until we thought he died.
Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.
Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment
Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where? how liv'd you?
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met them?
Why fled you from the court, and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded,
And all the other by-dependances,
From chance to chance, but nor the time nor place
Will serve our long interrogatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting
Each object with a joy: the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.
[To Belarius.] Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever.
Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.
Cym. All o'erjoy'd
Saves these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.
Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.
Luc. Happy be you!
Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well becom'd this place and grac'd
The thankings of a king.
Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeming; 'twas a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he,
Speak, Iachimo; I had you down and might
Have made you finish.
Iach. [Kneeling.] I am down again;
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you,
Which I so often owe, but your ring first,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.
Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.
Cym. Nobly doom'd:

458 fierce abridgment: rapid narration 460 Distinction . . . rich in; cf. n. 464 your three: of you three 466 by-dependances: side issues 471 her mater: i.e. Lucius 472, 473 the counterchange . . . all; cf. n. 490 beseeming: appearance fitment: preparation 493 finish: die 504 doom'd: judged 505 freeness: generosity

We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law;
Pardon's the word to all.
Arv. You holp us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we that you are.
Post. Your servant, princes. Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness that I can
Make no collection of it; let him show
His skill in the construction.
Luc. Philarmonus!
Sooth. Here, my good lord.
Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] 'Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow: then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty.'

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.
[To Cymbeline.] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,
Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier; which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, [To Posthumus.] unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.
Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee, and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.
Cym. Well;
My peace we will begin. And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens—in justice both on her and hers—
Have laid most heavy hand.
Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,

513 spritely shows: ghostly apparitions 515 containing: contents 516 from sense: incomprehensible 517 collection: deduction 534 mollis aer: tender air 538 clipp'd: clasped

Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
The imperial Cæsar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.
Cym. Laud we the gods;
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Lud's town march:
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.
Set on there. Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. Exeunt.

FINIS

Notes

I.i.1-3. our bloods No more obey the heavens than our courtiers Still seem as does the king. Our dispositions are no more surely governed by the heavens, i.e., the stars, than are the looks of courtiers governed by the expression of the king.

I.i.29. extend him within himself. 'My praise however extensive is within his merit.' (Johnson.)

I.i.35, 36. According to Shakespeare, Cassibelan was Cymbeline's uncle, Tenantius Cymbeline's father. Holinshed gives a different genealogy.

I.i.S.d. In the Folio this stage direction is the first in Scena secudna. Most modern editors make no change of scene, as there is no change of place or lapse of time.

I.i.100. Always reserv'd my holy duty. Never forgetting my sacred filial duty of respect; the modern equivalent would be 'with all due respect to my dear father.'

I.i.115. Though ink be made of gall. 'Though the accent falls metrically on made I prefer to place it on be.' (Furness.)

I.i.119–121. I never do him wrong But he does buy my injuries, to be friends Pays dear for my offences. Whenever I do him wrong I make it appear that he has wronged me and force him to buy off my wrath; in order to be friends he is willing to assume the blame and pay dear for my offences.

I.i.133, 134. cere up my embracements from a next With bands of death. Folio reads sear up, and many former editors have explained the phrase as meaning to dry up, cause to wither etc. Furness points out that the New English Dictionary gives sear as a sixteenth and seventeenth century form of cere (i.e. to wrap in a shroud of waxed cloth), and feels that the reference to the bands of death 'leaves no doubt that the word here alludes to the cerements of death.'

I.i.173, 174. overbuys me Almost the sum he pays. 'That is, he gives himself, worth any woman, and gets in return only my almost worthless self.' (Rolfe.)

I.ii.9, 10. 'In order to spare him, Posthumus's steel sneaked roundabout Cloten's body, like a debtor trying to avoid his creditors.' (Delius.) Possibly, however, the reference is to Cloten's sword and his awkwardness in fighting.

I.ii.25, 26. The second lord plays on the word sign, interpreting it as constellation, and reflection as planetary influence.

I.iii.4. As offer'd mercy is. The clause which ends with this phrase is a good example of Shakespeare's elliptical style in Cymbeline. Imogen's meaning is obvious, viz. the loss of a letter from Posthumus would be as hard to bear as the loss of a reprieve to a criminal (or possibly as the loss of God's mercy to a sinner).

I.iii.22. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them. The eye-strings, or tendons of the eye, were supposed to crack at the loss of sight.

I.iii.40–43. Utterly worthless are the guesses of editors as to what Imogen's two charming words would have been. As the north wind shakes the buds on the trees and so prevents their growing, so Cymbeline's anger prevents this bud of love from ripening further.

I.iv.10. Dowden quotes 3 Henry VI II.i.91, 92: 'Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird, Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun.'

I.iv.12, 13. words him . . . a great deal from the matter. 'Makes the description of him very distant from the truth.' (Johnson.)

I.iv.15–17. the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him. The praise of Posthumus by those friends and followers of Imogen who bewail their separation (those that under her colors weep this lamentable divorce) tends greatly to increase his reputation. The obscurity of this sentence rises from the incorrect position of the phrase 'under her colours,' and from the plural verb 'are' where a singular is required.

I.iv.37–38. rather shunned to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experience. Posthumus means apparently that as a young man he preferred to avoid agreeing exactly with all that he heard of being guided in every action by the experience of others.

I.iv.45, 46. which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. 'Which may, undoubtedly, he publicly told.' (Johnson.)

I.iv.49. upon warrant of bloody affirmation. 'Pledging himself to seal the truth of it with his blood.' (Rolfe.)

I.iv.117. a friend. This is the First Folio reading and is intelligible: Iachimo says jocularly 'You are her friend and thus know her too well to risk much on her chastity.' Theobald altered a friend to afraid and in this reading has been followed by many editors.

I.iv.135–136. provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment. Provided that you will commend me to her generous hospitality.

I.v.67. To be depender on a thing that leans. 'To be dependent on one who is himself dependent on others.' (Furness.) In the light of the two following lines Furness's interpretation seems less satisfactory than Johnson's, 'To be dependent on something that inclines toward its fall.'

I.vi.6-9. most miserable . . . comfort. Those who have the most exalted desires are the most miserable of men (because their desires are likely to be unattainable); but happy are they, however humble, who attain their simple desires, for the fact of attainment gives a relish to (seasons) comfort.

I.vi.22. Parthian. 'The ancient Parthian manner of fighting was to shoot at an adversary while flying or pretending to fly.' (Century Dictionary.)

I.vi.37–41. which can distinguish . . . foul. Eyes which can distinguish between one star and another and between two stones of identical appearance as they lie on the beach which is covered by numbers of them. And with such precious spectacles (as our eye) can we not distinguish between fair and foul?

I.vi.48–50. 'Desire when it approached sluttery, and considered it in comparison with such neat excellence, would not only be not so allured to feed, but seized with a fit of loathing would vomit emptiness, would feel the convulsions of disgust, though, being unfed, it had nothing to eject.' (Johnson.)

I.vi.114, 115. timely knowing, The remedy then born. 'Upon timely knowledge the remedy is straightway born.' (Dowden.)

I.vi.121, 122. Takes prisoner . . . here. 'From her alone does the passion of my eye catch fire.' (Dowden.) Many editors have followed the reading of the later Folios which changed 'Fiering' of the First Folio to 'Fixing.'

I.vi.133–137. Not I . . . out. 'It is not I who divulge the utter depths of his change, inclined though I be to impart the news, but 'tis your loveliness that has conjured up this report from the innermost silence of my consciousness.' (Furness.) Probably 'inclined' should rather be taken in the sense of 'because inclined.'

II.i.1, 2. when I kissed the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away. The reference is to the game of bowls. The jack is the small bowl at which the others are aimed. The player 'kisses the jack' when his bowl touches it without moving it. Cloten's bowl was knocked away from this advantageous position by another bowler who rolled straight up.

II.i.11, 12. curtail, crop. The verb to curtail is from the obsolete word 'curtal,' meaning a horse with a docked tail; hence the second lord's feeble pun about cropping ears.

II.i.21, 22. capon . . . comb on. Both these words refer probably to the fool's cap or coxcomb.

II.ii.14. Our Tarquin. 'Our' because Iachimo is an Italian. The story of Tarquin is told by Shakespeare in The Rape of Lucrece.

II.ii.15 press the rushes. Tread upon the rushes (which, in Shakespeare's own time, were strewn upon the floors).

II.ii.19, 20. Iachimo longs to kiss Imogen's lips, 'rubies unparagon'd,' but obviously is not so foolhardy as to attempt it. The lips themselves do exquisitely, 'dearly,' wht Iachimo longs to do.

II.ii.24, 25. The white and azure refer to the white eyelids with their blue veins. Cf. Keats, Eve of St. Agnes, 'And still she slept an azure-lidded sleep.' In both cases 'the blue of heaven' in the eyelids of the sleeper is intended to denote her purity.

II.ii.29. contents o' the story. Details of the story pictured on the arras.

II.ii.36. Gordian knot. The knot tied by Gordius, king of Phrygia, which was so intricate that no one could untie it. An oracle declared that he who loosed it should be master of Asia. Alexander the Great cut it, and the oracle was fulfilled.

II.ii.47. The tale of Tereus. Tereus married Procne. According to some versions of the myth, he tired of her, pretended she was dead, invited her sister Philomela to be his wife, ravished her, and tore out her tongue. Philomela contrived to communicate with Procne. Together they killed Itys, son of Tereus, and served him up in a dish for Tereus to eat. Tereus was changed to a hawk, Procne to a swallow, Philomela to a nightingale.

II.ii.50, 51. that dawning May bare the raven's eye. That dawn may open the eye of the raven, a bird that wakes early.

II.ii.53. time. Iachimo has heard Imogen ask to be called at four. As the clock strikes he counts 'one, two, three,' and on the fourth stroke shuts the lid of the trunk saying, 'time, time.' (Ingleby.)

II.iii.2. turned up ace. The reference is to cutting a pack of cards, upon which occasion only ace is low. Ace and ass were pronounced alike: the first lord is quibbling.

II.iii.142. south-fog. 'Southerne winds vnbind humours . . . & they cause heauinesse of wits of feeling: they corrupt and destroye, they heat, and maketh men fall into sicknesse. And they breed the gout, the falling euill, itch, and the ague.' (Batman vppon Bartholme, 1582, lib. xi, chap. 3, quoted by Furness.) Compare Coriolanus I.iv.36: 'All the contagion of the south light on you!'

II.iv.7–9. in these fear'd hopes . . . debtor. If these hopes, which are mixed with fears, are realised, I shall barely have enough to repay your affection; if they are not realised, I shall die much in your debt. Tyrwhitt's emendation, seared for feared, has been followed by many editors.

II.iv.26. mingled with their courage. The First Folio reads 'wing-led with their courages.' Dowden interprets this to mean that wings of their army are led by courageous commanders. All the later Folios correct wing-led to read mingled, but retain the plural form of courage. The First Folio reading of this passage requires a rather ingenious but far-fetched interpretation.

II.iv.90, 91. strive In workmanship and value. In it the workmanship and the intrinsic value strive with each other for preëminence.

II.iv.104. likely to report themselves. So lifelike that one might expect them to speak.

II.iv.104–106. the cutter . . . out. 'The sculptor was as nature, but as nature dumb; he gave everything that nature gives but breath and motion.' (Johnson.)

III.i.23. 'The sea is made by the figure of speech a park, and the rocks a fence of oaks that pale it in.' (Porter & Clark.)

III.ii.34. For it doth physic love. 'Grief in absence keeps love in health and vigour.' (Johnson.)

III.ii.36, 37. Lovers And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike. I.e. lovers bless the bees for the wax which seals their letters; prisoners curse the bees for the wax which seals their forfeited bonds.

III.ii.41, 42. as you . . . eyes. A carelessly constructed sentence which a multitude of emendations and explanations makes no clearer. Posthumus seems to mean that a loving look from Imogen would renew and revive him, no matter how cruel the law and her father's wrath had been to him. Cf. Romeo: 'Look thou but sweet, And I am proof against their enmity.' (Romeo and Juliet II.i.114, 115.)

III.ii.65. Why should excuse be born or ere begot? 'Why contrive an excuse before the act is done for which the excuse will be necessary?' (Malone.)

III.ii.73, 74. sands That run i' the clock's behalf. 'Sands of the hour-glass that run instead of the clock.' (Collier.)

III.ii.80–82. I see . . . through. I see only the course that lies directly before me. Everything else, here, and here, and beyond, is obscure.

III.iii.18, 19. This service . . . allow'd. Belarius, in his involved style, is here, I think, expressing sentiments akin to those expressed more clearly in the Collect for Peace by the clause 'whose service is perfect freedom.' 'This servile labour of ours is not servile, being done as we do it, but being so done it is approved (allowed) or enjoyed by us.'

III.iii.27, 28. Such men receive deference from the tradesmen who made the finery, but their accounts are not cancelled (for all this deference). Theirs is no life compared with ours.

III.iii.55. which dies i' the search. Editors disagree about the antecedent of which, whether it is pain, or name, or fame and honour. The punctuation of the First Folio would indicate that fame and honour were not the antecedents, for there is a comma after fame. Whatever the antecedent, the general import of the sentence is clear.

III.iii.101–103. in as like . . . conceiving. 'That is, acting my words as graphically as his brother. While Guiderius's gestures reflect the immediate impression of Belarius's tale, Arviragus, a more imaginative hearer, heightens what he hears by his greater energy of conception.' (Herford.) Figure is used in the sense of an acted part, as in Tempest III.iii.99.

III.iv.49. Whose mother was her painting. 'Who was born of her paint-box.' (Hudson.)

III.iv.58, 59. Æneas, Sinon. The refernece is to Æneas's desertion of Dido, queen of Carthage; cf. Vergil's Æneid, Bk. IV. Sinon, a Greek, with tears and protests deceived the Trojans, and persuaded them to take the wooden horse, filled with Greek soldiers, into the city of Troy.

III.iv.83. scriptures. Imogen uses the word literally in reference to the letters of Posthumus, which she implies have been her 'sacred writings'; then she plays on the word, using Holy Scriptures as a synonym of orthodoxy, as opposed to heresy, in the next line.

III.iv.86. stomachers. Again Imogen plays on words. She removes Posthumus's letters from her bosom, saying that she will no more use them as stomachers, as ornamental breast-coverings, worn by women, were called; but she also has in mind the word stomach in its significant as courage: the letters of Posthumus will never again bring courage to her heart.

III.iv.146. This line lacks one syllable in the Folios. Many editors, following Theobald, correct this defect in metre by adding the word Cloten to the end of the line. Porter and Clark, defending the Folio reading, suggest that the time of the missing word is filled up 'by Imogen's exasperated pause, when she can think of nothing bad enough further, except his name.'

III.iv.153, 154. I' the world's volume Our Britain seems as of it, but not in 't. Britain seems like a page torn out of the volume; of it, but not in it.

III.iv.195, 196. which will make him know, If that his head have ear in music. Pisanio is, I think, referring to the music of Imogen's voice. Your very telling of your accomplishments will, he says, make him realize one of them if he has a musical ear.

III.v.12. your Grace, and you. Perhaps the you refers to Cloten, but I think not, for the farewell to Cloten seems to come in line 16, perhaps Lucius means to distinguish between the Queen and the woman, 'all joy to you as Queen and as woman'; or perhaps for you we should read yours.

III.vi.7. Foundations. Used quibbingly for (1) things which are supposedly fixed and permanent, and (2) endowed institutions, such as hospitals. Compare the following clause, 'such, I mean, where they should be relieved.'

III.vi.24. Take or lend. Take my life or give me food, or 'Take what I have before (or in the sense of ere) you give me food.' (Dowden.)

III.vi.27. Such a foe. Heavens grant me such a foe!

III.vi.77, 78. In honesty I bid for you, as I do buy. Honorably I ask for your favor, as I would honorably pay for it.

III.vi.97, 98. laying by . . . multitudes. Dispensing with the worthless tribute of fickle multitudes.

IV.ii.35. miracle. The word seems to be used in the sense of mystery, and the sentence to mean: The identity of this youth who is loved before me is a mystery.

IV.ii.78. stinking-elder. The elder was a tree of ill repute. Judas Iscariot was said to have hanged himself on an elder; black fungus droops from it; and both leaves and blossoms have an unpleasant odor.

IV.ii.105. my clothes. Cloten is obviously referring to court apparel in general, not to the clothes of Posthumus which he is wearing.

IV.ii.144–147. Being scarce . . . fear. Having scarcely the wits of a man, Cloten was not afraid even of 'roaring terrors' which would terrify an intelligent man, for defect of judgment is often the cause of (not fear as Shakespeare carelessly writes but) boldness. The Cambridge editors suggest that a line may have dropped out, and that the original sentence may have had the following purport: 'defect of judgment supplies the place of courage, while true judgment is oft the cause of fear.' Dowden's suggested emendation, cease for cause, though ingenious, is not convincing. Cease has not the true Shakespearean ring in this place.

IV.ii.202–204. I would . . . answer. I wish that revenges would seek us out and call us to account, that we might meet them with all possible strength.

IV.ii.315. Thersites' body is as good as Ajax'. Thersites, the most deformed in body and mind of all the Greeks at the siege of Troy. Ajax, a Greek warrior, gigantic in body and of great courage. Cf. Troilus and Cressida.

IV.ii.351. Upon . . . faces. This is apparently a direction from Belarius to scatter the flowers upon the faces of Imogen and Cloten; but Cloten's body is headless. Did Shakespeare forget?

IV.ii.377, 378. His foot as nimble and graceful as that of Mercury, his thigh as mighty as that of Mars, his arms as strong as those of Hercules, his face as majestic as that of Jove. These references to the gods explain the first phrase in the next line, 'Murder in heaven!'

IV.ii.380. Hecuba. Wife of Priam, king of Troy. In the player's recitation in Hamlet (II.ii.502 ff.), Shakespeare refers to 'the instant burst of clamor that she made' 'when she saw Pyrrhus . . . mincing . . . her husband's limbs.'

IV.ii.435, 436. otherwise . . . picture. 'Nature took away the life—who mutilated the body?' (Dowden.)

IV.iii.35. Your preparation can affront no less. Your army is prepared to face as many.

V.i.15. And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift. None of the many proposed emendations of this line seems necessary. Posthumus means that the sinner who is allowed to 'second ills with ills' begins to dread a future of continuous degeneration, and this fear is 'thrift' or profitable to the 'doer' or sinner.

V.iii.28–31. Stand . . . frown. Stand, or we will play the part of the Romans and will give you that beastly death which, like beasts, you are shunning and from which you may save yourselves by looking back defiantly upon the enemy.

V.iii.45, 46. slaves, The strides they victors made. This clause is parallel in construction to the preceding one. Those who came as eagles fled as chickens; those who came as victors fled as slaves.

V.iv.1. You shall not now be stol'n, you have locks upon you. 'The wit of the Gaoler alludes to the custom of putting a lock on a horse's leg when he is turned out to pasture.' (Johnson.)

V.iv.13–19. Posthumus here soliloquizes on the three steps which man must take to receive pardon and absolution, viz. contrition (II. 13), penance (II.

15–17), and satisfaction (II. 17–19). The meaning of the first four lines is clear. Line 17, Desir'd more than constrain'd, refers to the gyves, symbols of his voluntary penance: II. 17–19 signify that if satisfaction, to satisfy, be the main part of salvation, freedom, from sin, then the gods may take no less than all which he has and is, if thereby he may be freed.

V.iv.28. You rather . . . yours. Men do not weigh every coin they receive, but accept them because of their 'image and superscription'; so, although my life is not so valuable as Imogen's, yet the gods made it in their image and should the more readily, i.e. rather, take it in compensation.

V.iv.157. well cooked. The reference is to meat which is hung up, either preparatory to cooking or instead of being cooked.

V.iv.159. the dish . . . shot. 'The viands (namely, himself) pay the reckoning.' (Furness.)

V.iv.203. hath a preferment. Includes a hope for my own advancement.

V.v.193. Postures beyond brief nature. Beauties of form that surpass those created by hasty Nature.

V.v.195. hook of wiving. Physical beauty, the hook wherewith wives catch husbands.

V.v.360–362. hath More of thee merited than a band of Clotens Had ever scar for. Guiderius deserves more from the king than a whole band of men like Cloten for actions for which they hae been scarred in battle.

V.v.421, 422. The service that you three have done is more Unlike than this thou tell'st. 'I have the less reason to be incredulous because the actions you have done within my knowledge are more incredible than the story you relate.' (Johnson.)

V.v.460. Distinction should be rich in. A clearer statement should bring out fully.

V.v.472, 473. the counterchange Is severally in all. 'This is reciprocated by all.' (Rolfe.)

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present edition is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, based on that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig. Stage directions, when not bracketed, are from the First Folio; bracketed stage directions are modern.

In the following list of variants from the Oxford text, the readings of this edition precede, and Craig's readings follow, the colon. The Folio authority is given wherever involved.

I.i.133 cere: sear Ff
I.i.134 bands: bonds Ff
I.i.154 heap'st Ff: heap'st instead
I.iv.50 constant-qualified: constant, qualified Ff
I.iv.117 a friend Ff: afraid
I.iv.139 understand Ff: understand that
I.v.78 change thou chancest: chance thou changest Ff
I.v.95 primroses: prime-roses Ff
I.vi.24 Imo. reads Ff: Imo.
I.vi.26 trust Ff: truest
I.vi.143 self exhibition Ff1, 4: self-exhibition Ff2, 3
II.ii.34 sense Ff: senses
II.iii.131 foil Ff: soil
II.iv.7 fear'd Ff: sear'd
II.iv.23 order'd Ff: ordered
II.iv.26 mingled Ff2, 3, 4 (F1 wing-led): winged
II.iv.92 So rarely Ff: rarely
II.v.2 bastards Ff: bastards all
II.v.27 may be named Ff2, 3, 4 (F1 name): man may name
III.i.23 oaks Ff: rocks
III.ii.42 would even Ff: would not even
III.iv.106 mine eyeballs Ff: mine eyeballs blind
III.iv.146 nothing: F1 nothing; F2 nothing? Ff3, 4 nothing Cloten
III.iv.195 will Ff: you'll
III.v.12 your Grace, and you Ff: your Grace. Qu. And you!
III.v.54 the loudest of (th' lowd of Ff): the loudest
III.v.115 once, Ff: once
III.vi.82 After long absence Ff: After a long absence
IV.i.17 happily Ff: haply
IV.ii.147 cause of fear Ff: cease of fear
IV.ii.216 thou thyself F1 (thyself Ff2, 3, 4): how thyself
IV.ii.260 but ay: but I Ff
IV.ii.298 to our mother Ff: our mother
V.i.20 mistress; peace Ff: mistress-piece
V.iii.100 leg Ff: lag
V.iv.62 Leonati Ff: Leonati's
V.v.468 interrogatories Ff: inter-gatories

The Winter's Tale

Edited by
FREDERICK E. PIERCE

Dramatis Personae

LEONTES, King of Sicilia
MAMILLIUS, young Prince of Sicilia
CAMILLO, ANTIGONUS, CLEOMENES, DION } Four Lords of Sicilia
HERMIONE, Queen to Leontes
PERDITA, Daughter to Leontes and Hermione
PAULINA, Wife to Antigonus
EMILIA, a Lady
POLIXENES, King of Bohemia
FLORIZEL, Prince of Bohemia
OLD SHEPHERD, reputed Father of Perdita
CLOWN, his Son
AUTOLYCUS, a Rogue
ARCHIDAMUS, a Lord of Bohemia
MOPSA, DORCAS } Shepherdesses
OTHER LORDS AND GENTLEMEN AND SERVANTS
SHEPHERDS AND SHEPHERDESSES
A MARINER
A GAOLER
LADIES ATTENDING THE QUEEN
SATYRS FOR A DANCE

TIME, as Chorus

SCENE—Sometimes in Sicilia, sometimes in Bohemia.

The Winter's Tale

Introduction

Sources of the Play

The Winter's Tale is an excellent example of a novel turned into a play. That practice was common in Elizabethan times as in recent years; but with this difference, that the drama in Shakespeare's time was usually an improvement on the novel and in our own day is usually a popularized degradation of the original. The novel—or novelette, for it can be read in an hour—from which Shakespeare drew most of the plot of his Winter's Tale was Pandosto: the Triumph of Time (or The Historic of Dorastus and Fawnis), which first appeared in 1588 and was a 'best-seller' for years before Shakespeare dramatized it. At least fourteen editions of it are known to have been issued. Its author was Robert Greene, a brilliant and unfortunate author, who died near the beginning of Shakespeare's career, and died bitterly jealous of that transforming genius which was already giving hints of the masterpieces it could make from other men's crude materials.

In Greene's novel Pandosto, king of Bohemia, with his wife Bellaria entertains as his guest his old friend Egistus, king of Sicilia. Pandosto, like Leontes, becomes jealous, but more slowly and with more reason, for Bellaria, though pure, is imprudent. Franion, his cup-bearer, promises murder and escapes, as does Camillo. Bellaria, like Hermione, is accused, cleared by the oracle, and actually—not apparently—dies on learning the death of her son Garinter. Her little daughter Fawnia is abandoned on the coast of Sicilia, brought up by a shepherd, and loved by Prince Dorastus of that country. Capnio, a faithful old servant of Dorastus, aids the young lovers in their flight, as does Camillo, and brings the shepherd and 'fardel' aboard Dorastus' ship as does Shakespeare's Autolycus. The reception of the lovers at the court of Pandosto and the discovery of Fawnia's identity run closely parallel to the same events in the play, save that Pandosto, before learning Fawnia's parentage, conceives an incestuous love for his own daughter. After Fawnia's marriage Pandosto, grown melancholy with brooding over his sins against those whom he loved best, kills himself.

Shakespeare in recasting Greene's material omitted as too tragic and brutal the incestuous passion and violent death of Pandosto, and threw out as impertinent several paragraphs dealing with the life of the old shepherd. He created the characters of Antigonus, Paulina, and Autolycus, and combined the parts of Franion and Capnio in that of Camillo. He created the statue scene which ends the play, and the scene between Perdita and Polixenes (IV. iv.), for which there were no hints in the prose tale. By interchanging throughout the parts of Bohemia and Sicily he probably meant to veil the extent of his debt to a book that was still popular, although he may have believed that the suddenness of Leontes' jealousy would seem truer to life in a hot-blooded Sicilian than in a native of Central Europe. As is almost inevitable when changing a novel into a play, the action is made more rapid. For example, in the second scene of Act First events which in Greene's novel covered several weeks are made to happen in a single hour. The greatest change, however, and the greatest improvement, is in the conception of character, which throughout is more noble and subtle in Shakespeare than in his forerunner.

The closeness of Shakespeare at times to his original can be shown by comparing Hermione's defence (III.ii.20-119) with the corresponding speech of Bellaria:

'If the deuine powers bee priuy to humane actions (as no doubt they are) I hope my patience shall make fortune blushe, and my vnspotted life shall staine spightfully discredit. For although lying Report hath sought to appeach mine honor, and Suspition hath intended to soyle my credit with infamie: yet where Vertue keepeth the Forte, Report and suspition may assayle, but neuer sack: how I haue led my life before Egistus comming, I appeale Pandosto to the Gods & to thy conscience. What hath passed betwixt him and me, the Gods onely know, and I hope will presently reueale: that I loued Egistus I can not denie: that I honored him I shame not to confesse: to the one I was forced by his vertues, to the other for his dignities. But as touching lasciuious lust, I say Egistus is honest, and hope my selfe to be found without spot: for Franion, I can neither accuse him nor excuse him, for I was not priuie to his departure, and that this is true which I haue heere rehearsed, I referre myselfe to the deuine Oracle.' [ed. Grosart, 4. 260.]

Vague likenesses between The Winter's Tale and certain other books have been pointed out; but none are close enough to prove borrowing on Shakespeare's part.

The History of the Play

The Winter's Tale was first 'allowed of,' or officially approved for performance, by Sir George Buck, who assumed office as Master of the Revels in 1610; consequently, although Buck did license plays before taking office, we may reasonably assume that it was not written previous to that year. Yet it was already on the stage by May 15, 1611, for a Dr. Simon Forman saw it acted on that date and has left a written record of the fact with an analysis of the plot. The dance of twelve satyrs in IV. iv. was probably suggested by a similar dance of satyrs in Ben Jonson's Masque of Oberon, first acted on the opening day of January, 1611. It seems practically certain, therefore, that the play was finished and first staged in the spring of 1611. It was for several years following a favorite at court, and in 1613 was acted with several other Shakespearean dramas before the Prince Palatine and his bride. No Quarto editions of it exist; apparently it first appeared in print in the Folio of 1623.

After Shakespeare's death the play, despite its beauty, was unpopular and almost unnoticed for over a century, more so than many of the author's other works. Certain fantastic qualities in it—the seacoast of Bohemia, a country which for centuries had no seacoast, and the sixteen-year interval between the third and fourth acts—jarred on the new age, an age which was more fastidious in such matters than the imaginative Elizabethans had been.

In 1741, however, The Winter's Tale—'not acted 100 years,' according to the historian Genest—was revived at Goodman's Fields, and the following year at the more famous theatre of Covent Garden. Soon afterward several adaptations of parts of it were made, the most notable being that of the great actor David Garrick (1717-1779), which was played at Drury Lane theatre in 1756. The play in Garrick's adaptation begins with what was Shakespeare's fourth act. The events of sixteen years earlier are rehearsed for the benefit of the audience in a conversation between Camillo and a gentleman. Then the repentant Leontes comes to Bohemia, takes part with Polixenes and Perdita in the conversation at the shepherd's feast, and assumes the part which Shakespeare gave Camillo of comforting the lovers. Florizel and Perdita do not take ship; and the closing statue scene is in Bohemia. Garrick's version was popular for more than a generation. The prosaic ingenuity with which he dovetailed together parts of Shakespeare's great work is well illustrated in the following passage:

Perd. One of these is true,
I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.
Leon. Yea, say you so?
There shall not at your father's house, these sev'n years,
Be born another such.
Flor. O reverend, Sir!
As you would wish a child of your own youth
To meet his happiness in love, speak for me;
Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now; and with thought of like affections,
Step forth my advocate.
Leon. You touch me deep,
Deep, to the quick, sweet prince; alas! alas!
I lost a daughter, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood begetting wonder, as
Yon lovely maiden does—of that no more;—
I'll to the king your father,—this our compact,
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am friend to them and you.
[Exit Leontes and Cleomenes.

The history of the play during the nineteenth century begins with its revival by John Philip Kemble (1757-1823). In 1802 he presented it with splendid decorations and stage properties, the famous Mrs. Siddons, who was Kemble's sister, taking the part of Hermione. The comedy was revived again in 1856 by Charles Kean (1811-1868) at the Princess's theatre, where Ellen Terry, then a little girl, made her first appearance on the stage as Mamillius. Helen Faucit (1817-1898) about the middle of the century, and Mary Anderson (1859-1940) toward its close, gave brilliant interpretations of the leading female rôles. In 1910 in New York, The Winter's Tale was admirably produced under the direction of Mr. Louis Calver, 'with such a stage and accessories as, according to the latest researches, Shakespeare had at his own command.' Another important presentation was the one given by Mr. Granville Barker.

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

[Sicilia. An Antechamber in Leontes' Palace]
Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arc. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us we will be justified in our loves: for, indeed,—

Cam. Beseech you,—

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say. We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficience, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities and royal necessities made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attorneyed with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies; that they have seemed to be together, though absent, shook hands, as over a vast, and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think there is not in the world either malice or matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him. It is a gallant child; one that indeed physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh; they that went on crutches ere he was born desire yet their life to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. Exeunt.

❧ SCENE SECOND ❧

[A Room of State in the Palace]
Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenes, Camillo, [and Attendants].

Pol. Nine changes of the watery star have been
The shepherd's note since we have left our throne
Without a burden: time as long again
Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks;
And yet we should for perpetuity
Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a cipher,
Yet standing in rich place, I multiply
With one 'We thank you' many thousands moe
That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks awhile,
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to-morrow,
I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance
Or breed upon our absence; that may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say,
'This is put forth too truly!' Besides, I have stay'd
To tire your royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother,
Than you can put us to 't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leon. One seven-night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Leon. We'll part the time between 's then; and in that I'll no gainsaying.

Pol. Press me not, beseech you, so.
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world,
So soon as yours could win me: so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder
Were in your love a whip to me; my stay
To you a charge and trouble: to save both,
Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace until
You had drawn oaths from him not to stay. You, sir,
Charge him too coldly: tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction
The by-gone day proclaim'd: say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward,

Leon. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell he longs to see his son were strong:
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thwack him hence with distaffs.
[To Polixenes.] Yet of your royal presence I'll adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my lord, I'll give him my commission
To let him there a month behind the gest
Prefix'd for 's parting: yet, good deed, Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind
What lady she her lord. You'll stay?

Pol. No, madam.

Her. Nay, but you will?

Pol. I may not, verily.

Her. Verily

2 on foot: actively employed 5 Bohemia: the king of Bohemia visitation: visit 6, 7 entertainment . . . loves; cf. n. 8 Beseech: I beseech 9 freedom: privilege 12 unintelligent of: not perceiving 17 Sicilia: the king of Sicily 19 which: as 20 branch: put forth branches 21, 22 encounters: meetings 22 personal: performed in person attorneyed: performed by proxy 23 that: so that 25 vast: boundless and waste expanse 25, 26 from . . . winds; cf. n. 30 note: notice 32 physics the subject: is medicine to the king's subjects 1 watery star: moon; cf. n. 2 The shepherd's note: observed by the shepherd

6, 7 like . . . place; cf. n. 8 moe: more 10 Stay: postpone 11 part: depart 14 that may blow; cf. n. 16 is put forth: has blossomed (resulted) 19 put us to 't: prove by extreme test 22 Very sooth: in absolute truth 23 between 's: between us 31 in your love a whip to me: an injury to me, though meant in love 32 charge: expense 40 ward: fencer's guard 45 thwack: beat 46 adventure: venture 47 borrow: borrowing 48 commission: permission 49 let: allow to remain gest: date of departure; cf. n. 50 good deed: indeed 51 jar: tick 52 What lady she: any lady whatever

You put me off with limber vows; but I,
Though you would seek to unsphere the stars with oaths,
Should yet say, 'Sir, no going.' Verily,
You shall not go: a lady's 'verily' 's
As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?
My prisoner, or my guest? by your dread 'verily,'
One of them you shall be.
Pol. Your guest, then, madam:
To be your prisoner should import offending;
Which is for me less easy to commit
Than you to punish.
Her. Not your gaoler then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you
Of my lord's tricks and yours when you were boys:
You were pretty lordings then.
Pol. We were, fair queen,
Two lads that thought there was no more behind
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.
Her. Was not my lord
The verier wag o' the two?
Pol. We were as twinn'd lambs that did frisk i' the sun,
And bleat the one at the other: what we chang'd
Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd
That any did. Had we pursu'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd heaven
Boldly, 'not guilty;' the imposition clear'd
Hereditary ours.
Her. By this we gather
You have tripp'd since.
Pol. O! my most sacred lady,
Temptations have since then been born to 's; for
In those unfledg'd days was my wife, a girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young playfellow.
Her. Grace to boot!
Of this make no conclusion, lest you say
Your queen and I are devils; yet, go on:
The offences we have made you do we'll answer;
If you first sinn'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not
With any but with us.
Leon. Is he won yet?
Her. He'll stay, my lord.
Leon. At my request he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.
Her. Never?
Leon. Never, but once.
Her. What! have I twice said well? when was 't before?
I prithee tell me; cram 's with praise, and make 's
As fat as tame things: one good deed, dying tongueless,
Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.

57 limber: easily evaded 58 unsphere, etc; cf. n. 63 pay your fees; cf. n. 82 chang'd: exchanged 88 the imposition, etc.; cf. n. 97 Grace to boot: Heavenly Grace help us 113 tame things: well-fed pets one good deed, etc; cf. n.

Our priases are our wages: you may ride 's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs ere
With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:
My last good deed was to entreat his stay:
What was my first? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you: O! would her name were Grace.
But once before I spoke to the purpose: when?
Nay, let me have 't; I long.
Leon. Why, that was when
Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand
And clap thyself my love: then didst thou utter,
'I am yours for ever.'
Her. 'Tis grace indeed.
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice:
The one for ever earn'd a royal husband,
The other for some while a friend.
[Giving her hand to Polixenes.]
Leon. [Aside.] Too hot, too hot!
To mingle friendship far is mingling bloods.
I have tremor cordis on me: my heart dances;
But not for joy; not joy. This entertainment
May a free face put on, derive a liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And well become the agent: 't may, I grant:
But to be paddling palms and pinching fingers,
As now they are, and making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere
The mort o' the deer; O! that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows. Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?
Mam. Ay, my good lord.
Leon. I' fecks?
Why, that's my bawcock What! hast smutch'd thy nose?
They say it is a copy out of mine. Come, captain,
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,
Are all call'd neat. Still virginalling
Upon his palm! How now, you wanton calf!
Art thou my calf?
Mam. Yes, if you will my lord.
Leon. Thou want'st a rough pash and the shoots that I have,
To be full like me: yet they say we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so,
That will say anything: but were they false
As o'er-dy'd blacks, as wind, as waters, false
As dice are to be wish'd by one that fixes
No bourn 'twixt his and mine, yet were it true
To say this boy were like me. Come, sir page,
Look on me with your welkin eye: sweet villain!
Most dear'st! my collop! Can thy dam?—may 't be?—
Affection! thy intention stabs the centre:
Thou dost make possible things not so held,

117 heat: race over to the goal: to come to the point 120 would her name were Grace: would that that were called a gracious deed! 126 clap: declare by clapping shy hand into mine 134 tremor cordis: trembling of the heart 136 free: innocent 137 fertile: generous 142 mort o' the deer: note on hunter's horn announcing death of the deer 143 brows; cf. n. 146 I' fecks: in faith 147 bawcock: fine lad smutch'd: soiled 151 neat: cattle virginalling: playing with fingers; cf. n. 155 pash: head shoots: horns 159 o'er-dy'd blacks: mourning garments rotten from over-dyeing or worn by hypocritical mourners 161 bourn: boundary 163 welkin: sky-blue villain: little rogue 164 my collop: a piece of my flesh dam: mother 165, 166 Affection . . . dost; cf. n.

Communicat'st with dreams;—how can this be?—
With what's unreal thou co-active art,
And fellow'st nothing: then, 'tis very credent
Thou mayst co-join with something; and thou dost,
And that beyond commission, and I find it,
And that to the infection of my brains
And hardening of my brows.
Pol. What means Sicilia?
Her. He something seems unsettled.
Pol. How, my lord!
Leon. What cheer? how is 't with you, best brother?
Her. You look
As if you held a brow of much distraction:
Are you mov'd, my lord?
Leon. No, in good earnest.
How sometimes nature will betray its folly,
Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime
To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recoil
Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreech'd,
In my green velvet coat, my dagger muzzled,
Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous:
How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,
This squash, this gentleman. Mine honest friend,
Will you take eggs for money?
Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.
Leon. You will? why, happy man be his dole! My brother,
Are you so fond of your young prince as we
Do seem to be of ours?
Pol. If at home, sir,
He 's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter,
Now my sworn friend and then mine enemy;
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all:
He makes a July's day short as December,
And with his varying childness cures in me
Thoughts that would thick my blood.
Leon. So stands this squire
Offic'd with me. We two will walk, my lord,
And leave you to your graver steps. Hermione,
How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's welcome:
Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap:
Next to thyself and my young rover, he's
Apparent to my heart.
Her. If you would seek us,
We are yours i' the garden: shall 's attend you there?
Leon. To your own bents dispose you: you'll be found,
Be you beneath the sky.—[Aside.] I am angling now,
Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!
How she holds up the neb, the bill to him!
And arms her with the boldness of a wife
To her allowing husband!
[Exeunt Polixenes, Hermione, and Attendants.]
Gone already!
Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one!

Go play, boy, play; thy mother plays, and I
Play too, but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue
Will hiss me to my grave: contempt and clamour
Will be my knell. Go play, boy, play. There have been,
Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckolds ere now;
And many a man there is even at this present,
Now, while I speak this, holds his wife by the arm,
That little thinks she has been sluic'd in 's absence,
And his pond fish'd by his next neighbour, by
Sir Smile, his neighbour: nay, there's comfort in 't,
Whiles other men have gates, and those gates open'd,
As mine, against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind
Would hang themselves. Physic for 't there is none:
It is a bawdy planet, that will strike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful, think it,
From east, west, noth, and south: be it concluded,
No barricado for a belly: know 't;
It will let in and out the enemy
With bag and baggage. Many a thousand on 's
Have the disease, and feel 't not. How now, boy!
Mam. I am like you, they say.
Leon. Why, that 's some comfort.
What! Camillo there!
Cam. Ay, my good lord.
Leon. Go play, Mamillius; thou 'rt an honest man.
[Exit Mamillius.]
Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.
Cam. You had much ado to make his anchor hold:
When you cast out, it still came home.
Leon. Didst note it?
Cam. He would not stay at your petitions; made
His business more material.
Leon. Didst perceive it?
[Aside.] They're here with me already, whispering, rounding,
'Sicilia is a so-forth.' 'Tis far gone,
When I shall gust it last. How came 't, Camillo,
That he did stay?
Cam. At the good queen's entreaty.
Leon. At the queen's, be 't: 'good' should be pertinent;
But so it is, it is not. Was this taken
By any understaning pate but thine?
For thy conceit is soaking; will draw in
More than the common blocks: not noted, is 't,
But of the finer natures? by some severals
Of head-piece extraordinary? lower messes
Perchance are to this business purblind? say.
Cam. Business, my lord! I think most understand
Bohemia stays here longer.
Leon. Ha!
Cam. Stays here longer.
Leon. Ay, but why?
Cam. To satisfy your highness and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.
Leon. Satisfy!
The entreaties of your mistress! satisfy!

170 something: somewhat 191 squash: an unripe pea-pod 192 take eggs for money: allow yourself to be imposed on 194 dole: lot in life 202 childness: childish humors 203 thick my blood: thicken my blood, cause melancholy 205 Offic'd with: in relation to 210 Apparent: heir apparent 212 shall 's: shall we 213 bents: inclinations 217 neb: mouth 219 allowing: approving 221 a fork'd one: with forked horns

223 issue: outcome 236 strike: blast 237 predominant: strongest in influence; cf. n. 250 came home: came back without catching 253 material: important 255 here with me: making mocking gestures when mentioning me rounding: whispering 257 gust: perceive 261 taken: understood 263 conceit: intelligence soaking: capable of absorbing 264 blocks: heads 265 severals: individuals 266 lower messes: men of inferior rank who ate, or messed, at a lower table

Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo,
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-councils, wherein, priest-like, thou
Hast cleans'd my bosom: I from thee departed
Thy penitent reform'd; but we have been
Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.
Cam. Be it forbid, my lord!
Leon. To bide upon 't, thou art not honest; or,
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward,
Which hoxes honesty behind, restraining
From course requir'd; or else thou must be counted
A servant grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent; or else a fool
That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake drawn,
And tak'st it all for jest.
Cam. My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful;
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Among the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth. In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest: these, my lord,
Are such allow'd infirmities that honesty
Is never free of. But, beseech your Grace,
Be plainer with me; let me know my trespass
By its own visage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.
Leon. Ha' not you seen, Camillo,—
But that 's past doubt; you have, or your eye-glass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn,—or heard,—
For to a vision so apparent, rumour
Cannot be mute,—or thought,—for cogitation
Resides not in that man that does not think,—
My wife is slippery! If thou wilt confess,—
Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought,—then say
My wife 's a hobby-horse; deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench that puts to
Before her troth-plight: say 't and justify 't.
Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken: 'shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less
Than this; which to reiterate were sin
As deep as that, though true.
Leon. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses?
Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career
Of laughter with a sigh?—a note infallible
Of breaking honesty,—horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift?
Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes
Blind with the pin and web but theirs, theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked? is this nothing?
Why, then the world and all that's in 't is nothing;
The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.
Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes;
For 'tis most dangerous.
Leon. Say it be, 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my lord.
Leon. It is; you lie, you lie:
I say thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave,
Or else a hovering temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.
Cam. Who does infect her?
Leon. Why, he that wears her like her medal, hanging
About his neck, Bohemia: who, if I
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour as their profits,
Their own particular thrifts, they would do that
Which should undo more doing: ay, and thou,
His cup-bearer,—whom I from meaner form
Have bench'd and rear'd to worship, who mayst see
Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven,
How I am galled,—mightst bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me were cordial.
Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no rash potion,
But with a lingering dram that should not work
Maliciously like poison: but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov'd thee,—
Leon. Make that thy question, and go rot!
Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation; sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
Which to preserve is sleep; which being spotted
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps?
Give scandal to the blood o' the prince my son,
Who I do think is mine, and love as mine,
Without ripe moving to 't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?
Cam. I must believe you, sir:

279 chamber-councils: private affairs 285 bide: dwell, lay emphasis 287 hoxes: hamstrings 289 grafted in my serious trust: whom I have trusted implicitly 298 puts forth: reveals itself 304 execution: successful performance later 313 eye-glass: crystalline lens of the eye 315 vision so apparent: spectacle so obvious 318 slippery: inconstant 318-320 If . . . thought; cf. n. 321 hobby-horse: immoral woman 322 flax-wench: female flax-dresser puts to: sins 325 clouded: shamefully accused; cf. n. 326 present: immediate 'shrew: beshrew, curse

334 honesty: chastity 337 pin and web: cataracs 355 glass: hour-glass 357 medal; cf. n. 361 thrifts: advantages 363 meaner form: lower seat 364 bench'd: given a seat of authority worship: dignity, honor 366 bespice: poison 367 wink: sleep 370 rash: speedy 372 Maliciously: violently 373 crack: flaw 374 sovereignly: above all others 376 question: subject for thought 378 appoint: dress 384 ripe moving to 't: ample cause for it 385 blench: start aside from his course

I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for 't;
Provided that when he 's remov'd, your highness
Will take again your queen as yours at first,
Even for your son's sake; and thereby for sealing
The injury of tongues in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.
Leon. Thou dost advise me
Even so as I mine own course have set down:
I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.
Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen. I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.
Leon. This is all:
Do 't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do 't not, thou split'st thine own.
Cam. I'll do 't, my lord.
Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me. Exit.
Cam. O miserable lady! But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes; and my ground to do 't
Is the obedience to a master; one
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his so too. To do this deed
Promotion follows. If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do 't; but since
Nor brass nor stone nor parchment bears not one,
Let villainy itself forswear 't. I must
Forsake the court: to do 't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter Polixenes.

Pol. This is strange: methinks
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak?—
Good day, Camillo.
Cam. Hail, most royal sir!
Pol. What is the news i' the court?
Cam. None rare, my lord.
Pol. The king hath on him such a countenance
As he had lost some province and a region
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment, when he,
Wafting his eyes to the contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding
That changes thus his manners.
Cam. I dare not know, my lord.
Pol. How! dare not! do not! Do you know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis thereabouts;
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must,
And cannot say you dare not. Good Camillo
Your chang'd complexions are to me a mirror
Which shows me mine chang'd too; for I must be
A party in this alteration, finding
Myself thus alter'd with 't.
Cam. There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper; but
I cannot name the disease, and it is caught
Of you that yet are well.
Pol. How! caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:
I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo,—
As you are certainly a gentleman, thereto
Clerk-like experienc'd, which no less adorns
Our gentry than our parents' noble names,
In whose success we are gentle,—I beseech you,
If you know aught which does behove my knowledge
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison it not
In ignorant concealment.
Cam. I may not answer.
Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well!
I must be answer'd. Dost thou hear, Camillo;
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man
Which honour does acknowledge,—whereof the least
Is not this suit of mine,—that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented if to be;
If not, how best to bear it.
Cam. Sir, I will tell you;
Since I am charg'd in honour and by him
That I think honourable. Therefore mark my counsel,
Which must be even as swiftly follow'd as
I mean to utter it, or both yourself and me
Cry 'lost,' and so good night!
Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I am appointed him to murder you.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Cam. By the king.
Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen 't or been an instrument
To vice you to 't, that you have touch'd his queen
Forbiddenly.
Pol. O, then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly, and my name
Be yok'd with his that did betray the Best!
Turn then my freshest reputation to
A savour, that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive; and my approach be shunn'd,
Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection
That e'er was heard or read!
Cam. Swear his thought over
By each particular star in heaven and
By all their influences, you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon

387 fetch off: make away with 390 sealing: sealing up, ending 391 injury of tongues: injury caused by gossip 419 break-neck: ruinous course 431 contrary: opposite direction falling: letting fall 437 intelligent: communicative thereabouts: about that

449 Make me not sighted: do not represent me as saving eyes basilisk: fabulous monster whose glance was fatal 450 sped: fared 451 regard: look 452 thereto: in addition 453 Clerk-like: like a scholar 454 gentry: noble birth 455 In whose success: in succession or descent from whom gentle: of high rank 458 ignorant: causing ignorance 462 parts: traits and qualities 465 incidency: happening 476 him: the one 482 vice: force 492 Swear his thought over: try to overcome his suspicion by oaths

As or by oath remove or counsel shake
The fabric of his folly, whose foundation
Is pil'd upon his faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.
Pol. How should this grow?
Cam. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you
Shall bear along impawn'd, away to-night!
Your followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twos and threes at several posterns
Clear them o' the city. For myself, I'll put
My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain;
For, by the honour of my parents, I
Have utter'd truth, which, if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemn'd by the king's own mouth, thereon
His execution sworn.
Pol. I do believe thee:
I saw his heart in 's face. Give me thy hand:
Be pilot to me and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My ships are ready and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago. This jealousy
Is for a precious creature: as she's rare
Must it be great, and, as his person's mighty
Must it be violent, and, as he does conceive
He is dishonour'd by a man which ever
Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must
In that he made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me:
Good expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo;
I will respect thee as a father if
Thou bear'st my life off hence: let us avoid.
Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The keys of all the posterns: please your highness
To take the urgent hour. Come, sir, away! Exeunt.

ACT SECOND ❧ SCENE FIRST

[A Room in the Palace]
Enter Hermione, Mamillius, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.
First Lady. Come, my gracious lord,
Shall I be your playfellow?
Mam. No, I'll none of you.
First Lady. Why, my sweet lord?
Mam. You'll kiss me hard and speak to me as if
I were a baby still. I love you better.
Sec. Lady. And why so, my lord?
Mam. Not for because
Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say,
Become some women best, so that there be not
Too much hair there, but in a semicircle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.
Sec. Lady. Who taught you this?
Mam. I learn'd it out of women's faces. Pray now,
What colour are your eyebrows?
First Lady. Blue, my lord.
Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.
Sec. Lady. Hark ye;
The queen your mother rounds apace: we shall
Present our services to a fine new prince
One of these days; and then you 'd wanton with us,
If we would have you.
First Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly bulk: good time encounter her!
Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come, sir, now
I am for you again: pray you, sit by us,
And tell 's a tale.
Mam. Merry or sad shall 't be?
Her. As merry as you will.
Mam. A sad tale 's best for winter.
I have one of sprites and goblins.
Her. Let's have that, good sir.
Come on, sit down: come on, and do your best
To fright me with your sprites; you're powerful at it.
Mam. There was a man,—
Her. Nay, come, sit down; then on.
Mam. Dwelt by a churchyard. I will tell it softly;
Yond crickets shall not hear it.
Her. Come on then,
And give 't me in mine ear.

[Enter Leontes, Antigonus, Lords, and Others,]

Leon. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?
First Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them: never Saw I men scour so on their way: I ey'd them
Even to their ships
Leon. How blest am I
In my just censure, in my true opinion!
Alack, for lesser knowledge! How accurs'd
In being so blest! There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge
Is not infected; but if one present
The abhorr'd ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,
With violent hefts. I have drunk, and seen the spider.
Camillo was his help in this, his pandar:
There is a plot against my life, my crown;
All 's true that is mistrusted: that false villain
Whom I employ'd was pre-employ'd by him:
He has discover'd my design, and I
Remain a pinch'd thin; yea, a very trick
For them to play at will. How came the posterns

496 or . . . or: either . . . or 498 continue: last as long as 504 trunk: body 505 impawn'd: as a pledge 507 posterns: small gates in city walls 508 Clear them o': get them away from 510 discovery: revelation uncertain: undecided 518 places: official positions 526 Profess'd: professed friendship 528-530 Cf. n. 532 avoid: depart Scene One S. d.: cf. n.

12 so that: provided that 24 wanton: play 29 for you: at your service 46 scour: hasten 49 censure: judgment 50 Alack, for lesser knowledge: would I had known less! 53 partake no venom; cf. n. 56 gorge: throat 57 hefts: retchings 62 discover'd: revealed 63 pinch'd: ridiculous trick: trifle, toy

So easily open?
First Lord. By his great authority;
Which often hath no less prevail'd than so
On your command.
Leon. I know 't too well.
[To Hermione.] Give me the boy: I am glad you did not nurse him:
Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.
Her. What is this? sport?
Leon. Bear the boy hence; he shall not come about her;
Away with him!— [Exit Mamillius, attended.]
and let her sport herself
With that she's big with; for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.
Her. But I'd say he had not,
And I'll be sworn you would believe my saying,
Howe'er you lean to the nayward,
Leon. You, my lords,
Look on her, mark her well; be but about
To say, 'she is a goodly lady,' and
The justice of your hearts will thereto add,
' 'Tis pity she's not honest, honourable:'
Priase her but for this her without-door form,—
Which, on my faith deserves high speech,—and straight
The shrug, the hum or ha, these petty brands
That calumny doth use,—O, I am out!—
That mercy does, for calumny will sear
Virtue itself: these shrugs, these hums and ha's,
When you have said 'she 's goodly,' come between,
Ere you can say 'she 's honest.' But be 't known,
From him that has most cause to grieve it should be,
She's an adulteress.
Her. Should a villain say so,
The most replenish'd villain in the world,
He were as much more villain: you, my lord,
Do but mistake.
Leon. You have mistook, my lady,
Polixenes for Leontes. O thou thing!
Which I'll not call a creature of thy place,
Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,
Should a like language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leave out
Betwixt the prince and beggar: I have said
She's an adultress; I have said with whom:
More, she 's a traitor, and Camillo is
A federary with her, and one that knows
What she should shame to know herself
But with her most vile principal, that she 's
A bed-swerver, even as bad as those
That vulgars give bold'st titles; ay, and privy
To this their late escape.
Her. No, by my life,
Privy to none of this. How will this grieve you
When you shall come to clearer knowledge that
You thus have publish'd me! Gentle my lord,
You scarce can right me throughly then to say
You did mistake.
Leon. No; if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,
The centre is not big enough to bear
A schoolboy's top. Away with her to prison!
He who shall speak for her is afar off guilty
But that he speaks.
Her. There 's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable. Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are; the want of which vain dew
Perchance shall dry your pities; but I have
That honourable grief lodg'd here which burns
Worse than tears drown. Beseech you all, my lords,
With thoughts so qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me; and so
The king's will be perform'd!
Leon. [To the Guards.] Shall I be heard?
Her. Who is 't that goes with me? Beseech your highness,
My women may be with me; for you see
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools;
There is no cause: when you shall know your mistress
Has deserv'd prison, then abound in tears
As I come out: this action I now go on
Is for my better grace. Adieu, my lord:
I never wish'd to see you sorry; now
I trust I shall. My women, come; you have leave.
Leon. Go, do our bidding: hence!
[Exeunt Queen guarded, and Ladies.]
First Lord. Beseech your highness call the queen again.
Ant. Be certain what you do, sir, lest your justice
Prove violence: in the which three great ones suffer,
Yourself, your queen, your son.
First Lord. For her, my lord,
I dare my life lay down, and will do 't, sir,
Please you to accept it, that the queen is spotless
I' the eyes of heaven and to you: I mean,
In this which you accuse her.
Ant. If it prove
She 's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where
I lodge my wife; I'll go in couples with her;
Than when I feel and see her no further trust her;
For every inch of woman in the world,
Ay, every dram of woman's flesh is false,
If she be.
Leon. Hold your peaces!
First Lord. Good my lord,—
Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves.
You are abus'd, and by some putter-on
That will be damn'd for 't; would I knew the villain,
I would land-damn him. Be she honour-flaw'd,—
I have three daughters; the eldest is eleven,
The second and the third, nine and some five;
If this prove true, they'll pay for 't: by mine honour,

82 nayward: contrary 87 honest: chaste 88 without-door form: external appearance 91 out: wrong, like an actor who has forgotten his part 99 replenish'd: complete 104 place: high rank 111 federary: confederate, accomplice 113 principal: leader insin 114 bed-swerver: adultress 115 vulgars: the vulgar 120 publish'd: denounced publicly

121 throughly: thoroughly 125 centre: earth 127 afar off: indirectly 131 aspect: position and influence of a planet 137 qualified: moderated 138 measure: judge 143 fools: a term of endearment, not contempt 146 action: legal accusation 157 Please you: if you please 161, 162 I'll . . . wife; cf.n. 170 abus'd: deceived putter-on: instigator, plotter 172 land-damn; cf. n.

I'll geld them all; fourteen they shall not see,
To bring false generations: they are co-heirs;
And I had rather glib myself than they
Should not produce fair issue.
Leon. Cease! no more.
You smell this business with a sense as cold
As is a dead man's nose; but I do see 't and feel 't,
As you feel doing thus, and see withal
The instruments that feel.
Ant. If it be so,
We need no grave to bury honesty:
There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy earth.
Leon. What! lack I credit?
First Lord. I had rather you did lack than I, my lord,
Upon this ground; and more it would content me
To have her honour true than your suspicion,
Be blam'd for 't how you might.
Leon. Why, what need we
Commune with you of this, but rather follow
Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness
Imparts this; which if you,—or stupefied
Or seeming so in skill,—cannot or will not
Relish a truth like us, inform yourselves
We need no more of your advice: the matter,
The loss, the gain, the ordering on 't, is all
Properly ours.
Ant. And I wish, my liege,
You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overture.
Leon. How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity,
Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation
But only seeing, all other circumstances
Made up to the deed, doth push on this proceeding:
Yet, for a greater confirmation,—
For in an act of this importance 'twere
Most piteous to be wild,—I have dispatch'd in post
To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency. Now, from the oracle
They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,
Shall stop or spur me. Have I done well?
First Lord. Well done, my lord.
Leon. Though I am satisfied and need no more
Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
Give rest to the minds of others, such as he
Whose ignorant credulity will not
Come up to the truth. So have we thought it good
From our free person she should be confin'd,
Lest that the treachery of the two fled hence
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us:
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.
Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. Exeunt.

177 co-heirs: equal heirs in default of sons 178 glib: geld 183 Cf. n. 196 forceful instigation: strong impulse or incitement 200 Relish: appreciate 206 overture: disclosure 211-214 Which. . . deed; cf. n. 217 wild: hasty post: haste 218 Delphos; cf. n. 220 stuff'd sufficiency: ample ability 229 free: accessible to everybody

Scene Second

[At the Gate of a Prison]
Enter Paulina [and Attendants].

Paul. The keeper of the prison, call to him;
Let him have knowledge who I am.— [Exit an Attendant.]
Good lady,
no court in europe is too good for thee;
What dost thou then in prison?

[Enter Attendant with the Gaoler.]

Now, good sir,
You know me, do you not?
Gaol. For a worthy lady
And one whom much I honour.
Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the queen.
Gaol. I may not, madam: to the contrary
I have express commandment.
Paul. Here 's ado,
To lock up honesty and honour from
The access of gentle visitors! Is 't lawful, pray you,
To see her women? any of them? Emilia?
Gaol. So please you, madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I
Shall bring Emilia forth.
Paul. I pray now, call her.
Withdraw yourselves. [Exeunt Attendants.]
Gaol. And, madam,
I must be present at your conference.
Paul. Well, be 't so, prithee. [Exit Gaoler.]
Here's such ado to make no stain a stain
As passes colouring.

[Enter Gaoler, with Emilia.]

Dear gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious lady?
Emil. As well as one so great and so forlorn
May hold together. On her frights and griefs,—
Which never tender lady hath borne greater,—
She is something before her time deliver'd.
Paul. A boy?
Emil. A daughter; and a goodly babe,
Lusty and like to live: the queen receives
Much comfort in 't: says, 'My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you.'
Paul. I dare be sworn:
These dangerous unsafe lunes i' the king, beshrew them!
He must be told on 't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take 't upon me.
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister,
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more. Pray you, Emilia,
Commend my best obedience to the queen:

27 colouring: glossing over 36 like: likely 40 lunes: lunatic freaks beshrew: curse

If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll show it to the king and undertake to be
Her advocate to the loud'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight of the child:
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades when speaking fails.
Emil. Most worthy madam,
Your honour and your goodness is so evident
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no lady living
So meet for this great errand. Please your ladyship
To visit the next room, I'll presently
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer,
Who but to-day hammer'd of this design,
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Lest she should be denied.
Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from 't
As boldness from my bosom, let it not be doubted
I shall do good.
Emil. Now be you blest for it!
I'll to the queen. Please you, come something nearer.
Gaol. Madam, if 't please the queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incur to pass it,
Having no warrant.
Paul. You need not fear it, sir:
The child was prisoner to the womb, and is
By law and process of great nature thence Freed and enfranchis'd; not a party to
The anger of the king, nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen.
Gaol. I do believe it.
Paul. Do not you fear: upon mine honour, I
Will stand betwixt you and danger. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Room in the Palace]
Enter Leontes, Servants, Antigonus, and Lords.

Leon. Nor night, nor day, no rest; it is but weakness
To bear the matter thus; mere weakness. If
The cause were not in being,—part o' the cause,
She the adultress; for the harlot king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
And level of my brain, plot-proof; but she
I can hook to me: say, that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again. Who 's there?
First Atten. [Advancing.] My lord?
Leon. How does the boy?
First Atten. He took good rest to-night;
'Tis hop'd his sickness is discharg'd.
Leon. To see his nobleness!
Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on 't in himself,
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
And downright languish'd. Leave me solely: go,
See how he fares. [Exit Attendant.]
Fie, fie! no thought of him;
The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty,
And in his parties, his alliance; let him be
Until a time may serve: for present vengeance,
Take it on her. Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall she within my power.

Enter Paulina [with a Child].

First Lord. You must not enter.
Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me:
Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
Than the queen's life? a gracious innocent soul,
More free than he is jealous.
Ant. That 's enough.
Sec. Atten. Madam, he hath not slept to-night; commanded
None should come at him.
Paul. Not so hot, good sir;
I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you,
That creep like shadows by him and do sigh
At each his needless heavings, such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking: I
Do come with words as med'cinal as true,
Honest as either, to purge him of that humour
That presses him from sleep.
Leon. What noise there, ho?
Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference
About some gossips for your highness.
Leon. How!
Away with that audacious lady! Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me:
I knew she would.
Ant. I told her so, my lord,
On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.
Leon. What! canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonesty he can: in this,
Unless he take the course that you have done,
Commit me for committing honour, trust it,
He shall not rule me.
Ant. La you now! you hear;
When she will take the rein I let her run;
But she'll not stumble.
Paul. Good my liege, I come,
And I beseech you, hear me, who professes
Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient counsellor, yet that dares
Less appear so in comforting your evils
Than such as most seem yours: I say, I come
From your good queen.
Leon. Good queen!

55 free: magnanimous 56 thriving issue: successful result 57 meet: well fitted 58 presently: instantly 60 hammer'd of: thought over 61 minister: agent 64 wit: wisdom 5 blank: white spot in the middle of target 6 level: aim 8 moiety: part, usually half

16 on: of 19 solely: alone 31 second: lending support 41 each: each of heavings: sighings 44 humour: cf.n. 48 gossips: godparents for the child 59 Commit . . . committing: imprison . . . putting in practice 68 comforting your evils: encouraging your evil acts

Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen; I say, good queen;
And would by combat make her good, so were I
A man, the worst about you.
Leon. Force her hence.
Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me: on mine own accord I'll off;
But first I'll do my errand. The good queen,
For she is good, hath brought you forth a daughter:
Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing.
[Laying down the Child.]
Leon. Out!
A mankind witch! Hence with her, out o' door:
A most intelligencing bawd!
Paul. Not so;
I am as ignorant in that as you
In so entitling me, and no less honest
Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.
Leon. Traitors!
Will you not push her out? Give her the bastard.
[To Antigonus.] Thou dotard! thou art woman-tir'd, unroosted
By thy dame Partlet here. Take up the bastard;
Take 't up, I say; give 't to thy crone.
Paul. For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess by that forced baseness
Which he has put upon 't!
Leon. He dreads his wife.
Paul. So I would you did; then, 'twere past all doubt,
You'd call your children yours.
Leon. A nest of traitors!
Ant. I am none, by this good light.
Paul. Nor I; nor any
But one that 's here, and that 's himself; for he
The sacred honour of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander,
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's; and will not,—
For, as the case now stands, it is a curse
He cannot be compell'd to 't,—once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten
As ever oak or stone was sound.
Leon. A callat
Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband
And now baits me! This brat is none of mine;
It is the issue of Polixenes:
Hence with it; and, together with the dam
Commit them to the fire!
Paul. It is yours;
And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,
'So like you, 'tis the worse.' Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father; eye, nose, lip,
The trick of 's frown, his forehead, nay, the valley,
The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek, his smiles,
The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger:
And thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colours
No yellow in 't; lest she suspect, as he does,
Her children not her husband's.
Leon. A gross hag!
And, lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her tongue.
Ant. Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself
Hardly one subject.
Leon. Once more, take her hence.
Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.
Leon. I'll ha' thee burn'd.
Paul. I care not:
It is a heretic that makes the fire,
Not she which burns in 't. I'll not call you tyrant;
But this most cruel usage of your queen,—
Not able to produce more accusation
Than your own weak-hing'd fancy,—something savours
Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.
Leon. On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her! Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life? she durst not call me so
If she did know me one. Away with her!
Paul. I pray you do not push me; I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord; 'tis yours: Jove send her
A better guiding spirit! What need these hands?
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so: farewell; we are gone. Exit.
Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this.
My child! away with 't!—even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence
And see it instantly consum'd with fire:
Even thou and none but thou. Take it up straight:
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,—
And by good testimony,—or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine. If thou refuse
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire;
For thou sett'st on thy wife.
Ant. I did not, sir:
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in 't.
First Lord. We can, my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.
Leon. You are liars all.
First Lord. Beseech your highness, give us better credit:
We have always truly serv'd you, and beseech you
So to esteem of us; and on our knees we beg,
As recompense of our dear services
Past and to come, that you do change this purpose,
Which being so horrible, so bloody, must
Lead on to some foul issue. We all kneel.
Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blows.
Shall I live on to see this bastard kneel
And call me father? Better burn it now

77 hand: lay hands on 82 mankind: mannish 83 intelligencing: acting as go-between 91 woman-tir'd: hen-pecked 92 dame Partlet: lecturing wife; cf. n. 96 forced baseness: arbitrarily imposed title of bastard 112 callat: disreputable woman 127 got: begot

129 yellow: the color symbolizing jealousy 132 lozel: worthless rascal 168 proper: own 172 fellows: comrades 180 dear: loving

Than curse it then. But, be it; let it live:
It shall not neither.—[To Antigonus.] You, sir, come you hither;
You that have been so tenderly officious
With Lady Margery, your midwife there,
To save this bastard's life,—for 'tis a bastard.
So sure as this beard 's grey,—what will you adventure
To save this brat's life?
Ant. Anything, my lord,
That my ability may undergo,
And nobleness impose: at least, thus much:
I'll pawn the little blood which I have left,
To save the innocent: anything possible.
Leon. It shall be possible. Swear by this sword
Thou wilt perform my bidding.
Ant. I will, my lord.
Leon. Mark and perform it—seest thou!—for the fail
Of any point in 't shall not only be
Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongu'd wife,
Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoin thee,
As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry
This female bastard hence; and that thou bear it
To some remote and desert place quite out
Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it,
Without more mercy, to it own protection,
And favour of the climate. As by strange fortune
It came to us, I do in justice charge thee,
On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture,
That thou commend it strangely to some place,
Where chance may nurse or end it. Take it up.
Ant. I swear to do this, though a present death
Had been more merciful. Come on, poor babe:
Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens
To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they say,
Casting their savageness aside have done
Like offices of pity. Sir, be prosperous
In more than this deed does require! And blessing
Against this cruelty fight on thy side,
Poor thing, condemn'd to loss! Exit [with the Child].
Leon. No; I'll not rear
Another's issue.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please your highness, posts
From those you sent to the oracle are come
An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion,
Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Hasting to the court.
First Lord. So please you, sir, their speed
Hath been beyond account.
Leon. Twenty-three days
They have been absent: 'tis good speed; foretells
The great Apollo suddenly will have
The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords;
Summon a session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal lady; for, as she hath
Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have
A just and open trial. While she lives
My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me,
And think upon my bidding. Exeunt.

191 Lady Margery: a contemptuous term 193 this: Antigonus' 203 fail: failure 211 it: its 215 commend: entrust strangely: as a stranger 223 require: deserve 225 loss: being abandoned 234 beyond account: unaccountable 237 suddenly: promptly

ACT THIRD

SCENE FIRST

[A Town in Sicilia]
Enter Cleomenes and Dion.

Cleo. The climate's delicate, the air most sweet,
Fertile the isle, the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.
Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits,—
Methinks I so should term them,—and the reverence
Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice!
How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was i' the offering!
Cleo. But of all, the burst
And the ear-deafening voice o' the oracle,
Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense,
That I was nothing.
Dion. If the event o' the journey
Prove as successful to the queen,—O, be 't so!—
As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on 't.
Cleo. Great Apollo
Turn all to the best! These proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.
Dion. The violent carriage of it
Will clear or end the business: when the oracle,
Thus by Apollo's great divine seal'd up,
Shall the contents discover, something rare
Even then will rush to knowledge.—
[To an Attendant.] Go:—fresh horses!
And gracious be the issue! Exeunt.

SCENE SECOND

[A Court of Justice]
Enter Leontes, Lords, Officers.

Leon. This sessions, to our great grief we pronounce,
Even pushes 'gainst our heart: the party tried
The daughter of a king, our wife, and one
Of us too much belov'd. Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in justice, which shall have due course,
Even to the guilt or the purgation.
Produce the prisoner.
Offi. It is his highness' pleasure that the queen
Appear in person here in court. Silence!

[Enter Hermione guarded; Paulina and Ladies attending.]

Leon. Read the indictment.
Offi. [Reads.] 'Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, King

5 habits: garments 14 event: outcome 22 carriage: management 28 gracious: favorable 7 purgation: acquittal

of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night.'

Her. Since what I am to say must be but that
Which contradicts my accusation, and
The testiomony on my part no other
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot me
To say 'Not guilty:' mine integrity
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so receiv'd. But thus: if powers divine
Behold our human actions, as they do,
I doubt not then but innocence shall make
False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience. You, my lord, best know,—
Who least will seem to do so,—my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern, though devis'd
And play'd to take spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince, here standing
To prate and talk for life and honour 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, which I would spare: for honour,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrent I
Have strain'd, to appear thus: if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, or in act or will
That way inclining, harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry fie upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did
Than to perform it first.

Her. That's true enough;
Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.

Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mistress of
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes,—
With whom I am accus'd,—I do confess
I lov'd him as in honour he requir'd,
With such a kind of love as might become
A lady like me; with a love even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done I think had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you and toward your friend, whose love had spoke,
Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: all I know of it
Is that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting no more than I, are ignorant.

Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in 's absence.

Her. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams:
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it. As you were past all shame,—
Those of your fact are so,—so past all truth:
Which to deny concerns more than avails; for as
Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,
No father owning it,—which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee than it,—so thou
Shalt feel our justice, in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.

Her. Sir, spare your threats:
The bug which you would fright me with I seek.
To me can life be no commodity:
The crown and comfort of my life, your favour,
I do give lost; for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went. My second joy,
And first-fruits of my body, from his presence
I am barr'd, like one infectious. My third comfort,
Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast,
The innocent milk in its most innocent mouth,
Hal'd out to murder: myself on every post
Proclaim'd a strumpet: with immodest hatred
The child-bed privilege denied, which 'longs
To women of all fashion: lastly, hurried
Here to this place, i' the open air, before
I have got strength of limit. Now, my liege,
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to die? Therefore proceed.
But yet hear this; mistake me not; no life,
I prize it not a straw:—but for mine honour,
Which I would free, if I shall be condemn'd
Upon surmises, all proofs sleeping else
But what your jealousies awake, I tell you
'Tis rigour and not law. Your honours all,
I do refer me to the oracle:
Apollo be my judge!

First Lord. This your request
Is altogether just: therefore, bring forth,
And in Apollo's name, his oracle. [Exeunt certain Officers.]

Her. The Emperor of Russia was my father:
O! that he were alive, and here beholding

16 pretence: purpose, design 23 boot: profit 34 pattern: give examples of 35 take: bewitch, fascinate 36 owe: own 38 hopeful: inspiring hope 47 encounter: behavior uncurrent: extraordinary 48 strain'd: transgressed beyond due limits 55 gainsay: deny 60-62 More . . . acknowledge: cf. n.

77 Wotting: knowing 82 Cf. n. 87 fact: deed 88 concerns more than avails: is more significant than helpful to you 92 passage: procedure 95 bug: bugbear 96 commodity: advantage 102 Starr'd most unluckily: born under stars of most evil influence 105 immodest: immoderate 107 fashion: kinds 109 of limit: from a limited, or normal, period of recuperation

His daughter's trial; that he did but see
The flatness of my misery; yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

[Enter Officers, with Cleomenes and Dion.]

Offi. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice,
That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have
Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought
This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's priest, and that since then
You have not dar'd to break the holy seal,
Nor read the secrets in 't.

Cleo. } All this we swear.
Dion. }

Leon. Break up the seals, and read.

Offi. [Reads.] 'Hermione is chaste; Polixenes blameless; Camillo a true subject; Leontes a jealous tyrant; his innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir if that which is lost be not found.'

Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo!

Her. Praised!

Leon. Hast thou read truth?

Offi. Ay, my lord; even so
As it is here set down.

Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle:
The sessions shall proceed: this is mere falsehood.

[Enter a Servant.]

Serv. My lord the king, the king!

Leon. What is the business?

Ser. O sir! I shall be hated to report it:
The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed, is gone.

Leon. How! gone!

Ser. Is dead.

Leon. Apollo's angry; and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. [Hermione swoons.]
How now, there!

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen:—look down,
And see what death is doing.

Leon. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover:
I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion:
Beseech you, tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life.—

[Exeunt Paulina and Ladies, with Hermione.]

Apollo, pardon
My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle!
I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo,
Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy;
For, being transported by my jealousies
To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose
Camillo for the minister to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command; though I with death and with
Reward did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he, most humane
And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest
Unclasp'd my practice, quit his fortunes here.
Which you knew great, and to the certain hazard
Of all incertainties himself commended,
No richer than his honour: how he glisters
Thorough my rust! and how his piety
Does my deeds make the blacker!

[Enter Paulina.]

Paul. Woe the while!
O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it,
Break too!

First Lord. What fit is this, good lady?

Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
What wheels? racks? fires? What flaying? boiling
In leads, or oils? what old or newer torture
Must I receive, whose every word deserves
To taste of thy most worst? Thy tyranny,
Together working with thy jealousies,
Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
For girls of nine, O! think what they have done,
And then run mad indeed, stark mad; for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.
That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 'twas nothing;
That did but show thee of a fool, inconstant
And damnable ingrateful; nor was 't much
Thou wouldst have poison'd good Camillo's honour
To have him kill a king; poor trespasses,
More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon
The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter
To be or none or little; though a devil
Would have shed water out of fire ere done 't:
Nor is 't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts,—
Thoughts high for one so tender,—cleft the heart
That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answer: but the last,—O lords!
When I have said, cry, 'woe!'—the queen, the queen,
The sweetest, dearest creature's dead, and vengeance for 't
Not dropp'd down yet.

First Lord. The higher powers forbid!

Paul. I say she's dead; I'll swear 't: if word nor oath
Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring
Tincture or lustre in her lip, her eye,
Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you
As I would do the gods. But, O thou tyrant!
Do not repent these things, for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren mountain, and still winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on;
Thou canst not speak too much: I have deserv'd

126 flatness: absoluteness 148 mere: pure 152 conceit: imagination 153 speed: fortune 175 tardied: delayed

180 Unclasp'd: revealed; cf. n. practice: plotting 182 incertainties: uncertain events 183 glisters: glitters 184 Thorough: through 187 lace: cord for lacing the bodice 194 most worst: worst 199 spices: foretastes 201 oft: as 221 Tincture: color 225 stir: i.e., remove from thy guilty record 228 still: always

All tongues to talk their bitterest.
First Lord. Say no more:
Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault
I' the boldness of your speech.
Paul. I am sorry for 't:
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent. Alas! I have show'd too much
The rashness of a woman: he is touch'd
To the noble heart. What's gone and what's past help
Should be past grief: do not receive affliction
At my peition; I beseech you, rather
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege,
Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your queen,—lo, fool again!—
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children;
I'll not remember you of my own lord,
Who is lost too: take your patient to you,
And I'll say nothing.
Leon. Thou didst speak but well,
When most the truth, which I receive much better
Than to be pitied of thee. Prithee, bring me
To the dead bodies of my queen and son:
One grave shall be for both: upon them shall
The causes of their death appear, unto
Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit
The chapel where they lie, and tears shed there
Shall be my recreation: so long as nature
Will bear up with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come and lead me
To these sorrows. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[Bohemia. A desert country near the sea]
Enter Antigonus, [with the] Babe; and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art perfect, then, our ship hath touch'd upon
The deserts of Bohemia?
Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear
We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
The heavens with that we have in hand are angry,
And frown upon 's.
Ant. Their sacred wills be done! Go, get aboard;
Look to thy bark: I'll not be long before
I call upon thee.
Mar. Make your best haste, and go not
Too far i' the land: 'tis like to be loud weather;
Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon 't.
Ant. Go thou away:
I'll follow instantly.
Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid of the business. Exit.
Ant. Come, poor babe:
I have heard, but not believ'd, the spirits o' the dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
Appear'd to me last night, for ne'er was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,
So fill'd, and so becoming: in pure white robes,
Like very sanctity, she did approach
My cabin where I lay; thrice bow'd before me,
And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
Became two spouts: the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her: 'Good Antigonus,
Since fate, against thy better disposition,
Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep and leave it crying; and, for the babe
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita,
I prithee, call 't: for this ungentle business,
Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see
Thy wife Paulina more': and so, with shrieks,
She melted into air. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect myself, and thought
This was so and no slumber. Dreams are toys;
Yet for this once, yea, superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do believe
Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that
Apollo would, this being indeed the issue
Of King Polixenes, it should here be laid,
Either for life or death, upon the earth
Of its right father. Blossom, speed thee well!
[Laying down Babe.]
There lie; and there thy character: there these;
[Laying down a bundle.]
Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, pretty,
And still rest thine. The storm begins: poor wretch!
That for thy mother's fault art thus expos'd
To loss and what may follow. Weep I cannot,
But my heart bleeds, and most accurs'd am I
To be by oath enjoin'd to this. Farewell!
The day frowns more and more: thou art like to have
A lullaby too rough. I never saw
The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour!
Well may I get aboard! This is the chase:
I am gone for ever. Exit, pursued by a bear.

[Enter a Shepherd.]

Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancientry, stealing, fighting. Hark you now! Would any but these boiled brains of nineteen and two-and-twenty hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep; which I fear the wolf will sooner find than the master: if anywhere I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, browsing of ivy. Good luck, an 't be thy will! what have we here? Mercy on 's, a barne; a very pretty barne! A boy or a child, I wonder? A pretty one, a very pretty one; sure some scape: though I am

244 minded: reminded 249 remember: remind 1 perfect: certain 5 blusters: storms 14 keep: live

36 for: because 43 toys: trifles 44 superstitiously: with religious reverence 45 squar'd: ruled 51 character: written means of identification 52, 53 Which . . . thine; cf. n. 61 the chase: a hunted wild beast 63 ten; cf. n. 66 ancientry: old people 67 boiled brains: hot heads 72 barne: child child: girl 73 scape: transgression

not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentle-woman in the scape. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work; they were warmer that got this than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll tarry till my son come; he hollaed but even now. Whoa, ho, hoa!

Enter Clown.

Clo. Hilloa, loa!

Shep. What! art so near? If thou 'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What ailest thou, man?

Clo. I have seen two such sights by sea and by land! but I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky: betwixt the firmament and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shep. Why, boy, how is it?

Clo. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore! but that's not to the point. O! the most pieous cry of the poor souls; sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast, and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a hogshead. And then for the land-service: to see how the bear tore out his shoulderbone; how he cried to me for help and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman. But to make an end of the ship: to see how the sea flap-dragoned it: but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them; and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.

Shep. Name of mercy! when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman: he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!

Clo. I would you had been by the ship's side, to have helped her: there your charity would have lacked footing.

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself: thou mettest with things dying, I with things new born. Here 's a sight for thee; look thee, bearing-cloth for a squire's child! Look thee here: take up, take up, boy; open 't. So, let 's see: it was told me, I should be rich by the fairies: this is some changeling.—Open 't. What's within, boy?

Clo. You're a made old man: if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold! all gold!

Shep. This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove so: up with 't, keep it close: home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still, requires nothing but secrecy. Let my sheep go. Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your findings. I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curst but when they are hungry. If there be any of him left, I'll bury it.

Shep. That 's a good deed. If thou mayst discern by that which is left of him what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clo. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him i' the ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on 't.

Exeunt.

S.d. Clown: country bumpkin 85 bodkin: small pointed instrument 91 yest: foam 92 land-service: military, as compared with naval, service; used humorously 95, 96 flap-dragoned; cf. n. 108, 109 bearing-cloth: infant's christening robe squire's: gentleman's 111 changeling: elfin child left by fairies in place of stolen human one 114 well to live: well to do 118 next: nearest 121 curst: savage 125 Marry: an exclamation, from the name of the Virgin Mary

ACT FOURTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Time, the Chorus.

Time. I, that please some, try all, both joy and terror
Of good and bad, that make and unfold error,
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not a crime
To me or my swift passage, that I slide
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried
Of that wide gap; since it is in my power
To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour
To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass
The same I am, ere ancient'st order was
Or what is now receiv'd: I witness to
The times that brought them in; so shall I do
To the freshest things now reigning, and make stale
The glistering of this present, as my tale
Now seems to it. Your patience this allowing,
I turn my glass and give my scene such growing
As you had slept between. Leontes leaving,—
The effects of his fond jealousies so grieving,
That he shuts up himself,—imagine me,
Gentle spectators, that I now may be
In fair Bohemia; and remember well,
I mention'd a son o' the king's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wondering: what of her ensues
I list not prophesy; but let Time's news
Be known when 'tis brought forth. A shepherd's daughter,
And what to her adheres, which follows after,
Is th' argument of Time. Of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse ere now:
If never, yet that Time himself doth say
He wishes earnestly you never may.

Exit.

❧ SCENE SECOND ❧

[Bohemia. A Room in the Palace of Polixenes]
Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 'tis a sickness denying thee anything; a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years since I saw my country: though I have for the most part been aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me; to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so, which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services by leaving me now. The need I have of thee thine

8 one self-born: one and the self-same 11 receiv'd: accepted 18 grieving: grieving over 25 Equal with wondering: as much as in admiration 26 list: wish to 28 adheres: is related 29 argument: subject-matter 4 been aired: lived 6 feeling: deeply felt 7 o'erween: rate myself too highly own goodness hath made: better not to have had thee than thus to want thee. Thou, having made me businesses which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself or take away with thee the very services thou hast done; which if I have not enough considered,—as too much I cannot,—to be more thankful to thee shall be my study, and my profit therein, the heaping friendships. Of that fatal country, Sicilia, prithee speak no more, whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou callest him, and reconciled king, my bother; whose loss of his most precious queen and children are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when sawest thou the Prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues.

Cam. Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince. What his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown; but I have missingly noted he is of late much retired from court, and is less frequent to his princely exercises than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service which look upon his removedness; from whom I have this intelligence, that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Cam. I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence; but, I fear, the angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place; where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question with the shepherd; from whose simplicity I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Prithee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo!—We must disguise ourselves. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage]
Enter Autolycus, singing.

'When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh! the doxy, over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.

'The white sheet bleaching on the hedge,
With heigh! the sweet birds, O, how they sing!
Doth set my pugging tooth on edge;
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.
'The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,
With, heigh! with, heigh! the thrush and the jay,
Are summer songs for me and my aunts,
While we lie tumbling in the hay.'

I have served Prince Florizel, and in my time
wore three-pile; but now I am out of service:

'But shall I go mourn for that, my dear?
The pale moon shines by night;
And when I wander here and there,
I then do most go right.

'If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sow-skin bowget,
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.'

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser linen. My father named me Autolycus; who being, as I am, littered under Mercury, was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. With die and drab I purchased this caparison, and my revenue is the silly cheat. Gallows and knock are too powerful on the highway: beating and hanging are terrors to me: for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me see: Every 'leven wether tods; every tod yields pound and odd shilling: fifteen hundred shorn, what comes the wool to?

Aut. [Aside.] If the springe hold, the cock's mine.

Clo. I cannot do 't without compters, Let me see; what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? 'Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice' what will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nose-gays for the shearers, three-man song-men all, and very good ones; but they are most of them means and basses: but one puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes. I must have saffron, to colour the warden pies; mace, dates,—none; that's out of my note:—nutmegs seven; a race or two of ginger,—but that I may I beg;—four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o' the sun.

Aut. O! that ever I was born! [Grovelling on the ground.]

Clo. I' the name of me!—

Aut. O! help me, help me! pluck but off these rags, and then death, death!

Clo. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, sir! the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions.

Clo. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a horseman or a footman?

16 heaping friendships: increase of friendly acts 23 gracious: upright, righteous 24 approved: tested 27 missingly: grieving at his absence 32 removedness: absence intelligence: news 37 note: celebrity 40 angle: fish-hook 42 question: conversation 1 peer: show slightly 2 doxy: beggar's mistress 4 winter's pale: cf. n. 7 pugging: thieving

11 aunts: mistresses (thieves' slang) 14 three-pile: most costly kind of velvet 20 bowget: budget, big wallet 23 Cf. n. 24, 25 littered under Mercury: cf. n. 26 By means of dice and lewd women I acquired this clothing 27 silly cheat: petty thieving gallows and knock: fear of hanging and of the officer's blow 30 tods: yields a tod, twenty-eight pounds of wool 33 springe: bird-hunter's noose cock: woodcock, a slang term for a fool 34 compters: pieces of metal used in making calculations 38 lays it on: manages lavishly 39 three-man song-men: singers of songs in three parts 40 means: altos 41 puritan: cf. n. 42 saffron: orange-red substance used for coloring cookery warden: made of the warden pear 43 note: list race: root 45 raisins o' the sun: sun-dried grapes

Aut. A footman, sweet sir, a footman.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he hath left with thee: if this be a horseman's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee: come, lend me thy hand. [Helping him up.]

Aut. O! good sir, tenderly, O!

Clo. Alas, poor soul!

Aut. O! good sir; softly, good sir! I fear, sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now! canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear sir: [Picks his pocket.] good sir, softly. You ha' done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir: no, I beseech you, sir. I have a kinsman not past three-quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going: I shall there have money, or anything I want: offer me no money, I pray you! that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

Aut. A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with trol-my-dames: I knew him once a servant of the prince. I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

Clo. His vices, you would say: there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it, to make it stay there, and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices, I would say, sir. I know this man well: he hath been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server, a bailiff; then he compassed a motion of the Prodigal Son, and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clo. Out upon him! Prig, for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, sir; he, sir, he: that's the rogue that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia: if you had but looked big and spit at him, he'd have run.

Aut. I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better than I was: I can stand and walk. I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-faced sir; no, sweet sir.

Clo. Then fare thee well: I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing. Exit.

Aut. Prosper you, sweet sir! Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too. If I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrolled, and my name put in the book of virtue.

Song. 'Jog on, jog on, the footpath way,
And merrily hent the stile-a:
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.' Exit.

78, 79 trol-my-dames: a game in which balls were 'trolled' through arches set on a board 84 no more but abide: barely make a brief stay 86 ape-bearer: showman who carries a trained monkey 87 compassed: acquired motion: puppet show 91 Prig: thief 110 unrolled: stricken from the roll of thieves 113 hent: get over

Scene Fourth

[A Lawn before the Shepherd's Cottage]
Enter Florizel and Perdita.

Flo. These your unusual weeds to each part of you
Do give a life: no shepherdess, but Flora
Peering in April's front. This your sheep-shearing
Is as a meeting of the petty gods,
And you the queen on 't.

Per. Sir, my gracious lord,
To chide at your extremes it not becomes me:
O! pardon, that I name them. Your high self,
The gracious mark o' the land, you have obscur'd
With a swain's wearing, and me, poor lowly maid,
Most goddess-like prank'd up. But that our feasts
In every mess have folly, and the feeders
Digest it with a custom, I should blush
To see you so attired,—swoon, I think,
To show myself a glass.

Flo. I bless the time
When my good falcon made her flight across
Thy father's ground.

Per. Now, Jove afford you cause!
To me the difference forges dread: your greatness
Hath not been us'd to fear. Even now I tremble
To think, your father, by some accident,
Should pass this way as you did. O, the Fates!
How would he look, to see his work, so noble,
Vilely bound up? What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrow'd flaunts, behold
The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend
Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves,
Humbling their deities to love, have taken
The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellow'd; the green Neptune
A ram, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god,
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now. Their transformations
Were never for a piece of beauty rarer,
Nor in a way so chaste, since my desires
Run not before mine honour, nor my lusts
Burn hotter than my faith.

Per. O! but, sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the king.
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life.

Flo. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these forc'd thoughts, I prithee, darken not
The mirth o' the feast: or I'll be thine, my fair,
Or not my father's; for I cannot be Mine own, nor anything to any, if
I be not thine: to this I am most constant,
Though destiny say no. Be merry, gentle;

1 weeds: garments 3 Peering: appearing front: van or beginning 7 extremes: extravagances of conduct 9 mark o' the land: landmark or model of the nation 10 wearing: clothing 11 prank'd up: decked out 13 with a custom: from force of habit 14 swoon: cf. n. 20 difference: difference in rank 26 flaunts: finery 31-34 Cf. n. 39 faith: fidelity 47 forc'd: unnatural

Strangle such thoughts as these with anything
That you behold the while. Your guests are coming:
Lift up your countenance, as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptial which
We two have sworn shall come.
Per. O lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious!
Flo. See, your guests approach:
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

[Enter Shepherd, with Polixenes and Camillo disguised; Clown, Mopsa, Dorcas, and Others.]

Shep. Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon
This day she was both pantler, butler, cook;
Both dame and servant; welcom'd all, serv'd all,
Would sing her song and dance her turn; now here,
At upper end o' the table, now i' the middle;
On his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire
With labour and the thing she took to quench it,
She would to each one sip. You are retir'd,
As if you were a feasted one and not
The hostess of the meeting: pray you, bid
These unknown friends to 's welcome; for it is
A way to make us better friends, more known.
Come, quench your blushes and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o' the feast: come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.
Per. [To Polixenes.] Sir, welcome:
It is my father's will I should take on me
The hostess-ship o' the day. [To Camillo.] You're welcome, sir.
Give me those flowers there, Dorcas. Reverend sirs,
For you there's rosemary and rue; these keep
Seeming and savour all the winter long:
Grace and remembrance be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!
Pol. Shepherdess,—
A fair one are you,—well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.
Per. Sir, the year growing ancient,
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyvors,
Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind
Our rustic garden's barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.
Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,
Do you neglect them?
Per. For I have heard it said
There is an art which in their piedness shares
With great creating nature.
Pol. Say there be;
Yet nature is made better by no mean
But nature makes that mean: so, over that art,
Which you say adds to nature, is an art
That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race: this is an art
Which does mend nature, change it rather, but
The art itself is nature.
Per. So it is.
Pol. Then make your garden rich in gillyvors,
And do not call them bastards.
Per. I'll not put
The dibble in earth to set one slip of them;
No more than, were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say, 'twere well, and only therefore Desire to breed by me. Here's flowers for you;
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun,
And with him rises weeping: these are flowers
Of middle summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. You're very welcome.
Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.
Per. Out, alas!
You'd be so lean, that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through. Now, my fair'st friend,
I would I had some flowers o' the spring that might Become your time of day; and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing: O Proserpina!
For the flowers now that frighted thou let'st fall
From Dis's waggon! daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength, a malady
Most incident to maids; bold oxlips and
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one. O! these I lack
To make you garlands of, and my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er!
Flo. What! like a corse?
Per. No, like a bank for love to lie and play on;
Not like a corse; or if,—not to be buried,
But quick and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers:
Methinks I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun pastorals: sure this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.
Flo. What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so; so give alms;
Pray so; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too: when you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that; move still, still so,
And own no other function: each your doing,

61 Address yourself: make ready sprightly: in sprightly manner 64 pantler: servant in charge of pantry 84 Seeming: beauty of shape savour: fragrance 85 Grace and remembrance: cf. n. 93 gillyvors: gillyflowers, pinks (?) 100, 101 There . . . nature: cf. n. 103 mean: instrument

116 dibble: gardener's tool to make holes for planting 120 Cf. n. 133 Proserpina: cf. n. 139 Cytherea's: Venus's 143 crown imperial: an imported flower from Asia Minor, the fritilaria imperialis 144 flower-de-luce: iris 150 quick: alive 152 Whitsun pastorals: cf. n. 162 each your doing: each act of yours

So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deed,
That all your acts are queens.
Per. O Doricles!
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood which fairly peeps through it,
Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You woo'd me the false way.
Flo. I think you have
As little skill to fear as I have purpose
To put you to 't. But, come; our dance, I pray.
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair
That never mean to part.
Per. I'll swear for 'em.
Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass that ever
Ran on the green-sord: nothing she does or seems
But smacks of something greather than herself;
Too noble for this place.
Cam. He tells her something
That makes her blood look out. Good sooth, she is
The queen of curds and cream.
Clo. Come on, strike up.
Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, garlic,
To mend her kissing with.
Mop. Now, in good time!
Clo. Not a word, a word: we stand upon our manners.
Come, strike up. [Music.]
Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.
Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is this
Which dances with your daughter?
Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy feeding; but I have it
Upon his own report and I believe it:
He looks like sooth. He says he loves my daughter:
I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water as he'll stand and read
As 'twere my daughter's eyes; and, to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another best.
Pol. She dances featly.
Shep. So she does anything, though I report it
That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master! if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in: I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs for man or woman, of all sizes; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves: he has the prettiest love-songs for maids, so without bawdry, which is strange; with such delicate burdens of dildos and fadings, 'jump her and thump her'; and where some stretch-mouthed rascal would, as it were, mean mischief and break a foul gap into the matter, he makes the maid to answer, 'Whoop, do me no harm, good man;' puts him off, slights him with 'Whoop, do me no harm, good man.'

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares?

Serv. He hath ribands of all the colours i' the rainbow; points more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; inkles, caddisses, cambrics, lawns: why, he sings 'em over, as they were gods or goddesses. You would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleeve-hand and the work about the square on 't.

Clo. Prithee, bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in 's tunes. [Exit Servant.]

Clo. You have of these pedlars, that have more in them than you'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolycus, singing.

'Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cyprus black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace-amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Golden quoifs and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel;
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy;
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry:
Come buy.'

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me; but being enthralled as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain ribands and gloves.

Mop. I was promised them against the feast; but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than that, or there be liars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promised you: may be he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids? will they wear their plackets where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time, when you are going to bed, or kiln-hole, to whistle off these secrets, but you must be tittle-tattling before all

163 singular: characteristic of you, unique particular: detail 167 large: extravagant 169 give you out: declare you 173 skill: reason 175 turtles: turtle-doves 179 sord: sward 183 sooth: truth 194 feeding: tract of pasture 201 another: the other 202 featly: nimbly 208 tabor: small drum 210 tell: count as: as if

218 burdens: refrains 218, 219 Cf. n. 219 stretch-mouthed: foul-mouthed 224 brave: fine 225 admirable conceited: wonderfully witty 226 unbraided: unfaded 227 ribands: ribbons 228 points: tags with lacings for fastening hose to doublet or jacket 229 inkles: broad linen tape caddisses: garters of worsted tape 230 lawns: fine silks 231 smock: woman's undergarment 232 sleeve-hand: cuff work about the square: embroidery about the bosom 236 You have of these: there are some 238 go about: make an effort 240 Cyprus: crape 241 sweet: perfumed 243 Bugle-bracelet: bracelet of tube-shaped glass beads 245 quoifs: women's headdresses stomachers: ornamental coverings for bosom 247 poking-sticks: metal rods to adjust plaits of ruffs 255 against: in time for 262 plackets: openings in petticoats 263 kiln-hole: big fire-place where women made malt (?)

our guests? 'Tis well they are whispering: clamour your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done. Come, you promised me a tawdry lace and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad; therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I hope so, sir; for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? ballads?

Mop. Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print, a-life, for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune, how a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden; and how she longed to eat adders' heads and toads carbonadoed.

Mop. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true, and but a month old.

Dor. Bless me from marrying a usurer!

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to 't, one Mistress Tale-porter, and five or six honest wives' that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

Mop. Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by: and let's first see moe ballads; we'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad of a fish that appeared upon the coast on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman and was turned into a cold fish for she would not exchange flesh with one that loved her. The ballad is very pitiful and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too: another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why, this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of 'Two maids wooing a man': there's a scarce a maid westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou 'lt bear a part thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on 't a month ago.

Aut. I can bear my part; you must know 'tis my occupation: have at it with you.

Aut. 'Get you hence, for I must go,
Where it fits not you to know.'

Dor. 'Whither?'

Mop. 'O! whither?'

Dor. 'Whither?'

Mop. 'It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.'

Dor. 'Me too: let me go thither.'

Mop. 'Or thou go'st to the grange or mill.'

Dor. 'If to either, thou dost ill.'

Aut. 'Neither.'

Dor. 'What, neither?'

Aut. 'Neither.'

Dor. 'Thou hast sworn my love to be.'

Mop. 'Thou hast sworn it more to me:
Then whither go'st? say whither?'

Clo. We'll have this song out anon by ourselves: my father and the gentlemen are in sad talk, and we'll not trouble them: come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I'll buy for you both. Pedlar, let's have the first choice. Follow me, girls.

[Exit with Dorcas and Mopsa.]

Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song. 'Will you buy any tape,
Or lace for your cape,
My dainty duck, my dear-a?
Any silk, any thread,
Any toys for your head,
Of the new'st and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the pedlar;
Money's a meddler,
That doth utter all men's ware-a.' Exit.

[Enter a Servant.]

Serv. Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that have made themselves all men of hair; they call themselves Saltiers; and they have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols, because they are not in 't; but they themselves are o' the mind,—if it be not too rough for some that know little but bowling,—it will pelase plentifully.

Shep. Away! we'll none on 't; here has been too much homely foolery already. I know, sir, we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us: pray, let's see these four threes of herdsmen.

Serv. One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squier,

Shep. Leave your prating: since these good men are pleased, let them come in: but quickly now.

Serv. Why, they stay at door, sir.

Here a dance of twelve Satyrs.

Pol. [To Shep.] O father! you'll know more of that hereafter. [To Camillo.] Is it not too far gone? 'Tis time to part them. He's simple and tells much. [To Florizel.] How now, fair shepherd!
Your heart is full of something that does take
Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young,
And handed love as you do, I was wont
To load my she with knacks: I would have ransack'd
The pedlar's silken treasury and have pour'd it
To her acceptance; you have let him go
And nothing marted with him. If your lass
Interpretation should abuse and call this
Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited
For a reply, at least if you make a care

265 clamour: silence 267 tawdry lace: necklace; cf. n. 269 cozened: cheated 275 charge: value 277 a-life: on my life, dearly 281 carbonadoed: sliced for broiling 290 anon: immediately 303 passing: surpassingly 319 grange: farmhouse 328 sad: serious 329 Wenches: girls 339 meddler: a go-between 340 utter: put in circulation, market 342 neat-herds: cowherds 343 men of hair: men dressed as hairy satyrs Saltiers: blunder for satyrs 344 gallimaufry: hotch-potch 354 squier: measure 364 handed: held the hand of 365 she: lady knacks: knick-knacks 368 marted: traded 369 Interpretation should abuse: should misinterpret 370 straited: put in straits

Of happy holding her.
Flo. Old sir, I know
She prizes not such trifles as these are.
The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and lock'd
Up in my heart, which I have given already,
But not deliver'd. O! hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem,
Hath sometime lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand,
As soft as dove's down, and as white as it,
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow
That's bolted by the northern blasts twice o'er.
Pol. What follows this?
How prettily the young swain seems to wash
The hand was fair before! I have put you out:
But to your protestation: let me hear
What you profess.
Flo. Do, and be witness to 't.
Pol. And this my neighbour too?
Flo. And he, and more
Than he, and men, the earth, the heavens, and all;
That, were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy, were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve, had force and knowledge
More than was ever man's, I would not prize them
Without her love: for her employ them all;
Commend them and condemn them to her service
Or to their own perdition.
Pol. Fairly offer'd.
Cam. This shows a sound affection.
Shep. But, my daughter,
Say you the like to him?
Per. I cannot speak
So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.
Shep. Take hands; a bargain;
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to 't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her portion equal his.
Flo. O! that must be
I' the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder. But, come on;
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.
Shep. Come, your hand;
And, daughter, yours.
Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, beseech you.
Have you a father?
Flo. I have; but what of him?
Pol. Knows he of this?
Flo. He neither does nor shall.
Pol. Methinks a father
Is, at the nuptial of his son, a guest
That best becomes the table. Pray you, once more,
Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid
With age and altering rheums? can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? and again does nothing
But what he did being childish?
Flo. No, good sir:
He has his health and ampler strength indeed
Than most have of his age.
Pol. By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unfilial. Reason my son
Should choose himself a wife, but as good reason
The father,—all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity,—should hold some counsel
In such a business.
Flo. I yield all this;
But for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.
Pol. Let him know 't.
Flo. He shall not.
Pol. Prithee, let him.
Flo. No, he must not.
Shep. Let him, my son: he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.
Flo. Come, come, he must not.
Make our contract.
Pol. Mark your divorce, young sir, [Discovering himself.]
Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base
To be acknowledg'd: thou a sceptre's heir,
That thus affect'st a sheep-hook! Thou old traitor,
I am sorry that by hanging thee I can
But shorten thy life one week. And thou, fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with,—
Shep. O, my heart!
Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briers, and made
More homely than thy state. For thee, fond boy,
If I may ever know thou dost but sigh
That thou no more shalt see this knack,—as never
I mean thou shalt,—we'll bar thee from succession;
Not hold thee of our blood, no, not our kin,
Far than Deucalion off: mark thou my words:
Follow us to the court. Thou, churl, for this time,
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. And you, enchantment,—
Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,
Unworthy thee,—if ever henceforth thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to 't. Exit.
Per. Even here undone!
I was not much afeard; for once or twice
I was about to speak and tell him plainly,
The self-same sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but
Looks on alike. Will 't please you, sir, be gone?
I told you what would come of this: beseech you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine—

375 looks: looks for 382 bolted: sifted 398 perdition: destruction 428 rheums: cf. n. 429 dispute: discuss estate: affairs

437 Reason: it is reasonable 457 affect'st: aspirest to 459 fresh: young 460 of force: of necessity 461 cop'st: dealest 464 state: social position fond: foolish 469 Far: farther Deucalion: the Greek Noah 470 churl: peasant 472 dead: deadly

Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch further,
But milk my ewes and weep.
Cam. Why, how now, father!
Speak, ere thou diest.
Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know. O sir!
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet, yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud and lay me
Where no priest shovels in dust. O cursed wretch!
That knew'st this was the prince, and wouldst adventure
To mingle faith with him. Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire. Exit.
Flo. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afeard; delay'd,
But nothing alter'd. What I was, I am:
More straining on for plucking back; not following
My leash unwillingly.
Cam. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper: at this time
He will allow no speech, which I do guess
You do not purpose to him; and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.
Flo. I not purpose it.
I think, Camillo?
Cam. Even he, my lord.
Per. How often have I told you 'twould be thus!
How often said my dignity would last
But till 'twere known!
Flo. It cannot fail but by
The violation of my faith; and then
Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together
And mar the seeds within! Lift up thy looks:
From my succession wipe me, father; I
Am heir to my affection.
Cam. Be advis'd.
Flo. I am; and by my fancy: if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,
Do bid it welcome.
Cam. This is desperate, sir.
Flo. So call it; but it does fulfil my vow;
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may
Be thereat glean'd, for all the sun sees or
The close earth wombs or the profound sea hides
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair belov'd. Therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever been my father's honour'd friend,
When he shall miss me,—as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more,—cast your good counsels
Upon his passion: let myself and fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know
And so deliver, I am put to sea
With her whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And most opportune to our need, I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold
Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.
Cam. O my lord!
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.
Flo. Hark, Perdita. [Takes her aside.]
[To Camillo.] I'll hear you by and by.
Cam. He's irremovable,
Resolv'd for flight. Now were I happy if
His going I could frame to serve my turn,
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.
Flo. Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business that
I leave out ceremony.
Cam. Sir, I think
You have heard of my poor services, i' the love
That I have borne your father?
Flo. Very nobly
Have you deserv'd: it is my father's music
To speak your deeds, not little of his care
To have them recompens'd as thought on.
Cam. Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king
And through him what's nearest to him, which is
Your gracious self, embrace but my direction.
If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration, on mine honour
I'll point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your highness; where you may
Enjoy your mistress,—from the whom, I see,
There's no disjunction to be made, but by,
As, heavens forfend! your ruin,—marry her;
And with my best endeavours in your absence
Your discontenting father strive to qualify,
And bring him up to liking.
Flo. How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done?
That I may call thee something more than man,
And after that trust to thee.
Cam. Have you thought on
A place whereto you'll go?
Flo. Not any yet;
But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance and flies
Of every wind that blows.
Cam. Then list to me:
This follows; if you will not change your purpose
But undergo this flight, make for Sicilia,

501 mingle faith: exchange troth-plights 507 plucking: being pulled 527 Am heir to my affection: have an inheritance in my love 529 fancy: love 538 wombs: bears within it 545 Tug: struggle (as in a tug-of-war)

551, 552 nor ... reporting: nor is it my business to tell you 557 by and by: in just a minute 566 fraught: loaded down curious: causing anxiety 585 forfend: forbid 587 discontenting: dissatisfied qualify: pacify 588 bring him up to liking: make him approve your choice 596, 597 guilty to: to blame for

And there present yourself and your fair princess,—
For so, I see, she must be,—'fore Leontes;
She shall be habited as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks I see
Leontes opening his free arms and weeping
His welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, forgiveness
As 'twere i' the father's person; kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess; o'er and o'er divides him
'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness: the one
He chides to hell, and bids the other grow
Faster than thought or time.
Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?
Cam. Sent by the king your father
To greet him and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you as from your father shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you down:
The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say; that he shall not perceive
But that you have your father's bosom there
And speak his very heart.
Flo. I am bound to you.
There is some sap in this.
Cam. A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves
To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores, most certain
To miseries enough: no hope to help you,
But as you shake off one to take another;
Nothing so certain as your anchors, who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you'll be loath to be. Besides, you know
Prosperity's the very bond of love,
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart together
Affliction alters.
Per. One of these is true:
I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.
Cam. Yea, say you so?
There shall not at your father's house these seven years
Be born another such.
Flo. My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding as
She is i' the rear o' our birth.
Cam. I cannot say 'tis pity
She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.
Per. Your pardon, sir; for this
I'll blush you thanks.
Flo. My prettiest Perdita!
But O! the thorns we stand upon. Camillo,
Preserver of my father, now of me,
The med'cine of our house, how shall we do?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son,
Nor shall appear in Sicilia.
Cam. My lord,
Fear none of this: I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed as if
The scene you play were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want, one word.
[They talk aside.]

Enter Autolycus.

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery: not a counterfeit stone, not a riband, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book, ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first, as if my trinkets had been hallowed and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture; and what I saw, to my good use I remembered. My clown,—who wants but something to be a reasonable man,—grew so in love with the wenches' song that he would not stir his pettitoes till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me that all their other senses stuck in ears: you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless; 'twas nothing to geld a codpiece of a purse; I would have filed keys off that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song, and admiring the nothing of it; so that, in this time of lethargy I picked and cut most of their festival purses; and had not the old man come in with a whoo-bub against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my choughs from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.
[Camillo, Florizel, and Perdita come forward.]
Cam. Nay, but my letters, by this means being there
So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.
Flo. And those that you'll procure from King Leontes—
Cam. Shall satisfy your father.
Per. Happy be you!
All that you speak shows fair.
Cam. [Seeing Autolycus.] Whom have we here?
We'll make an instrument of this: omit
Nothing may give us aid.
Aut. [Aside.] If they have overheard me now, why, hanging.
Cam. How now, good fellow! Why shakest thou so? Fear not, man; here's no harm intended to thee.
Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.
Cam. Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal that from thee; yet, for the outside of thy poverty we must take an exchange; therefore, discase thee instantly,—thou must think, there's a necessity in 't,—and change garments with this gentleman: though the pennyworth on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.
Aut. I am a poor fellow, sir.—[Aside.] I know ye well enough.
Cam. Nay, prithee, dispatch: the gentleman is half flayed already.
Aut. Are you in earnest, sir? [Aside.] I smell the trick on 't.
Flo. Dispatch, I prithee.
Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest; but I cannot with conscience take it.

610 him: himself 615 colour: pretext 622 point you forth: direct you sitting: interview 624 bosom: inmost secrets 627 sap: juice, life 641 take in: conquer 646 forward of her breeding: superior to her upbringing 657 furnish'd: equipped 658 appear: appear so

662 appointed: fitted out 667 pomander: cf. n. 668 table-book: notebook 672 picture: appearance 675 pettitoes: pig's feet 678 senseless: insensible geld a codpiece: rob a breeches pocket 683 whoo-bub: outcry 684 choughs: jackdaws, simpletons 701 discase: undress 703 pennyworth: bargain 711 earnest: part payment in advance

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.—
[Florizel and Autolycus exchange garments.]
Fortunate mistress,—let my prophecy
Come home to ye!—you must retire yourself
Into some covert: take your sweetheart's hat
And pluck it o'er your brows; muffle your face;
Dismantle you, and, as you can, disliken
The truth of your own seeming; that you may,—
For I do fear eyes over you,—to shipboard
Get undescried.
Per. I see the play so lies
That I must bear a part.
Cam. No remedy.
Have you done there?
Flo. Should I now meet my father
He would not call me son.
Cam. Nay, you shall have no hat.
[Giving it to Perdita.]
Come, lady, come. Farewell, my friend.
Aut. Adieu, sir.
Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot!
Pray you, a word. [They converse apart.]
Cam. [Aside.] What I do next shall be to tell the king
Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein my hope is I shall so prevail
To force him after: in whose company
I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight
I have a woman's longing.
Flo. Fortune speed us!
Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.
Cam. The swifter speed the better.
Exit [with Florizel and Perdita].

Aut. I understand the business; I hear it. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse: a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! what a boot is here with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do anything extempore. The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father with his clog at his heels. If I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would not do 't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it, and therein am I constant to my profession. Aside, aside: here is more matter for a hot brain. Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Clo. See, see, what a man you are now! There is no other way but to tell the king she's a changeling and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clo. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to, then.

Clo. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her; those secret things, all but what she has with her: this being done, let the law go whistle: I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man neither to his father nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Clo. Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest off you could have been to him, and then your blood had been the dearer by I know not how much an ounce.

Aut. [Aise.] Very wisely, puppies!

Shep. Well, let us to the king: there is that in this fardel will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. [Aside.] I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Clo. Pray heartily he be at palace.

Aut. [Asie.] Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance: let me pocket up my pedlar's excrement. [Takes off his false beard.] How now, rustics! whither are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there, what, with whom, the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having, breeding, and anything that is fitting to be known, discover.

Clo. We are but plain fellows, sir.

Aut. A lie; you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore they do not give us the lie.

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an 't like you, sir?

Aut. Whether it like me or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toaze from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier, cap-a-pe, and one that will either push on or pluck back thy business there: whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, sir, is to the king.

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an't like you.

Clo. Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant: say you have none.

Shep. None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock nor hen.

Aut. How bless'd are we that are not simple men!
Yet nature might have made me as these are,
Therefore I'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I'll warrant; I know by the picking on 's teeth.

Aut. The fardel there? what's i' the fardel?
Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel and box which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour if I may come to the speech of him.

718 Dismantle: change your cloak disliken: disguise 736 To: as to 737 review: see again 751 withal: therewith 761 Go to: go ahead

775 fardel: bundle 781 excrement: excrescence, hair 784 an: if like: please 787 having: wealth 795 with the manner: in the act 798 enfoldings: garments 799 measure: stately tread 801 insinuate: wheedle toaze: draw out 802 cap-a-pe: from head to foot 818 picking on 's: way he picks his

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace; he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy and air himself: for, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said, sir, about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not now in hand-fast, let him fly: the curses he shall have, the torture he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I: draw our throne into a sheep cote! all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an 't like you, sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flayed alive; then 'nointed over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest; then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recovered again with aqua-vitæ or some other hot infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostication proclaims, shall he be set against a brick-wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him, where he is to behold him with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorly rascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offences being so capital? Tell me,—for you seem to be honest plain men,—what you have to the king: being something gently considered, I'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and if it be in man besides the king to effect your suits, here is a man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember, 'stoned,' and 'flayed alive'!

Shep. An 't please you, sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I'll make it as much more and leave this young man in pawn till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. Ay, sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety. Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, sir: but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

Aut. O! that's the case of the shepherd's son: hang him, he'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort! we must to the king and show our strange sights: he must know 'tis none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does when the business is performed; and remain, as he says, your pawn till it be brought you.

832 hand-fast: custody 837 germane: related 840 offer: presume 848 a dram: a trifle more 849 aqua-vitæ: brandy 850 prognostication: the almanac's forecast of the weather 853 what: why 856 considered: given a consideration, bribed 857 tender: present 872 case: a pun on the two meanings, situation and skin

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the sea-side; go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say, even blessed.

Shep. Let's before as he bids us. He was provided to do us good.

[Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.]

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest I see Fortune would not suffer me: she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion, gold, and a means to do the prince my master good; which who knows how that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: if he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title and what shame else belongs to 't. To him will I present them: there may be matter in it.

Exit.

Act Fifth ❧ Scene First

[Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of Leontes]

Enter Leontes, Cleomenes, Dion, Paulina, Servants.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd
A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make
Which you have not redeem'd; indeed paid down
More penitence than done trespass. At the last,
Do as the heavens have done, forget your evil;
With them forgive yourself.

Leon. Whilst I remember
Her and her virtues, I cannot forget
My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did myself; which was so much,
That heirless it hath made my kingdom, and
Destroy'd the sweet'st companion that e'er man
Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, too true, my lord;
If one by one you wedded all the world,
Or from the all that are took something good,
To make a perfect woman, she you kill'd
Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd!
She I kill'd! I did so; but thou strik'st me
Sorely to say I did: it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue as in my thought. Now, good now,
Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things that would
Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those
Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance
Of his most sovereign name; consider little
What dangers, by his highness' fail of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom and devour

892 aboard him: aboard his ship shore: put on shore 22 good now: pray you 26 done . . . benefit: suited the occasion better 33 fail: lack

Incertain lookers-on. What were more holy
Than to rejoice the former queen is well?
What holier than for royalty's repair,
For present comfort, and for future good,
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to 't?
Paul. There is none worthy,
Respecting her that's gone. Besides, the gods
Will have fulfil'd their secret purposes;
For has not the divine Apollo said,
Is 't not the tenour of his oracle,
That King Leontes shall not have an heir
Till his lost child be found? which that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason
As my Antigonus to break his grave
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel
My lord should to the heavens be contrary,
Oppose against their wills.—[To Leontes.] Care not for issue;
The crown will find an heir: great Alexander
Left his to the worthiest, so his successor
Was like to be the best.
Leon. Good Paulina,
Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know, in honour; O! that ever I
Had squar'd me to thy counsel! then, even now,
I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips,—
Paul. And left them
More rich, for what they yielded.
Leon. Thou speak'st truth.
No more such wives; therefore, no wife: one worse,
And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit
Again possess her corpse and on this stage,—
Where we're offenders now,—appear soul-vex'd,
And begin, 'Why to me?'
Paul. Had she such power,
She had just cause.
Leon. She had; and would incense me
To murder her I married.
Paul. I should so:
Were I the ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in 't
You chose her; then I'd shriek, that even your ears
Should rift to hear me; and the words that follow'd
Should be 'Remember mine.'
Leon. Stars, stars!
And all eyes else dead coals. Fear thou no wife;
I'll have no wife, Paulina.
Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry but by my free leave?
Leon. Never, Paulina: so be bless'd my spirit!
Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath.
Cleo. You tempt him over much.
Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione as is her picture,
Affront his eye.
Cleo. Good madam,—
Paul. I have done.
Yet, if my lord will marry,—if you will, sir,
No remedy, but you will,—give me the office
To choose you a queen, she shall not be so young
As was your former; but she shall be such
As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take joy
To see her in your arms.
Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry till thou bidd'st us.
Paul. That
Shall be when your first queen 's again in breath;
Never till then.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. One that gives out himself Prince Florizel,
Son of Polixenes, with his princess,—she
The fairest I have yet beheld,—desires access
To your high presence.
Leon. What with him? he comes not
Like to his father's greatness; his approach,
So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us
'Tis not a visitation fram'd, but fore'd
By need and accident. What train?
Ser. But few,
And those but mean.
Leon. His princess, say you, with him?
Ser. Ay, the most peerless piece of earth, I think,
That e'er the sun shone bright on.
Paul. O Hermione!
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better gone, so must thy grave
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself
Have said and writ so,—but your writing now
Is colder than that theme,—'She had not been,
Nor was not to be equall'd'; thus your verse
Flow'd with her beauty once: 'tis shrewdly ebb'd
To say you have seen a better.
Ser. Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot—your pardon—
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of all professors else, make proselytes
Of who she but bid follow.
Paul. How! not women?
Ser. Women will love her, that she is a woman
More worth than any man; men, that she is.
The rarest of all women.
Leon. Go, Cleomenes;
Yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends,
Bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange,
Exit [Cleomenes with others].
He thus should steal upon us.
Paul. Had our prince—
Jewel of children—seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this lord: there was not full a month
Between their births.

35 Incertain: irresolute 37 repair: restoration 42 Respecting: compared with 60 squar'd me: shaped my conduct 73 incense: incite 79 rift: rive, burst 91 Affront: confront

S. d. Servant: gentleman-in-waiting 111 out of circumstance: lacking in ceremony 112 fram'd: planned in advance 126 shrewdly: exceedingly 133 professors else: those who profess other faiths 140 with: by

Leon. Prithee, no more: cease! thou know'st
He dies to me again when talk'd of: sure,
When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that which may
Unfurnish me of reason. They are come.

Enter Florizel, Perdita, Cleomenes, and others.

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince;
For she did print your royal father off,
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so hit in you,
His very air, that I should call you brother,
As I did him; and speak of something wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome!
And you, fair princess,—goddess! O, alas!
I lost a couple, that 'twist heaven and earth
Might thus have stood begetting wonder as
You, gracious couple, do: and then I lost—
All mine own folly—the society,
Amity too, of your brave father, whom,
Though bearing misery, I desire my life
Once more to look on him.
Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia; and from him
Give you all greetings that a king, at friend,
Can send his brother: and, but infirmity,—
Which waits upon worn times,—hath something seiz'd
His wish'd ability, he had himself
The land and waters 'twixt your throne and his
Measur'd to look upon you, whom he loves—
He bade me say so—more than all the sceptres
And those that bear them living.
Leon. O, my brother!—
Good gentleman,—the wrongs I have done thee stir
Afresh within me, and these thy offices
So rarely kind, are as interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness! Welcome hither,
As is the spring to the earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage—
At least ungentle—of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man not worth her pains, much less
The adventure of her person?
Flo. Good my lord,
She came from Libya.
Leon. Where the warlike Smalus,
That noble honour'd lord, is fear'd and lov'd?
Flo. Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter
His tears proclaim'd his, parting with her: thence—
A prosperous south-wind friendly—we have cross'd,
To execute the charge my father gave me
For visiting your highness: my best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival and my wife's, in safety
Here where we are.
Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air whilst you
Do climate here! You have a holy father,
A graceful gentleman: against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin:
For which the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd—
As he from heaven merits it—with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you!

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself by me;
Desires you to attach his son, who has—
His dignity and duty both cast off—
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with
A shepherd's daughter.
Leon. Where's Bohemia? speak.
Lord. Here in your city; I now came from him:
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel and my message. To your court
Whiles he was hastening,—in the chase it seems
Of this fair couple,—meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady and
Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.
Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whose honour and whose honesty till now
Endur'd all weathers.
Lord. Lay 't so to his charge:
He's with the king your father.
Leon. Who? Camillo?
Lord. Camillo, sir: I spake with him, who now
Has these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth,
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.
Per. O my poor father!
The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.
Leon. You are married?
Flo. We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first:
The odds for high and low's alike.
Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?
Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.
Leon. That 'once,' I see, by your good father's speed,
Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking
Where you were tied in duty; and as sorry
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.
Flo. Dear, look up:

151 Unfurnish: deprive 169 at friend: on friendly terms 170–172 but . . . ability: cf. n. 179 offices: dutiful acts 186 adventure: risk 197 bend: steer 203 climate: reside 204 graceful: full of gracious qualities 216 attach: arrest 222 amazedly: in a maze becomes: befits 223 marvel: astonishment 247 Cf. n. 256 worth: wealth and rank

Though Fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves. Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to time
Than I do now; with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate; at your request
My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious mistress,
Which he counts but a trifle.

Paul. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in 't: not a month
'Fore your queen died, she was more worth such gazes
Than what you look on now.

Leon. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made. [To Florizel.] But your petition
Is yet unanswer'd. I will to your father:
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am friend to them and you; upon which errand
I now go toward him. Therefore follow me,
And mark what way I make: come, good my lord. Exeunt.

Scene Second

[Before the Palace]
Enter Autolycus and a Gentleman.

Aut. Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

Gent. I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazedness, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business; but the changes I perceived in the king and Camillo were very notes of admiration: they seemed almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in theirdumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed: a notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say if the importance were joy or sorrow; but in the extremity of the one it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a gentleman that haply knows more.
The news, Rogero?

Sec. Gent. Nothing but bonfires: the oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour that ballad-makers cannot be able to express it.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes the lady Paulina's steward: he can deliver you more. How goes it now, sir? this news which is called true is so like an old tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspicion: has the king found his heir?

Third Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance: that which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of Queen Hermione, her jewel about the neck of it, the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character; the majesty of the creature in resemblance of the mother, the affection of nobleness which nature shows above her breeding, and many other evidences proclaim her with all certainty to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

Sec. Gent. No.

Third Gent. Then have you lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another, so, and in such manner that, it seemed, sorrow wept to take leave of them, for their joy waded in tears. There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands, with countenances of such distraction that they were to be known by garment, not by favour. Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, 'O, thy mother, thy mother!' then asks Bohemia forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter with clipping her; now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by like a weather-bitten conduit of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it and undoes description to do it.

Sec. Gent. What, pray you, became of Antigonus that carried hence the child?

Third. Gent. Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son, who has not only his innocence—which seems much —to justify him, but a handkerchief and rings of his that Paulina knows.

First Gent. What became of his bark and his followers?

Third Gent. Wrecked, the same instant of their master's death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments which aided to expose the child were even then lost when it was found. But, O! the noble combat that 'twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina. She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled: she lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart that she might no more be in danger of losing.

First Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes, for by such was it acted.

Third Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes,—caught the water though not the fish,—was when at the relation of the queen's death, with the manner how she came to it,—bravely confessed and lamented by the king,—how attentiveness wounded his daughter: till, from one sign of dolour to another, she did, with an 'alas!' I would fain say, bleed tears, for I am sure my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there changed colour; some swounded, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen 't, the woe had been universal.

First Gent. Are they returned to the court?

262 since: when 275 Your honour not: provided your honor be not 278 way: progress 9 notes: distinctive marks 10 admiration: wonder 11 cases: sockets 16 importance: import in . . . one: one in the highest degree

28, 29 pregnant by circumstance: made full and convincing by circumstantial detail 31 jewel: jeweled necklace or similar ornament 32 character: handwriting 33 affection of: inclination toward 44 favour: face 48 clipping: embracing 49 weather-bitten: weather-worn; cf. n. 51 do: describe 58 innocence: stupidity 59 justify: confirm 80 marble: i.e., stony-hearted swounded: swooned

Third Gent. No; the princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina—a piece many years in doing, and now newly performed by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano; who, had he himself eternity and could put breath into his work, would beguile Nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione that they say one would speak to her and stand in hope of answer: thither with all greediness of affection are they gone, and there they intended to sup.

Sec. Gent. I thought she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither and with our company piece the rejoicing?

First Gent. Who would be thence that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye some new grace will be born: our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge. Let's along.

Exeunt [Gentlemen].

Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardel and I know not what; but he at that time, overfond of the shepherd's daughter,—so he then took her to be,—who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discredits. Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

Enter Shepherd and Clown.

Shep. Come, boy; I am past moe children, but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

Clo. You are well met, sir. You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: see you these clothes? say you see them not and think me still no gentleman born: you were best say these robes are not gentleman born. Give me the lie, do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

Aut. I know you are now, sir, a gentleman born.

Clo. Ay, and have been so any time these four hours.

Shep. And so have I, boy.

Clo. So you have: but I was a gentleman born before my father; for the king's son took me by the hand and called me brother; and then the two kings called my father brother; and then the prince my brother and the princess my sister called my father father; and so we wept: and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Shep. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay; or else 'twere hard luck, being in so preposterous estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master.

Shep. Prithee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins say it, I'll swear it.

Shep. How if it be false, son?

Clo. If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend: and I'll swear to the prince thou art a tall fellow of thy hands and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands and that thou wilt be drunk: but I'll swear it, and I would thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove so, sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: if I do not wonder how thou darest venture to be drunk not being a tall fellow, trust me not. Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us: we'll be thy good masters. Exeunt.

Scene Third

[A Chapel in Paulina's House]

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizel, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina, Lords, and Attendant.

Leon. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort
That I have had of thee!
Paul. What, sovereign sir,
I did not well, I meant well. All my services
You have paid home; but that you have vouch-saf'd,
With your crown'd brother and these your contracted
Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit,
It is a surplus of your grace, which never
My life may last to answer.
Leon. O Paulina!
We honour you with trouble: but we came
To see the statue of our queen: your gallery
Have we pass'd through, not without much content
In many singularities, but we saw not
That which my daughter came to look upon,
The statue of her mother.
Paul. As she liv'd peerless,
So her dead likeness, I do well believe,
Excels whatever yet you look'd upon
Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it
Lonely, apart. But here it is: prepare
To see the life as lively mock'd as ever
Still sleep mock'd death: behold! and say 'tis well.

[Paulina draws back a curtain, and reveals Hermione as a statue.]

I like your silence: it the more shows off
Your wonder; but yet speak: first you, my liege.
Comes it not something near?
Leon. Her natural posture!
Chide me, dear stone, that I may say, indeed

87 Julio Romano; cf. n. eternity: immortality 88 custom: customers, trade 89 ape: imitator 95 removed: distant 96 piece: add to 98 access: privilege of admittance 99 unthrifty to: careless about the increase of 108 relished: tasted well, been pleasing 113 denied: refused 129 preposterous: blunder for prosperous

142 franklins: small landholders 147 tall: bold 154 picture: painted statue 155 good masters: patrons 11 We honour you with trouble: our so-called honor but makes you trouble 13 content: pleasure 14 singularities: curiosities 22 lively: to the life

Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she
In thy not chiding, for she was as tender
As infancy and grace. But yet, Paulina,
Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing
So aged as this seems.
Pol. O! not by much.
Paul. So much the more our carver's excellence;
Which lets go by some sixteen years and makes her
As she liv'd now.
Leon. As now she might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is
Now piercing to my soul. O! thus she stood,
Even with such life of majesty,—warm life,
As now it coldly stand,—when first I woo'd her.
I am asham'd: does not the stone rebuke me
For being more stone than it? O, royal piece!
There's magic in thy majesty, which has
My evils conjur'd to remembrance, and
From thy admiring daughter took the spirits,
Standing like stone with thee.
Per. And give me leave,
And do not say 'tis superstition, that
I kneel and then implore her blessing. Lady,
Dear queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours to kiss.
Paul. O, patience!
The statue is but newly fix'd, the colour's
Not dry.
Cam. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on,
Which sixteen winters cannot blow away,
So many summers dry: scarce any joy
Did ever so long live; no sorrow
But kill'd itself much sooner.
Pol. Dear my brother,
Let him that was the cause of this have power
To take off so much grief from you as he
Will piece up in himself.
Paul. Indeed, my lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poor image
Would thus have wrought you,—for the stone is mine,—
I'd not have show'd it.
Leon. Do not draw the curtain.
Paul. No longer shall you gaze on 't, lest your fancy
May think anon it moves.
Leon. Let be, let be!
Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already—
What was he that did make it? See, my lord,
Would you not deem it breath'd, and that those veins
Did verily bear blood?
Pol. Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip.
Leon. The fixture of her eye has motion in 't,
As we are mock'd with art.
Paul. I'll draw the curtain;
My lord's almost so far transported that
He'll think anon it lives.
Leon. O sweet Paulina!
Make me to think so twenty years together:
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let 't alone.
Paul. I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirr'd you: but
I could afflict you further.
Leon. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort. Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: what fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.
Paul. Good my lord, forbear.
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet:
You'll mar it if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?
Leon. No, not these twenty years.
Per. So long could I
Stand by, a looker-on.
Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
For more amazement. If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed, descend,
And take you by the hand; but then you'll think,—
Which I protest against,—I am assisted
By wicked powers
Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak as move.
Paul. It is requir'd
You do awake your faith. Then, all stand still;
Or those that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.
Leon. Proceed:
No foot shall stir.
Paul. Music, awake her: strike! [Music.]
'Tis time; descend; be stone no more: approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
I'll fill your grave up: stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you. You perceive she stirs:
[Hermione comes down.]
Start not; her actions shall be holy as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her
Until you see her die again, for then
You kill her double. Nay, present your hand:
When she was young you woo'd her; now in age
Is she become the suitor!
Leon. [Embracing her.] O! she's warm.
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.
Pol. She embraces him.
Cam. She hangs about his neck:
If she pertain to life let her speak too.
Pol. Ay; and make 't manifest where she has liv'd,
Or how stol'n from the dead.
Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while.
Please you to interpose, fair madam: kneel

32 nothing: not nearly 44 piece: woman 65 piece up in himself: make up by increasing his own grief 68 wrought: excited 81 Cf. n. 93 cordial restorative 105 resolve you: prepare yourselves 123 upon: on 130 double: doubly, twice

And pray your mother's blessing: Turn, good lady;
Our Perdita is found.

[Presenting Perdita, who kneels to Hermione.]

Her. You gods, look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head! Tell me, mine own,
Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd? how found
Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear that I,
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd
Myself to see the issue.
Paul. There's time enough for that;
Lest they desire upon this push to trouble
Your joys with like relation. Go together,
You precious winners all: your exultation
Partake to every one. I, an old turtle,
Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there
My mate, that's never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.
Leon. O! peace, Paulina.
Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a wife: this is a match,
And made between 's by vows. Thou hast found mine:
But how, is to be question'd; for I saw her,
As I thought dead, and have in vain said many
A prayer upon her grave. I'll not seek far,—
For him, I partly know his mind,— to find thee
An honourable husband. Come, Camillo,
And take her by the hand; whose worth and honesty
Is richly noted, and here justified
By us, a pair of kings. Let's from this place.
What! look upon my brother: both your pardons,
That e'er I put betwen your holy looks
My ill suspicion. This' your son-in-law,
And son unto the king,—whom heavens directing,
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand and answer to his part
Perform'd in this wide gap of time since first
We were dissever'd: hastily lead away. Exeunt.

FINIS

157 push: impulse 158 relation: relating of their adventures 160 Partake to: share with 166 match: bargain 174 richly noted: thoroughly known justified: vouched for 178 This: this is

Notes

Dramatis Personæ. This play is one of seven for which, under the caption 'The Names of the Actors,' the First Folio lists the Dramatis Personæ. The words put in brackets are there omitted.

I.i.6, 7 entertainment . . . loves. 'Our loving welcome shall atone for our inadequate entertainment.'

I.i.25, 26. from . . . winds. 'From the opposite corners of the heavens,' where the winds of the north, east, south, and west were suposed to have the homes.

I.ii.1. the watery star. The moon, as cause of the tides, was considered the queen of the waters.

I.ii.6, 7. like . . . place. 'As a cipher, though worthless in itself, may, in a significant position change thousands into tens of thousands, so my grateful farewell, though wholly inadequate, increases all previous expressions of gratitude.'

I.ii.14. that may blow. This is usually interpreted as a wish. 'May there blow no nipping winds.'

I.ii.49. gest. The gests of a royal journey (from the old French giste, a bed or lodging) were the houses at which the monarch stopped overnight on his way.

I.ii.58. unsphere the stars with oaths. 'Shake the stars from their positions in the heavens by the violence of your oaths.' According to the ancient Ptolemaic theory of astronomy the earth was the center of the universe, and the stars were located in concentric hollow spheres revolving around it.

I.ii.63. pay your fees. It was formerly a custom in prisons for a jailer to exact fees from his prisoners.

I.ii.88. the imposition, etc. 'Setting aside our hereditary taint of original sin.'

I.ii.113. one good deed, etc. ' The failure to praise one good deed prevents the existence of a thousand that would have been inspired by it.'

I.ii.143. brows. It was a common saying in Shakespeare's time that an unfaithful wife put horns on her husband's head, or brows. The unsavory joke appears repeatedly.

I.ii.151. virginalling. Playing as on the keys of the virginal, an old-time instrument resembling a piano. The word is here, as often, used punningly.

I.ii.165, 166. Affection . . . dost. A possible interpretation of this much disputed passage is: 'Love, thy intense passion masters the inmost hearts of women. Thou dost make possible on their part sins not believed to be possible. Thou dost make absent lovers communicate with each other through dreams (how can this be?). Thou dost cause the dreaming woman to make love to the unreal dream-image of her absent paramour, and to embrace nothingness. Then it is very believable that thou mayst bring her to the arms of a lover bodily present; and thou dost.' For another interpretation cf. C. D. Stewart, Some Textual Difficulties in Shakespeare (Yale Univeristy Press), pp. 96-109.

I.ii.237. predominant. Leontes accepts the theory of astrology that certain stars under the right conditions exercise a powerful influence over human conduct.

I.ii.318-320. If . . . thought. 'If thou wilt confess the truth—and to do otherwise thou must be one who impudently denies his possession of eyes or ears or thought—then say that my wife is a loose woman.'

I.ii.325. clouded. Shakespeare's language is so figurative that a sharp line cannot always be drawn between metaphors and obsolete meanings. In the present case, which is typical of hundreds, he probably thought of the accusation dimming Hermione's fair reputation as a cloud dims the moon.

I.ii.357. medal. Medallions with the portrait of a friend or sweetheart were frequently worn around the neck in Shakespeare's day. Leontes' jealous delirium pictures Hermione with her arms around Polixenes' neck and her living face on his bosom where the medallion with her portrait might hang.

I.ii.528-530. 'May good speed in escaping help me, and bring comfort to the gracious queen, who is part of the subject of his thoughts but in no way the intentional cause of his ill-founded suspicion.' The passage is blind, and may have been garbled in printing.

II.i.S.d. The Folio stage direction reads: 'Enter Hermione, Mamillius, Ladies: Leontes, Antigonus, Lords.' Editors have agreed in placing the entrance of Leontes after line 43. In the Folio text of The Winter's Tale stage directions repeatedly mention actors who were probably to be ready when thus mentioned, but who evidently did not appear before the audience until later. In the present edition such stage directions are adapted according to the judgment of later editors.

II.i.53. partake no venom. The belief was formerly common that a spider in one's drink made the beverage poisonous if the insect was seen, but not if the insect was unobserved. 'In the cup of my family life,' says Leontes, 'there has been the spider of adultery; but it did not poison my mind with jealous suffering as long as I did not perceive it.'

II.i.161, 162. I'll . . . wife. 'I'll consider human beings on a level with horses in morality.'

II.i.172. land-damn. Nothing but guesses can be given for the meaning of land-damn. It may mean to bury alive under the ground (land), to exile from the land, or it may be equivalent to landan, the word for a rural punishment in Gloucestershire for slanderers and adulterers, 'by rustics traversing from house to house along the country side, blowing trumpets and beating drums or pans and kettles.'

II.i.183. While saying this Leontes probably pulls Antigonus' beard or offers him some other minor physical violence.

II.i.211-214. Which . . . deed. 'Which was as gross as was ever found by a suspicion (conjecture) that lacked sight [of their crime] only, lacked nought for proof (approbation), except actually seeing them in sin—with all other circumstances pointing (made up) to the deed—all these, etc.'

II.i.218. Delphos. The famous oracle of Apollo was at Delphi (or Delphos). Its location was on the mainland, but it is spoken of at the beginning of Act Third as being on an 'isle,' probably because it has been confused with the island of Delos. The play bristles with inaccuracies in history and geography, which the author did not consider out of keeping with its romantic atmosphere, and most of which he merely took over from the novel that served him as his source. In the main the story seems located in the Middle Ages, whereas the oracle belongs to a much earlier pagan period.

II.iii.44. humour. It was formerly the general belief that there were four liquids (humours) in the body and that diseases were due to a disproportionate amount of some one of them.

II.iii.92. dame Partlet. Dame Pertelote (Partlet) was a curtain-lecturing hen in Chaucer's Nun's Priest's Tale.

III.ii.60-62. More . . . acknowledge. 'I must not at all acknowledge that I am guilty (mistress) of anything more than [that] which is counted against me as a fault [namely, my innocent hospitality toward Polixenes].'

III.ii.82. 'My life is exposed to the deadly aim (level) of your jealous imaginings.'

III.ii.180. Unclasp'd. The meaning 'revealed,' like so many Shakespearean meanings, was probably more metaphorical than literal even in the author's day. In King Henry IV, Part I (I.iii.192) Worcester begins his revelation to Hotspur:

'And now I will unclasp a secret book.'

III.iii.52, 53. Which . . . thine. 'Which may, if fortune is willing, by their great value inspire people to educate (breed) thee, and still remain thy property.'

III.iii.63. ten. Most modern editors put sixteen or nineteen in the place of ten, on the ground that so early an age does not harmonize with all the offences mentioned. But the author was representing an ignorant and excited man who did not choose his words with the calm precision of a Shakespearean commentator.

III.iii.95. flap-dragoned. A flap-dragon was a raisin or some other substance floating in a glass of brandy, from which some gallant, wishing to show his dexterity, would snatch it with his mouth. The sea gulped down the ship with the easy dexterity with which a toper would gulp down the flap-dragon.

IV.iii.4. winter's pale. 'Pale' with Shakespeare had two frequent and widely different meanings, (1) paleness, and (2) an enclosed space, either one of which here would make sense. Consequently we could interpret the line: 'The red blood of youth and spring reigns in the pale face of winter'; or, 'The red blood reigns in those fields which recently were the enclosed park of winter.'

IV.iii.23. It was a common belief that kites stole small linen articles to use in building their nests. My trade, says Autolycus, is in stealing sheets. Look out for lesser linen when the kites are building, but for sheets when I come by.

IV.iii.24, 25. littered under Mercury. Born under the influence of the planet Mercury, he naturally imitated the god Mercury, who was the ancient deity of thieves.

IV.iii.41. puritan. The puritans were hostile to the stage and consequently attacked repeatedly by Shakespeare and his fellow dramatists. Their habit of singing psalms was only one of their many traits ridiculed.

IV.iv.14. swoon. The original text reads sworn, and the emendation swoon, though now generally adopted, is not very well in harmony with Perdita's healthful life and courageous character. If Shakespeare wrote sworn, Perdita probably meant that Florizel had come with the vowed purpose of showing in his plain clothes the opposite of her rich ones, as printed letters in a looking-glass are shown reading backwards.

IV.iv.31-34. Jupiter became a bull to win the love of Europa; Neptune, a ram when in love with Theophane; and Apollo as a humble shepherd kept the flocks of King Admetus.

IV.iv.85. Grace and remembrance. These were symbolized by rue and rosemary respectively. The significance of flowers as emblems of human moods was often mentioned by the Elizabethans, and plays an important part in the mad speeches of Ophelia (Hamlet, IV. v.).

IV.iv.100, 101. There . . . nature. Their variegated colors are partly the result of the gardener's art in cross-breeding, and not wholly produced by nature.

IV.iv.120. Lavender, savory, and certain varieties of marjoram were flowers recently imported into England from southern Europe. It is probably as natives of a warmer climate that Perdita calls them 'hot' and a few lines later speaks of them as 'flowers of middle summer.'

IV.iv.133. Proserpina. While Proserpina was gathering flowers in the meadows of Sicily, Dis, or Pluto, the god of the underworld, rose through the earth in his chariot, seized her, and carried her away to be his queen.

IV.iv.152. Whitsun pastorals. A pastoral is a play of country life; and a Whitsun play would be one given at Whitsuntide, the seventh Sunday after Easter, although we have no evidence elsewhere that plays given then were pastorals.

IV.iv.218, 219. Dildos, fadings, 'jump her and thump her' were all catch words from the anything but 'delicate' refrains of certain popular songs and ballads.

IV.iv.267. tawdry lace. This necklace or necktie of silk derived its name from Saint Audrey (Ethelreda), who believed a tumor which came in her throat to be a divine judgment on her for her vanity earlier in wearing beautiful necklaces.

IV.iv.428. altering rheums. Morbid disarrangement of the four humours (see note on II.iii.44), a condition producing rheumatism, catarrh, and the diseases characteristic of old age.

IV.iv.667. pomander. A little ball of perfumes worn in the pocket or about the neck as a preventive against the plague.

V.i.170-172. 'But that the infirmity which comes with age has somewhat stolen from him (seized) the traveling ability which he wishes for.'

V.i.247. Probably, 'the odds are as great against me in my princely rôle of Florizel as they were in my humble rôle of Doricles.'

V.ii.49. Conduits were often in the shape of human figures.

V.ii.87. Julio Romano. This Italian painter was born in 1492, the year of America's discovery; and the worship of Apollo's oracle ceased among Mediterranean kings about a thousand years before that. Both Shakespeare and his audience had a sublime indifference to such anachronisms in a well-told story.

V.iii.81. 'Though her eye be fixed, yet it seems to have motion in it.' (Edwards.)

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is, by permission of the Oxford University Press, that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, except for the following deviations:

1. The stage directions and the list of dramatis personae are those of the First Folio, any alterations and additions being enclosed in square brackets. The Folio numbering of scenes in the fourth act has been followed.

2. A few minor changes in punctuation (such as good now, for good now in V.i.22) and in spelling (such as primroses for prime-roses in IV.iv.139) have been made.

3. The following alterations, all reversions to the readings of the First Folio, have been made in the text, the reading of the Folio and the present text preceding the colon, and that of Craig following it:

I.ii.84 nor dreamed: no nor dreamed
I.ii.177 Leon. What cheer?: Pol. What cheer?
I.ii.308 free of. But: free of: but II.iii.193 this: thy
II.iii.211 it: its
II.iii.223 does: doth
III.ii.191 What flaying? boiling: What flaying? or what boiling
III.ii.263 To: Unto
III.iii.63 ten: sixteen
IV.iv.647 our: her

The Tempest

Edited by
DAVID HORNE

Dramatis Personae

ALONSO, King of Naples
SEBASTIAN, his Brother
PROSPERO, the right Duke of Milan
ANTONIO, his Brother, the usurping Duke of Milan
FERDINAND, son to the King of Naples
GONZALO, an honest old Councilor
ADRIAN, FRANCISCO } Lords
CALIBAN, a salvage and deformed Slave
TRINCULO, a Jester
STEPHANO, a drunken Butler
MASTER OF A SHIP
BOATSWAIN
MARINERS

MIRANDA, a Daughter to Prospero
ARIEL, an airy Spirit

IRIS, CERES, JUNO, NYMPHS, REAPERS } Spirits

SCENE—A ship at sea and then an uninhabited island.

The Tempest

Introduction

Text and Date

The earliest published text of The Tempest is in the First Folio, 1623. It is the first play in that volume and one of the most painstakingly printed: only a handful of indisputable typographical errors can be found, the verse lineation is on the whole well preserved, the stage directions are remarkably full, and the punctuation is admirably consistent.

In spite of the obvious care taken with punctuation by the first editors, it has been felt necessary to assist the modern reader by converting the pointing entirely to present-day usage. For example, colons in the Folio text appear in the present edition as colons, semicolons, exclamation points, dashes, or periods, though usually the colon in the original has the force of the modern exclamation point, which indeed in almost every instance would have been the mark substituted if other considerations had not dictated variety.

Few liberties have been taken with the text. These few have been recorded in the glosses and notes, with the exception of a slight shift in position of a stage direction here and there, as in I.1.33; in the Folio this direction follows line 30. Whenever anything has been added to the text, it has been placed within square brackets.

Throughout the play, though most frequently in Act I, are defective lines (for instance I.2.185, 227, 274, 297, 319; II.1.282, 346; IV.1.13; V.1.70). These lines—short by one, two, or three metrical feet—have sometimes been used as evidence for a theory that Act I as it now stands is a cut version, the cuts having been made at the places where the faulty lines occur. In the absence of bibliographical corroboration, however, there seems no need to believe that the extant version is not as Shakespeare wrote it, particularly since irregular lines can be found in other Shakespearaean plays, and in The Tempest the short lines occur at places where a slight pause assists both the sense and the rhythm.

It should also be noted that a few verse lines have been rearranged slightly to make the length of each more regular; see I.2.355-359, 425, 426; II.1.200, 201, 202-207. A few lines here printed as verse are probably prose (for example II.1.205-206); a few other lines set as verse in the Folio now appear as prose (for example II.1.16-17); and Caliban's speech in II.2.170-175 has been set as verse but appears as prose in the Folio.

From the very slight bibliographical evidence available it is not possible to do more than guess at the form of the copy supplied the printer of the Folio. It could well have been a prompt copy that had been carefully edited by one or another member of the acting company. Its division into acts and scenes and the inclusion of a list of actors, as well as the full stage directions and consistent punctuation mentioned above, may indicate merely that the editors wanted the first play in their volume to make a good impression. Almost the only mark of carelessness that one can note, in fact, is the circumstance that some obvious prose lines are set as verse and some verse as prose. Here it is important to observe, however, that for the actor a few lines or even passages of verse set as prose, or vice versa, would surely have made no difference in his reading of those lines, the important thing in delivery being the sense of rhythm of the complete speech and scene. This must have been doubly true on the Shakespearean stage, where, from all we can learn, the actor's delivery was rapid. If anything, such mistakes in lineation argue that the play was set from playhouse prompt copy.

In any event Shakespeare wrote it at least twelve years before it was printed, for the accounts of the Office of Revels contain a note that it was presented on Hallowmas night (November 1), 1611. There is some negative evidence that it was not being played during the summer of 1611, and one of the sources Shakespeare made use of could not have been seen by him before late 1610. Thus the best inference that can be drawn concerning the date of composition is sometime between October 1610 and October 1611. Apart from collaboration in Henry VIII and Two Noble Kinsmen, it was probably Shakespeare's last effort.

Sources of the Play

The true source of The Tempest is Shakespeare's experience in coming to terms with life. The symbols which permeate it lie so deep and so near to the heart of humanity that even if a closely parallel play or narrative were to be unearthed—and this hypothesis is dubious in the extreme—it could only in a very limited sense be called a source. The billowing themes of Shakespeare's tragedies, the nuances of the comedies, the moral philosophy that threads its way through the histories—all are here and thoroughly Shakespearean and so worked into the matrix of the play that one can believe it the full and natural expression of what was most meaningful to Shakespeare in life.

This is not to call The Tempest a conscious farewell to a career. It is highly ironical that the one speech in the play that really sounds as though Shakespeare were taking leave of the stage is one of the few which derive from earlier works: Prospero's conjuring of the spirits in V.1.38-62 comes from Ovid's Metamorphoses VII.192-219—partly from the original Latin, partly from Arthur Golding's English translation (many editions after 1567). This is typical of the so-called sources of the play—a line here or there, at the most a few brief passages garnered from well-known works.

Two of the most popular works at the time the play was being written—and together with a manuscript letter in circulation among the playwright's friends, perhaps the origin of his initial inspiration—were concerned with a highly romantic and for the religious a nearly miraculous wreck off the Bermudas in July 1609. For several years before, public interest in the new Virginia colony in America had been running high. When a fleet of nine ships under the command of Sir George Somers (or Summers) put to sea on June 2, 1609, considerable fanfare and putting of pen to paper accompanied the great setting forth.

Nothing was heard in England about the results of the voyage (except that one of the ships was supposed lost) until the governor of Virgina, who had sailed with the fleet, returned in 1610. It then became known that off the coast of the 'still-vex'd Bermoothes' (Shakespeare uses the common spelling-equivalent of the Spanish Bermudez) the flagship had run into a hurricane and having been forced to enter a sheltered cove was there run aground. No lives had been lost, and the implications of this as they concerned the intrepid colonizers of a savage land were not missed by the morally minded Elizabethans. Among the pamphlets which appeared in 1610 were two containing accounts of the wreck and subsequent survival of the voyagers, both sufficiently close to Shakespeare's play to make it seem almost certain he knew of them: Sylvester Jourdain's Discovery of the Barmudas (facsimile by J. Q. Adams, New York, 1940) and the Council of Virginia's True Declaration of the State of the Colonie in Virginia (ed. Peter Force as vol. 3 of Tracts and Other Papers, Washington, 1844).

Even more than to these 'Bermuda pamphlets' is Shakespeare indebted to a letter written by one William Strachey and brought to England shortly after July 15, 1610. Although this letter was not published (so far as is known) until 1625, when it appeared as 'A True Reportory of the Wracke' in Purchas His Pilgrimes (vol. 19 of the Glasgow ed., 1906), Leslie Hotson has demonstrated that it was being circulated among friends of Shakespeare who could very easily have shown it to him. (I, William Shakespeare, London, 1937). The whole of the first scene of The Tempest seems to derive from Strachey's account, as do I.2.227-238, much of II.1, the appearance of the banquet in III, and a few more scattered passages.

The other works to which Shakespeare might have given acknowledgment may be quickly disposed of. Gonzalo's references in III.3.58-61 to the dewlapped mountaineers and men with heads in their breasts are straight from the most widely read adventure book of the period: the Travels of Sir John Mandeville, III.3. Gonzalo's disquisition on the ideal commonwealth in II.1.154-163 is derived from Montaigne's 'Of Cannibals,' translated by John Florio, 1603. The name 'Setebos' probably stems from Robert Eden's History of Travaile, 1577, in which it is claimed that the Patagonians have a 'great devil' called this. The origin of 'Caliban' cannot be pinned down. It may be simply an anagram of 'can[n]ibal' or it may be related to cauliban, a gypsy word for blackness, though Virgil and Pliny both mention savages named 'Chalybeates.' The name 'Prospero' occurs in William Thomas' The Historie of Italie, 1549.

All other of the 'sources' which at one time or another have been put forth as the primary source are little more than analogues. Thus certain scenari of the Italian commedia dell' arte have points of resemblance with the plot of The Tempest; the last word on these may not yet have been said. A play by the German Jakob Ayrer (died 1605) called, in translation, The Beautiful Sidea, was formerly hailed by the Germans as the archetype, but anyone who takes the trouble to read it will come to the conclusion that only two salient details lend any point whatever to the supposed connection: (1) a prince is held in thrall by the beautiful Sidea and made to carry logs for her, and (2) his sword is charmed, so that he cannot use it. Although these coincidences are interesting, they do not mean that either play necessarily descends from the other. At the same time the possibility of a lost tertium quid cannot be dismissed.

In sum, so far as research can discover, Shakespeare borrowed remarkably little. Research will go on, for it is in the nature of source hunters to believe that by turning pages they will eventually upset all vested notions. Sometimes they are remarkably successful; yet for The Tempest, it seems safe to prophesy, the results will hardly be worth the effort. The true sources are the three dozen plays of Shakespeare which preceded it, together with the feelings, deeper than ever plummet sounded, of a man who considered life gravely and wrote it down incomparably.

ACT FIRST ❧ SCENE FIRST

A tempestuous noise of thunder and lightning heard.
Enter a Shipmaster and a Boatswain.

Master. Boatswain!

Boatswain. Here, Master! What cheer?

Master. Good. Speak to th' mariners. Fall to't, yarely, or we run ourselves aground—bestir, bestir! Exit.

Enter Mariners.

Boatswain. Heigh, my hearts! Cheerly, cheerly, my hearts! Yare, yare! Take in the topsail! Tend to th' Master's whistle! Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Ferdinand, Gonzalo, and others.

Alonso. Good Boatswain, have care! Where's the Master? Play the men!

Boatswain. I pray now, keep below.

Antonio. Where is the Master, Boson?

Boatswain. Do you not hear him? You mar our labor. Keep your cabins—you do assist the storm.

Gonzalo. Nay, good, be patient.

Boatswain. When the sea is. Hence! What cares these roarers for the name of king? To cabin: silence! trouble us not!

Gonzalo. Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boatswain. None that I more love than myself. You are a councilor. If you can command these elements to silence and work the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more; use your authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long and make yourself ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap. Cheerly, good hearts! Out of our way, I say. Exit.

Gonzalo. I have great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! Make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage. If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable. Exeunt.

Enter Boatswain.

Boatswain. Down with the topmast! yare, lower, lower! Bring her to try with main-course. A cry within. A plague upon this howling! They are louder than the weather or our office.

Enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo.

Yet again? What do you here? Shall we give ore and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

Sebastian. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blasphemous, incharitable dog!

Boatswain. Work you, then.

Antonio. Hang, cur, hang, you whoreson, insolent noisemaker; we are less afraid to be drown'd than thou art.

Gonzalo. I'll warrant him for drowning, though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell and as leaky as an unstanched wench.

Boatswain. Lay her ahold, ahold! Set her two courses off to sea again; lay her off!

Enter Mariners, wet.

Mariners. All lost! To prayers, to prayers, all lost! [Exeunt Mariners.]

Boatswain. What, must our mouths be cold?

Gonzalo. The king and prince at prayers! Let's assist them, for our case is as theirs.

Sebastian. I am out of patience.

Antonio. We are merely cheated of our lives by drunkards. This wide-chopp'd rascal, would thou might'st lie drowning the washing of ten tides.

Gonzalo. He'll be hanged yet, though every drop of water swear against it and gape at wid'st to glut him. [Exit Boatswain.]

A confused noise within.

[Voices.] 'Mercy on us!' 'We split, we split!' 'Farewell, my wife and children; farewell, brother!' 'We split! we split! we split!'

Antonio. Let's all sink with' king.

Sebastian. Let's take leave of him. [Exeunt Sebastian and Antonio.]

Gonzalo. Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground; long heath, brown furze, anything. The wills above be done, but I would fain die a dry death. Exit.

❧ SCENE SECOND ❧

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Miranda. If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
The sky it seems would pour down stinking pitch,
But that the sea, mounting to th' welkin's cheek,
Dashes the fire out. O! I have suffered
With those that I saw suffer: a brave vessel—
Who had no doubt some noble creature in her—
Dash'd all to pieces. O the cry did knock
Against my very heart. Poor souls, they perish'd.
Had I bin any god of power, I would
Have sunk the sea within the earth, or ere
It should the good ship so have swallow'd, and
The fraughting souls within her.

Prospero. Be collected:
No more amazement. Tell your piteous heart
There's no harm done.

Miranda. O woe the day!

Prospero. No harm.
I have done nothing but in care of thee—

ACT I; Cf. n. 2 What cheer: what mood are you in (i.e. optimistic or pessimistic)? 3 Good: i.e. good cheer; Cf. n. 4 yarely: quickly 7 Blow . . . enough; Cf. n. 9 Play the men: keep the men moving 11 Boson: boatswain 12 hear him, i.e.: hear his whistle; see 1. 6 above 14 good: good fellow 15 cares; Cf. n. roarers: waves (to roar was to bluster and boast as well as to shout) 19 councilor: F counsellor 23 Cheerly . . . hearts: spoken to the crew 25–27 methinks . . . gallows: from an old proverb, 'He that's born to be hanged need fear no drowning.' 28 doth . . . advantage: benefits us little 30 Down . . . topmast; Cf. n. 31 main-course: mainsail

41 warrant . . . drowning: be his guarantee against drowning 44 ahold: so as to hold the wind; Cf. n. courses: sails 46–50; Cf. n. 47 must . . . cold; Cf. n. 51 merely: utterly, without qualification (cf. Hamlet, I.2.141; As You Like It, II.7.144) 52 wide-chopp'd: big-mouthed 53 washing . . . tides; Cf. n. 55 glut: gulp 62 heath . . . furze: shrubs found growing on wasteland 4 welkin's: sky's 5 fire: here disyllabic 6 brave: here, as elsewhere in the play, 'admirable.' 11 or ere: before 13 fraughting souls: souls who composed her freight 15 amazement: astonished terror piteous: full of pity

Of thee my dear one, thee my daughter—who
Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am, nor that I am more better
Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater father.
Miranda. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.
Prospero. 'Tis time
I should inform thee farther: Lend thy hand
And pluck my magic garment from me. So,
Lie there, my art. Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort;
The direful spectacle of the wrack which touch'd
The very virtue of compassion in thee
I have with such provision in mine art
So safely order'd that there is no soil,
No, not so much perdition as an hair,
Betid to any creature in the vessel
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down,
For thou must now know farther.
Miranda. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stopp'd
And left me to a bootless inquisition,
Concluding, 'Stay, not yet.'
Prospero. The hour's now come;
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear.
Obey and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came unto this cell?
I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not
Out three years old.
Miranda. Certainly, sir, I can.
Prospero. By what? By any other house, or person?
Of anything the image tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.
Miranda. 'Tis far off,
And rather like a dream than an assurance
That my remembrance warrants. Had I not
Four or five women once that tended me?
Prospero. Thou hadst, and more, Miranda; but how is it
That this lives in thy mind? What seest thou else
In the dark backward and abysm of time?
If thou rememb'rest aught ere thou cam'st here,
How thou cam'st here thou mayst.
Miranda. But that I do not.
Prospero. Twelve year since, Miranda, twelve year since,
Thy father was the Duke of Milan and
A prince of power.
Miranda. Sir, are not you my father?
Prospero. Thy mother was a piece of virtue and
She said thou wast my daughter—and thy father
Was Duke of Milan—and his only heir
And princess, no worse issued.
Miranda. O the heavens,
What foul play had we that we came from thence?
Or blessed was't we did?
Prospero. Both, both, my girl.
By foul play, as thou sayst, were we heav'd thence,
But blessedly holp hither.
Miranda. O my heart bleeds
To think o' th' teen that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance; please you, further.
Prospero. My brother and thy uncle, call'd Antonio—
I pray thee mark me, that a brother should
Be so perfidious—he whom next thyself
Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put
The manage of my state, as at that time
Through all the signories it was the first,
And Prospero the prime duke, being so reputed
In dignity, and for the liberal arts
Without a parallel, those being all my study—
The government I cast upon my brother,
And to my state grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies; thy false uncle—
Dost thou attend me?
Miranda. Sir, most heedfully.
Prospero. Being once perfected how to grant suits,
How to deny them, who t' advance, and who
To trash for overtopping, new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd 'em,
Or else new form'd 'em, having both the key
Of officer and office, set all hearts i' th' state
To what tune pleas'd his ear, that now he was
The ivy which had hid my princely trunk,
And suck'd my verdure out on't—thou attend'st not?
Miranda. O good sir, I do.
Prospero. I pray thee, mark me:
I, thus neglecting worldy ends, all dedicated
To closeness and the bettering of my mind
With that which but by being so retired
Orepriz'd all popular rate, in my false brother
Awak'd an evil nature, and my trust,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood, in its contrary as great
As my trust was, which had indeed no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He, being thus, lorded,
Not only with what my revenue yielded,
But what my power might else exact. Like one
Who having into truth by telling of it
Made such a sinner of his memory
To credit his own lie, he did believe
He was indeed the duke, out o' th' substitution,
And executing th' outward face of royalty
With all prerogative—hence, his ambition growing—
Dost thou hear?
Miranda. Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.
Prospero. To have no screen between this part he play'd
And him he play'd it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan. Me, poor man, my library
Was dukedom large enough; of temporal royalties
He thinks me now incapable, confederates—
So dry he was for sway—wi' th' King of Naples

22 more better; Cf. n. 23 full: very 29 magic garment; Cf. n. 32 virtue: essence 33 provision: foresight 34 soil; Cf. n. 35 perdition: destruction hair; Cf. n. 41 bootless inquisition: fruitless inquiry 48 Out: quite, fully 59 backward: past 63 year . . . year: the first year may be dissyllabic 64 Milan: stressed — — 67 piece: masterpiece 70 And princess; Cf. n.

76 holp: helped 78 teen: trouble 79 from: out of 85 signories: dukedoms 86 being: probably monosyllabic, as in ll.88, 90. 91 secret: i.e. magical 94 perfected: stressed — — — 96 trash for overtopping; Cf. n. 98 key: play on 'musical key' and 'key for lock' (cf. present-day 'keys of office') 100 that: so that 102 on't: of it 106 closeness: privacy 107, 108 With . . . rate; Cf. n. 113 lorded: ruled like a lord, domineered; Cf. n. 114 revenue: stressed — — — 115-118 Like . . . lie; Cf. n. 126 Absolute Milan: Duke of Milan Me: as for me 127 temporal royalties: worldy attributes of kingship 128 confederates: conspires 129 dry: thirsty sway: rule wi' th': F with

To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
Subject his coronet to his crown and bend
The dukedom, yet unbow'd—alas, poor Milan—
To most ignoble stooping.
Miranda. O the heavens!
Prospero. Mark his condition and th' event, then tell me
If this might be a brother.
Miranda. I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother.
Good wombs have borne bad sons.
Prospero. Now the condition.
This King of Naples being an enemy
To me inveterate hearkens my brother's suit,
Which was that he in lieu o' th' premises
Of homage and I know not how much tribute
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the dukedom and confer fair Milan,
With all the honors, on my brother; whereon,
A treacherous army levied, one midnight
Fated to th' purpose did Antonio open
The gates of Milan, and i' th' dead of darkness
The ministers for th' purpose hurried thence
Me and thy crying self.
Miranda. Alack, for pity!
I not rememb'ring how I cried out then
Will cry it ore again—it is a hint
That wrings mine eyes to't.
Prospero. Hear a little further,
And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon's, without the which this story
Were most impertinent.
Miranda. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy us?
Prospero. Well demanded, wench.
My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not,
So dear the love my people bore me, nor set
A mark so bloody on the business, but
With colors fairer painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
Bore us some leagues to sea, where they prepar'd
A rotten carcass of a butt, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
Instinctively have quit it. There they hoist us,
To cry to th' sea that roar'd to us, to sigh
To th' winds whose pity, sighing back again,
Did us but loving wrong.
Miranda. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you!
Prospero. O, a cherubin
Thou wast that did preserve me; thou didst smile,
Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have deck'd the sea with drops full salt,
Under my burthen groan'd, which rais'd in me
An undergoing stomach, to bear up
Against what should ensue.
Miranda. How came we ashore?
Prospero. By providence divine.
Some food we had, and some fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity—who being then appointed
Master of this design—did give us, with
Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessaries
Which since have steaded much; so of his gentleness,
Knowing I lov'd my books, he furnish'd me
From mine own library with volumes that
I prize above my dukedom.
Miranda. Would I might
But ever see that man!
Prospero. Now I arise:
Sit still and hear the last of our sea-sorrow.
Here in this island we arriv'd, and here
Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit
Than other princess can, that have more time
For vainer hours and tutors not so careful.
Miranda. Heavens thank you for't! And now I pray you, sir—
For still 'tis beating in my mind—your reason
For raising this sea storm?
Prospero. Know thus far forth:
By accident most strange, bountiful fortune—
Now my dear lady—hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore; and by my prescience
I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop—here cease more questions.
Thou art inclin'd to sleep; 'tis a good dullness,
And give it way—I know thou canst not choose.
Come away, servant, come! I am ready now.
Approach, my Ariel. Come!

Enter Ariel.

Ariel. All hail, great master, grave sir, hail! I come
To answer thy best pleasure, be't to fly,
To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride
On the curl'd clouds: to thy strong bidding task
Ariel and all his quality.
Prospero. Hast thou, spirit,
Perform'd to point the tempest that I bade thee?
Ariel. To every article.
I boarded the king's ship; now on the beak,
Now in the waist, the deck, in every cabin
I flam'd amazement; sometime I'ld divide
And burn in many places; on the topmast,
The yards and boresprit would I flame distinctly,
Then meet and join. Jove's lightning, the precursors,
O' th' dreadful thunderclaps, more mometary
And sight-outrunning were not; the fire and cracks

135 condition: the condition of his bargain with Naples (ll. 141-144) 138 but: otherwise than 143 in lieu o': in consideration of premises: conditions 145 presently: at once extirpate: stressed — ‘— — 151 ministers: agents 155 hint: occasion 160 impertinent: not pertinent, out of place 163 demanded: asked wench: young woman 168 In few: in few words 170 carcass of a butt: derelict ship (with butt—'a cask for wine'—cf. present-day derogatory 'tub') 172 hoist: originally the past tense of 'hoise,' to raise with block and tackle 175 loving wrong: oxymoron 183 undergoing stomach: enduring courage

192 steaded much; cf. the modern 'stood in good stead' 198 Now I arise; Cf. n. 201 made thee more profit: made thee profit more, i.e. better educated 202 princess; Cf. n. 210 Now my dear lady: refers to fortune 212, 213 Cf. n. 216 dullness: drowsiness 217 give it way: do not fight it canst not choose; Cf.n. 218 Come away: i.e. from where you are to here 223 task: put to the test 224 all his quality: 'all others of his profession,' i.e. the other spirits 226 to point: in every point, exactly 230 flam'd amazement: caused amazement by my flames 232 boresprit: bowsprit; the reference is to St. Elmo's fire distinctly: separately

Of sulphurous roaring the most mighty Neptune
Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble,
Yea, his dread trident shake.
Prospero. My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil
Would not infect his reason?
Ariel. Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad, and play'd
Some tricks of desperation; all but mariners
Plung'd in the foaming brine and quit the vessel.
Then all afire with me the king's son, Ferdinand,
With hair up-staring—then like reeds, not hair—
Was the first man that leapt, cried 'Hell is empty,
And all the divels are here!'
Prospero. Why, that's my spirit!
But was not this nigh shore?
Ariel. Close by, my master.
Prospero. But are they, Ariel, safe?
Ariel. Not a hair perish'd:
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before; and as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle.
The king's son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs,
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.
Prospero. Of the king's ship,
The mariners, say how thou hast dispos'd,
And all the rest o' th' fleet.
Ariel. Safely in harbor
Is the king's ship, in the deep nook where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vex'd Bermoothes; there she's hid,
The mariners all under hatches stow'd,
Who with a charm join'd to their suff'red labor
I have left asleep; and for the rest o' th' fleet—
Which I dispers'd—they all have met again
And are upon the Mediterranean flote
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the king's ship wrack'd,
And his great person perish.
Prospero. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work.
What is the time o' th' day?
Ariel. Past the mid season.
Prospero. At least two glasses. The time 'twixt six and now
Must by us both be spent most preciously.
Ariel. Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.
Prospero. How now? moody?
What is't thou canst demand?
Ariel. My liberty.
Prospero. Before the time be out? No more!
Ariel. I prithee
Remember I have done thee worthy service,
Told thee no lies, made thee no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge or grumblings; thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.
Prospero. Dost thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee?
Ariel. No.
Prospero. Thou dost, and think'st it much to tread the ooze
Of the salt deep,
To run upon the sharp wind of the North,
To do me business in the veins o' th' earth
When it is bak'd with frost.
Ariel. I do not, sir.
Prospero. Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot
The foul witch Sycorax, who with age and envy
Was grown into a hoop? Hast thou forgot her?
Ariel. No, sir.
Prospero. Thou hast. Where was she born?
Speak! Tell me!
Ariel. Sir, in Argier.
Prospero. Oh, was she so! I must
Once in a month recount what thou hast bin,
Which thou forget'st. This damn'd witch Sycorax,
For mischiefs manifold and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier
Thou know'st was banish'd; for one thing she did
They would not take her life. Is not this true?
Ariel. Ay, sir.
Prospero. This blue-ey'd hag was hither brought with child,
And here was left by th' sailor; thou, my slave,
As thou report'st thyself, was then her servant,
And for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhorr'd commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine, within which rift
Imprison'd thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died
And left thee there, where thou didst vent thy groans
As fast as mill wheels strike. Then was this island—
Save for the son that she did litter here—
A freckled whelp, hag-born—not honor'd with
A human shape.
Ariel. Yes, Caliban her son.
Prospero. Dull thing, I say so: he, that Caliban
Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans
Did make wolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears: it was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undo; it was mine art,
When I arriv'd and heard thee, that made gape
The pine and let thee out.
Ariel. I thank thee, master.
Prospero. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak
And peg thee in his knotty entrails till

237 Seem to: seem'd to (with -d and t- merged) 240 coil: turmoil 243 fever of the mad: fit of irrationality 247 up-staring: standing on end 255 sustaining: 'buoyant,' probably through Ariel's magic 268 still-vex'd Bermoothes: (three syllables) ever-stormy Bermudas; Cf. n. 273 flote: wave, billows 281 glasses: hourglasses 283 pains: trouble in accomplishing tasks (cf. present-day 'paintstaking') 284 remember: remind

292 Told thee . . . made thee: Cf. n. 293 or . . . or: either . . . or dids: F did 294 bate me: reduce my service by 302 bak'd: hardened 310 Argier: Algiers 316 for one thing: perhaps 'because of one good thing' 319 blue-ey'd: Cf. n. 322 for: because spirit: one syllable (probably 'sprite') 323 earthy: Cf. n. 324 hests: commands 331 mill wheels strike: i.e. the water 332 she: F he

Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.
Ariel. Pardon, master;
I will be correspondent to command
And do my spriting, gently.
Prospero. Do so, and after two days I will discharge thee.
Ariel. That's my noble master!
What shall I do? Say what! What shall I do?
Prospero. Go make thyself like a nyumph o' th' sea; be subject
To no sight but thine and mine, invisible
To every eyeball else. Go take this shape
And hither come in't. Go! Hence with diligence!
Exit [Ariel].
Awake, dear heart, awake; thou hast slept well;
Awake.
Miranda. The strangeness of your story put
Heaviness in me.
Prospero. Shake it off! Come on,
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never
Yields us kind answer.
Miranda. 'Tis a villain, sir,
I do not love to look on.
Prospero. But as 'tis
We cannot miss him; he does make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices
That profit us. What ho! slave! Caliban!
Thou earth, thou! speak!
Caliban within. There's wood enough within.
Prospero. Come forth, I say, there's other business for thee! Come, thou tortoise! When?

Enter Ariel like a water nymph.

Fine apparition! My quaint Ariel,
Hark in thine ear.
Ariel. My lord, it shall be done. Exit.
Prospero. Thou poisonous slave, got by the divel himself
Upon thy wicked dam, come forth.

Enter Caliban.

Caliban. As wicked dew as ere my mother brush'd
With raven's feather from unwholesome fen
Drop on you both! A southwest blow on ye,
And blister you all ore!
Prospero. For this be sure tonight thou shalt have cramps,
Side stitches, that shall pen thy breath up; urchins
Shall for that vast of night that they may work
All exercise on thee! Thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more stinging
Than bees that made 'em.
Caliban. I must eat my dinner.
This island's mine by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me! When thou camest first
Thou strok'st me, and made much of me; wouldst give me
Water with berries in't, and teach me how
To name the bigger light and how the less,
That burn by day and night; and then I lov'd thee
And show'd thee all the qualities o' th' isle,
The fresh springs, brine pits, barren place and fertile.
Curs'd be I that did so! All the charms
Of Sycorax—toads, beetles, bats—light on you!
For I am all the subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own king, and here you sty me
In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me
The rest o' th' island.
Prospero. Thou most lying slave,
Whom stripes may move, not kindness! I have us'd thee—
Filth as thou art—with human care and lodg'd thee
In mine own cell, till thou didst seek to violate
The honor of my child.
Caliban. O ho! O ho! would't had been done!
Thou didst prevent me; I had peopl'd else
This isle with Calibans.
Miranda. Abhorred slave,
Which any print of goodness wilt not take,
Being capable of all ill: I pitied thee,
Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other; when thou didst not, savage,
Know thine own meaning, but wouldst gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known, but thy vild race—
Though thou didst learn—had that in't which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore wast thou
Deservedly confin'd into this rock,
Who hadst deserv'd more than a prison.
Caliban. You taught me language and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse! The red plague rid you
For learning me your language!
Prospero. Hag-seed, hence!
Fetch us in fuel, and be quick thou'rt best
To answer other business! Shrug'st thou, malice?
If thou neglect'st or dost unwillingly
What I command, I'll rack thee with old cramps,
Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee roar
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.
Caliban. No, 'pray thee!
I must obey; his art is of such power
It would control my dam's god Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.
Prospero. So, slave, hence! Exit Caliban.

Enter Ferdinand; and Ariel, invisible, playing and singing.

Song

Ariel. Come unto these yellow sands,
and then take hands:
Curtsied when you have, and kiss'd,
the wild waves whist,
Foot it featly here and there,

350 correspondent: submissive 370 miss: spare 377 quaint: finely dressed 380 got: begot 384 southwest: a southwest wind was considered infectious 387 urchins: goblins in the shape of hedgehogs (cf. below, II.2.10-12) 388 vast: immense space 390 pinch: tormented (perhaps pricked with hedgehog quills) 391 'em: i.e. the (cells of) honeycomb 394 camest: F cam'st 395 strok'st: strok'dst F stroakst; Cf. n. 397 bigger . . . less: see Gen. 1:16: 'And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night.'

400 springs . . . fertile: i.e. he showed how to distinguish between useful and useless natural resources (Arden ed.). place: Cf. n. 401 charms: evil spirits charmed by Sycorax 404 mine: F min; if not a printer's error, the spelling may indicate a pronunciation, with i as in 'tin.' sty: pen me as in a pigsty 415-426: Cf. n. 416 Which . . . take: who will not take any print (impression). 422 vild: common spelling (showing pronunciation) of 'vile.' 423 good natures: those who are naturally good 428 red plague: bubonic plague (with red sores) rid: destroy 431 be quick thou'rt best: you had better be quick thou'rt: thou wert 432 answer: attend to 435 aches: pronounced 'aitches.' 442-452: Cf. n. 445 whist: hushed 446 featly: gracefully

And sweet sprites the burthen bear.

Burthen, dispersedly.

[Voices.] 'Hark, hark!' 'bowgh wawgh!'
'The watch-dogs bark!' 'bowgh wawgh!'
Ariel. Hark, hark! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer
Cry cockadiddle-dow!

Ferdinand. Where should this music be? i' th' air, or th' earth?
It sounds no more! And sure it waits upon
Some god o' th' island; sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the king my father's wrack,
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion
With its sweet air; thence I have follow'd it—
Or it hath drawn me rather—but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.

Song

Ariel. Full fadom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes:
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea nymphs hourly ring his knell.

Burthen.

[Voices.] Ding dong!
[Ariel.] Hark, now I hear them! Ding-dong, bell.

Ferdinand. The ditty does remember my drown'd father.
This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes! I hear it now above me.
Prospero. The fringed curtains of thine eyes advance,
And say what thou seest yond.
Miranda. What is't? a spirit?
Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,
It carries a brave form. But 'tis a spirit.
Prospero. No, wench, it eats and sleeps and hath such senses
As we have, such. This gallant which thou seest
Was in the wrack; and but he's something stain'd
With grief—that's beauty's canker—thou might'st call him
A goodly person. He has lost his fellows
And strays about to find 'em.
Miranda. I might call him
A thing divine, for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.
Prospero. It goes on, I see,
As my soul prompts it! Spirit, fine spirit, I'll free thee
Within two days for this.
Ferdinand. Most sure the goddess
On whom these airs attend! Vouchsafe my prayer
May know if you remain upon this island,
And that you will some good instruction give
How I may bear me here! My prime request—
Which I do last pronounce—is—O you wonder!—
If you be maid or no?
Miranda. No wonder, sir,
But certainly a maid.
Ferdinand. My language? Heavens!
I am the best of them that speak this speech
Were I but where 'tis spoken.
Prospero. How? the best?
What wert thou if the King of Naples heard thee?
Ferdinand. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear thee speak of Naples! He does hear me,
And that he does, I weep. Myself am Naples,
Who with mine eyes—never since at ebb—beheld
The king my father wrack'd.
Miranda. Alack, for mercy!
Ferdinand. Yes, faith, and all his lords, the Duke of Milan
And his brave son being twain.
Prospero. [Aside.] The Duke of Milan
And his more braver daughter could control thee
If now 'twere fit to do't. At the first sight
They have chang'd eyes! Delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this.—A word, good sir;
I fear you have done yourself some wrong! A word.
Miranda. Why speaks my father so ungently? This
Is the third man that ere I saw! The first
That ere I sigh'd for! Pity move my father
To be inclin'd my way.
Ferdinand. O, if a virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The Queen of Naples.
Prospero. Soft, sir. One word more.
[Aside.] They are both in either's powers! But this swift business
I must uneasy make, lest too light winning
Make the prize light.—One word more! I charge thee
That thou attend me! Thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st not and hast put thyself
Upon this island as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on't.
Ferdinand. No, as I am a man.
Miranda. There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple.
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with't.
Prospero. Follow me.
Speak not you for him! He's a traitor! Come,
I'll manacle thy neck and feet togeher!
Sea water shalt thou drink; thy food shall be
The fresh brook mussels, wither'd roots, and husks
Wherein the acorn cradled. Follow.
Ferdinand. No,
I will resist such entertainment till
Mine enemy has more power.

447 the burthen bear: F prints 'bear the burthen.' SD Burthen, dispersedly: refrain, sung from several places on (or just off) the stage. (SD is used throughout to indicate stage direction.) 458 Weeping again: while I was weeping again because of 460 passion: suffering 464 fadom: fathoms 474 remember: recall 476 owes: possesses 481 brave: admirable 484 and but: except that something: somewhat 485 that's . . . canker: which is the blight that destroys beauty 486 goodly: handsome 492 Spirit . . . spirit: both to be read 'sprite.'

496 remain: dwell 498 bear me: conduct myself 500 maid: suggests two pairs of opposites: goddess—mortal, unmarried—married 508 single: solitary, alone, defenseless 510 that: because 515 his brave son; Cf. n. 517 control thee: check your statement, hence refuse 519 chang'd: play on 'exchanged' and 'altered' 521 done . . . wrong: euphemism for 'lied' 532-533 light . . . light: play on meanings 'easy' and 'of small account' 535 ow'st own'st 549 entertainment: treatment

He draws, and is charmed from moving.

Miranda. O dear father,
Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle and not fearful.
Prospero. What, I say!
My foot my tutor? Put thy sword up, traitor,
Who mak'st a show, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possess'd with guilt! Come, from thy ward,
For I can here disarm thee with this stick,
And make thy weapon drop.
Miranda. Beseech you, Father!
Prospero. Hence! Hang not on my garments.
Miranda. Sir,
have pity!
I'll be his surety.
Prospero. Silence! One word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee! What,
An advocate for an imposter? Hush!
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,
Having seen but him and Caliban! Foolish wench,
To th' most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.
Miranda. My affections
Are then most humble: I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.
Prospero. Come on, obey!
Thy nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigor in them.
Ferdinand. So they are.
My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up:
My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wrack of all my friends, nor this man's threats,
To whom I am subdu'd, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid! All corners else o' th' earth
Let liberty make use of: space enough
Have I in such a prison.
Prospero. [To Ariel.] It works! [To Ferdinand.]
Come on.
[To Ariel.] Thou hast done well, fine Ariel! [To Ferdinand.]
Follow me.
[To Ariel.] Hark what thou else shalt do me.
Miranda. Be of comfort.
My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech: this is unwonted
Which now came from him.
Prospero. Thou shalt be as free
As mountain winds; but then exactly do
All points of my command.
Ariel. To th' syllable.
Propero. [To Ferdinand.] Come, follow! [To Miranda.]
Speak not for him. Exeunt.

Act Second ❧ Scene First

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and others.

Gonzalo. Beseech you, sir, be merry; you have cause—
So have we all—of joy, for our escape
Is much beyond our loss; our hint of woe
Is common: every day some sailor's wife,
The masters of some merchant, and the merchant
Have just our theme of woe. But for the miracle—
I mean our preservaton—few in millions
Can speak like us! Then wisely, good sir, weigh
Our sorrow with our comfort.
Alonso. Prithee, peace.
Sebastian. He receives comfort like cold porridge.
Antonio. The visitor will not give him ore so.
Sebastian. Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit.
By and by it will strike.
Gonzalo. Sir—
Sebastian. One! Tell.
Gonzalo. When every grief is entertain'd that's offer'd, comes to th' entertainer—
Sebastian. A dollar.
Gonzalo. Dolour comes to him indeed. You have spoken truer than you purpos'd.
Sebastian. You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.
Gonzalo. Therefore, my lord—
Antonio. Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue.
Alonso. I prithee spare.
Gonzalo. Well, I have done. But yet—
Sebastian. He will be talking.
Antonio. Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, first begins to crow?
Sebastian. The old cock.
Antonio. The cock'rel.
Sebastian. Done! The wager?
Antonio. A laughter.
Sebastian. A match.
Adrian. Though this island seem to be desert—
Sebastian. Ha ha ha!
Antonio. So! You're paid.
Adrian. Uninhabitable and almost inaccessible—
Sebastian. Yet—
Adrian. Yet—
Antonio. He could not miss't.
Adrian. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.
Antonio. Temperance was a delicate wench.
Sebastian. Ay, and a subtle, as he most learnedly deliver'd.
Adrian. The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.
Sebastian. As if it had lungs, and rotten ones.

553 gentle: a gentleman fearful: afraid 555 My ... tutor; Cf. n. 557 from thy ward: lower thy guard 570, 571 To ... to: compared to 572 affections: feelings 576 nerves: sinews 579 spirits: vital powers

4 hint: occasion 6 some merchant: either a vessel or the owner (or purchaser) of cargo the merchant: here, probably, in the latter sense 12 porridge: a stew, often with peas; cf. peace in I. 9 (Arden ed.) 13 visitor: comforter of the sick (cf. below, ll. 203, 204, and Mat. 25:36) 15 By and by: immediately 17 Tell: count 18; Cf. n. 27 spare: spare me any more talk 35 A laughter; Cf. n. 38, 39 ; Cf. n. 43 miss't: avoid the conventional phraseology (cf. 1.26 above) 45 temperance: temperature, climate 46 Temperance: common Puritan name for a woman 47 subtle: here, 'crafty,' 'sly.'

Antonio. Or as 'twere perfum'd by a fen.
Gonzalo. Here is everything advantageous to life.
Antonio. True, save means to live.
Sebastian. Of that there's none, or little.
Gonzalo. How lush and lusty the grass looks! How green!
Antonio. The ground indeed is tawny.
Sebastian. With an eye of green in't.
Antonio. He misses not much.
Sebastian. No—he doth but mistake the truth totally.
Gonzalo. But the rarity of it is—which is indeed almost beyond credit—
Sebastian. As many vouch'd rarities are—
Gonzalo. That our garments being—as they were—drench'd in the sea, hold, notwithstanding, their freshness and glosses, being rather new-dy'd than stain'd with salt water.
Antonio. If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say he lies?
Sebastian. Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.
Gonzalo. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.
Sebastian. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.
Adrian. Tunis was never grac'd before with such a paragon to their queen.
Gonzalo. Not since widow Dido's time.
Antonio. Widow! A pox o' that! How came that widow in? Widow Dido!
Sebastian. What if he had said 'widower Aeneas' too? Good lord, how you take it!
Adrian. 'Widow Dido' said you? You make me study of that. She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.
Gonzalo. This Tunis, sir, was Carthage.
Adrian. Carthage?
Gonzalo. I assure you, Carthage.
Antonio. His word is more than the miraculous harp.
Sebastian. He hath rais'd the wall, and houses too.
Antonio. What impossible matter will he make easy next?
Sebastian. I think he will carry this island home in his pocket and give it his son for an apple.
Antonio. And sowing the kernels of it in the sea, bring forth more islands.
Gonzalo. [Having pondered.] Ay.
Antonio. Why, in good time.
Gonzalo. Sir, we were talking that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now queen.
Antonio. And the rarest that ere came there.
Sebastian. Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido.
Antonio. Oh, widow Dido? Ay, widow Dido!
Gonzalo. Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.
Antonio. That sort was well fish'd for.
Gonzalo. When I wore it at your daughter's marriage—
Alonso. You cram these words into mine ears against The stomach of my sense. Would I had never Married my daughter there, for coming thence My son is lost and—in my rate—she too, Who is so far from Italy remov'd I ne're again shall see her. O thou mine heir Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish Hath made his meal on thee?
Francisco. Sir, he may live. I saw him beat the surges under him And ride upon their backs; he trod the water, Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted The surge most swolne that met him. His bold head 'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oared Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke To th' shore, that ore his wave-worn basis bowed As stooping to relieve him. I not doubt He came alive to land.
Alonso. No, no, he's gone.
Sebastian. Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss That would not bless our Europe with your daughter, But rather loose her to an African, Where she at least is banish'd from your eye, Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.
Alonso. Prithee peace.
Sebastian. You were kneel'd to and importun'd otherwise By all of us, and the fair soul herself Weigh'd, between loathness and obedience, at Which end o' th' beam should bow. We have lost your son, I fear, for ever: Milan and Naples have Mo widows in them of this business' making Than we bring men to comfort them. The fault's your own.
Alonso. So is the dear'st o' th' loss.
Gonzalo. My Lord Sebastian, The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness, And time to speak it in: you rub the sore When you should bring the plaster.
Sebastian. Very well.
Antonio. And most chirurgeonly.
Gonzalo. It is foul weather in us all, good sir, When you are cloudy.
Sebastian. Fowl weather?
Antonio. Very foul.
Gonzalo. Had I plantation of this isle, my lord—
Antonio. He'd sow't with nettle seed.
Sebastian. Or docks, or mallows.
Gonzalo. And were the king on't, what would I do?
Sebastian. 'Scape being drunk, for want of wine.
Gonzalo. I' th' commonwealth I would by contraries. Execute all things; for no kind of traffic Would I admit; no name of magistrate; Letters should not be known; riches, poverty, And use of service, none; contract, succession,

54 lusty: strong 55 tawny: brown 57 misses not much: doesn't misses by much 63 glosses: Cf. n. 74 to: for 77 Widow Dido: Cf. n. 85 miraculous harp: of Zeus' son, who with his playing raised the walls of Thebes 86 houses too: i.e. by claiming Carthage still exists as Tunis 92 Ay: in reaffirmation that Tunis was Carthage (Kittredge); F spells it I 98 Bate: except for 101 in a sort: after a fashion 102 fish'd for: Cf. n.

105 stomach: inclination sense: feelings 107 rate: estimation 119 basis: trunk 120 As: as if 125 loose: mate 127 Who . . . on't: which has reason to shed tears upon the grief revealed in it Who hath: probably pronounced 'Who'th' 131 Weigh'd: forced to choose 134 Mo: more 137 dear'st: 'most dearly loved' and 'of highest worth' ('what touches one most nearly'—Arden ed.) 140 time: fitting time 142 Very well: very well spoken (sarcasm) 143 chirurgeonly: like a surgeon 146 Fowl: Cf. n. foul i.e. 'a very foul pun'—to be balanced against 'Very well' of l. 143, above 148 plantation: colonization, purposely misconstrued by Antonio in the next line 150 docks, or mallows: weeds 151 on't: of it 153-176: Cf. n. 157 use of service: custom of employing servants contract: stressed — — succession: inheritance

Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none;
No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil;
No occupation—all men idle, all;
And women too, but innocent and pure;
No sovereignty.
Sebastian. Yet he would be king on't.
Antonio. The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.
Gonzalo. All things in common nature should produce,
Without sweat, or endeavor; treason, felony,
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine
Would I not have; but Nature should bring forth
Of it own kind all foison, all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.
Sebastian. No marrying 'mong his subjects?
Antonio. None, man; all idle: whores and knaves.
Gonzalo. I would with such perfection govern, sir,
T'excel the Golden Age.
Sebastian. 'Save his Majesty!
Antonio. Long live Gonzalo!
Gonzalo. And—do you mark me, sir?
Alonso. Prithee no more; thou dost talk nothing to me.
Gonzalo. I do well believe your Highness, and did it to minister occasion to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble lungs that they always use to laugh at nothing.
Antonio. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.
Gonzalo. Who in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you; so you may continue and laugh at nothing still.
Antonio. What a blow was there given!
Sebastian. And it had not falne flat-long.
Gonzalo. You are gentlemen of brave metal; you would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter Ariel playing solemn music.

Sebastian. We would so, and then go a-batfowling.
Antonio. Nay, good my lord, be not angry.
Gonzalo. No, I warrant you; I will not adventure my discretion so weakly. Will you laugh me asleep? for I am very heavy.
Antonio. Go sleep, and hear us.
[All sleep but Alonso, Sebastian, and Antonio.]
Alonso. What, all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes
Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts. I find
They are inclin'd to do so.
Sebastian. Please you, sir,
Do not omit the heavy offer of it.
It seldom visits sorrow, when it doth
It is a comforter.
Antonio. We two, my lord,
Will guard your person while you take your rest,
And watch your safety.
Alonso. Thank you. Wondrous heavy . . .
[Alonso sleeps. Exit Ariel.]
Sebastian. What a strange drowsiness possesses them!
Antonio. It is the quality o' th' climate.
Sebastian. Why
Doth it not then our eyelids sink? I find not Myself dispos'd to sleep.
Antonio. Nor I: my spirits are nimble.
They fell together all as by consent;
They dropp'd as by a thunderstroke. What might,
Worthy Sebastian? O what might—? No more!
And yet, methinks I see it in thy face,
What thou shouldst be; th' occasion speaks thee, and
My strong imagination sees a crown
Dropping upon thy head.
Sebastian. What? Art thou waking?
Antonio. Do you not hear me speak?
Sebastian. I do, and surely
It is a sleepy language, and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep! What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open—standing, speaking, moving,
And yet so fast asleep.
Antonio. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let'st thy fortune sleep—die rather; wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.
Sebastian. Thou dost snore distinctly:
There's meaning in thy snores.
Antonio. I am more serious than my custom—you
Must be so too, if heed me; which to do
Trebles thee ore.
Sebastian. Well, I am standing water.
Antonio. I'll teach you how to flow.
Sebastian. Do so: to ebb
Hereditary sloth instructs me.
Antonio. O,
If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thus you mock it, how in stripping it
You more invest it! ebbing men indeed—
Most often—do so near the bottom run
By their own fear or sloth.
Sebastian. Prithee say on;
The setting of thine eye and cheek proclaim
A matter from thee, and a birth, indeed,
Which throes thee much to yield.
Antonio. Thus, sir:
Although this lord of weak remembrance, this
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earth'd, hath here almost persuaded—
For he's a spirit of persuasion, only
Professes to persuade—the king his son's alive
'Tis as impossible that he's undrown'd
As he that sleeps here swims.
Sebastian. I have no hope
That he's undrown'd.
Antonio. O, out of that 'no hope'

158 Bourn: boundary tilth: tilled land 168 engine: machine used in warfare 170 it: its foison: plentiful harvest 175 T'excel: as to excel 176 'Save: God save; cf. n. 179 nothing: nonsense 181 sensible: sensitive 182 nimble: active 183 you: i.e. 'noting' 185 to you: compared with you 187 And: if falne: fallen flat-long: with the flat of the sword 188 metal: modern 'mettle' 189 sphere: Cf. n. 189, 190 if . . . changing: if it would wait an impossible time (longer than the lunar month) 191 go a-batfowling: Cf. n. 193, 194 adventure my discretion: hazard my reputation 195 hear us: i.e. 'hear us laugh' 200 omit: neglect offer: invitation 202-205: Cf. n.

210 sink: cause to close 213 consent: agreement 217 speaks thee: 'proclaims thee king,' or 'speaks to thee' 229 wink'st: i.e. 'art oblivious to thy opportunity' 231 distinctly: explained by the next line 235 Trebles thee ore: triples thy value 236 standing water: unmoving, between ebb and flood 237 flow: rise (like the tide) 242, 243 stripping . . . invest: a clothing metaphor: to invest is to clothe with robes of office 247 setting: rigid expression 249 throes thee: causes thee agony (as of childbirth) 251 this lord: probably Gonzalo, who supported Francisco's account and aroused Antonio's scorn 253 earth'd: buried 254, 255 For . . . persuade: for he's persuasion personified, whose only profession is to persuade 258 hope: Cf. n.

What great hope have you! No hope that way is Another way so high a hope that even
Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond
But doubt discovery there. Will you grant with me
That Ferdinand is drown'd?
Sebastian. He's gone.
Antonio. Then tell me,
Who's the next heir of Naples?
Sebastian. Claribel.
Antonio. She that is Queen of Tunis; she that dwells
Ten leagues beyond man's life; she that from Naples
Can have no note, unless the sun were post—
The man i' th' moon's too slow—till new-born chins
Be rough and razorable; she that from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast again—
And by that destiny—to perform an act
Whereof what's past is prologue, what to come
In yours and my discharge.
Sebastian. What stuff is this?
How say you?
'Tis true my brother's daughter's Queen of Tunis;
So is she heir of Naples; 'twixt which regions
There is some space.
Antonio. A space whose ev'ry cubit
Seems to cry out, 'How shall that Claribel
Measure us back to Naples? Keep in Tunis
And let Sebastian wake!' Say this were death
That now hath seiz'd them, why they were no worse
Than now they are; there be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleeps, lords that can prate
As amply and unnecessarily
As this Gonzalo—I myself could make
A chough of as deep chat—O that you bore
The mind that I do! What a sleep were this
For your advancement! Do you understand me?
Sebastian. Methinks I do.
Antonio. And how does your content
Tender your own good fortune?
Sebastian. I remember
You did supplant your brother Prospero.
Antonio. True.
And look how well my garments sit upon me,
Much feater than before. My brother's servants
Were then my fellows; now they are my men.
Sebastian. But for your conscience—
Antonio. Ay, sir, where lies that? If 'twere a kibe
'Twould put me to my slipper; but I feel not
This deity in my bosom; twenty consciences
That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they
And melt, ere they molest! Here lies your brother,
No better than the earth he lies upon,
If he were that which now he's like—that's dead—
Whom I with this obedient steel—three inches of it—
Can lay to bed forever; whiles you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for aye might put
This ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who
Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest,
They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk;
They'll tell the clock to any business that
We say befits the hour.
Sebastian. Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent: as thou got'st Milan
I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword; one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou payest,
And I the king shall love thee.
Antonio. Draw together;
And when I rear my hand do you the like,
To fall it on Gonzalo.
Sebastian. O, but one word.
[They converse apart.]

Enter Ariel with music and song.

Ariel. My master through his art foresees the danger
That you, his friend, are in and sends me forth—
For else his project dies—to keep them living.
Sings in Gonzalo's ear.

Song
While you here do snoring lie,
Open-ey'd Conspiracy
His time doth take.
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber and beware.
Awake, awake!

Antonio. Then let us both be sudden.
Gonzalo. [Awakening.] Now, good angels,
Preserve the king! [Shakes Alonso.]
Alonso. Why, how now, ho! awake? Why are you drawn?
Wherefore this ghastly looking?
Gonzalo. What's the matter?
Sebastian. Whiles we stood here securing your repose—
Even now—we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like bulls, or rather lions—did't not wake you?
It struck mine ear most terribly.
Alonso. I heard nothing.
Antonio. O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear,
To make an earthquake! Sure it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.
Alonso. Heard you this, Gonzalo?
Gonzalo. Upon mine honor, sir, I heard a humming—
And that a strange one too—which did awake me.
I shak'd you, sir, and cried; as mine eyes open'd
I saw their weapons drawn—there was a noise,
That's verily! 'Tis best we stand upon our guard,
Or that we quit this place. Let's draw our weapons.
Alonso. Lead off this ground and let's make further search
For my poor son.
Gonzalo. Heavens keep him from these beasts,
For he is sure i' th' island.
Alonso. Lead away.
Ariel. Prospero, my lord, shall know what I have done.
So, king, go safely on to seek thy son. Exeunt.

264 But doubt discovery: without putting out the light of discovery: to 'dout' (do out) was to 'extinguish' there a: state greater than the kingship of Naples 272 note: information post: messenger 275 cast: play on the meanings 'disgorged' and 'assigned to parts in a play'; cf. following lines 278, 279 what ... discharge; Cf. n. 286 Measure: journey across 289 there be that: there be those who 292, 293 I ... chat: I could make of myself a jackdaw capable of Gonzalo's prattle 297 content: liking 298 Tender: regard 303 feater: more fitly 306 kibe: chilblain, or sore on heel 309 candied: congealed 310 molest: worry me

319 tell ... to: say the time is ripe for 348 struck: F strook

Scene Second

Enter Caliban with a burthen of wood. A noise of thunder heard.

Caliban. All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats on Prosper fall, and make him
By inchmeal a disease! His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin-shows, pitch me i' th' mire,
Nor lead me like a firebrand in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid 'em; but
For every trifle are they set upon me,
Sometime like apes that mow and chatter at me
And after bite me, then like hedgehogs which Lie tumbling in my barefoot way and mount
Their pricks at my footfall; sometime am I
All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues
Do hiss me into madness.

Enter Trinculo.

Lo, now, lo!
Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me
For bringing wood in slowly! I'll fall flat.
Perchance he will not mind me.

Trinculo. Here's neither bush nor shrub to bear off any weather at all, and another storm brewing. I hear it sing i' th' wind. Yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head. Yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls. [Sees Caliban.] What have we here, a man? or a fish? dead or alive? A fish. He smells like a fish—a very ancient and fishlike smell—a kind of, not of the newest, poor-john a strange fish! Were I in England now—as once I was—and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver; there would this monster make a man: any strange beast there makes a man! When they will not give a doit to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legg'd like a man, and his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer: this is no fish but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt. [Thunder.] Alas, the storm is come again! My best way is to creep under his gaberdine. there is no other shelter hereabout. Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows! I will here shroud till the dregs of the storm be past. [Creeps under Caliban's garment.]

Enter Stephano singing.

I shall no more to sea, to sea;
Here shall I die ashore.

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral!
Well, here's my comfort. Drinks [and then] sings.

Song

The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,
The gunner and his mate
Lov'd Moll, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate.
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a sailor, go hang!
She lov'd not the savor of tar nor of pitch,
Yet a tailor might scratch her wherere she did itch.
Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang!

This is a scurvy tune, too: but here's my comfort. Drinks.

Caliban. Do not torment me! O!

Stephano. What's the matter? Have we divels here? Do you put tricks upon's with salvages and men of Inde? ha? I have not 'scap'd drowning to be afeard now of your four legs; for it hath bin said, 'as proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground,' and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at' nostrils.

Caliban. The spirit torments me! O!

Stephano. This is some monster of the isle with four legs, who hath got—as I take it—an ague. Where the divel should he learn our language? I will give him some relief if it be but for that! If I can recover him and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's leather.

Caliban. Do not torment me, prithee! I'll bring my wood home faster.

Stephano. He's in his fit now, and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle! If he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him; he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Caliban. Thou dost me yet but little hurt. Thou wilt anon; I know it by thy trembling. Now Prosper works upon thee.

Stephano. Come on your ways—open your mouth—here is that which will give language to you, cat. Open your mouth! This will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly. You cannot tell who's your friend. Open your chaps again.

Trinculo. I should know that voice! It should be—but he is drown'd, and these are divels. O defend me!

Stephano. Four legs and two voices—a most delicate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague. Come! Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

Trinculo. Stephano!

Stephano. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy! This is a divel and no monster! I will leave him: I have no long spoon.

Trinculo. Stephano! If thou beest Stephano, touch me and speak to me, for I am Trinculo—be not afeard—thy good friend Trinculo.

Stephano. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth! I'll pull thee by the lesser legs. If any be Trinculo's legs, these are they . . . Thou art very Trinculo indeed! How cam'st thou to be the siege of this mooncalf? Can he vent Trinculos?

Trinculo. I took him to be kill'd with a thunderstroke. But

3 By inchmeal: little by little (cf. modern 'piecemeal') 6 firebrand: ignis fatuus (will-o'-the-wisp) 9 mow: grimace 19 bear: ward 22 bombard: leather wine jug 27 poor-john: salt hake (a kind of fish) 28 painted: i.e. on a board to advertise the exhibition (cf. Macbeth V.7.54-55); Malone cites many references to this practice 31 makes a man: make a man's fortune (with a pun, explained in the following clause) 31 doit: almost worthless Dutch coin 32 dead Indian: such as were displayed in England, in the Elizabethan equivalent of a side show 37 gaberdine: cloak 39 shroud: take shelter 45 swabber: one who kept the ship cleam

57 salvages: savages 66 recover: restore 68 neat's leather: leather from cattle of the ox kind 74, 75 I . . . him: no price will be too high for him 77 thy trembling: i.e. Trinculo's 79 language . . . cat: in reference to an old proverb, 'Liquor will make a cat speak' 92 long spoon: in reference to the proverb, 'He that would eat with the devil needs a long spoon' 99 siege: excrement mooncalf: a mooncalf was a shapeless abortion, thought to be caused by the action of the moon

art thou not drown'd, Stephano? I hope now thou art not drown'd! Is the storm over-blown? I hid me under the dead mooncalf's gaberdine, for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans 'scap'd?

Stephano. Prithee do not turn me about—my stomach is not constant.

Caliban. These be fine things and if they be not sprites! That's a brave god, and bears celestial liquor. I will kneel to him.

Stephano. How didst thou 'scape? How cam'st thou hither? Swear by this bottle how thou cam'st hither! I escap'd upon a butt of sack which the sailors heaved oreboard, by this bottle! which I made of the bark of a tree with mine own hands since I was cast ashore.

Caliban. I'll swear upon that bottle to be thy true subject, for the liquor is not earthly.

Stephano. Here! Swear then how thou escap'dst.

Trinculo. Swum asore, man, like a duck! I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

Stephano. Here, kiss the book. [Trinculo drinks.] Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

Trinculo. O Stephano, hast any more of this?

Stephano. The whole butt, man! My cellar is in a rock by th' seaside, where my wine is hid. How now, mooncalf? How does thine ague?

Caliban. Hast thou not dropp'd from heaven?

Stephano. Out o' th' moon, I do assure thee. I was the man i' th' moon, when time was.

Caliban. I have seen thee in her—and I do adore thee! My mistress show'd me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.

Stephano. Come, swear to that! Kiss the book! I will furnish it anon with new contents! Swear. [Caliban drinks.]

Trinculo. By this good light, this is a very shallow monster! I afeard of him? a very weak monster! The man i' th' moon? A most poor credulous monster! Well drawn, monster, in good sooth.

Caliban. I'll show thee every fertile inch o' th' island—and I will kiss thy foot! I prithee, be my god.

Trinculo. By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster; when's god's asleep he'll rob his bottle.

Caliban. I'll kiss thy foot. I'll swear myself thy subject.

Stephano. Come on, then—down and swear.

Trinculo. I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster! A most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him—

Stephano. Come, kiss.

Trinculo. But that the poor monster's in drink. An abominable monster!

Caliban. I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries;
I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.
A plague upon the tyrant that I serve!
I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee,
Thou wondrous man.

Trinculo. A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard.

107 and if: if 120 kiss the book: joking reference to the custom of kissing the Bible after swearing on it; see l. 115 above. 129 when time was: once upon a time 131 thy dog ... bush: in reference to an old tale that the man in the moon was banished there with his dog for gathering brush on Sunday 136 drawn: drunk

Caliban. I prithee let me bring thee where crabs grow;
And I with my long nails will dig thee pignuts,
Show thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how
To snare the nimble marmoset; I'll bring thee
To clus'tring filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee
Young scamels from the rock. Wilt thou go with me?

Stephano. I prithee now, lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drown'd, we will inherit here. Here, bear my bottle! Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again.

Caliban sings drunkenly.

Caliban. Farewell, master; farewell, farewell!

Trinculo. A howling monster! a drunken monster!

Caliban. [Singing.]
No more dams I'll make for fish,
Nor fetch in firing
At requiring,
Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish.
'Ban, 'Ban, Ca-Caliban
Has a new master—get a new man.

Freedom, high-day! high-day, freedom! freedom, high-day, freedom!

Stephano. O brave monster! lead the way. Exeunt.

ACT THIRD ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a log.

Ferdinand. There be some sports are painful, and their labor
Delight in them sets off; some kinds of baseness
Are nobly undergone, and most poor matters
Point to rich ends. This my mean task
Would be as heavy to me as odious, but
The mistress which I serve quickens what's dead
And makes my labors pleasures. O she is
Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed,
And he's compos'd of harshness. I must remove
Some thousands of these logs and pile them up,
Upon a sore injunction. My sweet mistress
Weeps when she sees me work, and says such baseness
Had never like executor. I forget;
But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labors,
Most busy lest, when I do it.

Enter Miranda and Prospero [behind her and unseen].

Miranda. Alas, now pray you
Work not so hard! I would the lightning had
Burnt up those logs that you are enjoin'd to pile:
Pray set it down and rest you; when this burns
'Twill weep for having wearied you. My father
Is hard at study; pray now rest yourself:
He's safe for these three hours.

Ferdinand. O most dear mistress,
The sun will set before I shall discharge

158 crabs: crabapples 163 scamels: probably the bird called the sea mell (mew). 167 by and by: right away 174 trenchering: trenchers 177 high-day: heyday 1 be: are are: which are painful: laborious 2 Delight ... off: the pleasure they arouse compensates for their labor sets: F set 11 Upon ... injunction: on pain of severe punishment 13 I forget: i.e. my task 15 lest: least Most ... it: Cf. n. 20 'Twill weep: the sap (or pitch) will look like tears

What I must strive to do.
Miranda. If you'll sit down
I'll bear your logs the while—pray give me that;
I'll carry it to the pile.
Ferdinand. No, precious creature,
I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Then you should such dishonor undergo
While I sit lazy by.
Miranda. It would become me
As well as it does you, and I should do it
With much more ease, for my good will is to it
And yours it is against.
Prospero. Poor worm, thou art infected;
This visitation shows it.
Miranda. You look wearily.
Ferdinand. No, noble mistress, 'tis fresh morning with me
When you are by at night. I do beseech you,
Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers,
What is your name?
Miranda. Miranda. O my father,
I have broke your hest to say so.
Ferdinand. Admir'd Miranda,
Indeed the top of admiration, worth
What's dearest to the world: full many a lady
I have ey'd with best regard, and many a time
Th' harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear; for several virtues
Have I lik'd several women, never any
With so full soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she ow'd
And put it to the foil. But you, O you,
So perfect and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best.
Miranda. I do not know
One of my sex, no woman's face remember
Save from my glass mine own, nor have I seen
More that I may call men than you, good friend,
And my dear father: how features are abroad
I am skilless of; but by my modesty—
The jewel in my dower—I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you;
Nor can imagination form a shape
Besides yourself to like of. But I prattle
Something too wildly and my father's precepts
I therein do forget.
Ferdinand. I am, in my condition,
A prince, Miranda—I do think a king—
I would not so—and would no more endure
This wooden slavery than to suffer
The flesh-fly blow my mouth. Hear my soul speak:
The very instant that I saw you did
My heart fly to your service, there resides
To make me slave to it and for your sake
Am I this patient log-man.
Miranda. Do you love me?
Ferdinand. O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,
And crown what I profess with kind event
If I speak true; if hollowly, invert
What best is boded me to mischief: I,
Beyond all limit of what else i' th' world
Do love, prize, honor you.
Miranda. I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.
Prospero. Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between 'em.
Ferdinand. Wherefore weep you?
Miranda. At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give and much less take
What I shall die to want. But this is trifling
And all the more it seeks to hide itself
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning,
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence.
I am your wife if you will marry me;
If not I'll die your maid. To be your fellow
You may deny me, but I'll be your servant
Whether you will or no.
Ferdinand. My mistress, dearest!
And I thus humble ever.
Miranda. My husband, then?
Ferdinand. Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage ere of freedom! Here's my hand.
Miranda. And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewell
Till half an hour hence.
Ferdinand. A thousand thousand! Exeunt.
Prospero. So glad of this as they I cannot be
Who are surpris'd with all, but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more! I'll to my book,
For yet ere supper time must I perform
Much business appertaining. Exit.

38 visitation: Cf. n. 45 hest: command 46 Admir'd Miranda a play on Miranda's name 54 ow'd: owned 55 put . . . foil: 'challenged it to a fencing match,' with a play on foil in the sense of 'defeat' (OED) 56 peerless F: peetlesse 63 skilless: ignorant 70 conditon: rank 70-74: Cf. n. 74 flesh-fly: a fly which lays its eggs in dead flesh blow sully

81 event: outcome 82 hollowly: falsely 82, 83 invert . . . mischief: turn into bad fortune all the good that is to befall me 84 what: anything 99 maid: play on 'maidservant' and 'unmarried woman'; cf. following line fellow mate, equal 106 bondage . . . freedom: one in bondage ever welcomed freedom 111 with all: i.e. all that has happened (or perhaps withal, 'thereby,' is meant) 2 bear . . . 'em: obvious nautical phraseology 9 set: fixed in a stare were: would be brave: admirable

Scene Second

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Stephano. Tell not me—when the butt is out we will drink water, not a drop before; therefore bear up and board 'em. Servant monster, drink to me.

Trinculo. Servant monster? The folly of this island! They say there's but five upon this isle; we are three of them. If th' other two be brain'd like us, the state totters.

Stephano. Drink, servant monster, when I bid thee. Thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

Trinculo. Where should they be set else? He were a brave monster indeed if they were set in his tail.

Stephano. My man-monster hath drown'd his tongue in sack. For my part, the sea cannot drown me. I swam ere I could recover the shore, five and thirty leagues off and on. By this light thou shalt be my lieutenant, monster, or my standard.

Trinculo. Your lieutenant, if you list—he's no standard.

Stephano. We'll not run, Monsieur Monster.

Trinculo. Nor go neither; but you'll lie like dogs, and yet say nothing, neither.

Stephano. Mooncalf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good mooncalf.

Caliban. How does thy honor? Let me lick thy shoe. I'll not serve him—he is not valiant.

Trinculo. Thou liest, most ignorant monster! I am in case to justle a constable! Why, thou debosh'd fish, thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I today? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish and half a monster?

Caliban. Lo, how he mocks me! Wilt thou let him, my lord?

Trinculo. 'Lord,' quoth he? That a monster should be such a natural!

Caliban. Lo, lo again! Bite him to death, I prithee!

Stephano. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head! If you prove a mutineer—the next tree! The poor monster's my subject and he shall not suffer indignity.

Caliban. I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd to hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

Stephano. Marry will I. Kneel and repeat it. I will stand and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariel, invisible.

Caliban. As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant, a sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me of the island.

Ariel. Thou liest.

Caliban. [To Trinculo.] Thou liest, thou jesting monkey, thou! I would my valiant master would destroy thee. I do not lie.

Stephano. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale, by his hand I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trinculo. Why, I said nothing.

Stephano. Mum, then, and no more! Proceed.

Caliban. I say by sorcery he got this isle
From me, he got it. If thy greatness will,
Revenge it on him—for I know thou dar'st
But this thing dare not.

Stephano. That's most certain.

Caliban. Thou shalt be lord of it, and I'll serve thee.

Stephano. How now shall this be compass'd? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Caliban. Yea, yea, my lord, I'll yield him thee asleep
Where thou may'st knock a nail into his head.

Ariel. Thou liest. Thou canst not.

Caliban. What a pied ninny's this? Thou scurvy patch!
I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows
And take his bottle from him! When that's gone
He shall drink nought but brine, for I'll not show him
Where the quick freshes are.

Stephano. Trinculo, run into no further danger!
Interrupt the monster one word further and by this hand I'll turn my mercy out o' doors and make a stockfish of thee.

Trinculo. Why what did I? I did nothing! I'll go farther off.

Stephano. Didst thou not say he lied?

Ariel. Thou liest.

Stephano. Do I so? Take thou that! [Hits Trinculo.] As you like this, give me the lie another time.

Trinculo. I did not give the lie! Out o' your wits, and hearing too? A pox o' your bottle. This can sack and drinking do! A murrain on your monster and the divel take your fingers!

Caliban. Ha ha ha!

Stephano. Now forward with your tale! [To Trinculo.] Prithee stand further off.

Caliban. Beat him enough! After a little time I'll beat him too.

Stephano. Stand farther! [To Caliban.] Come, proceed.

Caliban. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him
I' th' afternoon to sleep; there thou mayst brain him,
Having first seiz'd his books, or with a log
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy knife. Remember
First to possess his books, for without them
He's but a sot, as I am, nor hath not
One spirit to command: they all do hate him
As rootedly as I. Burn but his books.
He has brave utensils—for so he calls them—
Which when he has a house he'll deck withal.
And that most deeply to consider is
The beauty of his daughter: he himself
Calls her a nonpareil. I never saw a woman
But only Sycorax my dam and she;
But she as far surpasseth Sycorax
As great'st does least.

Stephano. Is it so brave a lass?

Caliban. Ay, lord, she will become thy bed, I warrant,
And bring thee forth brave brood.

Stephano. Monster, I will kill this man! His daughter and I will be king and queen, save our Graces! and Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys! Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo?

Trinculo. Excellent.

Stephano. Give me thy hand; I am sorry I beat thee! But while thou liv'st keep a good tongue in thy head.

Caliban. Within this half hour will he be asleep.
Wilt thou destroy him then?

Stephano. Ay, on my honor.

Ariel. This will I tell my master.

Caliban. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure;
Let us be jocund. Will you troll the catch
You taught me but whilere?

Stephano. At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason. Come on, Trinculo, let us sing. Sings.

Flout 'em and scout 'em—and scout 'em and flout 'em;
Thought is free.

Caliban. That's not the tune.

Ariel plays the tune on a tabor and pipe.

Stephano. What is this same?

15 list: meaning both 'desire' and 'careen' standard: meaning both 'ensign' (standard bearer) and 'support' (for Stephano, who, like Caliban, is tipsy) 16 run: double-entendre ('run from an enemy' and 'excrete') 17 lie: double-entendre ('prevaricate' and 'excrete') 23 case: condition 24 debosh'd debauched 31 natural: idiot 53 thing: Trinculo 61 pied ninny: fool in motley patch: dolt 65 quick freshes: springs 68 stockfish: dired cod which had to be beaten soft before it could be cooked

76 murrain: cattle disease 88 wezand: windpipe 90 sot: fool 93 utensils: stressed ⏑ — ⏑ 94 deck withal: furnish it with 95 that: that which is 115 troll the catch: sing the song; a catch was 'a round in which one singer catches at the words of another, producing ludicrous effects' (OED) 116 whilere: a while ago 119 scout: F prints cout the first time, scout the second SD tabor: small drum

Trinculo. This is the tune of our catch, play'd by the picture of No-body.

Stephano. If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness: if thou beest a divel, take't as thou list.

Trinculo. O forgive me my sins.

Stephano. He that dies pays all debts. I defy thee; mercy upon on!

Caliban. Art thou afeard?

Stephano. No, monster, not I.

Caliban. Be not afeard, the isle is full of noises,
Sounds and sweet airs that give delight and hurt not.
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears, and sometime voices
That if I then had wak'd after long sleep
Will make me sleep again; and then in dreaming
The clouds methought would open and show riches
Ready to drop upon me, that when I wak'd
I cried to dream again.

Stephano. This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

Caliban. When Prospero is destroy'd.

Stephano. That shall be by and by: I remember the story.

Trinculo. The sound is going away. Let's follow it and after do our work.

Stephano. Lead, monster, we'll follow. I would I could see this taborer; he lays it on.

Trinculo. Wilt come? I'll follow, Stephano. Exeunt.

Scene Third

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, etc.

Gonzalo. By'r lakin, I can go no further, sir.
My old bones aches; here's a maze trod indeed
Through forthrights and meanders; by your patience,
I needs must rest me.

Alonso. Old lord, I cannot blame thee
Who am myself attach'd with weariness
To th' dulling of my spirits; sit down and rest.
Even here I will put off my hope and keep it
No longer for my flatterer: he is drown'd
Whom thus we stray to find and the sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go.

Antonio. [To Sebastian.] I am right glad that he's so out of hope.
Do not for one repulse forgo the purpose
That you resolv'd t' effect.

Sebastian. The next advantage
Will we take throughly.

Antonio. Let it be tonight,
For now they are oppress'd with travel, they
Will not nor cannot use such vigilance
As when they are fresh.

Sebastian. I say tonight: no more.

Solemn and strange music, and Prosper on the top, invisible.

Alonso. What harmony is this? My good friends, hark!

Gonzalo. Marvelous sweet music.

Enter several strange shapes bringing in a basket; and dance about it with gentle actions of salutations, and inviting the king, etc. to eat, they depart.

Alonso. Give us kind keepers, heavens! What were these?

Sebastian. A living drollery! Now I will believe
That there are unicorns! that in Arabia
There is one tree, the phoenix' throne, one phoenix
At this hour reigning there.

Antonio. I'll believe both!
And what does else want credit, come to me
And I'll be sworn 'tis true! Travelers nere did lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.

Gonzalo. If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe me?
If I should say I saw such islanders—
For certes these are people of the island—
Who though they are of monstrous shape yet, note,
Their manners are more gentle, kind, than of
Our human generation you shall find
Many, nay almost any.

Prospero. [Aside.] Honest lord,
Thou hast said well: for some of you there present
Are worse than divels.

Alonso. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound expressing—
Although they want the use of tongue—a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.

Prospero. [Aside.] Praise in departing.

Francisco. They vanish'd strangely.

Sebastian. No matter, since
They have left their viands behind, for we have stomachs.
Will't please you taste of what is here?

Alonso. Not I.

Gonzalo. Faith, sir, you need not fear! When we were boys
Who would believe that there were mountaineers
Dewlapp'd like bulls, whose throats had hanging at 'em
Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men
Whose heads stood in their breasts? which now we find
Each putter out of five for one will bring us
Good warrant of.

Alonso. I will stand to and feed.
Although my last, no matter, since I feel
The best is past: brother, my lord the duke,
Stand to and do as we.

Thunder and lightning. Enter Ariel like a harpy, claps his wings upon the table, and with a quaint device the banquet vanishes.

Ariel. You are three men of sin, whom destiny—
That hath to instrument this lower world
And what is in't—the never surfeited sea
Hath caus'd to belch up you, and on this island

123 picture of No-body; Cf. n. 132 noises: music 1 lakin: Ladykin (the Virgin Mary). 2 aches: old variant plural from of verb 3 forthrights: straight paths meanders windig paths 6 attach'd: seized 7 To th': to the point of spirits vital strength 11 frustrate: vain 17 throughly: thoroughly SD Prosper on the top; Cf. n.

25 keepers: guardian angels 26 drollery: puppet show 28 phoenix; Cf. n. 36 islanders F: islands 45 muse: marvel at 46 gesture: bearing 49 Praise in departing: proverbial: 'Wait until the end of the entertainment before you praise it' 61 putter . . . one; Cf. n. SD quaint: ingenious the banquet vanishes i.e. under the concealment of Ariel's wings (cf. Aeneid iii.225-66) 68 hath to instrument: uses for its own ends 69 surfeited; Cf. n.

Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live; I have made you mad,
And even with such-like valor men hang and drown
Their proper selves.

[Alonso, etc., draw their swords.]

You fools! I and my fellows
Are ministers of fate; the elements
Of whom your swords are temper'd may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemock'd-at stabs
Kill the still closing waters as diminish
One dowl that's in my plume! My fellow ministers
Are like invulnerable—if you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massy for your strengths
And will not be uplifted. But remember—
For that's my business to you—that you three
From Milan did supplant good Prospero,
Expos'd unto the sea—which hath requit it—
Him and his innocent child; for which foul deed
The powers, delaying—not forgetting—have
Incens'd the seas and shores, yea all the creatures
Against your peace: thee of thy son, Alonso,
They have bereft and do pronounce by me:
Ling'ring perdition—worse than any death
Can be at once—shall step by step attend
You and your ways, whose wraths to guard you from—
Which here in this most desolate isle else falls
Upon your heads—is nothing but heart's sorrow
And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in thunder; then, to soft music, enter the shapes again and dance, with mocks and mows, and carrying out the table.

Prospero. Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou
Perform'd, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring.
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated
In what thou hadst to say. So with good life
And observation strange my meaner ministers
Their several kinds have done, my high charms work,
And these, mine enemies, are all knit up
In their distractions; they now are in my power,
And in these fits I leave them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand—whom they suppose is drown'd—
And his and mine lov'd darling. [Exit.]

Gonzalo. I' th' name of something holy, sir, why stand you
In this strange stare?

Alonso. O, it is monstrous! monstrous!
Methought the billows spoke and told me of it;
The winds did sing it to me, and the thunder—
That deep and dreadful organ pipe—pronounc'd
The name of Prosper! It did bass my trespass.
Therefore my son i' th' ooze is bedded, and
I'll seek him deeper than ere plummet sounded,
And with him there lie mudded. Exit.

Sebastian. But one fiend at a time—
I'll fight their legions ere!

Antonio. I'll be thy second.

Exeunt [Sebastian and Antonio.]

Gonzalo. All three of them are desperate! Their great guilt,
Like poison given to work a great time after,
Now 'gins to bite the spirits. I do beseech you,
That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly
And hinder them from what this ecstasy
May now provoke them to.

Adrian. Follow, I pray you. Exeunt omnes.

Act Fourth ❧ Scene First

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Prospero. If I have too austerely punish'd you
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Have given you here a third of mine own life,
Or that for which I live, who once again
I tender to thy hand; all thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test. Here, afore heaven,
I ratify this my rich gift! O Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise
And make it halt behind her.

Ferdinand. I do believe it
Against an oracle.

Prospero. Then as my gift and thine own acquisition
Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter; but
If thou dost break her virgin knot before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy rite be minist'red,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow, but barren hate,
Sour-ey'd disdain, and discord shall bestrew
The union of your bed with weeds so loathly
That you shall hate it both. Therefore take heed
As Hymen's lamps shall light you.

Ferdinand. As I hope
For quiet days, fair issue, and long life
With such love as 'tis now, the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion
Our worser genius can, shall never melt
Mine honor into lust, to take away
The edge of that day's celebration
When I shall think or Phoebus' steeds are founder'd,
Or Night kept chain'd below.

Prospero. Fairly spoke.
Sit then and talk with her; she is thine own.

[They sit apart.]

What, Ariel! my industrious servant, Ariel!

Enter Ariel.

Ariel. What would my potent master? Here I am.

Prospero. Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service

74 proper: own 81 dowl: feather minister: agents 87 requit it: retaliated (by wrecking Alonso and his party) 98 clear: blameless SD mows: grimaces 99 Bravely: admirably 100 devouring: i.e. pretending to eat the food of the banquet 101 bated: omitted 102 with good life: like real life 116 bass: sang the bass harmony of nature's dirge

125 bite the spirits: impair the vital powers 127 ecstasy: madness 3 third; Cf. n. 7 strangely: surprisingly well 9 boast her off: cf. the modern 'show her off'; F of 11 halt: limp 14 gift F: guest 17 sanctimonious: holy 18 rite F: right 19 aspersion: sprinkling of the dew of blessing 28 opportune: stressed — ⏑ — — 29 worser genius; Cf. n. 30 to: so as to 31 edge: keen enjoyment 32 Phoebus': Apollo, god of the sun founder'd: gone lame 32, 33 or . . . below: i.e. eternal day, time standing still

Did worthily perform, and I must use you
In such another trick. Go bring the rabble—
Ore whom I give thee power—here to this place.
Incite them to quick motion, for I must
Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine art: it is my promise
And they expect it from me.
Ariel. Presently?
Prospero. Ay, with a twinck.
Ariel. Before you can say 'come' and 'go,'
And breathe twice, and cry 'so, so,'
Each one tripping on his toe
Will be here with mop and mow
Do you love me, master? no?
Prospero. Dearly, my delicate Ariel! Do not approach
Till thou dost hear me call.
Ariel. Well! I conceive. Exit.
Prospero [Back to Ferdinand.] Look thou be true: do not give dalliance
Too much the reign; the strongest oaths are straw
To th' fire i' th' blood. Be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow.
Ferdinand. I warrant you, sir,
The white cold virgin snow upon my heart
Abates the ardor of my liver.
Prospero. Well.
Now come, my Ariel, bring a corollary
Rather than want a spirit; appear, and pertly.
No tongue—all eyes—be silent.

Soft music. Enter Iris.

Iris. Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas
Of wheat, rye, barley, fetches, oats, and peas;
The turfy mountains where live nibbling sheep,
And flat meads thatch'd with stover, them to keep;
Thy banks with pioned and twilled brims
Which spongy April at thy hest betrims
To make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and thy broom groves
Whose shadow the dismissed bachelor loves,
Being lass-lorn; thy poll-clipp'd vineyard;
And thy sea-marge stirrile, and rocky-hard,
Where thou thyself dost air—the queen o' th' sky,
Whose wat'ry arch and messenger am I,
Bids thee leave these and with her sovereign grace
Juno [begins to] descend.
Here on this grass plot in this very place
To come and sport. Her peacocks fly amain.
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter Ceres.

Ceres. Hail, many-color'd messenger, that nere
Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter;
Who with thy saffron wings upon my flowers
Diffusest honey drops, refreshing showers,
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky acres and my unshrubb'd down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth—why hath thy queen
Summon'd me hither to this short-grass'd green?
Iris. A contact of true love to celebrate
And some donation freely to estate
On the bless'd lovers.
Ceres. Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus or her son, as thou dost know,
Do not attend the queen? Since they did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,
Her and her blind boy's scandal'd company
I have forsworn.
Iris. Of her society
Be not afraid; I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos, and her son
Dove-drawn with her. Here thought they to have done
Some wanton charm upon this man and maid
Whose vows are that no bedrite shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted; but in vain:
Mars's hot minion is return'd again;
Her waspish-headed son has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more but play with sparrows
And be a boy right out.
Ceres. Highest queen of state,
Great Juno comes; I know her by her gait.

[Enter Juno.]

Juno. How does my bounteous sister? Go with me
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be
And honor'd in their issue. They sing.

[Song]

Juno. Honor, riches, marriage, blessing,
Long continuance and increasing,
Hourly joys, be still upon you,
Juno sings her blessing on you.
Ceres. Earth's increase, foison plenty,
Barns and garners never empty,
Vines with clust'ring bunches growing,
Plants with goodly burthen bowing:
Spring come to you at the farthest
In the very end of harvest!
Scarcity and want shall shun you;
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

Ferdinand. This is a most majestic vision and Harmonious charmingly; may I be bold
To think these spirits?
Prospero. Spirits which by mine art
I have from their confines call'd to enact
My present fancies.

40 trick: ingenious piece of mechanism (Arden ed.) 44 vanity: illusion 46 Presently: immediately 51 mop and mow: grimaces 55 conceive: understand 63 liver: popularly supposed to be the origin of the love passions 65 corollary: extra spirit 66 pertly: promptly 68 Iris: messenger of the gods, uniting gods and man Ceres: goddess of agriculture and marriage 69 fetches: 'vetch,' a leguminous plant 71 thetch'd: thatched stover fodder keep: provide with fodder 72 pioned and twilled; Cf. n. 73 hest: command 74 broom: a flowering shrub 76 poll-clipp'd F: pole-clipt vineyard: here trisyllabic 77 stirrile: sterile 79 wat'ry arch: rainbow messenger: Iris was the particular messenger of Juno as well as a personification of the rainbow 80 grace: majesty SD Juno . . . descend; Cf. n. 82 amain: in full force

88 bow: rainbow 89 bosky: bushy unshrubb'd down: rolling, treeless hills 93 estate: bestow 98 that: by which Dis Pluto, who stole Proserpine, Ceres' daughter 99 blind boy's: Cupid's scandal'd: scandalous 103 Paphos: one of the seats of worship of Venus 106 bedrite F: bed-right 108 Mars's hot minion: Venus was the mistress of Mars; F Marses 109 waspish-headed: spiteful 110 sparrows: associated with worship of Venus 113 gait: royal walk 115 prosperous: a pun on 'Prospero's' is possible 119 still: always 121 Ceres speech ascription omitted in F. Earth's: here disyllabic (read 'earthes') foison abundance of harvest 125 Spring . . . farthest: i.e. eliminating winter 130 charmingly: magically

Ferdinand. Let me live here ever!
So rare a wond'red father and a wise
Makes this place paradise.

Juno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.

Prospero. Sweet now, silence.
Juno and Ceres whisper seriously.
There's something else to do—hush and be mute
Or else our spell is marr'd.
Iris. You nymphs, call'd naiads, of the windring brooks,
With your sedg'd crowns and ever-harmless looks,
Leave your crisp channels and on this green land
Answer your summons; Juno does command.
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love: be not too late.

Enter certain nymphs.

You sunburn'd sicklemen of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow and be merry;
Make holiday, your rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one
In country footing.

Enter certain reapers, properly habited. They join with the nymphs in a graceful dance, towards the end whereof Prospero starts suddenly and speaks, after which, to a strange hollow and confused noise, they heavily vanish.

Prospero. [Aside.] I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban and his confederates
Against my life. The minute of their plot
Is almost come. [To spirits.] Well done, avoid! no more.
Ferdinand. This is strange! Your father's in some passion
That works him strongly.
Miranda. Never till this day
Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd.
Prospero. You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort,
As if you were dismay'd—be cheerful, sir.
Our revels now are ended: these our actors—
As I foretold you—were all spirits and
Are melted into air, into thin air;
And like the baseless fabric of this vision
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve
And like this insubstantial pageant faded
Leave not a rack behind: we are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep. Sir, I am vex'd;
Bear with my weakness, my old brain is troubled!
Be not disturb'd with my infirmity.
If you be pleas'd, retire into my cell
And there repose; a turn or two I'll walk
To still my beating mind.

136 wond'red: possessing wonder; cf. 'bearded,' 'blue-eyed,' etc. (Kittredge) SD Juno ... employment F places this after l. 137 138 Sweet ... silence: to Miranda, who is about to speak 142 windring: perhaps a combination of 'winding' and 'wandering' 144 crisp: rippling land; Cf. n. 146 temperate: chaste 152 footing: dancing 156 avoid: be gone 160 distemper'd: unbalanced, disturbed 161 sort: manner 169 it inherit: possess it 171 rack: moving cloud, with a possible double meaning ('wrack') 172 on: of 173 rounded with: 'rounded off by,' or perhaps 'surrounded by.' 178 beating: overwrought

Ferdinand. Miranda. We wish your peace. Exeunt.
Prospero. Come with a thought! I thank thee, Ariel:
Come!

Enter Ariel.

Ariel. Thy thoughts I cleave to. What's thy pleasure?
Prospero. Spirit,
We must prepare to meet with Caliban.
Ariel. Ay, my commander. When I presented Ceres
I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
Lest I might anger thee.
Prospero. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?
Ariel. I told you, sir, they were red hot with drinking,
So full of valor that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces, beat the ground
For kissing of their feet, yet always bending
Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor,
At which like unback'd colts they prick'd their ears
Advanc'd their eyelids, lifted up their noses
As they smelt music; so I charm'd their ears
That calflike they my lowing follow'd, through
Tooth'd briers, sharp furzes, pricking goss, and thorns,
Which ent'red their frail shins. At last I left them
I' th' filthy-mantled pool beyond your cell,
There dancing up to th' chins, that the foul lake
Orestunk their feet.
Prospero. This was well done, my bird.
Thy shape invisible retain thou still.
The trumpery in my house, go bring it hither
For stale to catch these thieves.
Ariel. I go, I go. Exit.
Prospero. A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
Nurture can never stick, on whom my pains,
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost,
And, as with age, his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
Even to roaring!

Enter Ariel, loaden with glistering apparel, etc.

Come, hang them on this line.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.

Caliban. Pray you, tread softly, that the blind mole may not hear a footfall: we are now near his cell.
Stephano. Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than play'd the Jack with us.
Trinculo. Monster, I do smell all horse piss, at which my nose is in great indignation.
Stephano. So is mine. Do you hear, monster: If I should take a displeasure against you—look you.
Trinculo. Thou wert but a lost monster.
Caliban. Good my lord, give me thy favor still.
Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to
Shall hoodwink this mischance. Therefore speak softly;
All's hush'd as midnight yet.

180 Come ... thought: be summoned by mental telepathy thank thee spoken to Ariel before he appears 185 presented: enacted 186 to have: read 't'have' 194 unback'd: unbroken 198 goss: gorse 200 filthy-mantled: sufaced with dirty scum 205 trumpery: trash, rubbish 206 stale: decoy 214 hang ... on: F hang on them; in F this speech precedes SD line; Cf. n. 218 Jack: knave 226 hoodwink ... mischance: 'blind you to this misfortune'; the reference is to falconry; F hudwinke

Trinculo. Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool!
Stephano. There is not only disgrace and dishonor in that, monster, but an infinite loss.
Trinculo. That's more to me than my wetting! Yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.
Stephano. I will fetch off my bottle, though I be ore ears for my labor.
Caliban. Prithee, my king, be quiet. Seest thou here, This is the mouth o' th' cell! no noise and enter.
Do that good mischief which may make this island
Thine own for ever and I thy Caliban
For aye thy foot-licker.
Stephano. Give me thy hand. I do begin to have bloody thoughts.
Trinculo. O King Stephano, O peer! O worthy Stephano! Look what a wardrobe here is for thee!
Caliban. Let it alone, thou fool, it is but trash.
Trinculo. Oho, monster! We know what belongs to a frippery. O King Stephano!
Stephano. Put off that gown, Trinculo. By this hand, I'll have that gown!
Trinculo. Thy grace shall have it.
Caliban. The dropsy drown this fool! What do you mean To dote thus on such luggage? Let's alone
And do the murther first: if he awake,
From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches.
Make us strange stuff.
Stephano. Be you quiet, monster! Mistress line, is not this my jerkin? Now is the jerkin under the line! Now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair and prove a bald jerkin.
Trinculo. Do, do; we steal by line and level, and't like your grace.
Stephano. I thank thee for that jest; here's a garment for't: wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country! 'Steal by line and level' is an excellent pass of pate! There's another garment for't.
Trinculo. Monster, come put some lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.
Caliban. I will have none on't—we shall lose our time
And all be turn'd to barnacles or to apes
With foreheads villainous low.
Stephano. Monster, lay-to your fingers! Help to bear this away where my hogshead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom! Go to, carry this.
Trinculo. And this.
Stephano. Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers spirits in shape of dogs and hounds, hunting them about, Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Prospero. Hey, Mountain, hey!
Ariel. Silver! There it goes, Silver!
Prospero. Fury, Fury! There, Tyrant, there! Hark, hark!
[Exeunt all but Prospero and Ariel.]
Go charge my goblins that they grind their joints
With dry convulsions, shorten up their sinews
With aged cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them
Than pard or cat-o'-mountain.
Ariel. Hark, they roar!
Prospero. Let them be hunted soundly! At this hour
Lies at my mercy all mine enemies!
Shortly shall all my labors end, and thou
Shalt have the air at freedom! For a little
Follow, and do me service. Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH ❧ SCENE FIRST

Enter Prospero in his magic robes, and Ariel.

Prospero. Now does my project gather to a head;
My charms crack not, my spirtis obey, and Time
Goes upright with his carriage. How's the day?
Ariel. On the sixt hour, at which time, my lord,
You said our work should cease.
Prospero. I did say so
When first I rais'd the tempest. Say, my spirit,
How fares the king and's followers?
Ariel. Confin'd together
In the same fashion as you gave in charge,
Just as you left them; all prisoners, sir,
In the line grove which weather-fends your cell;
They cannot budge till your release. The king,
His brother, and yours, abide all three distracted,
And the remainder mouring over them
Brimful of sorrow and dismay, but chiefly
Him that you term'd, sir, the gold old lord, Gonzalo.
His tears runs down his beard like winter's drops
From eaves of reeds. Your charm so strongly works 'em
That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.
Prospero. Dost thou think so, spirit?
Ariel. Mine would, sir, were I human.
Prospero. And mine shall.
Hast thou—which art but air—a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions, and shall not myself,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply,
Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd than thou art?
Though with their high wrongs I am struck to th' quick,
Yet with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury
Do I take part: the rarer action is
In virtue than in vengeance; they being penitent,
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further. Go, release them, Ariel.
My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore,
And they shall be themselves.
Ariel. I'll fetch them, sir. Exit.
Prospero. Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves,
And yet that on the sand with printless foot
Do chase the ebbing Neptune and do fly him
When he comes back; you demipuppets that

242 O ... peer; Cf. n. 246 frippery: old clothes shop 251 luggage: encumbrance Let's alone: let us leave it alone (or perhaps let's is a misprint for 'let't', or alone a misprint for 'along') 254 strange stuff: different cloth (metaphorically, continuing the idea of frippery in l. 246) 255-257 Mistress ... bald jerkin; Cf. n. 258 we ... level; Cf. n. and't like: if it please 262 pass of pate: rapier thrust of wit, sally 264 lime; Cf. n. 267 barnacles: probably the barnacle goose, thought to hatch from a sea shell

280 pard: leopard cat-o'-mountain: catamount, lynx 3 Goes ... carriage: walks with erect carriage, instead of bowing under his burden How's the day?: what time is it? 12 weather-fends: protects from the weather 13 your release: released by you 19 reeds: a thatched roof 20 affections: feelings 25-29 Cf. n. 27 all: fully 31 rarer: finer 38-46 Ye elves ... Prospero draws a circle on the ground as he calls upon the spirits; see SD below 41 demipuppets: half the size of puppets

By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make,
Whereof the ewe not bites; and you whose pastime
Is to make midnight mushrumps, that rejoice
To hear the solemn curfew, by whose aid,
Weak masters though ye be, I have bedimm'd
The noontide sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,
And 'twixt the green sea and the azur'd vault
Set roaring war; to the dread, rattling thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jove's stout oak
With his own bolt; the strong-bas'd promontory
Have I made shake and by the spurs puck'd up
The pine and cedar. Graves at my command
Have wak'd their sleepers, op'd and let 'em forth
By my so potent art. But this rough magic
I here abjure, and when I have requir'd
Some heavenly music—which even now I do—
To work mine end upon their senses, that
This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fadoms in the earth,
And deeper than did ever plummet sound
I'll drown my book.

Solemn music. Here enters Ariel before, then Alonso, with a frantic gesture, attended by Gonzalo; Sebastian and Antonio in like manner attended by Adrian and Francisco. They all enter the circle which Prospero had made and there stand carm'd; which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn air and the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
Now useless, boil'd within thy skull; there stand,
For you are spell-stopp'd.
Holy Gonzalo, honorable man,
Mine eyes, ev'n sociable to the show of thine,
Fall fellowly drops. The charm dissolves apace,
And as the morning steals upon the night,
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason. O good Gonzalo,
My true preserver and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st! I will pay thy graces
Home both in word and deed. Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter.
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act.
Thou art pinch'd for't now, Sebastian. Flesh and blood,
You, brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse and nature, who, with Sebastian—
Whose inward pinches, therefore, are most strong—
Would here have kill'd your king: I do forgive thee,
Unnatural though thou art. Their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shores
That now lie foul and muddy. Not one of them
That yet looks on me or would know me. Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell.
I will discase me, and myself present
As I was sometime Milan—quickly, spirit!
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariel [after fetching the clothes] sings and helps to attire him.

[Song]

Ariel. Where the bee sucks there suck I;
In a cowslip's bell I lie;
There I couch when owls do cry;
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer merrily.
Merrily, merrily shall I live now
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

Prospero. Why that's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee,
But yet thou shalt have freedom—so, so, so.
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art!
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep
Under the hatches. The master and the boatswain
Being awake, enforce them to this place,
And presently, I prithee.
Ariel. I drink the air before me and return
Or ere your pulse twice beat. Exit.
Gonzalo. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits here! Some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearful country!
Prospero. Behold, Sir King,
The wronged Duke of Milan, Prospero!
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee and thy company I bid
A hearty welcome.
Alonso. Where thou beest he or no,
Or some enchanted trifle to abuse me—
As late I have been—I not know. Thy pulse
Beats as of flesh and blood, and since I saw thee
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which
I fear a madness held me! This must crave—
And if this be at all—a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs. But how should Prospero
Be living and be here?
Prospero. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honor cannot
Be measur'd or confin'd.
Gonzalo. Whether this be
Or be not I'll not swear.
Prospero. You do yet taste
Some subtleties o' th' isle, that will not let you
Believe things certain. Welcome, my friends all,
[Aside to Sebastian and Antonio.] But you, my brace of lords; were I so minded
I here could pluck his Highness' frown upon you
And justify you traitors! At this time

42 green sour ringlets: 'the underground part (mycelium) of a toadstool, which affects the grass roots' (Arden ed.) 44 mushrumps: mushrooms 58, 59 their . . . for: the senses of those this airy charm is for 59 airy charm: play on two meanings of airy ('of the air' and 'of music') and two of charm ('magic' and 'song') 63 air: melody 64 thy: Prospero addresses Alonso 65 boil'd: overwrought; F boile, probably a misprint of e for d 68 sociable: sympathetic show: sight 69 Fall: let fall, shed 72 ignorant fumes: fumes that make them ignorant (oblivious) 75, 76 pay . . . Home: repay your kindness 77 Didst: F Did 80 entertain'd: was host to; F entertaine 81 who: F whom 86 shores: i.e. of reason; F shore

90 discase: remove my magic robe 91 sometime: formerly Milan: Duke of Milan After: following after 106 presently: immediately 108 Or ere: before 114 For more assurance: to give you more proof 118 Where: whether 119 enchanted trifle: unsubstantial sirit abuse: deceive 123 crave: necessitate 124 And if: if 129 age: aged body 134 subtleties: illusions, especially disguised confections 135 certain: real 139 justify: prove

I will tell no tales.
Sebastian. The divel speaks in him!
Prospero. No!
For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault—all of them—and require
My dukedom of thee, which perforce I know
Thou must restore.
Alonso. If thou beest Prospero
Give us particulars of thy preservation,
How thou hast met us here who three hours since
Were wrack'd upon this shore, where I have lost—
How sharp the point of this remembrance is—
My dear son Ferdinand.
Prospero. I am woe for't, sir.
Alonso. Irreparable is the loss, and patience
Says it is past her cure.
Prospero. I rather think
You have not sought for help, of whose soft grace
For the like loss I have her sovereign aid,
And rest myself content.
Alonso. You the like loss?
Prospero. As great to me as late, and supportable
To make the dear loss have I means much weaker
Than you may call to comfort you, for I
Have lost my daughter.
Alonso. A daughter?
O heavens that they were living both in Naples,
The king and queen there; that they were I wish
Myself were mudded in that oozy bed
Where my son lies! When did you lose your daughter?
Prospero. In this last tempest. I perceive these lords
At this encounter do so much admire
That they devour their reason and scarce think
Their eyes do offices of truth; their words
Are natural breath; but howsoe'er you have
Been justled from your senses, know for certain
That I am Prospero and that very duke
Which was thrust forth of Milan, who most strangely
Upon this shore, where you were wrack'd, was landed
To be the lord on't. No more yet of this,
For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breakfast, nor
Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir.
This cell's my court; here have I few attendants,
And subjects none abroad; pray you look in.
My dukedom since you have given me again
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At least bring forth a wonder to content ye
As much as me my dukedom.

Here Prospero discovers Ferdinand and Miranda playing at chess.

Miranda. Sweet lord, you play me false.
Ferdinand. No, my dearest love,
I would not for the world.
Mirando. Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should wrangle,
And I would call it fair play.
Alonso. If this prove
A vision of the island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.
Sebastian. A most high miracle.
Ferdinand. [Seeing Alonso.] Though the seas threaten, they are merciful.
I have curs'd them without cause.
Alonso. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about!
Arise and say how thou cam'st here.
Miranda. O wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world
That has such people in't.
Prospero. 'Tis new to thee.
Alonso. What is this maid, with whom thou wast at play?
Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three hours!
Is she the goddess that hath sever'd us
And brought us thus together?
Ferdinand. Sir, she is mortal,
But by immortal Providence she's mine.
I chose her when I could not ask my father
For his advice—nor thought I had one. She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown
But never saw before, of whom I have
Receiv'd a second life; and second father
This lady makes him to me.
Alonso. I am hers.
But O, how oddly will it sound that I
Must ask my child forgiveness?
Prospero. There sir, stop.
Let us not burthen our remembrance with
A heaviness that's gone.
Gonzalo. I have inly wept,
Or should have spoken ere this. Look down, you gods,
And on this couple drop a blessed crown,
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way
Which brought us hither.
Alonso. I say amen, Gonzalo.
Gonzalo. Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue
Should become kings of Naples? O rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars: in one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her brother found a wife
Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom
In a poor isle; and all of us ourselves,
When no man was his own.
Alonso. Give me your hands.
Let grief and sorrow still embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy.
Gonzalo. Be it so, amen.

Enter Ariel, with the Master and Boatswain amazedly following.

O look, sir, look, sir, here is more of us!
I prophesied if a gallows were on land

150 who: F whom 154 am woe for't: grive because of it 155 patience: fortitude 158 grace: mercy 162 late: recent supportable: stressed ⏑ — ⏑ — 163 dear: great 168 that: provided that 172 admire: marvel 173 devour their reason: their reason is swallowed up by amazement SD Prospero pulls aside the curtain to the inner stage 193, 194 Yes . . . play: Cf. n.

211 eld'st: longest 219 renown: excellent report 223 am hers: accept her as my daughter 227 remembrance: F remembrances; see I.2.202; Cf. n. his own master of himself 245 still: always SD amazedly: as in a maze

This fellow could not drown! Now, blasphemy,
That swear'st grace oreboard, not an oath on shore?
Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news?
Boatswain. The best news is that we have safely found
Our king and company: the next, our ship
Which but three glasses since we gave out split
Is tight and yare, and bravely rigg'd as when
We first put out to sea.
Ariel. Sir, all this service
Have I done since I went.
Prospero. My trisksy spirit!
Alonso. These are not natural events, they strengthen
From strange to stranger! Say, how came you hither?
Boatswain. If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
I'd strive to tell you! We were dead of sleep
And—how we know not—all clapp'd under hatches,
Where, but even now, with strange and several noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And mo diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We wre awak'd—straightway at liberty,
Where we, in all our trim, freshly beheld
Our royal, good, and gallant ship, our master
Cap'ring to eye her. On a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them
And were brought moping hither.
Ariel. Was't well done?
Prospero. Bravely, my diligence; thou shalt be free.
Alonso. This is as strange a maze as ere men trod,
And there is in this business more than nature
Was ever conduct of! Some oracle
Must rectify our knowledge.
Prospero. Sir, my liege,
Do not infest your mind with beating on
The strangeness of this business; at pick'd leisure,
Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you—
Which to you shall seem probable—of every
These happen'd accidents; till when be cheerful
And think of each thing well. Come hither, spirit.
Set Caliban and his companions free:
Untie the spell. [Exit Ariel.]
How fares my gracious sir?
There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd lads that you remember not.

Enter Ariel, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo in their stolne apparel.

Stephano. Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself, for all is but fortune—coragio, bully-monster, coragio!
Trinculo. If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight.
Caliban. O Setebos, these be brave spirits indeed!
How fine my master is! I am afraid
He will chastise me.
Sebastian. Ha ha!

255 but three glasses since: only three hours ago 256 yare: ready 260 tricksy: brisk 264 of sleep: asleep 266 several: distinct 268 mo: more 270 our trim: Cf. n. 272 On: in 274 moping: bewildered 276 diligence: industrious one 279 conduct: conductor 282 infest: annoy 285 at pick'd leisure: at a free moment we will choose 284 single: privately 285 every: every one of 292 few odd: several 294 coragio: courage bully-monster: good fellow of a monster

What things are these, my Lord Antonio?
Will money buy 'em?
Antonio. Very like! One of them
Is a plain fish and no doubt marketable.
Prospero. Mark but the badges of these men, my lords,
Then say if they be true. This misshapen knave
His mother was a witch and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs,
And deal in her command without her pow'r.
These three have robb'd me, and this demi-divel,
For he's a bastard one, had plotted with them
To take my life. Two of these fellows you
Must know and own, this thing of darkness I
Acknowledge mine.
Caliban. I shall be pinch'd to death.
Alonso. Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?
Sebastian. He is drunk now; where had he wine?
Alonso. And Trinculo is reeling ripe! Where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How cam'st thou in this pickle?
Trinculo. I have bin in such a pickle since I saw you last that I fear me will never out of my bones; I shall not fear fly-blowing.
Sebastian. Why, how now Stephano?
Stephano. O touch me not! I am not Stephano but a cramp.
Prospero. You'd be king o' the isle, sirrah?
Stephano. I should have been a sore one then.
Alonso. This is a strange thing as ere I look'd on.
Prospero. He is as disproportion'd in his manners
As in his shape! Go, sirrah, to my cell;
Take with you your companions—as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.
Caliban. Ay, that I will! and I'll be wise hereafter
And seek for grace! What a thrice-double ass
Was I to take this drunkard for a god
And worship this dull fool!
Prospero. Go to, away!
Alonso. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.
Sebastian. Or stole it, rather.
[Exeunt Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.]
Prospero. Sir, I invite your Highness and your train
To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night, which, part of it, I'll waste
With such discourse as I not doubt shall make it
Go quick away: the story of my life
And the particular accidents gone by
Since I came to this isle; and in the morn
I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear belov'd solemnized,
And thence retire me to my Milan, where
Every third thought shall be my grave.

306 badges; Cf. n. 307, 308 knave His mother: knave's mother 309 flows: tides 310 deal . . . pow'r: do all the moon could do without assistance from the moon 311 demi-divel: half a devil (offspring of a witch and the devil Setebos) 319 reeling ripe: ripe (ready) for reeling 320 gilded: common term for 'made drunk'—but in combination with 'grand liquor' probably also a play on the alchemical elixir which was supposed to turn base metals to gold 321 pickle: drunken state 322 pickle: brine, in reference to the dousing in the horse pond 323 that: as 323, 324 I . . . fly-blowing: i.e. because he was so pickled, flies would not touch him 328 sore: a pun: 'causing pain' and 'feeling pain' 347 accidents: incidents 350 solemnized: stressed — ⏑ — ⏑

Alonso. I long
To hear the story of your life, which must
Take the ear strangely.
Prospero. I'll deliver all,
And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious that shall catch
Your royal fleet far off. My Ariel, chick,
That is thy charge—then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well! Please you, draw near.
Exeunt omnes.

Epilogue

Spoken by Prospero

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
And what strength I have's mine own,
Which is most faint. Now, 'tis true,
I must be here confin'd by you
Or sent to Naples. Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island by your spell,
But release me from my bands
With the help of your good hands!
Gentle breath of yours my sails
Must fill or else my project fails,
Which was to please. Now I want
Spirits to enforce, art to enchant,
And my ending is despair
Unless I be reliev'd by prayer
Which pierces so that it assaults
Mercy itself and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your indulgence set me free. Exit.

Finis

356 deliver: relate

Notes

The Actors' Names. Based upon the list of character appended to the Folio text of the play.

councilor. The Folio (cited throughout as F) prints councellor; the modern 'councilor,' a member of a council, was earlier spelled 'counselor.'

Act I. F divides this play into acts and scenes throughout.

I.i.3. Good. Answering the Boatswain's question, the Master tells him to take heart (be of 'good cheer'). Cf. cheerly in l. 5 and 'Cheerly, good hearts' in l. 23. F's punctuation (colons after Good and mariners) suggests that the meaning is not 'good fellow,' as in l. 17 below, where F has no punctuation after good.

I.i.7. Blow . . . enough. A bravado taunt to the wind: 'Blow until you burst your belly, so long as we have sea room enough!' Cf. Pericles, III.1.49.

I.i.15. cares. Variant plural form of verb. Instances of seemingly singular verb and plural subject, as well as many other constructions now considered to be grammatical lapses, are common in Shakespeare and illustrate the fluidity of Elizabethan grammar. That they are not compositor's erros is evidenced by their frequent occurrence in manuscripts.

I.i.30. Down . . . topmast. For a discussion of this and other nautical expressions consult the Furness Variorum Edition. Shakespeare uses these terms accurately and precisely.

I.i.44. ahold. This may be a variant of a-hull, 'hove-to' (or a printer's error for a-holl). See discussion by H. B. Allen, MLN, 52 (1937), 96–100, cited in Arden ed. (1954), p. 7.

I.i.45–49. These lines are often arranged by editors as blank verse.

I.i.47. must . . . cold. A euphemism for 'must we die?' Some editors insist that here the Boatswain drinks from a bottle, but there is no textual evidence that Antonio's charge in l. 51 is just.

I.i.53. washing . . . tides. Pirates were hanged at low-water level in the Thames and left until three tides had washed over their bodies.

I.II.22. more better. Double comparative for emphasis, common in Shakespeare and other Elizabethan writers.

I.ii.29. magic garment. The cloak which invests Prospero with power over the elements and humans.

I.ii.34. soil. F soule, but cf. ll. 34–36 with ll. 254 below, and in II.1.63–106. The alternative is to keep soule, follow it with a dash, and assume an anacoluthon.

I.ii.35. hair. A possible pun on hair—heir. Cf. the talk of Alonso's loss of a daughter and son in II.1.72–110, especially ll. 108–110. Fathers and heirs are much on Prospero's mind; see above, ll. 20–24; below, ll. 66 ff., especially l. 69.

I.ii.70. And princess. So F. Most editors emend to 'A princess,' but the F text is syntactically satisfactory.

I.ii.96. trash for overtopping. To trash was to check a hound with a long weight. To overtop was to run ahead of the pack.

I.ii.107, 108. With . . . rate. I.e. 'with that which, save that it kept me in retirement from the world and my duties, surpassed in value everything the world rates highly.'

I.ii.113. lorded. By construing this as an intransitive verb (with OED authority) we may retain the F full stop after exact in l. 115. The alternative is to change the preceding or following full stop to a comma and construe lorded as a past participle (so OED on this passage): 'he being thus made a lord.'

I.ii.115–118. Like . . . lie. I.e. 'like one who, having to make his lie credible by frequently repeating it, has come to believe it himself and so made a sinner of his memory.'

I.ii.198. Now I arise. Prospero may have suited the action to the word, though in that case the clause is unnecessary. More probably he refers to the change in his fortune; cf. below, ll. 209, 210, 212.

I.ii.202. princess. I.e. 'than any other princess can have made for her.' The word may have been 'princesses' (nouns ending in s were often identical in singular and plural). A third possibility is 'princes.' See Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation (New Haven, 1953), p. 318.

I.ii.212, 213. A reference to the astrological belief that the position of the stars at the time of an action may determine its outcome.

I.ii.217. canst not choose. Having resumed his magic mantle, Prospero has 'charmed' his daughter.

I.ii.268. still-vex'd Bermoothes. The only time in the play that the Bermudas are mentioned, in spite of the fact that accounts of a wreck in 1609 off the coast of 'these traditionally stormy isles appear to be among the sources of the play. See Sources of the Play.

I.ii.292. Told thee . . . made thee. Inclusion of the second thee distorts the rhythm of the line to such an extent that we may safely assume it to be a copyist's or compositor's error caused by the two preceding phrases 'done thee' and 'Told thee.'

I.ii.319. blue-ey'd. Blue veins in the eyelids were thought to be a symptom of pregnancy. Cf. The Duchess of Malfi, II.1.67.

I.ii.323. earthy. Ariel, a spirit of the air, could not perform deeds partaking wholly of the nature of earth. Each of the four elements—earth, air, fire, and water—was thought to have its own spirits.

I.ii.395. strok'st. For the loss of the past tense ending in such consonant clusters see Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, p. 303.

I.ii.400. place. This may be plural. See note on l. 202 above.

I.ii.415–426. Most editors assign this speech to Prospero, who is a likely candidate, but cf. II.2.131. The kindness and the pity are as characteristic of Miranda as of Prospero.

I.ii.442–453. The song may have been sung to a dance of sea nymphs, hence the reference to sands and waves. The curtsey and kiss were the salutations at the beginning of the dance. F is not clear concerning the lineation of the burden, which has been here slightly altered.

I.ii.515. his brave son. This character does not appear in the play. Since F has a comma after son, his could refer to the king of Naples were it not for the inescapable fact that Ferdinand could not call himself brave.

I.ii.555. My . . . tutor. In Shakespeare's day the conception was strong that for a harmonious society everything must find and retain its appointed function. For examples of this homily of the head and foot see Arden ed., p. 40.

II.i.18–20. The obvious pun dollar—dolour relies on two meanings of 'entertain': to occupy the attention of, and to provide with food and drink.

II.i.35. A laughter. 'The whole number of eggs laid by a fowl before she is ready to sit' (OED), with an obvious quibble on the common meaning of laughter.

II.i.38, 39. Editors usually reassign l. 38 to Antonio and l. 39 to Sebastian. The problem may also be resolved by assuming that you're is a mistake for you've, the loser having to laugh (to cackle like a fowl who has just laid an egg?); or that Sebastian, unable to contain himself, laughed first, and Antonio sarcastically reproved him by pretending he had won.

II.i.63. glosses. Probably not a mistake for the singular, as many editors believe, but plural because of the plural garments—as one might say, 'Gentlemen, put on your hats,' rather than 'hat.'

II.i.80. Widow Dido. Dido is a character in Virgil's Aeneid. Gonzalo may have pronounced Dido to rhyme with Widow and thus aroused Antonio's scorn, increased by Gonzalo's assertion of the continuity of Carthage and the modern Tunis. Tunis is another city, near the site of ancient Carthage.

II.i.102. fish'd for. The word sort was groped for and well chosen, since (Antonio implies) the doublet is not so fresh as Gonzalo believes; fish'd suggests the brine from which Gonzalo has recently pulled himself. A sort was a group of things, a gathering, hence possibly a catch of fish.

II.i.146. Fowl. Pun on fowl—foul, and possibly to be associated with 'fool'; see Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, pp. 75, 109, 149. The jest of fowl—foul lies in the fact that Gonzalo has been called an 'old cock' (l. 33, above; cf. note to l. 35).

II.i.153–176. From Florio's translation of Montaigne, bk. I, ch. 30. See Sources of the Play. Gonzalo is not so serious as the ill-natured Sebastian and Antonio pretend—he is attempting both to divert Alonso from the subject of his grief and to bait Sebastian and Antonio, see ll. 181–183, below.

II.i.176. 'Save. In 1606 an act was passed prohibiting the jesting use of the name of God on the stage. The omission of 'God' in this line may have been due to this prohibition.

II.i.189. sphere. According to the Ptolemaic conception of the universe there were seven planets revolving about the earth, each in its own sphere. The moon's sphere was closest to the earth.

II.i.191. go a-batfowling. Hunt birds at night with long clubs (bats). The birds were roused from their sleep in low trees and knocked down as they flew about bewilderedly. Gonzalo is the bird they are knocking down; cf. above, ll. 33, 147, and note to l. 35.

II.i.203–206. The lineation has been slightly altered from F.

II.i.261. hope. Sebastian uses the word to mean 'expectation'; Antonio adds the meaning 'desire' (Kittredge).

II.i.277, 278. what . . . discharge. What happens in the future will depend on how we discharge our duty to make you king.

III.i.15. Most . . . it. Elliptical construction: 'when I am most busy I seem least busy, because I think these sweet thoughts of Miranda.' It is a summarizing conclusion to the whole speech.

III.i.38. visitation. Play on the obvious meaning of the word and its other meaning of bubonic plague, which was thought to be a visitation of the wrath of God on sinful man.

III.i.70–74. The Arden ed. (p. 75) suggests a very satisfying rearrangement of these lines which eliminates the metrical irregularities.

III.ii.123, 124. picture of No-body. A printer named John Trundle used a picture of a man without a body as the sign of his shop. In 1606 he sold a play called No-body and Some-body, the title page of which bears a picture of this sign (Var. Ed.).

III.iii.SD. Prosper on the top. Prospero appears on the upper stage or acting space, looking down upon the action. In F ll. 24, 25 are placed after the SD Enter . . . depart. Banket was a common spelling of 'banquet' (a light supper) and indicates the pronunciation.

III.iii.28. phoenix. Mythical bird thought to be unique and endowed with the ability to immolate itself and rise from its own ashes.

III.iii.61. putter . . . one. In the days when travel to a foreign country was an exceedingly hazardous undertaking, it was the custom of travelers to lay wagers against their safe return, the odds being five to one in favor of the traveler.

III.iii.69. surfeited. Should probably be read, surfeit, an alternative past participle. Note also other probable contractions in this speech: being (monosyllable), I have ('I've'), and even ('e'en').

IV.i.3. third. A good share. Kittredge's conjecture cannot be bettered: Since life consists of past, present, and future, and since Prospero lives for his daughter (l.4), in a sense she is his future, i.e. one-third of his life. In l. 4 Or has the effect of 'Or in other words.'

IV.i.29. worser genius. It was thought that two spirits, a good and a bad, fought for control of each man.

IV.i.72. pioned and twilled. Probably 'trenched' (cf. 'pioner' and 'pioneer,' a digger of trenches) and 'grained' (like twill cloth, e.g.) from the winter weather. A contrast is drawn between the banks of a river in early spring and the same banks covered with April verdure.

IV.i.SD. Juno . . . descend. This SD from F is often omitted, on the ground that Juno does not enter until l. 115, but there seems no good reason to doubt the authority of F. From the hints of ll. 41, 84, and 105 it seems likely that a stage machine lowered her sufficiently to provide the spectacle of a flying chariot moving across the stage. She could have been deposited at the proper time to take her entrance cue.

IV.i.144. land. This may be 'laund,' a glade, a later form of which is the modern 'lawn.' Cf. 3 Henry VI, III.1.2.

IV.i.214. line. Probably a lime or linden tree (cf. 'line grove' below, V.1.10; and there is good authority elsewhere). The alternative is a clothes line.

IV.i.242. O . . . peer. 'In Oth., II.iii.82-89, are two stanzas of a ballad printed in Percy's Reliques, entitled "Take thy old cloak about thee"; one of these is as follows: "King Stephen was a worthy peere, His breeches cost him but a crowne,/He held them sixpence all too deere;/Therefore he called the taylor Lowne." Hence Trinculo's remark, "What a wardrobe" ' (Arden ed., p. 107).

IV.i.255–257. Mistress . . . bald jerkin. The meaning of this passage is largely dependent on the stage business, which was very likely on the vulgar side. It is necessary to remember that 'under the line,' meaning 'below the equator' (a fitting nautical term in Stephano's mouth) meant also 'under the lime tree' (see note above on l. 217). Although the jerkin could have been a hair or fur jerkin, the point of the jest of ll. 258–260 remains obscure unless we remember that 'loin' and 'line' were homonyms (Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation, p. 125). The drunken Stephano lifts the jerkin off the line (tree) and passes it between his legs (under the line—loin) with an indecent motion (jerkin'). Losing the hair was one of the supposed effects of syphillis (cf. Measure for Measure, I.2.32, 33), hence the bald (with double-entendre) jerkin afterward.

IV.i.258. we . . . level. Trinculo adds to the puns on line: 'by line and level' means by mason's plumb line and level, hency 'by rule,' 'skilfully.' But in view of the preceding business and the proximity of the lime tree, a pun on steal—stale is almost inevitable. To stale was to urinate (said of horses, dogs, etc.). The word is ironic in the light of stale in l. 209 above.

IV.i.264. lime. Still another play on line-linden-lime tree. The reference is to the catching of birds by placing sticky lime on trees.

V.i.25–29. If you, who are composed of nothing but air, have been able to feel some compassion for their troubled state, shall not I, human like themselves and able to experience emotion fully as sharply, be moved more than you to behave as a human and take pity on them?

V.i.193, 194. Yes . . . play. I agree that you would not cheat, and even if you disputed over twenty kingdoms (instead of this insignificant game of chess), I would still insist you would not cheat.

V.i.270. our trim. An important aspect of the clothes imagery in this play is the fact that no one's clothes sustained as much as a blemish, with the exception of Stephano's and Trinculo's. Here the Boatswain is using a nautical term to express the idea.

V.i.306. badges. Either the insignia of Prospero attached to the shoulders of the coats, as was customary on the clothing of retainers, or, figuratively, the stolen coats themselves as badges of their guilt.

Venus and Adonis, Lucrece, and the Minor Poems

The Sonnets

Edited by ALBERT FEUILLERAT
and
EDWARD BLISS REED

Contents

VENUS AND ADONIS	1441	SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC	1475
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE	1453	A LOVER'S COMPLAINT	1477
THE PHOENIX AND THE TURTLE	1472	THE SONNETS	1489
THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM	1473

Venus and Adonis, Lucrece, and the Minor Poems

Introduction

The Sources and Composition of 'Venus and Adonis'

Adonis, the incestuous son of Myrrha by Theias, King of Assyria (or Cinyras), was so beautiful that the goddess of love became enamoured of him. And all the ancient writers who have related the story, from Panyasis and Apollodorus down to Ovid, agree in making the youth respond to Venus's love. So much so that Zeus having decided that during four months Adonis should be left to himself, the eight remaining months being divided between Persephone and Aphrodite, the boy chose to spend with Aphrodite the months at his own disposal. In Shakespeare's poem, on the contrary, Adonis being courted by Venus is indifferent to the love proffered and even manifests unfeigned repugnance.

Critics generally explain this peculiar treatment of the well-known legend by supposing that Shakespeare combined the narrative of the Adonic fable as told in Ovid's Metamorphoses (X, 503-759) with another episode borrowed from the same source, viz., the wooing of Hermaphroditus by the nymph Salmacis (Met., IV, 285-588). But the confusion of the two Ovidian stories had certainly been made, in England, before Shakespeare wrote his Venus and Adonis. A certain resistance on the part of Adonis is implied in Spenser's description of the arras of Castle Joyous (Fairy Queen, III, i, xxxiv-xxxviii); Adonis's bashfulness is taken for granted by Robert Greene in a 'conceited dittie' sung by Infida in Never too Late (1590), which tells of Venus's ineffectual courtship of 'sweet Adon' who dares not 'glaunce his eye' on the goddess. The poem ends as follows:

Wilt thou let thy Venus die?
N'oseres-vous, mon bel amy,
Adon were unkinde say I,
Je vous en prie, pitie me:

. . . .

To let Venus die for woe,
N'oseres-vous, mon bel amy,
That doth love sweete Adon so,
Je vous en prie, pitie me.

And Marlowe, in his Hero and Leander (12-14), speaks of Adonis's indifference as if it were a well-known thing:

. . . Venus in her naked glory strove
To please the careless and disdainful eyes
Of proud Adonis, that before her lies.

To these instances might be added Constable's 'Shepherd's Song of Venus and Adonis,' if it were not pretty certain that this piece is an imitation of Shakespeare's poem. There must have existed some common source to these English versions of the legend; but this source I have been unable to discover.

It cannot be doubted, however, that Shakespeare was also acquainted with Ovid's treatment of the theme, for several passages in Venus and Adonis echo the Latin text (cf. notes on 615-618, 631, 673-678, 883-884, 1115-1116, 1168, and Dürnhöfer, Venus and Adonis in Verhältnis zu Ovids Metamorphosen, pp. 35-38). It is no less certain that Shakespeare used Book VIII (ll. 281-297) of the Metamorphoses for the description of the Calydonian boar (cf. note on 619-630). The story of Narcissus and Echo (Met., III) may also have provided a hint for the allusion to Narcissus's infatuation with his own person in lines 161, 162, and for Venus's 'wailing note' in lines 829 and following.

On the other hand, Sir Sidney Lee believes that Shakespeare may have been influenced by some of the Italian writers who treated the same subject early in the sixteenth century, such as Lodovico Dolce (La Favola d' Adone, 1545), Metello Giovanni Tarchagnota (L' Adone, 1550), Girolamo Parabosco (La Favola d' Adone, before 1557). 'There are,' he writes, 'too many details peculiar to Shakespeare's poem and to its Italian predecessors, to preclude the suggestion that Shakespeare was acquainted with the latter and absorbed some of their ornaments and episodes.' But this is, no doubt, crediting Shakespeare with a more intimate knowledge of Italian literature than he probably had. In the same way, Sir Sidney Lee finds that 'in the minute description in Shakespeare's poem of the chase of the hare (673-708), there are curious resemblances to the "Ode de la Chasse" (on a stag hunt) by the French dramatist, Estienne Jodelle, in his (Œuvres et Mélanges Poétiques (1974).' I must own that I fail to see where the likeness comes in.

More to the point is the comparison which is sometimes made with Lodge's Scyllas Metamorphosis, usually called by its running title, Glaucus and Scylla, published in 1589. The subject of Lodge's poem is also borrowed from Ovid and it tells of the unrequited love of a woman wooing a reluctant youth. It contains a passage describing Venus's despair at Adonis's death; the metre is the same as the one adopted by Shakespeare, and there are a few resemblances in thought and imagery (cf. notes on 329-336, 589-590). Lodge's poem may have had some influence upon Shakespeare's choice of his subject.

Marlowe's Hero and Leander has also been considered as one of Shakespeare's models, and, indeed, echoes of Marlovian thoughts are distinctly heard in a certain number of passages (cf. notes on 3, 263, 264, 720, 751, 768). But none of the similarities recorded is striking enough to be an indisputable proof of the influence of Marlowe on Shakespeare. Hero and Leander was licensed for the press on Sept. 28, 1593—several months after Venus and Adonis—and it was not published until 1598. It is not improbable that Shakespeare had read Marlowe's poem in manuscript, but it is impossible to prove that he had.

The metre employed—the six-line stanza rhyming ababcc—is described by Puttenham (Art of English Poesie, 1589) as 'most usual,' and it had been in fact adopted by numerous poets, e.g. Gascoigne (Posies, 1575), Peele (Device of the Pageant, 1585), Nicholas Breton (The Pilgrimage to Paradise; The Countess of Pembroke's Love, 1592), Spenser (Shepherd's Calendar, 1st Eclogue and part of the 8th Eclogue; Tears of the Muses; Astrophel), Lodge (Scyllas Metamorphosis). No inference as to the sources can therefore be drawn from Shakespeare's choice of this metre.

Date. In the Dedicatory Letter to Lord Southampton the author speaks of Venus and Adonis as 'the first heir of my invention,' and this statement has sometimes been taken as a proof that 'the poem was written or at least designed before Shakespeare undertook any of his dramatic work' (Sidney Lee, Life, 142). Some critics have even gone so far as to suppose that the descriptions of the country in Venus and Adonis could only have been written while Shakespeare was still in Stratford. But if reminiscences of Shakespeare's rural life are to be found in the poem, echoes of his London life are not absent. The comparison with a dumb play and a chorus (359-360) shows that Shakespeare, as he wrote, was full of his theatrical experience, and lines 507-510 contain an allusion to the plague of 1592-1594. Both the comparison and the allusion are so well embodied in the tale that they render improbable the hypothesis offered by certain scholars that 'the first draught lay in the author's desk through four or five summers, and underwent some retouching before it emerged from the press in its final shape.' It is safe to admit that Venus and Adonis was written between August, 1592, when the plague broke out and the theatres were closed, and April 8, 1593, when the poem was entered in the Stationers' Register. Shakespeare, so far, had only been employed in revamping old plays and by the words 'the first heir of my invention' he probably meant that this narrative poem was his first original work as an author.

Venus and Adonis was published in 1593 by R. Field, the printer, himself a Stratford man, with the title-page:

Venus/and Adonis/
Vilia miretur vulgus: mihi flauus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.
[Device]

London/Imprinted by Richard Field, and are to be sold at/the signe of the white Greyhound in/Paules Church-yard 1593.

In June, 1594, the book was assigned by Field to Harrison (Arber, ii, 655), and again, in June, 1596, to William Leake (Arber, iii, 65), who held the copyright until the year 1617. At least seven editions were printed in Shakespeare's lifetime, and seven posthumously, viz, 1593, 1594, 1596, 1599 (twice), 1600?, 1602, 1617, 1620, 1627 (Edinburgh), 1680 (twice), 1636, and 1675. For more details, see Sidney Lee's Introduction to the Oxford facsimile.

The Sources and Publication of 'Lucrece'

The story of Lucrece has been told by numerous writers, the chief versions before Shakespeare's time being those of Dionysius Halicarnassensis (IV, 64, etc.), Diodorus Siculus, Dio Cassius, Ovid (Fasti, ii, 721-852), Livy (Bk. I, c. 57-60), Gower (Confessio Amantis, Bk. VII), Chaucer (Legend of Good Women, 1680-1885), Ser Giovanni Fiorentino (Il Percorone, Giorn. xvi, nov. ii), Bandello (Novelle, Pt. ii, nov. xxi), Paynter (Palace of Pleasure). Several 'ballets' on the subject had also appeared in 1558, 1560, and 1576.

Shakespeare drew from several of these sources. In Ovid he found certain suggestions—the simile of the wolf and the lamb, for instance,—and a few expressions or ideas (cf. notes on 400, 1604, 1732-1733, 1772-1775). But the number of details common to Shakespeare and Livy, and not to be found in Ovid, is much greater, e.g., Tarquin is brought to his bedroom (120-128); Lucrece confesses to her husband that 'a stranger came and lay' on his pillow; Lucrece's friends assure her that though her body is stained her mind is pure (1655-1656 and 1709-1710); Lucrece asks her friends to swear to avenge her (1689, etc.); Lucrece will not let her example serve as an excuse for light women (1714-1715); Brutus asks his 'wondering friends' to swear to help in revenging Lucrece (1843-1848). What pertains to the change of attitude in Brutus is hardly paralleled by what Ovid says of him. The Argument betrays a knowledge of several historical facts not supplied by Ovid. There are also passages where Shakespeare seems to follow Livy more closely than Ovid (cf. notes on 8-9, 437-439, 477-504).

A few details may have been borrowed from Chaucer. The words 'stalk' and 'dishevelled,' applied respectively to Tarquin and Lucrece, are also in Legend of Good Women (1780 and 1830). The statement that Brutus carried the dead body to Rome is neither in Livy nor in Ovid. But in Chaucer Lucrece's self-murder takes place at Rome and her body is carried 'on a bere through al the toun' (1865-1866). For other resemblances see notes on 197-210, 596-630, 1261-1267.

Long ago Malone pointed out resemblances between Daniel's Complaynt of Rosamonde and Lucrece. The list has since been considerably augmented by Ewig (Shakespeare's Lucrece). The most striking similarities are recorded in the notes (cf. 26, 117-119, 492, 556, 1261, 1450-1451, 1660 ff.). It seems pretty certain that Shakespeare learned much of Daniel in technique and that he consciously or unconsciously imitated the tone of the Complaynt, especially in Lucrece's piteous accents.

Sir Sidney Lee finds that 'Lucrece's apostrophe to Time (939 ff.) suggests indebtedness to two other English poets, Thomas Watson in Hecatompathia, 1582 (xlvii and lxxvii), and Giles Fletcher in Licia, 1593 (xxviii).' But such apostrophes were commonplace in poetry, their ultimate source being traceable to Ovid's Tristia (IV.vi.1-10).

Possibly there is a reminiscence of Virgil in the description of the siege of Troy (cf. note on 1366 ff.).

To sum up: Livy seems to have been the chief source, but Shakespeare used also Ovid and probably Chaucer. For the tone and for a few details he was indebted to contemporary poetry, more particularly to Daniel. But the development of the story is entirely his own.

Metre. There is no reason to suppose that Shakespeare was influenced by any particular poem in the choice of his metre. The seven-line stanza, rhyming ababbcc, or rhyme royal, was perhaps the commonest of all Elizabethan metres. It is thus described by Gascoigne in Certayne Notes of Instruction, p. 38 (Arber Reprint): 'Rythme royall is a verse of tenne syllables and seven such verses make a staffe, whereof the first and thirde lines do aunswer (acrosse) in like terminations and rime, the second, fourth, and fifth, do likewise aunswere each other in terminations, and the two last do combine and shut up the sentence: this hath bene called Rithme royall, and surely it is a royall kinde of verse, serving best for graue discourses.' It was used by Chaucer for several of his tales, for his Compleint unto Pite and for his Troylus and Criseyde (it is sometimes called Troilus verse on that account), and by Spenser for his Hymns and his Ruins of Time. For the possibility of Shakespeare having first tried the six-line stanza before fixing his choice upon the rhyme royal, see note on 386-395.

Date. Lucrece was entered in the Stationers' Register on May 9, 1594 (Arber, ii, 648), under the title of The Ravyshement of Lucrece, and was printed in the same year with the following title:

LUCRECE
[Device]

London/Printed by Richard Field, for John Harison, and are/to be sold at the signe of the white Greyhound/in Paules Church-yard. 1594.

This is no doubt the 'graver labour' announced in the Epistle Dedicatory of Venus and Adonis, and must have been composed between the spring of 1593 and the spring of 1594. Lucrece was not so popular as Venus and Adonis, but it 'pleased the wiser sort,' and no less than four other editions were printed in Shakespeare's lifetime (1598, 1600, 1607, 1616). Three other editions appeared in 1624, 1632, and 1655.

'THE PHŒNIX AND THE TURTLE'

In 1601, there appeared a book with the following title:

Loves Martyr/or/Rosalins Complaint./Allegorically shadowing the truth of Loue/in the constant Fate of the Phœnix/and Turtle./A Poeme interlaced with much varietie and raritie;/now first translated out of the venerable Italian Torquato/Caeliano, by Robert Chester./With the true legend of famous King Arthur, the last of the nine/Worthies, being the first Essay of a new Brytish Poet: collected/out of diuerse Authenticall Records./To these are added some new compositions, of seuerall moderne Writers/whose names are subscribed to their seuerall workes, vpon the/first subject: viz. the Phœnix and/Turtle./Mar:—Mutare dominum non potest liber notus./London/Imprinted for E.B./1601./

The supplementary matter is introduced by a separate title-page:

Hereafter/Follow Diverse/Poeticall Essaies on the former Sub-/iect; viz: the Turtle and Phœnix./Done by the best and chiefest of our/moderne writers, with their names sub-/scribed to their particular workes:/neuer before extant./And (now first) consecrated by them all generally,/to the loue and merite of the true-noble Knight/Sir John Salisburie./Dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori./

[Device]

MDCI.

The author, Robert Chester, apparently was a dependent in the household of the knight to whom the book was dedicated. Sir John Salusbury, a Welsh Gentleman of Lleweni, Denbighshire, was born in December, 1566, or January, 1567. He had in his veins a few drops of royal blood, for his mother, Catherine of Berain, was the granddaughter of Sir Roland Velville, illegitimate son of Henry VII. Sir John married (December, 1586) Ursula Stanley, natural daughter of Henry Stanley, fourth Earl of Derby. He was himself a poet, a patron of letters, and a lover of the drama. He was acquainted with Ben Johnson, and probably with Shakespeare, as has been shown by Sir Israel Gollancz in his article 'Contemporary Lines to Heminges and Condell' (The Times Literary Supplement, January 26, 1922). In 1595 he came up to London, frequented the Court and was in great favor with Queen Elizabeth, who appointed him one of her Esquires of the Body (March, 1595). In 1601 he was knighted and it was presumably to celebrate this event that Robert Chester issued his Loves Martyr.

Chester's work is a hodge-podge of various poems on unconnected subjects—a history of early England, a description of the nine female worthies, a metrical biography of King Arthur, a prayer, love ditties, an account of the plants, trees, fishes, minerals, beasts, reptiles, insects, and birds found in Paphos, a series of 'Cantoes alphabet-wise,' another series of 'Cantoes verbally written' or posies—more or less cleverly introduced into an allegorical poem, turning upon the marriage of Sir John Salusbury (the Turtle) to Ursula Stanley (the Phœnix), and obscurely relating how the two birds having decided to die on a pyre, 'in a manner sacrificingly,' out of their mystical ashes there arose another Phœnix (Salusbury's first child, Jane).[1]

In order to render this homage more valuable, either Robert Chester, or Sir John, or maybe the publisher, asked 'the best and chiefest' among contemporary writers—Shakespeare, John Marston, George Chapman, Ben Jonson, and another person who signed himself 'Ignoto'—to supply a poem on the subject of the Phœnix and Turtle, which poems were collected in the Appendix to Loves Martyr.

The contributors did their best to comply with the request and produced a variation on the motive set in Loves Martyr. Ignoto insisted upon the denouement which he summed up in the final verse: 'One Phœnix borne, another Phœnix burne.' Marston in his inflated style sang the praises of the 'most exact wondrous creature arising out of the Phœnix and Turtle Doues Ashes.' Chapman chose to marvel at the Turtle's fidelity to his Phœnix, and Ben Jonson celebrated both the constancy of the Turtle and the 'splendor' 'more than mortal' of the Phœnix, who turns out to be a lady full of graces and virtues.

Shakespeare alone of all the contributors does not seem to have clearly understood—and he cannot be blamed—the real meaning of the allegory. He evidently did not discover that the Phœnix and the Turtle were consumed, only in a metaphorical sense, in the flames of their own love, and that they lived again in the person of a beautiful offspring. He made the two birds die 'leaving no posteritie,' and described their obsequies, conducted in the presence of the Eagle, the Swan, and the Crow, as mourners.

This difference in the treatment of the theme is somewhat surprising, and several explanations of it have been offered. Sir Sidney Lee cannot believe that Shakespeare's poem 'was penned for Chester's book. It must have been either devised in an idle hour with merely abstract intention, or it was suggested by the death within the poet's own circle of a pair of devoted lovers.'

1 Dr. Grosart, in his edition of Chester's Loves Martyr, confidently advanced the idea that the 'allegory shadowed the love of Q. Elizabeth for the earl of Essex.' It is one of the wildest hypotheses of that ingenious critic. Mr. Carleton Brown has discovered a document showing that 'Sir John Salusbury was bitterly opposed to the party of Essex, and therefore was the last person to whom such an allegory as Dr. Grosart constructed would have been dedicated.'

Professor Carleton Brown impressed by 'the frigid and perfunctory tone' of Shakespeare's contribution suggests that the poet's 'relations with Sir John Salusbury were less close than those of Jonson, Marston and Chapman, so that his lines on the Phœnix and Turtle were a matter of courteous compliance rather than a tribute to a personal friend.' Prof. J. Q. Adams supposes that Shakespeare did not trouble 'to read Chester's tedious poem far enough to have unraveled its cryptic meaning,' and he even suspects him of having done his task none too seriously: 'The concluding lines of the Threnos,' adds Prof. Adams, 'may be slyly humorous when the poet calls upon his readers to repair to the urn and

'For these dead birds sigh a prayer.'

Shakespeare certainly was a humorist, but what his real intentions were we shall probably never know.[2]

Sources. A. H. R. Fairchild in his interesting study of the Phœnix and Turtle has collected numerous traces of the influence of Chaucer and of the symbolism of the Renaissance emblem writers upon both the conception and the style of Shakespeare's poem. 'It has,' writes Mr. Fairchild, 'a twofold source, stanzas i-v especially being suggested by Chaucer's poem, The Parlement of Foules, part IV, 323 to the end, the remaining stanzas (vi-xviii) being adapted to these from the emblem literature and conceptions of Shakespeare's period.' Sir Sidney Lee, on the other hand, finds a close affinity with "the imagery of Matthew Roydon's elegy on Sir Philip Sidney, where the turtle-dove and phœnix meet the swan and eagle at the dead hero's funeral and there play rôles somewhat similar to those which Shakespeare assigns the birds in his 'poetical essaie.' " Some of the resemblances with Chaucer's Parlement of Foules are striking enough and they are recorded in the notes. But I wonder whether it is necessary to find any particular source at all for Shakespeare's use of the different emblems of the allegory, for they were part of the symbolical language of the time.

Metre. The Phœnix and Turtle consists of thirteen quatrains in truncated trochaics rhyming abba. The concluding Threnos consists of five three-line stanzas, in octosyllabic trochaics, each stanza having a single rhyme.

The Publication and Authorship of 'The Passionate Pilgrim'

In 1599 William Jaggard issued a poetical miscellany under the title of

THE/Passionate/Pilgrime./By W. Shakespeare./
[Device]

At London/Printed for W. Jaggard, and are/to be sold by W. Leake, at the Grey-/hound in Paules Churchyard./1599.

The volume contained twenty lyrical pieces, the last six of which were preceded by a second title-page running thus:

Sonnets/to sundry notes of Musicke./
[Device]

At London/Printed for W. Jaggard, and are/to be sold by W. Leake, at the Grey-/hound in Paules Churchyard/1599.

Out of the twenty poems only five are indisputably by Shakespeare. These are numbers I, II, III, V of The Passionate Pilgrim and II of Sonnets to Sundry Notes, which are extracted from Shakespeare's Sonnets (Nos. 138 and 144) and from Love's Labour's Lost (IV.iii.55-68; IV.ii.104-117; IV.iii.99-118). Four other poems, IV, VI, IX, XI, are on the subject of Venus and Adonis. No XI appeared in 1596 in Bartholomew Griffin's Fidessa, and there is no reason to doubt that the sonnet was actually written by the poet to whom it was ascribed. As regards IV, VI, IX, critics are divided. Malone thought that they must be 'essays of the author when he first conceived the notion of writing a poem on the subject of Venus and Adonis,' and that 'these little pieces bear the strongest mark of the hand of Shakespeare.' Dowden, likewise, was of opinion that 'nothing in any one of these sonnets forbids the idea of Shakespeare's authorship.' He pointed out that IV and VI recall a passage in The Taming of the Shrew (Induction,ii.56-58) and that the words 'brakes' and 'queen of love' appear in IX as well as in Venus and Adonis. But as I have shown in note to VI the details of the picture in The Taming of the Shrew and in The Passionate Pilgrim are different; and the repetition of such ordinary expressions as 'queen of love' and 'brakes' does not prove much. These resemblances might just as well be reminiscences of Venus and Adonis, as is suggested by Sir Sidney Lee, who refuses to see there any trace of Shakespeare's workmanship. It should also be noted that IV, VI, and IX are remarkable for their lack of imagery: they scarcely contain any simile and metaphor. The man who wrote them was singularly devoid of imagination, a thing which cannot be said of Shakespeare but which is certainly true of Griffin, as XI and the whole of Fidessa demonstrates. It is most probable that the four Venus-Adonis sonnets come from the same hand, that of Bartholomew Griffin.

The other poems in the book—with the exception of VII, X, XIII, XIV, and I, III, IV of Sonnets to Sundry Notes, which have nothing Shakespearean about them—have been restored to their owners (cf. notes).

The Passionate Pilgrim met with success. As may be inferred from the title-page of the 1612 edition, a second edition was called for, of which no copy is known to exist. In 1612 Jaggard issued another edition with the following title:

The/Passionate/Pilgrime/or/Certaine Amorous Sonnets/betweene Venus and Adonis/newly corrected and aug-/mented/By W. Shakespeare/The third Edition./Whereunto is newly ad/ded two Love-Epistles, the first/from Paris to Hellen, and Hellens answere backe/againe to Paris/Printed for W. Jaggard./1612.

The two additions announced on the title-page were extracted from Heywood's Troia Britannica, a collection which Jaggard himself had published in 1609. This piece of unscrupulous effrontery elicited a protest from Heywood which appeared as a postscript to his Apology for Actors (1612): "Here likewise I must necessarily insert a manifest injury done to me in that worke by taking the two Epistles of Paris to Helen, and Helen to Paris, and printing them in a lesse volume, under the name of another, which may put the world in an opinion I might steale them from him, and hee to doe himselfe right, hath since published them in his owne name: but as I must acknowledge my lines not worthy his [i.e. Shakespeare's] patronage under whom he [i.e.

2 It is hardly worth while to mention A. von Mauntz's laborious interpretation in the volume entitled Heraldik in diensten der Shakespeare-Forschung (Berlin, 1903). According to that critic the poem is a complaint over the death of Marlowe and over the loss of his blank verse, the various birds being identified with Spenser, Harvey, Nashe, and Shakespeare.

Jaggard] hath published them, so the Author [i.e. Shakespeare] I know much offended with M. Jaggard that (altogether unknowne to him) presumed to make so bold with his name." This formal statement proved effective, for Jaggard cancelled the fallacious title-page and issued the remaining copies with a new one from which he omitted Shakespeare's name.

The Authorship of 'A Lover's Complaint'

When Thorpe published Shakespeare's Sonnets in 1609 he appended a poem in forty-nine seven-line stanzas, entitled A Lover's Complaint, which he gave out as written by William Shakespeare. The metre used is that of Lucrece, and it is true that several passages exhibit a felicity of phrase which reminds one of Shakespeare's characteristic sweetness. Yet it is to be doubted whether Thorpe was justified in attributing A Lover's Complaint to the author of the Sonnets. We know that Elizabethan publishers were not very scrupulous in their ascriptions and the methodical analysis of the poem made by Prof. J. W. Mackail (in Essays and Studies by members of the English Association, 1912) seems to prove that Shakespeare could not have written that pathetic but somewhat affected lamentation. The poem contains an unusually high proportion of words not to be found in Shakespeare's authentic work, together with a great number of Latinisms and other syntactical peculiarities. It may be added that the rhythm of many lines is too awkward to have satisfied Shakespeare's subtle ear even in the period of his apprenticeship. For my part, I very strongly question the authenticity of this piece.

Poems

Venus and Adonis

'Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.'

To The Right Honourable Henry Wriothesley,
Earl of Southampton, and Baron of Tichfield.

Right Honourable,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burthen: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,
William Shakespeare.

Even as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn;
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

'Thrice fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses;
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses:

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety;
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.'

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens;—O! how quick is love:—
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips;
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.'

He burns with bashful shame; she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
He saith she is immodest, blames her miss;
What follows more she murthers with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd or prey be gone;
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forc'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace;
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers.

Epigraph; cf. n. Ded. 1 Wriothesley; cf. n. 11 ear: plough 2 weeping: shedding dew 3 Rose-cheek'd; cf. n. hied him: hastened 5 makes amain: goes in haste 9 Stain; cf. n. 11 Nature . . . strife; cf. n. 12 the world . . . life; cf. n. 18 set: seated 24 wasted: spent 25 sweating palm; cf. n. 26 precedent: sign livelihood: vigor 37 ragged: rough 40 prove: attempt 53 miss; cf. n. 55 empty: hungry 56 Tires; cf. n. 61 content: acquiesce; cf. n.

Look! how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes:
  Rain added to a river that is rank
  Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lowers and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale;
  Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
  Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears,
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
  Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;
  And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave;
  But when her lips were ready for his pay,
  He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
  'O! pity,' 'gan she cry, 'flint-hearted boy:
  'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every jar;
  Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
  And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest;
  Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
  Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

'Thus he that overrul'd I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain:
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength obey'd
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
  O, be not proud, not brag not of thy might,
  For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight!

'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,—
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,—
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine:
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:
  Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies;
  Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

'Art thou asham'd to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
  These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean
  Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe, yet mayst thou well be tasted.
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
  Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime
  Rot and consume themselves in little time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old,
Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'erworn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,
  Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
  But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey and bright, and quick in turning;
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow;
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
  My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
  Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
  Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
  Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
  Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
  That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
  Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
  And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse:

71 rank; cf. n. 78 more: greater 82 Cf. n. 86 dive-dapper; cf. n. 90 winks: shuts his eyes 91 passenger: traveler 100 jar: conflict 104 uncontrolled; cf. n. 114 foil'd: defeated

129-132 Cf. n. 130 Cf. n. 135 O'erworn: worn out by time 136 Thick-: weak- 148 footing: footprint 149 compact: composed 150 aspire: ascend 157 affected to: in love with 158 Cf. n. 161 Narcissus; cf. n.

Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty;
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis with a lazy spright,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His louring brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours when they blot the sky,
Souring his cheeks, cries, 'Fie! no more of love:
The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.'

'Ay me,' quoth Venus, 'young, and so unkind?
What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone?
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun:
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
And lo! I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
And were I not immortal, life were done
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth.
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth?
O, had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

'What am I that thou shouldst contemn me this?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute:
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

'Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred:
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own direction.'

177 Titan: the sun 197, 198 Cf. n. 200 relenteth: softens 203, 204 Cf. n. 204 unkind: unnatural 205 this: thus

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:
And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak,
And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his hand;
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band:
She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
And when from thence he struggles to be gone,
She locks her lily fingers one in one.

'Fondling,' she saith, 'since I have hemm'd thee here
Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

'Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain:
Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.'

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love liv'd and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking.
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing:
'Pity,' she cries; 'some favour, some remorse!'
Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo! from forth a copse that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

219 blaze: publish 222 her intendments: what she means to say 229 Fondling: darling 231 deer; cf. n. 235 relief; cf. n. 236 buttom-grass: grass growing in the valleys 240 rouse; cf. n. 247 caves; cf. n. 257 remorse: commiseration 259-262 Cf. n. 263, 264 Cf. n.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder;
The iron bit he crushes 'tween his teeth,
Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up-prick'd; his braided hanging mane
Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
With gentle majesty and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say, 'Lo! thus my strength is tried;
And this I do to captivate the eye
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.'

What recketh he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering 'Holla,' or his 'Stand, I say'?
What cares he now for curb or pricking spur?
For rich caparisons or trapping gay?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
Nor nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed;
So did this horse excel a common one,
In shape, in courage, colour, pace and bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometimes he scuds far off, and there he stares;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whe'r he run or fly they know not whether;
For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,
Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd wings.

He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her;
She answers him as if she knew his mind;
Being proud; as females are, to see him woo her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind,
Spurns at his love and scorns the heat he feels,
Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He vails his tail that, like a falling plume
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
He stamps and bites the poor flies in his fume.
His love, perceiving how he was enrag'd,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

His testy master goeth about to take him;
When lo! the unback'd breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them,
Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.

All swoln with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest;
For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong
When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said;
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,—
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,—
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy;
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy:
But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print,
As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between them!
Her eyes petitioners to his eyes suing;
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them;
Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing:
And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a gaol of snow,

272 compass'd: curved 279 curvets: cf. n. 282 breeder: female 283 recketh: cares for stir: agitation 286 caparisons or trapping: cf. n. 289-292 Cf. n. 295 shag: hairy 297 passing: exceedingly 303 To bid ... base: cf. n. 304 whe'r: whether whether: which of the two 310 strangeness: coldness

314 vails: lowers 316 fume: rage 326 Banning: cursing 330 aidance: help 329-336 Cf. n. 335 heart's attorney: cf. n. 342 Cf. n. 343 wistly: attentively 354 dint: impression 359, 360 Cf. n.

Or ivory in an alablaster band;
So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
'O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee.'

'Give me my hand,' saith he, 'why dost thou feel it?'
'Give me my heart,' saith she, 'and thou shalt have it;
O! give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it:
Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'

'For shame,' he cries, 'let go, and let me go;
My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so:
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone:
For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.'

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:
Affection is a coal that must be cool'd;
Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire:
The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none;
Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone.

'How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Servilely master'd with a leathern rein!
But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
He held such petty bondage in disdain;
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

'Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delight?
Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy;
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy;
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee.
O learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
And once made perfect, never lost again.'

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know it,
Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it;
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it;

363 alablaster: alabaster, a stalagmitic white stone 364 engirts: encircles 367 engine; cf. n. 368 round: globe (the earth) 370 Cf. n. 372 bane: ruin 375 steel; cf. n. 376 grave: engrave 388 suffer'd: allowed to burn 396 Enfranchising: liberating 397 naked bed; cf. n.

My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That laughs and weeps, and all but with a breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth;
The colt that's back'd and burthen'd being young
Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong.

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat:
Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;
To love's alarms it will not ope the gate:
Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery;
For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.'

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'hast thou a tongue?
O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong;
I had my load before, now press'd with bearing:
Melodious discord, heavenly tune, harsh-sounding,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

'Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;
Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

'Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the still'tory of thy face excelling
Comes breath perfum'd that breedeth love by smelling.

'But O! what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four;
Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
And bid Suspicion double-lock the door,
Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast?'

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield;
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wrack to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisably she marketh:
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth,

412 Cf. n. 414 all ... breath: both in the same breath 421 wringing: squeezing 424 alarms; cf. n. 430 press'd: oppressed, crushed 433-450 Cf. n. 436 sensible: capable of sensation 443 still'tory: still (alembic) 446 four: four senses 449 Jealousy: Envy 456 flaws: sudden gusts 457 advisedly: heedfully

Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth;
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red;

And all-amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily prevent:
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn and all the earth relieveth:
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brows' repine;
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

'O! where am I?' quoth she, 'in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

'O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

'Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
O, never let their crimson liveries wear!
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year:
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.

'Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?

'Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.

'Look! the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west;
The owl, night's herald, shrieks, 'tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light
Do summon us to part and bid good night.

'Now let me say good night, and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.'
'Good night,' quoth she; and ere he says adieu,
The honey fee of parting tender'd is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face.

Till, breathless, his disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth:
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth,
Their lips together glu'd, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter willeth;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
Which blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame's pure blush and honour's wrack.

465 recures: cures 472 Cf. n. 478 Cf. n. 479 by her good will: of her own accord 482 windows: cf. n. 490 repine: discontent 494 drench'd: immersed 498 lively joy: life's joy 506 liveries: cf. n. wear: wear out 507-510 Cf. n. 507 verdure: freshness

515 slips: cf. n. 516 wax-red: cf. n. 529 comforter: cf. n. 558 wrack: ruin

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-fac'd coward,
But then woos best when most his choice is froward.

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

'Sweet boy,' she says, 'this night I'll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, Love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?'
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

'The boar!' quoth she; whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheek, she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws;
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,
To clip Elysium and to lack her joy.

Even so poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which she in him finds missing,
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

565, 566 Cf. n. 570 choice: the person chosen 571 gave: given 586 make the match: ratify the bargain 589, 590 Cf. n. 589 pale: paleness 598 manage: cf. n. 600 clip: embrace 601 painted grapes: cf. n. 602 pine: starve 604 helpless: which could not afford any help

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be;
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd;
Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee;
She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd.
'Fie, fie!' he says, 'you crush me; let me go;
You have no reason to withhold me so.'

'Thou hadst been gone,' quoth she, 'sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told'st me thou wouldst hunt the boar.
O, be advis'd! thou know'st not what it is
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore.
Whose tushes never sheath'd he whetteth still,
Like a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

'On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret;
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his crooked tushes slay.

'His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harm'd;
Being ireful, on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him part, through whom he rushes.

'Alas! he naught esteems that face of thine,
To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, wondrous dread!
Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.

'O, let him keep his loathsome cabin still!
Beauty hath naught to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

'Didst thou not mark my face? was it not white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? And fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

'For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!"
Distempering gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

608 assay'd . . . prov'd; cf. n. 615-618 Cf. n. 615 advis'd: prudent 617 tushes: tusks 618 mortal: death-giving 619-630 Cf. n. 619 battle: army 623 mov'd: angry 626 Cf. n. 631 Cf. n. 636 root: uproot 639 within his danger: within his dangerous reach 652 Kill, kill; cf. n. 653 Distempering: allaying

'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:

'And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

'But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtilty,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

'And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles
How he outruns the winds, and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musits through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell,
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer;
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear:

'For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies
As if another chase were in the skies.

'By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarums he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.

655 bate: strife 656 spring: young shoot 673-678 Cf. n. 673-708 Cf. n. 674 Uncouple: set loose the dogs 680 overshoot: pass swiftly over 682 cranks: runs in and out doubles: sudden turns 683 musits: cf. n. 685-688 Cf. n. 693, 694 till . . . out: cf. n. 695 spend their mouths: cf. n. 696 Cf. n. 697-699 Cf. n. 701, 702 Cf. n.

'Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious briar his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never reliev'd by any.

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?' 'No matter where,' quoth he;
'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent,' 'Why, what of that?' quoth she.
'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all.'

'But if thou fall, O! then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

'Now of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine;
Wherein she fram'd thee in high heaven's despite,
To shame the sun by day and her by night.

'And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery;

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzies wood,
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attaint
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood;
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair.

'And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and done,
As mountain-snow melts with the mid-day sun.

704 indenting: cf. n. 720 Cf. n. 724 true: honest 725 cloudy: cf. n. 726 forsworn: cf. n. 730 moulds: cf. n. 734 cross: injure 736 defeature: defacement 740 wood: mad 741 attaint: infection 743 imposthumes: abscesses 747 favour: appearance

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul-cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.

'Nay then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme;
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

'What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger.
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse.

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done.
Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies;
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen:
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark laund runs apace;
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or stonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled:
'Ay me!' she cries, and twenty times, 'Woe, woe!'
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She marking them, begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrall and old men dote;
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight
In such like circumstance, with such like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites;
Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?

751 fruitless; cf. n. 757, 758 Cf. n. 766 reaves: bereaves 768 Cf. n. 774 treatise: discourse 782 closure: enclosure 784 barr'd: shut out from, deprived 787 reprove: disprove

808 teen: grief 813 laund: glade 825 stonish'd: bewildered 826 mistrustful: causing mistrust 828 discovery; cf. n. 832 Passion: lament 837 thrall: be slaves 844 circumstance: circuitous discourse 848 parasites; cf. n.

She says, ' 'Tis so': they answer all, ' 'Tis so';
And would say after her, if she said 'No.'

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold

Venus salutes him with this fair good morrow:
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love;
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay:
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay;
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wreath'd up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder;
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud:
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart;
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part;
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy,
Till, cheering up her senses all dismay'd,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error, that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:
And with that word she spied the hunted boar,

Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not wither:
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murther.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways,
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting,
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master,
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amaz'd
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gaz'd,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
So she at these sad sighs draws up her breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love,'—thus chides she Death,—
'Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead, O no! it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it;
O yes! it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.
Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant's heart.

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And, hearing him, thy power had lost his power.
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower.
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

854 cabinet: cf. n. 864 other: others 866 Musing: wondering 870 coasteth: approaches 877 at a bay: cf. n. 883, 884 Cf. n. 887 curst: peevish 888 strain courtesy: cf. n. cope: encounter 889 cry: cf. n. 891, 892 Cf. n. 895 ecstasy: excitement

907 spleens: whims, sudden motions 909 mated: baffled 911 respects: considerations 912 In hand with: undertaking 920 flap-mouth'd: cf. n. 933 worm: cf. n. 944 his: its 947 golden arrow: cf. n. 948 ebon: ebony (i.e. black)

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
  Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
  Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.'

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd;
  But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,
  And with this strong course opens them again.

Oh, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Her eye seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,
Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
  But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
  Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief,
  But none is best; then join they all together,
  Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman holla;
A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well:
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
  For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
  And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,
  To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
  Who is but drunken when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love! How strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous;
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
  The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
  In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought:
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that call'd him all to naught,
Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
  She clepes him king of graves, and grave for kings,
  Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear

956 vail'd: let fall 981 orient drop: pearl 993 Cf. n. 995 clepes: calls 996 Imperious supreme: imperial chief

Whenas I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
  Then, gentle shadow,—truth I must confess,—
  I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

' 'Tis not my fault: the boar provok'd my tongue;
Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
I did but act, he's author of my slander:
  Grief hath two tongues: and never woman yet,
  Could rule them both without ten women's wit.'

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate;
  Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs; and stories
  His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

'O Jove!' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I,
To be of such a weak and silly mind
To wail his death who lives and must not die
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind;
  For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
  And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

'Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves;
Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves.'
  Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
  Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcon to the lure, away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight;
  Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
  Like stars asham'd of day, themselves withdrew:

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backwards in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again;
  So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
  Into the deep dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
  Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
  By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,
Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.

1004 wreak'd: avenged 1010 suspect: suspicion 1012 insinuate: flatter 1013 trophies; cf. n. 1018 mutual: general 1027 lure; cf. n. 1028 Cf. n. 1041 consort: associate

This mutiny each part doth so surprise
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth,
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
Dumbly she passions, franticly she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Alas! poor world, what treasure hast thou lost?
What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast
Of things long since, or anything ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;
But true-sweet beauty liv'd and died with him.

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you:
But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;
The wind would blow it off, and, being gone,
Play with his locks: then would Adonis weep;
And straight, in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

'To see his face the lion walk'd along
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him;
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills;
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

'But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

' 'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain:
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheath'd unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My mouth with his; the more am I accurst.'
With this she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told;
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies;

Two glasses where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
'Wonder of time,' quoth she, 'this is my spite,
That, thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

'Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end;
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low;
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

'It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud,
Bud and he blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool to speak.

1052 trench'd: dug 1064 Cf. n. 1078 ensuing: future 1083 fair: beauty 1094 fear: scare 1098 silly: harmless

1105 urchin: hedgehog 1107 beauteous livery: outward beauty 1110 Cf. n. 1115, 1116 Cf. n. 1125 heavy: sad 1127 coffer-lids; cf. n. 1139 settled equally: evenly balanced 1143 o'erstraw'd: overstrewn

'It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward,
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry cumbustious matter is to fire:
Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their love shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white;
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flowers to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath;
And says within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is reft from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise,
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:
There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd;
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

FINIS

1148 measures; cf. n. 1157 toward: yielding 1162 combustious: combustible 1168 purple flower; cf. n. 1193 Paphos; cf. n.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLEY
Earl of Southampton and Baron of Tichfield.

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

THE ARGUMENT

Lucius Tarquinius (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus), after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murdered, and contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper, every one commended the virtues of his own wife: among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife—though it were late in the night—spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was, according to his estate, royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, and another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and the whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and, bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective

1–7 Cf. n. 1 Lucius Tarquinius; cf. n. 7 Ardea; cf. n. 11 Collatinus; cf. n. 26 messengers; cf. n. 28 Junius Brutus; cf. n. 29 Publius Valerius; cf. n.

against the tyranny of the king; wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

❧

From the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
  And girdle with embracing flames the waist
  Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
  Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
  With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate;
Reck'ning his fortune at such high-proud rate,
  That kings might be espoused to more fame,
  But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few!
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun;
An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun:
  Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
  Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth then apology be made
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
  Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
  From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sov'reignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king;
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting
  His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
  That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all-too-timeless speed, if none of those:

1 all in post: with great speed 3 Lust-breathed: led by lust 4 Collatium; cf. n. 5 aspire: ascend 8, 9 Cf. n. 9 bateless: which cannot be blunted 10 let: forbear 14 aspects; cf. n. 26 Cf. n. 33 publisher: proclaimer 37 Suggested: tempted

His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
  O rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant cold!
  Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old.

When at Collatium this false lord arriv'd,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue striv'd
Which of them both should underprop her fame:
When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for shame;
  When beauty boasted blushes, in despite
  Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intituled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field;
Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;
  Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
  When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argu'd by beauty's red and virtue's white:
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right:
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight;
  The sovereignty of either being so great,
  That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
  To those two armies that would let him go,
  Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow tongue—
The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so—
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe
  Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,
  In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil,
Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
  And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
  Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,

47 liver; cf. n. 49 spring; cf. n. 52-70 Cf. n. 65 Argu'd: evinced 67 minority; cf. n. 72 field; cf. n. 73 pure: unmixed 82 owe; cf. n. 83 Enchanted: fascinated answers: pays 88 lim'd; cf. n. 89 securely: unsuspectingly 90 reverend: reverent 93 plaits: folds

Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parling looks,
Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Writ in the glassy margents of such books:
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks;
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express,
And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in this far welkin once appear;
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending weariness with heavy spright;
For after supper long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight,
And every one to rest themselves betake,
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that wake.

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining:
Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
And when great treasure is the meed propos'd,
Though death be adjunct, there's no death suppos'd.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
That what they have not, that which they possess
They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain,

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,

That one for all, or all for one we gage;
As life for honour in fell battles' rage;
Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect;
And this ambitious foul infirmity,
In having much, torments us with defect
Of that we have: so then we do neglect
The thing we have: and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust,
And for himself himself he must forsake:
Then where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes;
No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding cries;
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs; pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm;
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm;
But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm,
Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly;
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:
'As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then looking scornfully, he doth despise
His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust:

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine;
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:

99 cop'd with: encountered 100 parling: speaking 102 margents: margins 104 moralize: interpret 104, 105 Cf. n. 106-112 Cf. n. 111 heav'd-up: uplifted 117-119 Cf. n. 117 sable: black 120-123 Cf. n. 121 Intending: pretending 122 questioned: conversed 135, 136 Cf. n. 138-140 Cf. n. 144 gage: impawn, hazard

150-152 Cf. n. 160 confounds: overthrows 167 silly: harmless 174 retire: retreat 187, 188 Cf. n.

Let fair humanity abhor the deed
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

'O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity sham'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.

'What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be stroken down?

'If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

'O, what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
Mine eyes forgo their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quittal of such strife:
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

'Shameful it is; ay, if the fact be known:
Hateful it is; there is no hate in loving:
I'll beg her love; but she is not her own:
The worst is but denial and reproving:
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing.

Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.'

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worser sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, 'She took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the warlike band
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.
O how her fear did make her colour rise!
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

'And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal fear!
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

'Why hunt I then for colour or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth:
Affection is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights and will not be dismay'd.

'Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye:
Sad pause and deep regard beseem the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage.
Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies?'

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,
So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the self-same seat sits Collatine:
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which once corrupted, takes the worser part;

196 weed: dress 197-210 Cf. n. 200 fancy's: love's 202 digression: misdeed 206, 207 Cf. n. 207 cipher: express by a sign 217 stroken: struck 236 quittal: requital

245 painted cloth: cf. n. 248 makes dispensation: dispenses 249 vantage: vantage ground 265 Narcissus: cf. n. 278 Cf. n.

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforc'd, retires his ward;
But as they open they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard:
The threshold grates the door to have him heard;
Night-wand'ring weasels shriek to see him there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face,
Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks:
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And griping it, the needle his finger pricks;
As who should say, 'This glove to wanton tricks
Is not inur'd; return again in haste;
Thou seest our mistress' ornaments are chaste.'

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him;
He in the worst sense construes their denial:
The door, the wind, the glove, that did delay him,
He takes for accidental things of trial;
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial,
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

'So, so,' quoth he, 'these lets attend the time,
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
And give the sneaped birds more cause to sing.
Pain pays the income of each precious thing;
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and sands,
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.'

Now is he come unto the chamber door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself impiety hath wrought,
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited the eternal power
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
And they would stand auspicious to the hour,
Even there he starts: quoth he, 'I must deflower;
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
How can they then assist me in the act?

'Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide!
My will is back'd with resolution:
Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be tried;
The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution;
Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night.
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.'

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide.
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch:
Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head:
By their high treason is his heart misled;
Which gives the watchword to his hand full soon,
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed,
But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill;
Then Collatine again, by Lucrece' side,
In his clear bed might have reposed still:
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hills her head entombed is:
Where, like a virtuous monument she lies,
To be admir'd of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,

303 retires: withdraws 305 regard: consideration 313 conduct: guide 318 rushes; cf. n. 328 let: hinder 332 prime: spring 333 sneaped: pinched with frost 334 income: arrival 335 shelves: sandbanks 341 Cf. n. 342 prey, pray; cf. n.

349 fact: misdeed 356 eye of heaven; cf. n. 365 stalks; cf. n. 380 period: end 386-395 Cf. n. 389 to want: as if in anger at being deprived of

With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath;
O modest wantons! wanton modesty!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered,
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured.
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out,

What could he see but mightily he noted?
What did he note but strongly he desir'd?
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tir'd.
With more than admiration he admir'd
Her azure veins, her alablaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side,
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children's tears nor mother's groans respecting,
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart, alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries:

397 marigolds: cf. n. 400 golden threads: cf. n. 402 map: picture 407-409 Cf. n. 413 heave: drive 417 tir'd: cf. n. 419 alablaster: alabaster, white 421 fawneth: shows delight, as a dog does 424 qualified: abated 436 commends: entrusts 437-439 Cf. n. 442 cabinet: closet

She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and controll'd.

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking;
What terror 'tis! but she, in worser taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries;
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
Rude ram to batter such an ivory wall!
May feel her heart,—poor citizen,—distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.
This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity,
To make the breach and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still
Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: 'The colour in thy face,—
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,—
Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale;
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never-conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

'Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy beauty hath ensnar'd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

'I see what crosses my attempt will bring;
I know what thorns the growing rose defends;
I think the honey guarded with a sting;
All this, beforehand, counsel comprehends:
But will is deaf and hears no heedful friends;
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

453 taking: plight 459 antics: cf. n. 467 bulk: frame 471 heartless: timid 472 peers: makes to peep out 476, 477, 481 colour: cf. n. 477-504 Cf. n. 477-511 Cf. n. 492 Cf. n.

'I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity;
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.'

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which like a falcon, towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threats if he mount he dies:
So under his insulting falchion lies
Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells.

'Lucrece,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy thee:
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee:
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay,
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rimes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

'But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;
A little harm done to a great good end,
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

'Then for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe or birth-hour's blot:
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye
He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the gripe's sharp claws,
Pleads in a wilderness where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat,
In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhallow'd haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth:
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth:
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth
No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust through marble wear with raining.

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fix'd
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mix'd,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place;
And midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as though hast pretended;
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended;
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

'My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave me;
Myself a weakling, do not, then, ensnare me;
Thou look'st not like deceit, do not deceive me.
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee;
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans.

'All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wrack-threat'ning heart,
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolv'd to water do convert.
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

'In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?

500 affection: passion 507 Coucheth: causes to crouch 509 falchion: sword; cf. n. 511 falcon's bells; cf. n. 522 nameless bastardy; cf. n. 534 Tender: receive favorably 537 Worse . . . wipe; cf. n. 540 cockatrice; cf. n. 543 gripe: vulture 556 vulture folly; cf. n. 559 plaining: complaint 565-567 Cf. n. 576 pretended: intended 580 woodman: hunter 586 heave: drive 592 convert: change 596-630 Cf. n.

To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name.
Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
  Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king;
  For kings like gods should govern everything.

'How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring!
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not when once thou art a king?
O be remembred, no outrageous thing
  From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
  Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

'This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love:
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this, thy will remove;
  For princes are the glass, the school, the book
  Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

'And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn?
Must he in three read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
  Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud,
  And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

'Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
  When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may say,
  He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the way?

'Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.
  O how are they wrapp'd in with infamies
  That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes!

'To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash relier:
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal;
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire,
  And wipe the dim mist from thy doting eyne,
  That thou shalt see thy state and pity mine.'

'Have done,' quoth he; 'my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.

Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret:
The petty streams that pay a daily debt
  To their salt sovereign, with their fresh falls' haste
  Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

'Thou art,' quoth she, 'a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo! there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
  Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hears'd,
  And not the puddle in thy sea dispers'd.

'So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave;
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
  The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
  But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

'So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state'—
'No more,' quoth he; 'by heaven, I will not hear thee:
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear thee;
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
  Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
  To be thy partner in this shameful doom.'

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries;
  Till with her own white fleece her voice controll'd
  Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears
He pens her piteous clamours in her head,
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
  The spots whereof could weeping purify,
  Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again;
This forced league doth force a further strife;
This momentary joy breeds months of pain;
This hot desire converts to cold disdain:
  Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
  And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look! as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight;
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:

603 be seeded: grow to maturity 605 in thy hope: while only an heir 608 From vassal actors: done by vassals 629 pattern'd by thy fault: having thy fault as an example 637 askance: turn aside 639 relier: ally 640 repeal: recall from exile 646 let: obstacle

677 Cf. n. 696 balk: forsake

His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring.

O deeper sin than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till like a jade Self-will himself doth tire.

And then with lank and lean discolour'd cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case:
The flesh being proud, Desire doth fight with Grace,
For there it revels; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chas'd;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands disgrac'd;
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defac'd;
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall
To living death, and pain perpetual:
Which in her prescience she controlled still,
But her foresight could not forestall their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain;
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will despite of cure remain;
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burthen of a guilty mind.

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence,
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there;
He scowls and hates himself for his offence,
She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear;
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear,
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless castaway;
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day;
'For day,' quoth she, 'night's scapes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how
To cloak offences with a cunning brow.

'They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold;
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night:

'O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!
Grim cave of death! whispering conspirator
With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher!

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night!
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

'With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair,
Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick;
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smother'd light
May set at noon and make perpetual night.

'Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's child,
The silver-shining queen he would distain;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,
Through Night's black bosom should not peep again:
So should I have co-partners in my pain;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows and hide their infamy;
But I alone alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,

701 conceit: imagination 703 receipt; cf. n. 710 recreant: cowardly 714 remission: pardon 721 princess: i.e. Tarquin's soul 733 his spoil: her whom he has violated 741 exclaiming on: crying out against 743 convertite: convert 747 scapes: wanton acts

755 grave: engrave 761 close: enclose 766 Black stage: cf. n. 768 defame: dishonor 772 my ... crime: the inexpiable crime I suffer 774 proportion'd: regulated 778 ravish: deflower 780 fair: beauty 781 arrive: reach prick: point, mark 786 distain: blot

Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

'O Night! thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous Day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace:
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made
May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade.

'Make me not object to the tell-tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will cote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name;
The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

'Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted:
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted
That is as clear from this attaint of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas! how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows.

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

'Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack;
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue: O unlook'd-for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil!

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

'The aged man that coffers-up his gold
Is plagu'd with cramps and gouts and painful fits;
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits;
Having no other pleasure of his gain
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

'So then he hath it when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers;
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
What virtue breeds iniquity devours:
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

'O Opportunity! thy guilt is great,
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason;
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;
'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason;
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits Sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

'Thou mark'st the vestal violate her oath;
Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou smother'st honesty, thou murth'rest troth;
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plantest scandal and displacest laud:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast,
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it, then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

'When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?

807 character'd: inscribed 811 cipher: decipher 812 cote: note, quote 825 attaint: wound to honor 828 crest-wounding: cf. n. 830 mot: cf. n.

848 intrude: invade 850 toads infect: cf. n. 858 Tantalus: cf. n. 859 barns: lays up in a barn 874 ill-annexed: cf. n. 875 Or: either 876, etc. Cf. n. 879 point'st: appointest 892 smoothing: flattering

When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end?
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd?
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd?
  The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;
  But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

'The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds:
  Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murther's rages,
  Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.

'When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
They buy thy help; but Sin ne'er gives a fee,
He gratis comes; and thou art well appaid
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
  My Collatine would else have come to me
  When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by thee.

'Guilty thou art of murther and of theft,
Guilty of perjury and subornation,
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift,
Guilty of incest, that abomination;
An accessary by thine inclination
  To all sins past, and all that are to come,
  From the creation to the general doom.

'Misshapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare;
Thou nursest all, and murthrest all that are;
  O hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time!
  Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

'Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancell'd my fortunes, and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
  To eat up errors by opinion bred,
  Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

'Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,
  To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
  And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs,
  To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
  And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

'To show the beldam daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild,
To mock the subtle, in themselves beguil'd,
  To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
  And waste huge stones with little water-drops.

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends:
  O, this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
  I could prevent this storm and shun thy wrack.

'Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,
  And the dire thought of his committed evil
  Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances
To make him moan, but pity not his moans;
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
  And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
  Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness.

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
  And time to see one that by alms doth live
  Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport;
  And ever let his unrecalling crime
  Have time to wail the abusing of his time.

'O Time! thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill;
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill:
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
  For who so base would such an office have
  As slanderous deathsman to so base a slave?

899 sort: choose 905 pines: hungers 914 appaid: satisfied 920 shift: stratagem 925 copesmate: companion 936 fine: end 942 sentinel: guard

950 cherish: cf. n. 953 beldam: grandmother 956 unicorn: cf. n. 962 retiring: returning 985 orts: refuse 993 unrecalling: irrevocable 1001 slanderous: contemptible deathsman: executioner

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day.
Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

'Out, idle words! servants to shallow fools,
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters;
To trembling clients be you mediators:
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night;
In vain I cavil with my infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite;
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good,
Is to let forth my foul defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die, my honour lives in thee,
But if I live, thou liv'st in my defame;
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afeard to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.'

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death;
But this no slaughter-house no tool imparteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath;
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth
As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life:
I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife:
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife:
So am I now: O no! that cannot be;
Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

'O that is gone for which I sought to live!
And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy.
Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay?

'Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know
The stained taste of violated troth;
I will not wrong thy true affection so,
To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
This bastard graff shall never come to growth;
He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute
That thou art doting father of his fruit.

'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought
Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.
For me, I am the mistress of my fate,
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attaint,
Nor fold my fault in cleanly-coin'd excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses;
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when, lo! the blushing morrow
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow:
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping;
To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eye of eyes!
Why pry'st thou through my window? leave thy peeping;
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping:
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,
For day hath naught to do what's done by night.'

Thus cavils she with everything she sees:
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees:
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild;
Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep-drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues:

1013 grooms: fellows 1021 force: care for 1037 be-tumbled: disordered 1054 badge, livery; cf. n. 1062 graff: graft 1067 interest: property 1070 dispense: put up 1074 sable ground; cf. n. 1079 Philomel; cf. n. 1086 Cf. n. 1094 Cf. n.

Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words;
Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody:
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company;
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd
When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great grief grieves most at what would do it good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows;
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

'You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes entomb
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests:
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair:
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear;
For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
We will find out; and there we will unfold.
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds:
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.'

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is sham'd, and death reproach's debtor.

'To kill myself,' quoth she, 'alack! what were it
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion,
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one, pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy:
Then let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted, shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

'Mine honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead:
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murther shameful scorn;
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd mayst be.
How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

'This brief abridgement of my will I make:
My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take;
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound;
My shame be his that did my fame and confound;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

1114 ken: view 1120 dallied: trifled 1126 Relish: sing 1127 dumps: doleful ditties 1130 dank: damp 1132 diapason; cf. n. 1133 burthen; cf. n. 1134 Tereus; cf. note on 1079 descant'st; cf. n. better skill; cf. n. 1139 Cf. n. 1140 frets; cf. n. 1143 shaming: being ashamed

1155 death reproach's debtor; cf. n. 1157 Cf. n. 1160 conclusion: experiment 1186 deprive: take away 1188-1190 Cf. n. 1196 thy foe; cf. n. 1199 Cf. n.

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will;
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.
Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say, "So be it":
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee:
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.'

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,
With untun'd tongue she hoarsely call'd her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye;
Even so the maid with swelling drops gan wet
Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling;
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling;
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at other's smarts,
And then they drown their eyes or break their hearts:

For men have marble, women waxen minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep:
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd:
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O let it not be hild
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd
With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
Such danger to resistance did belong,
That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining;
'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood:
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went'—and there she stay'd
Till after a deep groan—'Tarquin from hence?'—
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid,
'The more to blame my sluggard negligence:
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense;
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.'
'O! peace,' quoth Lucrece; 'if it should be told,
The repetition cannot make it less;
For more it is than I can well express:
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen:
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say? One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready by and by, to bear
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear:
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill:
Conceit and grief an eager combat fight;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will;
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins: 'Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,

1205 oversee: cf. n. 1206 overseen: deceived 1207 slander: disgrace 1219 demure: modest 1220 Cf. n. 1221 sorts: adapts 1222 For why: because 1234 Cf. n. 1235 justly: with just cause 1247 champaign: flat, open

1257 hild: i.e. held 1261 Cf. n. precedent: proof 1261-1267 Cf. n. 1269 counterfeit: portrait 1272 of my sustaining: which I sustain 1279 dispense: be excused 1298 Conceit: thought 1300 curious-good: well expressed but far-fetched

Health to thy person! next vouchsafe t' afford,
If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see,
Some present speed to come and visit me.
So I commend me from our house in grief:
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief.'

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality:
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her;
When sighs, and groans, and tears may grace the fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter
With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told;
For then the eye interprets to the ear
The heavy motion that it doth behold,
When every part a part of woe doth bear:
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear;
Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste.'
The post attends, and she delivers it,
Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast
As lagging fowls before the northern blast.
Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems:
Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain curtsies to her low;
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll without or yea or no,
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie:
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
Imagine every eye beholds their blame;
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame:

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while other saucily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of the worn-out age
Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blaz'd;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,
And, blushing with him, wistly on him gaz'd;

Her earnest eye did make him more amaz'd:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish,
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
That she her plaints a little while doth stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life;
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
The red blood reek'd, to show the painter's strife;
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioner,
Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth quick bearing and dexterity;
And here and there the painter interlaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces;
Which heartless peasants did so well resemble,
That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
Of physiognomy might one behold!
The face of either cipher'd either's heart;
Their face their manners most expressly told:
In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand,
As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight;
Making such sober action with his hand,
That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the sight.
In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,

1324 Cf. n. 1326 motion: action 1333 attends: waits 1338 homely villain: simple bondman 1342 Cf. n. 1345 silly: rustic 1350 pattern: exemplar 1355 wistly: intently

1366 ff. Cf. n. 1367 painting: cf. n. 1370 annoy: injury 1371 conceited: imaginative 1377 strife: emulation 1380 pioner: sapper 1384 lust: pleasure 1385 observance: observant care 1396 cipher'd: expressed 1400 regard: reflection government: self-command 1403 action: gesture

Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly
Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice;
All jointly listening, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice,
Some high, some low, the painter was so nice;
The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear;
Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red;
Another smother'd, seems to pelt and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand; himself behind,
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind:
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy,
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,
Stood many Troyan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
And to their hope they such odd action yield,
That through their light joy seemed to appear,—
Like bright things stain'd—a kind of heavy fear.

And, from the strand of Dardan, where they fought,
To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges; and their ranks began
To break upon the galled shore, and than
Retire again, till meeting greater ranks
They join and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stell'd.
Many she sees where cares have carved some,
But none where all distress and dolour dwell'd,
Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's reign:
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;
Of what she was no semblance did remain;
Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes:
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong,
To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound,
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue,
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long,
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

'Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many moe?
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe;
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

'Lo! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus swounds,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds:
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,
Troy had been bright with fame and not with fire.'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell:
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell
To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow;
She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament:
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content;
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

1407 purl'd: curled 1414 mock: work illusion in 1417 throng'd: pressed boll'n: swollen 1418 pelt: throw out angry words 1421 debate: fight 1423 compact: well composed kind: natural 1435 stain'd: tarnished 1436 Dardan; cf. n. 1437 Simois; cf. n. 1440 galled: fretted than: then 1444 stell'd: delineated 1450 anatomiz'd: represented minutely 1450, 1451 Cf. n.

1457 shadow: image 1479 moe: more 1486 swounds: swoons 1488 unadvised: unintentional 1497 pencil'd: painted 1501 wretched image; cf. n.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
A brow unbent that seem'd to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming-just,
And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words, like wildfire, burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd;
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill:
And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

'It cannot be,' quoth she, 'that so much guile,'—
She would have said,—'can lurk in such a look';
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot' took:
'It cannot be,' she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus, 'It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind:

'For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
As if with grief or travail he had fainted,
To me came Tarquin armed to beguild
With outward honesty, but yet defil'd
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds!
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls a Troyan bleeds:
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless hell;
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools and make them bold:
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.'

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
'Fool, fool!' quoth she, 'his wounds will not be sore.'

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining:
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent;
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cur'd,
To think their dolour others have endur'd.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company;
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black;
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazedly in her sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw,
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares:
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress.'

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know

1514 entertain'd: kept up 1516 jealousy: suspicion 1523 wildfire: cf. n. 1525 Cf. n. 1526 their glass: cf. n. 1527 advisedly: intently 1544 to beguild: cf. n. 1551 falls: sheds

1585 mourning: cf. n. 1588 water-galls: cf. n. 1593 lively: living 1598 uncouth: unknown 1600 spite: trouble 1602 moody: gloomy 1604 Cf. n. 1606 address'd: ready

Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.
'Few words,' quoth she, 'shall fit the trespass best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amending:
In me moe woes than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

'Then be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow lay
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

'For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature with a flaming light,
And softly cried, "Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

' "For some hard-favour'd groom of thine," quoth he,
"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murther straight, and then I'll slaughter thee,
And swear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be
My fame, and thy perpetual infamy."

'With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
The adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes;
And when the judge is robb'd the prisoner dies.

'O, teach me how to make mine own excuse,
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find:
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless in my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessary yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo! here the helpless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damm'd up with woe,
With sad-set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so:
But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain;
What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast;
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past:
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
More feeling-painful: let it then suffice,
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

'And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past: the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quoth she,— Speaking to those that came with Collatine,—
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design
To chase injustice with revengeful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd:
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. 'O, speak!' quoth she,
'How may this forced stain be wip'd from me?

'What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declined honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again;
And why not I from this compelled stain?'

With this, they all at once began to stay,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns away

1615 depending: imminent 1619 interest: possession 1620 Cf. n. 1645 adulterate: adulterous 1650 scarlet; cf. n. 1655, 1656 Cf. n. 1660 ff. Cf. n.

1672, 1673 Cf. n. 1689-1691 Cf. n. 1697 imposition: command 1706 chance: mischance 1709, 1710 Cf. n.

The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears.
'No, no,' quoth she, 'no dame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name. 'He, he,' she says,
But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not speak;
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this, 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.'

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheath'd:
That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breath'd;
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeath'd
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew;
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw;
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who, like a late-sack'd island, vastly stood,
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood.
Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face,
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece's woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows;
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrefied.

'Daughter, dear daughter!' old Lucretius cries,
'That life was mine which thou hast here depriv'd.
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd?
Thou wast not to this end from me deriv'd.
If children predecease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new born;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-bon'd death by time outworn.
O! from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was.

'O Time! cease thou thy course, and last no longer,
If they surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee!'

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk; but through his lips do throng
Weak words so thick, come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tarquin' was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
Then son and father weep with equal strife
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says, 'She's mine.' 'O! mine she is,'
Replies her husband; 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O!' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.'
'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
I ow'd her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.'
'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours fill'd
The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucrece' life,
Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and 'my wife.'

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly-jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words and uttering foolish things:

1714, 1715 Cf. n. 1720 Untimely: irregular 1732, 1733 Cf. n. 1738 that: so that 1740 vastly: like a waste 1745 rigol: cf. n. 1759 semblance: likeness 1761 death: representation of Death 1766 surcease: cease 1772-1775 Cf. n. 1797 interest: cf. n. 1801 late: recently spill'd: destroyed 1803 ow'd: owned 1809, 1810 Cf. n.

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise;
And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise:
Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
Now set thy long-experienc'd wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
For his foul act by whom they fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds:
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself, that should have slain her foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations;
But kneel with me and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgrac'd,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chas'd.

'Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
And by chaste Lucrece' soul, that late complain'd
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.'

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow:
Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow;
And that deep vow, which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom,
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence;
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

FINIS

1843-1848 Cf. n. 1845 allow: approve 1850, 1851 Cf. n. 1854 plausibly: approvingly

THE PHŒNIX AND THE TURTLE

Let the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,
Foul precurrer of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near.

From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feather'd king:
Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white,
That defunctive music can,
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead;
Phœnix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd, as love in twain
Had the essence but in one;
Two distincts, division none:
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt the turtle and his queen:
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine,
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the phœnix' sight;
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appall'd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was call'd.

1 bird of loudest lay; cf. n. 2 Arabian tree; cf. n. 3 trumpet: trumpeter 5 shrieking harbinger; cf. n. 6 precurrer: forerunner 9 interdict: forbid 10 tyrant wing; cf. n. 14 defunctive: funereal can: knows 15 death-divining; cf. n. 17 treble-dated; cf. n. 18 sable: black; cf. n. 25-28 Cf. n. 29, 30 Cf. n. 32 But: except were: would be; cf. n. 33-36 Cf. n. 37-40 Cf. n.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together;
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded,

That it cried, 'How true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain.'

Whereupon it made this threne
To the phœnix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the phœnix' nest;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:
'Twas not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be;
Beauty brag, but 'tis not she;
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds, sigh a prayer.

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

I

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unskilful in the world's false forgeries.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue,
Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told.

Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me,
Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

II

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still;
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt a saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her fair pride:
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell.
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

III

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;
Then thou, fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,
Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there,—
Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refus'd to take her figur'd proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer:
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:
He rose and ran away; ah! fool too froward.

V

If love make he forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O, never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd!

41 confounded: defeated 42 Cf. n. 43-46 Cf. n. 44 compounded: blended 47, 48 Cf. n. 49 threne: dirge Threnos: dirge 53 rarity: uncommon excellence I: Cf. n. 8 ill rest: poor remnant

II Cf. n. 2 suggest: tempt 11 Cf. n. III Cf. n. IV Cf. n. 9 conceit: understanding 10 figur'd: made by signs V Cf. n.

Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,
Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O! do not love that wrong,
To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

VI

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarriance for Adonis made
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen:
Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
For his approach, that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim:
The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him:
He, spying her, bounc'd in, whereas he stood:
'O Jove,' quoth she, 'why was not I a flood!'

VII

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle;
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she join'd,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coin'd,
Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw outburneth;
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and me,
Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.
Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phœbus' lute, the queen of music, makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign;
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX

Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,
Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild;
Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill:
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds;
She, silly queen, with more than love's good will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds:
'Once,' quoth she, 'did I see a fair sweet youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh,' quoth she, 'here was the sore.'
She showed hers; he saw more wounds than one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

X

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon vaded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely shaded;
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind, before the fall should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why thou left'st me nothing in thy will:
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee,
Thy discontent thou dist bequeath to me.

XI

Venus, with young Adonis sitting by her
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, so fell she to him.
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the warlike god embrac'd me,
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms;
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'the warlike god unlac'd me,'
As if the boy should use like loving charms.
'Even thus,' quoth she, 'he seized on my lips,'
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,

5 bias: natural disposition VI Cf. n. 12 wistly: eagerly VII Cf. n. 5 damask; cf. n. VIII Cf. n.

3 thee; cf. n. 5 Dowland; cf. n. 14 One knight; cf. n. IX Cf. n. X Cf. n. 1 vaded: faded XI Cf. n. 6 clipp'd: embraced 9-12 Cf. n.

And would not take her meaning nor her pleasure.
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I run away.

XII

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together:
Youth is full of pleasure, age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame;
Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame.
Age, I do abhor thee, youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee: O, sweet shepherd, hie thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long!

XIII

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are seld or never found,
As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress,
So beauty blemish'd once 's for ever lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV

Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share:
She bade good night that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.
'Farewell,' quoth she, 'and come again to-morrow:'
Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, nill I conster whether:
'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
'T may be, again to make me wander thither:
'Wander,' a word for shadows like myself,
As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

Lord! how mine eyes throw gazes to the east;
My heart doth charge the watch; the morning rise
Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
And wish her lays were tuned like the lark;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,
And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night:
The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight;
Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow;
For why, she sigh'd and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;
Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day; good day, of night now borrow:
Short night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow.

13 bay: cf. n. XII Cf. n 4 brave: adorned XIII Cf. n. 2 vadeth; cf. X 1 7 seld: seldom XIV Cf. n, 3 daff'd: sent off 4 descant: comment 8 nill: will not conster: construe whether: which of the two 14 Cf. n.

27 moon: month 30 Short: shorten length: lengthen I Cf. n. 1 lording: nobleman 2 master: teacher II Cf. n.

Sonnets to Sundry Notes of Music

I

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,
That liked of her master as well as well might be,
Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a-turning.

Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight:
To put in practice either, alas! it was a spite
Unto the silly damsel.

But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain
That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain,
For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain:
Alas! she could not help it.

Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,
Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away;
Then lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

II

On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, 'gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
'Air,' quoth he, 'thy cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand hath sworn

Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet:
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
Thou for whom Jove would swear
Juno but an Ethiop were;
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortal for thy love.'

III

My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss:
Love's denying,
Faith's defying,
Heart's renying,
Causer of this.
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is plac'd without remove.
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss;
O frowning Fortune! cursed, fickle dame;
For now I see
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.
In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall:
Heart is bleeding,
All help needing,
O cruel speeding,
Fraughted with gall!
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal,
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtal dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
My sighs so deep
Procure to weep,
In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight!

Clear well spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth their dye;
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully:
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass,
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan:
Poor Corydon
Must live alone;
Other help for him I see that there is none.

IV

Whenas thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou should'st strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy, partial wight:
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell;
A cripple soon can find a halt;
But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night;
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,
'Had women been so strong as men,
In faith, you had not had it then.'

And to her will frame all thy ways;
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to choose anew.
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

III Cf. n. 6 defying: rejecting 7 renying: abjuring 26 Fraughted: freighted 29 curtal: having the tail docked

IV Cf. n. 2 stall'd: brought to a standstill 8 filed: polished

Think, women love to match with men
And not to live so like a saint:
Here is no heaven; they holy then
Begin when age doth them attaint.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But, soft! enough! too much, I fear;
For if my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to round me on th' ear
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

V

Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, by whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER

If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move,
To live with thee and be thy love.

VI

As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring;
Everything did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
That to hear it was great pity:
'Fie, fie, fie!' now would she cry;
'Tereu, Tereu!' by and by;
That to hear her so complain,
Scarce I could from tears refrain;
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Made me think upon mine own.
Ah! thought I, thou mourn'st in vain,
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee,
Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee:
King Pandion he is dead,
All thy friends are lapp'd in lead,
All thy fellow birds do sing
Careless of thy sorrowing.
Even so, poor bird, like thee,
None alive will pity me.
Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd,
Thou and I were both beguil'd.
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such-like flattering,
'Pity but he were a king.'
If he be addict to vice,
Quickly him they will entice;
If to women he be bent,
They have him at commandement:
But if Fortune once do frown,
Then farewell his great renown;
They that fawn'd on him before
Use his company no more.
He that is thy friend indeed,
He will help thee in thy need:
If thou sorrow, he will weep;
If thou wake, he cannot sleep:
Thus of every grief in heart
He with thee does bear a part.
These are certain signs to know
Faithful friend from flattering foe.

A Lover's Complaint

From off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintful story from a sistering vale,
My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale;
Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale,

51 round: whisper (?) V Cf. n. 8 madrigals: ditties VI Cf. n. 10 up-till: up against

23 Pandion; cf. n. 24 lapp'd: wrapped 43 addict: addicted 2 sistering: sisterly, neighboring 4 list: listen to

Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcass of a beauty spent and done:
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laund'ring the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometime diverted, their poor balls are tied
To th' orbed earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And true to bondage would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margent she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarch's hands that lets not bounty fall
Where want cries some, but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet moe letters sadly penn'd in blood,
With sleided silk feat and affectedly
Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear;
Cried 'O false blood! thou register of lies,
What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here.'

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh—
Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew—
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew;
And, privileg'd by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'Tis promis'd in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself and to no love beside.

'But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit—it was to gain my grace—
Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face.
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd and newly deified.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find:
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn
What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn.

'Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phœnix down began but to appear
Like unshorn velvet on that termless skin
Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear;
Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear,
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

'His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-tongu'd he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

8 platted ... straw: head covering of plaited straw 15 heave: raise napkin: handkerchief 17 Laund'ring: washing 18 pelleted: formed into pellets 22, 23 Cf. n. 26 lend; cf. n. 31 sheav'd: made of straw 36 maund: hand-basket 45 posied: bearing a motto 48, 49 Cf. n. 48 sleided: sleaved, i.e. separated into filaments feat: neatly affectedly: with overmuch curiosity 50 fluxive: flowing

58 ruffle: turmoil 61 fancy: love-sick maid 64 grained: rough bat: staff 69 ecstasy: transport 91 sawn: sown 94 termless: indescribable 95 bare: nudity 105 livery: clothe in a livery

'Well could he ride, and often men would say
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway,
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he makes!"
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

'But quickly on this side the verdict went:
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for additions; yet their purpose'd trim
Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:

'That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted;
And dialogu'd for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

'Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in the imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouring in more pleasures to bestow them
Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them.

'So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, not in part,
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stalk and gave him all my flower.

'Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desired yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid,
With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks builded
Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

109 rounds, bounds, course, stop; cf. n. 111, 112 Cf. n. 114 habitude: disposition 115 appertainings: belongings 118 additions: marks of distinction 127 in the general bosom: in all the bosoms 132 dialogu'd: expressed 140 owe: possess 144 my own fee-simple; cf. n. 153 foil; cf. n.

'But, ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay;
For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

'Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof;
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite! from judgment stand aloof;
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy last."

'For further I could say "This man's untrue,"
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers of defiling;
Thought characters and words merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

'And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me: "Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to ye sworn to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor ever woo.

' "All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind;
Love made them not: with acture they may be,
Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

' "Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much was warm'd,
Or my affection put to the smallest teen,
Or any of my leisures ever charm'd:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd;
Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

' "Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of pallid pearls and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood,
In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

' "And, lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,

157, 158 Cf. n. 180 That's: that which is 185 acture: action 192 teen: sorrow 204 talents: riches 205 impleach'd: intertwined

I have receive'd from many a several fair,
Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,
With th'annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sonnets, that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

' "The diamond; why, 'twas beautiful and hard,
Whereto his invis'd properties did tend;
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hu'd sapphire and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smil'd or made some moan.

' "Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdu'd desires the tender,
Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render,
That is, to you, my origin and ender;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

' "O, then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise;
Take all these similes to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;
What me, your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

' "Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote;
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

' "But, O my sweet! what labour is 't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives,
Paling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves?
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

' "O, pardon me, in that my boast is true;
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out religion's eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt, all liberty procur'd.

' "How mighty then you are! O, hear me tell:
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

' "My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplin'd, ay, dieted in grace,
Believ'd her eyes when they t' assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

' "When thou impressest, what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears.

' "Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make 'gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath
That shall prefer and undertake my troth."

'This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were levell'd on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow'd apace.
O how the channel to the stream gave grace,
Who glaz'd with crystal gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

'O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear,
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath.

'For, lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv'd my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daft,
Shook off my sober guards and civil fears;
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore,
His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

'In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or swounding paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either's aptness, as it best deceives,

210 nature: properties 212 invis'd: invisible 215 blend: blended 217 blazon'd: explained 219 tender: offer 221 render: surrender 224 Cf. n. 225 phraseless: above praise 229, 230 Cf. n. 231 distract: separated 234 Cf. n. 235 blossoms; cf. n. 236 coat: coat of arms 241 Cf. n. 251, 252 Cf. n.

258 congest: bring together 273 aloes: i.e. bitter experiences 276 supplicant: entreating 279 credent: believing 280 prefer: present 293 cleft effect: twofold result 294 extincture: extinction 297 daft: doffed, put off 303 cautels: wiles

To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swound at tragic shows:

'That not a heart which in his level came
Could scape the hail of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame;
And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would maim:
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim;
When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury,
He preach'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chastity.

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd;
That the unexperient gave the tempter place,
Which like a cherubin above them hover'd.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd?
Ay me! I fell; and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake.

'O that infected moisture of his eye,
O that false fire which in his cheek so glow'd,
O that forc'd thunder from his heart did fly,
O that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow'd,
O all that borrow'd motion seeming ow'd,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!'

FINIS

309 in his level: within his range of fire 318 unexperient: inexperienced 327 seeming ow'd: seemingly his own

Notes

Venus and Adonis

Epigraph. From Ovid, Amores, I. El. xv, 35-36. It is printed on the title page of the original edition. Thus translated by Marlowe: 'Let base conceited wits admire vile things/Fair Phœbus lead me to the Muses' springs.'

Dedicatory Epistle. Henry Wriothesley. Third Earl of Southampton (1573-1624), Shakespeare's patron. He is generally identified with the friend to whom Shakespeare addressed his Sonnets.

3. Rose-cheek'd. This expression is to be found in Marlowe's Hero and Leander (l. 93).

9. Stain. In Elizabethan English the word often meant: 'to surpass,' 'to shame.' Cf. Romeus and Juliet (Shaks. Soc. 77): 'Whose beauty and whose shape so far the rest did stain.' Here used as a noun: the nymphs looked mean compared to Adonis.

11. Nature that made thee, with herself at strife. Nature vied with herself when she created Adonis.

12. the world hath ending with thy life. Should Adonis die, Nature would cease to create other beings.

25. sweating palm. A moist palm was supposed to be the indication of an amorous disposition (cf., further, l. 143, and Othello, III.iv.37-40), whilst a dry hand meant indifference to love.

53. miss. I.e. misdeed. A more usual form was 'amiss.' On this line, cf. Notes and Queries, 10th Ser., vol. IX (1908), pp. 264, 506.

56. Tires. A term of falconry, especially used of hawks tearing their food (from French tirer, to pull).

61. Forc'd to content. Adonis is obliged to bear contentedly what he cannot avoid.

71. rank. Often applied to an overflowing river. Cf. King John, V.iv.55.

82. Till he take truce with her contending tears. Till he cease to resist the assault of tears.

86. dive-dapper. A small water-fowl of the Grebe kind, also called dab-chick or dip-chick.

104. uncontrolled crest. The crest was properly the feathers on the top of a helmet, here used for the helmet itself. Shakespeare means that Mars had never bowed his head before a victorious enemy.

129-132. Make . . . time. Cf. Ovid, Ars Am., III, 59-80.

130. Beauty . . . wasted. Cf. Shakespeare's Sonnets, I-VI.

158. Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left. A way of saying that Adonis is in love with himself.

161. Narcissus. Shakespeare's Adonis has several traits in common with Narcissus.

197,198. And were . . . sun. If Venus were not immortal, she would be consumed between the heavenly fire (the sun) and the earthly fire (Adonis).

203, 204. O, had . . . unkind. An allusion to Myrrha, Adonis's mother. Cf. Sources and Composition, p. 853.

231. deer. A play upon the words 'deer' and 'dear.'

235. relief. Not 'food,' as is generally explained, but 'relievo,' said in topography of all prominence above the ground plan. Cf., further, 'bottom-grass,' 'plain,' 'hillocks.' It was a common-place metaphor in Shakespeare's time.

240. rouse. I.e. 'drive from cover.' A term used in venery, generally applied to the hart or the deer. But Shakespeare loosely uses it for sundry sorts of animals, and even for the owl (cf. Twelfth Night, II.iii.53).

247. Caves. I.e. the dimples on Adonis's cheeks.

259-262. Shakespeare may have derived the idea of this passage from Ovid, Ars Am., II, 487-488: 'In furias agitantur equae spatioque remota/Per loca dividuos amne sequuntur equos.'

263, 264. Cf. Marlowe, Hero and Leander: 'For as a hot proud horse highly disdains/To have his head controll'd, but breaks the reins,/Spits forth the ringled bit, and with his hoves/Checks the submissive ground.'

279. Curvets. A term of the manege or science of equitation. A 'curvet' is a movement made by a horse, when he raises his fore legs together, and then, while he is bringing them down, raises his hind legs without touching the ground.

286. Caparisons or trapping. Richly embroidered dresses and embellishments used in decorating horses, especially in tourneys and jousts.

289-292. Possibly an allusion to Nicon, 'the famous painter of Greece,' who, according to Topsell (Fourfooted Beasts, 222), 'when he had most curiously limbed a horses perfection, and failed in no part of nature or art, but only in placing hairs under his eye, for that only fault he received a disgraceful blame.' (Quoted by Pooler.)

295-298. Round-hoofed, etc. Several sources have been proposed for the description of the points of a fine horse: Sylvester's translation of Du Bartas, Blundevill's Arte of Ryding, Googe's Foure Books of Husbandry, Topsell's Four-footed Beasts. Prof. Carleton Brown (The Library, 3rd Ser., No. 10, vol. III, 182 ff.) has shown that for such descriptions there was a long literary tradition going back to Roman and Greek times. Cf. Dodge (Neil), Modern Philology, IX, 211 ff.; Law (R. A.) Modern Lang. Notes, XXVIII, 93.

303. To bid the wind a base. He prepares to challenge the wind to strive for superiority in speed. From the game 'base' or 'prisoner's base.' 'To bid base' was a frequent locution. Cf. Two Gentlemen of Verona, I.ii.104.

329-336. Cf. Lodge, Glaucus and Scylla: 'Themis that knewe that waters long restrained/Breake foorth with greater billowes than the brookes/That swetely float through meades with floures distained,/With cheerefull laies did raise his heavie lookes;/And bad him speake and tell what him agreev'd:/For griefes disclos'd (said she) are soone releev'd.'

335. Heart's attorney. I.e. the tongue. In Richard III (IV.iv.130) words are compared to 'windy attorneys in their client woes.'

342. For all askance he holds her in his eye. He looks at her sideways, watching her movements all the time.

359, 360. These two lines are given as a proof that the poem was written not at Stratford, but when Shakespeare was already familiar with the life of the theatres. A dumb play, or dumb show, was a scene in a tragedy shown pantomimically and representing parts of the story which could not be included, or sometimes giving a summary of the action which was to follow. Chorus, a character in the old English drama, who presented or commented upon the tragedy.

367. Engine of her thoughts. This description of the tongue occurs also in Titus Andronicus, III.i.83: 'that delightful engine of her thoughts.'

370. My heart . . wound. Were my heart as whole as thine and thy heart wounded like mine.

375. steel. With probably a pun on 'steel' (harden) and 'steal' (rob).

397. naked bed. This expression seems to have been common in the sixteenth century. Its meaning has not been satisfactorily explained. Here the phrase evidently means 'lying naked in bed.'

412. My love to love is love but to disgrace it. The only love I bear to love is a strong inclination to disgrace it.

424. alarms. Or alarums, signals by which soldiers were warned to take arms.

433-450. Had I . . . feast. Wyndham compares this passage with Chapman's Ovid's Banquet of Sense (1595).

472. Fair fall the wit. May prosperity befall the wit, etc.

478. To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd. 'A mixture of two phrases, (1) to mend the hurt that his unkindness caused, and (2) to mend what was marred by his unkindness, i.e. to restore her consciousness or colour' (Pooler).

482. windows. Shakespeare uses the word both in the sense of 'eye' (Love's Labour's Lost, V.ii.880), and of 'eyelid' (Antony and Cleopatra, V.ii.364).

506. liveries. A livery (Fr. livrée) was the distinctive dress worn by the servants and dependants in the household of a nobleman.

507-510. their verdure, etc. 'The poet evidently alludes to a practice of his own age, when it was customary, in time of the plague, to strew the rooms of every house with rue and other strong-smelling herbs, to prevent infection' (Malone). There was an outbreak of the plague in August, 1592, and the infection lasted until the spring of 1594. During most of that time the plays were under restraint and the theatres closed. This allusion has been used as a clue to the date of composition of Venus and Adonis.

515. Slips. It has been supposed that there is a reference to the sense of 'counterfeit money.' It is true that 'slip' sometimes means a 'counterfeit coin,' but the context shows that here 'slip' is taken in its ordinary sense of 'error.' Adonis is making a purchase, and a deed is, therefore, to be drawn; and for fear there should be some omission or error which might be invoked as a cause of non-execution, Adonis will set his seal (i.e. his lips) to the legal instrument (Venus's lips) as a token of performance (cf. line 521).

516. wax-red. The seal was impressed on wax affixed to the document.

529. the world's comforter. I.e. the sun. Cf., above, l. 484.

565, 566. Cf. Lyly, Euphues (Bond's ed., I, 187): 'The tender youth of a childe is like the temperinge of new wax apt to receive any form.'

589, 590. Cf. Lodge, Glaucus and Scylla: 'An yvorie shadowed front, . . ./Next which her cheekes appeerd like crimson silk,/Or ruddie rose bespred on whitest milk.'

598. Manage. Or manege, a term of horsemanship = to train a horse to graceful motions, 'regere et gubernare, proprie est equisonum qui solent equos refractarios, orisque immorigeri, hoc modo domare, fraenoque obsequentes reddere' (Minsheu).

601. painted grapes. An allusion to the anecdote reported of Zeuxis by Pliny:

'Zeuxis for proof of his cunning brought upon the scaffold a table, wherein were clusters of grapes so lively painted, that the very birds of the air flew flocking thither for to be pecking at the grapes' (Holland's Pliny, II, 535).

608. assay'd . . . prov'd. These words have the same meaning, that of putting a metal to the test. There is besides a play on the word prove = 'to test' and 'to feel.'

615-618. O be advis'd . . . kill. Cf. Ovid, Met., X, 544-549; 705-707.

619-630. On his . . . rushes. Cf. Ovid, Met., VIII, 284-289; 294-295.

626. Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter. Are too strong (as an armor tested) for the point of thy spear to enter.

631. Cf. Ovid, Met., X, 547-548.

652. Kill, kill. The cry formerly uttered by the English soldiers when they made an onset.

673-678. But if . . hounds. Cf. Ovid, Met., X, 537-539.

673-708. See Sources and Composition, p. 853.

683. Musits, or musets, are gaps in a hedge through which the hare is accustomed to pass; also the form where the hare hides (cf. French musse).

685-688. Sometime . . . yell. Cf. Turberville, Booke of Hunting (Clarendon Press ed., 165): 'And I have seen hares oftentimes runne into a flocke of sheepe in the field when they are hunted, and would never leave the flocke, until I was forced to couple up my houndes, and fold up the sheepe or sometimes drive them to the cote; and then the hare would forsake them . . . I have seene that would take the grounde like a coney.' (Quoted by Pooler.)

693, 694. Till they have singled With much ado the cold fault cleanly out. Till they have with great difficulty distinguished the scent of the animal they hunt from the scent of other animals and thus have corrected the fault they made (a dog is then said to be 'at fault') in losing the scent.

695. spend their mouths. A technical term of the chase, 'give tongue.' The same phrase occurs in Henry V, II.iv.74, and Troilus and Cressida, V.i.88.

696. As if another chase were in the skies. Cf. Titus Andronicus, II.iii.17-19.

697-699. By this . . . still. When the hare 'hath left both hunters and dogs a great way behinde her, she getteth to some hill or rising of the earth, there she raiseth herself upon her hinder legs, like a watchman in his tower, observing how far or near the enemy approacheth' (Topsell, Four-footed Beasts, 211).

701, 702. And now . . . passing-bell. When the hare 'can go no more, needs must her weakness betray her to her foe, and so was her flight and want of rest like a sickness begun before her death, an the Foxes presence like the voyce of a passing-bell' (Topsell, Four-footed Beasts, 210).

704. indenting. Following a meandering course comparable to the indented line in which the duplicates of a legal document were cut out to make them tally with each other. Topsell has (p. 212): 'The dogs run along with a gallant cry, turning over the doubtful steps; now one way, now another (like the cuts of Indentures, through rough and plain, crooked and straight. . . .'

720. In night . . . desire sees best of all. Cf. Marlowe, Hero and Leander. 'Dark night is Cupid's day.'

725. cloudy. Has here the double meaning of 'covered with clouds' and 'gloomy.'

726. forsworn. Since she had vowed to remain chaste.

730. moulds. The mould in which Adonis was cast, when he was created.

751. fruitless chastity. Cf. Marlowe, Hero and Leander. 'A fruitless cold virginity.''

757, 758. What . . . posterity. Cf. Sonnet 3, 7–8. Note the strange rime of posterity with obscurity. It is discussed by Neil Dodge, 'An Obsolete Elizabethan Mode of Rhyming,' Shakespeare Studies (University of Wisconsin), 1916.

768. But gold that's put to use more gold begets. Cf. Marlowe, Hero and Leander. 'Then treasure is abused/When misers keep it: being put to loan/In time it will return us two for one.'

828. discovery. Adonis has just been compared (l. 815) to a bright star shooting from the sky; Venus, therefore, remains 'confounded' in the dark, having lost the fair light which might have helped her to find out her way.

848. parasites. Those sounds being but echoes to her lamentations seem to flatter her obsequiously.

854. cabinet. A diminutive of 'cabin,' a small hut. On this line cf. Notes and Queries, 10th Ser., vol. V (January-June, 1906), p. 465; vol. IX (1908), p. 505; vol. X, p. 166.

877. at a bay. (French aux abois), a term of venery, said of the hounds when they have hunted down their game and bay at it; the expression is also used of the hunted animal when it is obliged to stop and face the hounds.

883, 884. For now . . . proud. Cf. Ovid, Met., X, 539-541.

888. strain courtesy. The expression means either 'exhibit courtesy reluctantly,' 'fall short of courtesy,' or, on the contrary, 'to be courteous beyond the proper extent.' Here the latter meaning is perferable. Each dog displays an eagerness to let the others go first.

889. cry. A term of venery, used of the hounds when they bay. Cf. 'full cry.'

891, 892. Who, overcome, etc. 'Her heart overwhelmed with fears withdraws the blood from the limbs, and they in turn refuse their office' (Pooler).

920. flap-mouth'd. Having loose, hanging-down lips,—a characteristic point in a swift hound.

933. worm. Some commentators give to the word the meaning of 'serpent,' which it sometimes has in Elizabethan English. But is not death naturally associated with the idea of worms?

947. golden arrow. Cupid was supposed to have golden arrows to inspire love and leaden ones for disdained lovers.

933. call'd him all to naught. Called him a worthless person.

1013. trophies. Monuments erected in memory of some victory.

1027. lure. A piece of flesh with feathers attached to it, in manner of a bird, used by falconers to recall (or reclaim) a hawk.

1028. The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light. Cf. Virgil, Æneid, VII, 808-809: 'Illa vel intactae segetis per summa volaret/Gramina nec teneras cursu læsisset aristas.'

1064. That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three. Cf. 3 Henry VI, II.i.25: 'Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?'

1110. He thought . . . him so. Malone compares this passage with a poem 'De Adoni ab apro interempto,' by Minturno, in which the wound made by the boar is represented as an awkwardly given kiss: 'Ingens me miserum libido capit/Mille suavia dulcia hine capere,/Atque me impulit ingens indomitus.' The idea is from Theocritus.

1115, 1116. And nuzzling, etc. Cf. Ovid, Met., X, 715, 716.

1127. Coffer-lids. Or lids to coffers, treasure-chests. Possibly cover-lid, or coverlet (French couvrelit, the covering of a bed).

1148. Measures. A dance, more particularly a stately kind of dance with slow, measured steps. Cf. Much Ado, II.i.64, 65, where it is said to be 'mannerly-modest' and 'full of state and ancientry.'

1168. Purple flower. According to the legend, Adonis was metamorphosed to an anemone, also called Adonis. Cf. Ovid, Met., X, 731-739.

1193. Paphos. A city on the west coast of Cyprus. Venus was said to have landed there when she was born from the sea foam.

Lucrece

The Argument

1-7. It is to be noted that the poem contains nothing corresponding to this part of the argument.

1. Lucius Tarquinius . . . Superbus. The last legendary king of Rome (534-510 B.C.). His tyrannical ways and the outrage of his son upon Lucretia caused the people to revolt and led to the expulsion of the Tarquins.

6. Ardea. An ancient city of Latium, about twenty-four miles south of Rome, one of the most wealthy in that part of Italy.

11. Collatinus. L. Tarquinius, the son of Egerius, resided in the town of Collatia; hence his surname of Collatinus. He was cousin to Tarquinius Superbus, and after the dethronement of the latter he was elected one of the consuls.

26. dispatcheth messengers, etc. In the poem, Lucrece sends only one messenger, to her husband.

28. Junius Brutus. Lucius Junius, after his father's death, to escape being murdered by Tarquinius Superbus, feigned madness, whence his surname of Brutus.

29. Publius Valerius. Surnamed Publicola. He took a prominent part in the dethronement of the Tarquins and was the colleague of Brutus in the consulship.

4. Collatium. I.e. Collatia, a city of Latium, about ten miles east of Rome.

8,9. Haply . . . appetite. Wyndham compares Ovid, Fasti, ii, 765: 'Verba placent, et vox, et quod corrumpere non est:/Quoque minor spes est, hoc magis ille cupit.' But Shakespeare's text is nearer Livy's: 'Cum forma tum spectata castitas incitat.'

14. aspects. The position of the stars or planets with respect to one another.

26. An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun. Cf. Daniel, Rosamonde (249): 'Cancelled with Time, will have their date expired.'

47. liver. In Shakespeare's days, the liver was supposed to be the seat of love or desire. Cf. Much Ado, IV.i.239: 'If ever love had interest in his liver.' Also, Twelfth Night, II.iv.105.

49. spring. Two meanings are possible: 1, a too early spring is blighted by the cold and cannot grow old; 2, premature shoots (springs) are blighted by the cold and therefore cannot grow. The former is preferable.

52-70. Within whose face beauty and virtue striv'd, etc. This passage describes the contention between Beauty and Virtue in terms of heraldry, red being identified with 'or' or gold and white with silver (more properly 'argent'), two of the metals employed in blazonry. The sense can be paraphrased as follows: At sight of Tarquin, Lucrece changed color several times, her cheeks being by turns red and white (cf. ll. 257-259). When Virtue, whose color is white, appeared to be dominant (bragged), Beauty blushed; but, then, Virtue was jealous and tried to surpass (stain) the 'or' of those blushes with the silver of her paleness. Beauty, who considered she had a right (intituled) to white, then claimed a field silver from Venus's doves. As a retort, Virtue claimed Beauty's red, to which she had also a right, for she had given it to the golden age that men, in that virtuous age, might display it combined with silver on their shield, the shield to be used as a defensive armor when shame assailed.

67. minority. Cf. 'golden age' at l. 60. From the days when the world was still young, Beauty and Virtue have thus asserted their rights.

72. field. A play on the double meaning of the word: 1, field, heraldic term; 2, field of battle.

82. owe. Because he had been a niggard in his praise he had not given the full sum of commendation which he ought to have paid.

88. lim'd. Caught by bird-lime. Steevens appositely cites 3 Henry VI, V.vi.13, 14: 'The bird that hath been limed in a bush/With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush.'

104, 105. Nor . . . light. 'Lucrece could see that Tarquin was looking, but not what his looks meant' (Pooler).

106-112. He stories, etc. Gower (Confessio Amantis) also makes Collatinus the subject of Tarquin's conversation with Lucrece.

117-119. Till sable . . . Day. Cf. Daniel, Rosamonde: 'Night (mother of sleepe and feare)/Who with her sable mantle friendly covers/The sweet-stolne sport of ioyfull meeting lovers' (439).

120-123. For . . . questioned. Cf. Livy: 'Cum post cenam in hospitale cubiculum deductus esset.'

135, 136. That what, etc. This passage has been much emended. Quartos 5 to 8 have 'That oft, what'; Staunton conjectured 'For what'; Nicholson, 'That while.' The quarto reading, though not very clear, yields, however, an acceptable sense: Those that covet much are so foolish that they scatter what they have not as well as that which they possess, for in their hope to get more they spend beyond their power.

138-140. Or, gaining more, etc. If they succeed in getting more, all their profit is but to have more than is necessary, and to experience the griefs that go with fortune, so that, in the end, in this valueless gain they really are bankrupt.

150-152. And this . . . we have. 'Rich men suffering from the disease of ambition are tortured by the thought that they are destitute of what they have, viz. abundance' (Pooler).

187, 188. Then looking . . lust. 'He despises his naked or defenceless protection from Lust, now still and slaughtered by Fear' (Wyndham).

197-210. Cf. Chaucer, Legend of Good Women (1822-1824): 'Why hastow doon dispite to chevalrye?/Why hastow doon thys lady vylanye?/Allas, of thys was a vilenous deede!'

206, 207. Some loathsome . . . dote. In heraldry there exist special marks of disgrace, called 'abatements,' to denote some 'ungentleman-like, dishonorable, disloyal demeanour, quality or stain in the bearer, whereby the dignity of the Coat-armour' is 'greatly abased' (Guillim, Display of Heraldry). They consist of 'diminution and reversing; the first is the blemishing some particular point of the escutcheons by sanguine and tenny [orange], which are stains. Reversing signifies some parts of the charge backward or upside down' (Pinnock's Catechism of Heraldry). The figures used for 'abatements of honour' were not of metal, but 'tinged or coloured' either tenny or sanguine.

245. painted cloth. Pieces of canvas painted in oil and sued for hangings in Elizabethan houses. They were often painted with Scripture incidents and ornamented with mottoes or moral sentences. (Cf. 1 Henry IV, IV.ii.22; Troilus and Cressida, V.x.46.)

265. Narcissus. Cf. note on Venus and Adonis, 161.

278. My part is youth, and beats these from the stage. probably an allusion to some morality play—such as Lusty Juventus—now lost.

318. rushes. In old days it was customary to strew the rooms with rushes for carpets.

341. So from himself impiety hath wrought. 'His sin has made him so unlike himself' (Pooler).

342. Prey to pray. 'A jingle not less disgusting occurs in Ovid's narrative of the same event (Fasti, ii, 787) "Hostis, ut hospes, init penetralia Collatina" ' (Steevens).

356. eye of Heaven. The sun. Cf. Richard II, I.iii.277; III.ii.37.

365. stalks. So Chaucer, Legend of Good Women (l. 1781): 'And in the night ful thefely gan he stalke.'

386-395. Her lily hand, etc. Sir John Suckling has a poem entitled 'A Supplement of an imperfect copy of verses of Mr Wil. Shakespears' (ed. W. C. Hazlitt, I, 27), the first lines of which are, with certain variants, lines 386-395 of Shakespeare's Lucrece. The beginning of the poem runs as follows:

One of her hands, one of her cheeks lay under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kisse,
Which therefore swel'd and seem'd to part asunder,
As angry to be rob'd of such a blisse:
The one lookt pale, and for revenge did long,
Whilst t'other blush't, cause it had done the wrong.

2

Out of the bed the other fair hand was
On a green satin quilt, whose perfect white
Lookt like a Dazie in a field of grasse
And shewed like unmelt snowe unto the sight*
There lay this pretty perdue, safe to keep
The rest o th'body that lay fast asleep.

Thus far Shakespeare.*

As we have no reason to suspect Suckling's statement that he had an imperfect copy of Shakespeare's verses, and as several lines differ from the corresponding lines in the authentic version, we may admit that Shakespeare had contemplated writing his Lucrece in the six-line stanza of Venus and Adonis, but that, for some unknown reason, after having tried a stanza or so, he rejected it and adopted the seven-line stanza. (Cf. B. Nicholson, Notes and Queries, 1884, June 7, p. 444.)

397. marigolds. The marigold was the emblem of constancy in affection and was said 'to go to bed with the sun' (Winter's Tale, IV.iv.121).

400. golden threads. Ovid speaks of Lucrece's 'flavi capilli.' Chaucer has 'yellow heer.'

407-409. Her breasts . . . knew. Cf. Ovid, Fasti, ii, 803-804: "positis urguentur pectora palmis,/Tune primum externa pectora tacta manu.'

417. tir'd. Cf. note on Venus and Adonis, 56.

437-439. His hand . . . breast. Compare Livy's 'sinistra manu mulieris pectore oppresso' with Ovid's 'positis urguentur pectora palmis.'

459. antics. Grotesques, or fantastic forms.

476, 477, 481. colour. A play on the different meanings of the word: pretext, hue, standard.

477-504. Shakespeare may have found the idea of Tarquin's speech in Livy: 'Tum Tarquinius fateri amorem, orare, miscere precibus minas, versare in omnes partes muliebrem animum.' Ovid has only: 'Instat amans hostis precibus pretioque minisque' (805).

477-511. Cf. Ovid, Fasti, ii, 803, and Chaucer, Legend of Good Women, ll. 1790 ff.

492. I know what thorns the growing rose defends. Cf. Daniel, Rosamonde: 'The ungather'd Rose defended with the thornes' (217).

509. falchion. A play upon the words falchion and falcon (cf. above, l. 506).

511. falcon's bells. Falconers fastened bells, often made of silver, to the legs of their hawks or falcons.

522. nameless bastardy. Malone compares Two Gentlemen of Verona, III.i.310, 311: 'bastard vertues, that indeed know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.'

537. Worse than a slavish wipe. 'More disgraceful than the brand with which slaves were marked' (Malone).

540. cockatrice. Or basilisk. 'The cockatrice slayeth also all thing that hath life, with breath and with sight. In his sight no fowl nor bird passeth harmless, and though he be far from the fowl, yet it is burnt and devoured by his mouth' (Bartholomew's De Propriet. rerum, translated by Trevisa, Bk. xviii, §8).

556. vulture folly. Cf. Daniel, Rosamonde: 'vulture ambition' (27).

565-567. She puts . . . speaks. Steevens compares Midsummer Night's Dream, V.i.100: 'Make periods in the midst of sentences,/Throttle their practised accent in their fears,/And in conclusion dumbly have broke off.'

596-630. Cf. Chaucer, Legend of Good Women (1819-1821): 'Tarquinius, thou art a Kynges eyre,/And sholdest, as by lynage and by right,/Doon as a lorde and as a verray knyght.'

677. The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries. Cf. Ovid, Fasti, ii, 800: 'Sed tremit ut quondam stabulis deprensa relictis/Parva, sub infesto cum jacet agna lupo,' and Chaucer, Legend, l. 1798: 'Right as a wolf that fynt a lamb alone,/To whom shall she compleyne or make mone?'

703. receipt. What he has received, as in Coriolanus, I.i.97, 98: 'the mutinous parts/That envied his receipt' (said of the belly).

766. Black stage. In the Elizabethan system of staging they often used black hangings as an appropriate setting for tragedies. Cf. 1 Henry VI, I.i.1; Warning for Fair Women, Ind. 74; Insatiate Countess (Marston), IV.v.4.

828. crest-wounding. Bringing dishonor to the crest. In heraldry the crest is the ornament of a helmet.

830. mot. I.e. motto, a sentence (generally written on a scroll) above or under an escutcheon.

850. toads infect. 'A toad is a manner venomous frog, and dwelleth both in water and land . . . his venom is accounted most cold and stonieth' (Bartholomew, De Propriet. rerum, Bk. xviii, §17).

858. Tantalus. A legendary king of Lydia, who was afflicted in Hades with eternal hunger and thirst.

874. ill-annexed Opportunity. I.e. opportunity with its evil adjuncts.

876 ff. O Opportunity, etc. All this passage seems to have been strongly influenced by Spenser's Fairy Queen. Compare, for instance, the personification of Occasion in Bk. ii, canto iv.

950. cherish. Warburton proposed as an emendation 'tarish' (from French tarir), dry up. Other commentators give to 'springs' the meaning of 'shoots,' in which case 'cherish' means 'nurture,' 'foster.' But in the whole passage Time is shown as destroying everything.

956. unicorn. 'It is a beast of an untameable nature' (Topsell, Four-footed Beasts, 557). 'An unicorn is a right cruel beast, and hath that name, for he hath in the middle of the forehead an horn of four foot long' (Bartholomew, De Propriet. rerum, Bk. xviii, 90).

1054. badge. The badge was a piece of cloth or of silver with the arms of a nobleman worn on the left sleeve by his servants or dependents. For 'livery' cf. note on Venus and Adonis, 506.

1074. sable ground. The ground, or field, is the surface of a shield on which are represented the ensigns armorial composing a coat of arms. 'Sable' is the heraldic term for black.

1079. Philomel. A daughter of King Pandion, who, being dishonored by her brother-in-law, Tereus, was metamorphosed into a nightingale (or swallow).

1086. Revealing day through every cranny spies. On this line see Notes and Queries, 11th Ser., vol. IV (1911), p. 243.

1094. True grief is fond and testy as a child. On this line see W. Cairns, in Literature (London), July 29, 1899, vol. V, p. 111.

1132. diapason. An air sounding in exact concord, i.e. in octaves.

1133. burthen. The burden was a musical figure which consisted in repeating the theme throughout the song, in the bass, and continuing when the singer of the air paused. Then it came to mean simply, as here, the bass or undersong.

1134. descant'st. 'To descant: to play or sing an air in harmony with a fixed theme' (N.E.D.).

better skill. I.e. with better skill. So Malone and others. But Wyndham explains more subtly: 'Shakespeare, here, as ever, exhibits a complete grasp of technical terms. He makes Lucrece contrast her sad, monotonous accompaniment of groans—humming on Tarquin still—with the treble descant of the nightingale, complaining in a higher register and with more frequent modulations of the wrong wrought her by Tereus, according to Ovid's tale. The one he compares to a single droning base, chiefly in the diapason or lower octave; the other to the "better skill" or more ingenious artifice of a contrapuntal melody scored above it.'

1139. Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die. I.e. and my heart, if my eye wink, shall fall on the knife and die.

1140. frets. Pieces of wire, or wood, fixed on the finger board of guitars and other similar instruments serving to regulate the fingering.

1155. death reproach's debtor. Death alone can discharge the debt to infamy and thus acquit Lucrece.

1157. But with my body my poor soul's pollution. It would be only adding the pollution of the soul to the pollution of the body.

1188-1190. So of . . . new-born. Like the Phœnix which was supposed to rise again from its own ashes.

1196. thy foe. Because she has brought shame upon him.

1199. My soul and body, etc. The formula usually used at the beginning of a will.

1205. oversee. The overseers of a will were persons appointed to see that the intentions of the deceased were correctly carried out. Note the play upon the word at the following line.

1220. With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty. Cf. Lear, V.iii.322, 323, of Cordelia: 'Her voice was ever soft,/Gentle, and low,—an excellent thing in woman.'

1234. Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling. Shakespeare was probably thinking of some fountain. Cf. As You Like It, IV.i.133.

1261. The precedent whereof in Lucrece view. Cf. Daniel, Rosamonde: 'The president whereof presented to my view' (414).

1261-1267. Cf. Chaucer, Legend of Good Women (ll. 1814-1818): 'That, what for fere of sklaundre and drede of dethe./She lost att ones bothe wytte and brethe;/And in a swowgh she lay, and woxe so ded,/Men myghten smyten of hir arme or hed,/She feleth nothinge, neither foule ne feyre.'

1324. To see sad sights moves more than hear them told. Cf. Horace, Ars Poet., 180-181: 'Segnius irritant animos demissa per aurem/Quam quae sunt oculis subjecta fidelibus.'

1342. But they, etc. On this line see Notes and Queries, 1874, May 2, p. 343; June 20, p. 484.

1366 ff. At last, etc. In Virgil, Æneid, I, 454-493, Æneas similarly views scenes from the fall of Troy depicted in a temple of Carthage.

1367. Painting. Commentators suppose that Shakespeare had in mind not a picture but a hanging, or painted cloth. Nothing in the text bears out such a supposition.

1436. Dardan. An adjective applied to Troy, so called after Dardanus.

1437. Simois. A river which flows from Mount Ida, and joins the river Scamander in the plain of Troy.

1450, 1451. In her . . . reign. Cf. Daniel, Rosamonde: 'Reade in my face the ruines of my youth/The wracke of yeeres upon my aged brow' (253-254).

1501. wretched image. I.e. Sinon, a son of Ætinus (or of Sisyphus). He mutilated himself and allowed himself to be taken prisoner by the Trojans, in order to facilitate the introduction of the wooden horse, full of Greeks, into the city of Troy.

1523. wildfire. A pyrotechnical composition, burning even under water, and analogous to Greek fire.

1525. And little stars shot from their fixed places. Cf. Virgil, Æneid, ii, 693-696: 'De caelo lapsa per umbras/Stella facem ducens multa cum luce cucurrit./Illam, summa super labentem culmina tecti,/Cernimus.' The whole passage is strongly reminiscent of the second book of the Æneid.

1526. their glass. I.e. the burnished roof of Priam's palace, which reflected the stars.

1544. armed to beguild. So all the quartos, 'beguild' having the meaning of 'to cover as with gold.' Perhaps we should read 'to-beguil'd,' all disguised.

1585. mourning. Cf. Ovid, Fasti, ii, 817-818: 'Utque vident habitum, quae luctus causa, requirunt/Cui paret exequias.' Also in Chaucer, Legend, ll. 1829 ff., and in Bandello (Bk. ii, nov. XXI). This detail is not in Livy.

1588. water-galls. A watery appearance in the sky, looked upon as a presage of stormy weather.

1604. Three times. Cf. Ovid, Fasti, ii, 823: 'Ter conata loqui, ter destitit.'

1620. A stranger . . . lay. Cf. Livy: 'Vestigia viri alieni in lecto sunt tuo.'

1650. Scarlet lust. Tarquin being the judge is clad in scarlet, hence the epithet is applied to his lust that plays the part of a witness.

1655, 1656. Though . . . my mind. Cf. Livy: 'Ceterum corpus est tantum violatum, animus insons.' This is not in Ovid.

1660 ff. Cf. the King's lamentations in Daniel's Rosamonde (ll. 792 ff.).

1672, 1673. Even . . . draw. 'His sighs make a saw, the tool so called, of his sorrows by pushing grief forwards and drawing it back again; i.e. his sighs gave him only momentary relief, a repetition of ll. 1663-1666, he sighs away his grief and drinks it up again' (Pooler).

1689-1691. Speaking . . . mine. Cf. Livy: 'Sed date dextras fidemque, haud impune adultero fore . . . si vos viri estis, . . . dant ordine omnes fidem.' Ovid has only: 'Hoe quoque Tarquinio debebimus' (825).

1709, 1710. With this . . . clears. Cf. Livy: 'Consolantur aegram animi . . . mentem peccare, non corpus.' This is not in Ovid.

1714, 1715. No, no . . . giving. Cf. Livy, thus translated in Paynter's Palace of Pleasure: 'As for my part, though I cleare myself of the offence, my body shall feel the punishment: for no unchast or ill woman shall hereafter impute no dishonest act to Lucrece.' This is not in Ovid.

1732, 1733. Cf. Ovid, Fasti (ii, 833-834): 'Ecce super corpus communia damna gementes/Obliti decoris, virque paterque jacent.'

1745. rigol. Generally explained 'circle,' a ring, and compared with 2 Henry IV, IV.v.37, where the crown is called 'this golden rigol.' Malone cites Nashe (Lenten Stuff): 'the ringol or ringed circle was compact and chalkt out.' But 'ringol' (German, ringel, ring) is not 'rigol.' I am inclined to believe that we have here a word connected with the French 'rigole,' which means a small channel for water, also a rivulet (cf. Low Latin 'rigora,' 'rigulus' and Italian 'rigolo,' scanalatura).

1772-1775. Cf. note to 1732, 1733.

1797. sorrow's interest. Wyndham compares Sonnet XXXI: 'How many a holy and obsequious tear/Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye/As interest of the dead.'

1809, 1810. Began . . . to show. See note on Argument, 29.

1843-1848. And kissed . . . swore. Cf. Livy: 'Cultrum deinde Collatino tradit, inde Lucretio ac Valerio, stupentibus miraculo rei, unde novum in Bruti pectore ingenium. Ut præceptum erat, jurant.' This is not in Ovid.

1850, 1851. They did . . . Rome. This is neither in Ovid nor in Livy. Chaucer (Legend, ll. 1861-1866) has: 'Of hir had al the toun of Rome routhe . . ./And openly let cary her, on a bere/Through al the toun.'

The Phœnix and the Turtle

1. the bird of loudest lay. It is possible that Shakespeare was thinking of the crane which Chaucer mentions in Parlement of Foules (l. 344), 'the crane, the geaunt, with his trompes soune.'

2. Arabian tree. The date-palm (Greek φοῖνιξ) which the bird phœnix occupied, hence its name. Cf. Tempest, III.iii.29, 30.

5. shrieking harbinger. The screech-owl, which foretells evil and death. Cf. Chaucer, Parlement, l. 342, 'The oule eeke, that of the dethe the bode bringeth.' Cf. Midsummer Night's Dream, II.ii.6-8.

10. tyrant wing. I.e. birds of prey. Chaucer, Parlement, l. 334, says of the eagle: 'Ther was the tyraunt with his fethers donne.'

15. death-divining. It was an ancient belief that the swan sang just before his death. Chaucer, Parlement, has: 'The Ialous swan, ayens his deth that singeth.' Cf. King John, V.vii.21, 22, and Othello, V.ii.292, 293.

17. treble-dated crow. The crow, on account of his black color, was a suitable mourner. The crow was believed to live three times three human lives. 'Cornicum ut secla vetusta/Ter tres aetates humanas garrula vincit/Cornix' (Lucretius, V, 1053). The crow was also symbolic of conjugal concord (cf. Alciati, Emblem 38). Hence his presence among the mourners of the faithful pair.

18, 19. Thy sable gender . . . tak'st. Probably an allusion to the notion that the raven does not 'conceive by conjunction of male and female, but rather by a kind of billing at the mouth which Pliny (x, 12) mentions as an opinion of the common people' (Swans's Speculum Mundi, 1665, p. 397. Quoted by Halliwell.). Two crows were often represented by emblem writers with their bills fast locked one in the other, which probably suggested the idea of conceiving by giving and taking breath.

25-28. So they loved . . . was slain. Though the lovers were two, so complete was their union that they looked as if they were one in essence; each was distinct from the other, and yet there was no division between them; in their love the very notion of number was annihilated.

29, 30. Hearts . . . seen. This stanza develops the same idea as the preceding one. Though their hearts were remote, because belonging to two different persons, yet they were united; there was a distance between them, since remote, but no space, that is, no division.

32. But . . . wonder. 'So extraordinary a phenomenon as "hearts remote" yet "not asunder" would have excited admiration had it been found anywhere else except in these two birds. In them it was not wonderful' (Malone).

33-36. So . . . mine. Their love shone so bright that the turtle could see his right, that is, the love due to him, all a-blaze in the ardent eyes of the phœnix: Each was the source of inexhaustible treasure (mine) to the other.

37-40. Property . .. call'd. Property is a Latinism, 'proprietas,' peculiar or essential quality. Cf. Richard II, III.ii.135, 136: 'Sweet love, I see, changing his property/Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.' 'Property' was appalled to find out that personality had been destroyed, since each lover's identity was merged into the other's, and was no longer itself. There were two names to what was in reality one person; therefore it could neither be said that they were two, since their nature was the same, nor that they were one, for in fact there were two distinct persons.

42. Saw division grow together. Reason cannot understand how those which seemed different were now one.

43-46. To themselves . . . one. And yet Reason saw that the lovers were different in themselves, for the elements in their several natures were so strongly compounded or blended that Reason could exclaim: 'In this unity, there is a real duality.'

47, 48. Love . . . remain. So that Love is right while Reason, which ought to be right, is wrong—since there remains a union where there should be a division.

The Passionate Pilgrim

I. This is Shakespeare's Sonnet 138, with important variant readings.

II. This is Shakespeare's Sonnet 144, with minor variations.

11. 'Being both friends to me and also to each other.'

III. From Love's Labour's Lost, IV.iii.55-68. Lines 2, 9, 10, 11, and 14 contain slight differences from the text of the play.

IV. Author unknown.

V. From Love's Labour's Lost, IV.ii.109-117, with certain alterations.

VI. Author unknown. The subject is that of one of the pictures offered to Christopher Sly (Taming of the Shrew, I.ii.53-56): 'We will fetch thee straight Adonis painted by the running brook, and Cytherea all in sedges hid.' Sedge is not 'osier' and one might as well see in that difference a proof that the sonnet is not by the same hand as the one that wrote The Taming of the Shrew.

VII. Author unknown.

5. Damask. A red color resembling that of the damask rose.

VIII. By Richard Barnfield. Appeared in Poems: in divers Humors (1598).

3. Thee. In Barnfield's Poems the sonnet is addressed 'To his friend Master R. L. in praise of music and poetry.' R. L. has been identified as Richard Linche, author of Diella (1596).

5. Dowland. John Dowland (?1563-?1626), a lute player. He was also a composer and published Songes or Ayres of Foure Partes with Tableture for the Lute (1597); Lacrymae (1605), etc.

14. One knight. Probably Sir George Carey.

IX. Author unknown. The second line of this sonnet appears to have been inadvertently omitted.

X. Author unknown. Unlike IX and XI, this poem is not on the Venus and Adonis theme.

XI. By Bartholomew Griffin. Appeared in Fidessa more chaste than kind (1596). In regard to ll. 9-12, which are different in the Passionate Pilgrim and in Fidessa, Grosart suggested that they were altered so as to be a closer copy of Venus and Adonis. I believe Dowden is right when he says: 'This is a case of hesitation between two treatments of a sonnet-close, the writer being doubtful whether the turn in the thought should take place at the ninth or at the eleventh line.'

9-12. In Griffin's Fidessa these four lines are as follows: 'But he a wayward boy refused the offer/And ran away, the beauteous queen neglecting/Showing both folly to abuse her proffer/And all his sex of cowardice detecting.'

13. At this bay. For this expression see note on Venus and Adonis, 877.

XII. Has been ascribed to Thomas Deloney. It occurs, with four additional stanzas, in his Garland of Good Will. Pt. III. The first edition known is dated 1604.

XIII. Author unknown.

XIV. Author unknown.

14. Pooler proposes to read: 'My heart doth charge them watch the morning rise,' which is decidedly an improvement.

Sonnets to Sundry Notes of Music

I. Author unknown.

II. From Love's Labour's Lost, IV.iii.99-118. The chief alteration is the omission of two lines which are found in the play. This poem was also reprinted in England's Helicon, with the title 'The Passionate Shepherds Song.'

III. Author unknown. Previously published in a Collection of Madrigals by Thomas Weelkes (1597). It occurs also in England's Helicon, with the title 'The Unknown Shepherd's Complaint.'

IV. Author unknown. Prof. Dowden, in his Introduction to Griggs' facsimile, seems ready to accept Grosart's suggestion that this poem is somehow connected with Willobie his Avisa. All that can be said is that the metre is the same in both poems.

V. By Marlowe. It appeared in England's Helicon with the signature Chr. Marlowe, and two additional stanzas. In England's Helicon, 'Love's Answer,' entitled 'The Nymph's reply to the Shepherd,' has five additional stanzas, and is subscribed 'Ignoto.' It was attributed to Sir Walter Raleigh.

VI. By Richard Barnfield. Cf. Poems: in divers Humors, and England's Helicon.

23. Pandion. A king of Athens and father to Philomela. Cf. note on Lucrece, 1079.

A Lover's Complaint

22, 23. levell'd . . . intend. Her eyes were aimed at the sky as a gun on its carriage.

26. Lend. See Notes and Queries, 1884, Feb. 2, Feb. 16, and March 29.

48, 49. With sleided . . . secrecy. Letters were often closed with a piece of silk ribbon the ends of which were placed under the wax-seal of the letter the better to ensure secrecy.

109. Rounds, bounds, course, stop. Terms of the manege meaning respectively: motion in a circle, leap, race, pause.

111, 112. Whether . . . steed. It was impossible to say whether the horse owed the gracefulness of its movements to the skill of the rider, or whether the rider appeared so graceful in his training on account of the horse's docility.

144. Was my own fee-simple. I had an absolute power over myself.

153. Foil. The setting of a jewel; that which makes it conspicuous. It probably refers here to the thin plate of metal which was (and is still) placed under a valueless stone to give it the appearance of a gem.

157, 158. Or forc'd . . . way. 'Or insisted on the examples which tell against her own (apparent) happiness in order to hinder herself from pursuing it by realising the past dangers of others' (Wyndham).

224. Since . . . me. I am the altar on which I sacrifice to you, and, therefore, you become my patron or goddess.

229, 230. What . . . you. Whatever obeys me on your account works under you since I am your minister.

234. Which . . . shun. Who lately avoided the courtship of noble suitors.

235. Blossoms. According to Malone, 'the flower of the young nobility.'

241. Paling . . . receive. 'Making oneself as it were without form or void' (Wyndham). 'Securing within the pale of a cloister that heart which had never received the impression of Love' (Malone).

251, 252. Not to be tempted . . . procur'd. She sought the cloister in order not to be tempted, but there she only found the liberty to tempt.

The Text of the Present Edition

The text of the present volume is based, by permission of the Oxford University Press, upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by W. J. Craig, except for the following changes:

1. Punctuation and spelling have been normalized to accord with modern English practice, e.g. forgo (forego), warlike (war-like).

2. Characteristic old forms (e.g., murther, Troyan) and euphonic abbreviations (e.g. th'annexions) are retained.

3. The following alterations in Craig's text have been made, all in conformity with the readings of the First Quartos. The readings of the present edition precede the colon, while Craig's readings follow it.

VENUS AND ADONIS

188 gone?: gone;
317 was: is
484 earth: world
591 cheek: cheeks
601 so: as
896 all: sore
962 eye: eyes
1134 thou: you

LUCRECE

135 That: For
217 stroken: strucken
319 needle: neeld
584 look'st: look'dst
772 cureless: curseless
812 cote: quote
1029 foul defiled: foul-defiled
1145 not: nor
1338 villain: villein
1352 her: their
1544 to beguild: so beguil'd
1615 woes: woe

PASSIONATE PILGRIM

XI.14. run: ran
XIV.8 scorn or: scorn of conster: construe

SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC

IV. 51 round me on th'ear: ring my ear

LOVER'S COMPLAINT

41 lets: let
47 moe: more
198 pallid: paled

The Sonnets

Introduction

History of the Sonnets

The first mention of Shakespeare's sonnets occurs in a little book by Francis Meres entitled Palladis Tamia, Wit's Treasury, published in 1598: 'the sweet, witty soul of Ovid lives in mellifluous and honey-tongued Shakespeare, witness his Venus and Adonis, his Lucrece, his sugared sonnets among his private friends.' 'Among his private friends' means not only that the sonnets were unpublished, but that they were composed for persons with whom he was in intimate relations. The obscurity of many of these poems certainly arises from the fact that they were written for friendly eyes; and accordingly they contain many allusions to persons and events which would be plain enough to Shakespeare's circle, but which would mean little or nothing to outsiders, even in the poet's day.

In The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599, were published the first two of Shakespeare's sonnets to appear in print. They were Nos. 138 and 144. Their text differs in several lines from that printed in the first edition of the whole sonnet collection. This first edition, which the present volume follows, was a quarto published by Thomas Thorpe in 1609. It contains a large number of obvious mistakes that ruin the sense; in several cases sonnets that plainly should follow each other are separated; and it is impossible to believe that Shakespeare prepared the text for publication.

This first quarto made no such impression as did Sidney's posthumous sonnet sequence, Astrophel and Stella, published in 1591, and it was not until 1640 that a second edition of Shakespeare's sonnets appeared. This was published by John Benson under the title 'Poems written by Wil. Shake-speare, Gent.'; yet it contained, as well, poems by Marlowe, Raleigh, Ben Jonson, Carew, Herrick, Milton, and others. The sonnets were not printed in the order in which they appeared in the quarto of 1609. In many cases they were run together as one continuous poem; and there were added to them, singly or in groups, seventy-four titles, some fairly appropriate, others quite unfitting, and nearly all commonplace. Seven sonnets, including No. 18, 'Shall I compare thee to a summer's day,' and the poem in couplets, No. 126, are omitted from this edition. Plainly it is much inferior to the quarto of 1609. In 1710 both the first and second editions were reprinted. Two editions in a century indicate a lack of interest in the sonnets, especially when their fate is contrasted with the numerous editions and great popularity of many of the plays.

There is further evidence in the manner in which the first editors of Shakespeare neglected these poems. To cite Lee, 'Neither Nicholas Rowe, nor Pope, nor Theobald, nor Hanmer, nor Warburton, nor Capell, nor Dr. Johnson included them in their respective collections of Shakespeare's plays. None of these editors, save Capell, showed any signs of acquaintance with them.' The first critical edition of the sonnets was Malone's, 1780, for which George Steevens supplied some material; and it is indicative of the general attitude towards the sonnets that Steevens himself, in 1793, wrote that 'The strongest act of Parliament that could be framed would fail to compel readers into their service.'

With the rise of the Romantic School, the sonnets found readers, students, and imitators. Wordsworth, Coleridge, and Keats directed attention to them and on the Continent, where also they had suffered neglect, they became a subject of study and criticism. At the present moment, no part of Shakespeare's work arouses more interest or a greater critical discussion, a discussion which unfortunately has arrived at no sure conclusions.

Problems of the Sonnets

The numerous problems presented by this sonnet collection may be grouped under three heads: historical, literary, and autobiographical.

The historical problems are the identification of the men and women of this series, or the events hinted at in such a sonnet as No. 107, Who was W. H.? Is he the same person as the 'beauteous and lovely youth' of the first sonnets? Who was the poet whom Shakespeare considered 'better' and 'worthier' than himself? Who was the dark woman? (Cf. notes, ll. 3, 40, 127.) These questions are perpetually discussed, but never conclusively answered.

The two chief literary problems are: when were these sonnets written and in what order should they be printed? Plainly, from Meres's mention of them in 1598, many of the sonnets were composed long before the appearance of the first quarto in 1609, and just as clearly, many of the sonnets were printed out of their natural order.

In regard to the first question, it has been shown that there are more striking parallels between the sonnets and the earlier plays—Love's Labour's Lost, Two Gentlemen of Verona, Romeo and Juliet—than with the later, though the mood of Troilus and Cressida, Hamlet, Antony and Cleopatra, is sometimes reflected in this collection. Internal evidence is always dangerous, yet the general impression the sonnets make on the reader by their resemblances to Venus and Adonis (1593) and The Rape of Lucrece (1594), and by their fluency, their enthusiasm for beauty, their excess of emotion over reflection is that as a whole they are the work of the young Shakespeare. They may be assigned roughly to the years 1593-1598, which would bring them within the period of the greatest vogue of the Elizabethan sonnet. This assumption does not preclude the possibility that some of the sonnets were written much later, even in the reign of James I. Here is one more unsolved problem.

The order of the sonnets is a fascinating study. It has sometimes been assumed that sonnets Nos. 1-125 are all written to or about a lovely youth. It is certain that No. 126, the lyric in couplets, marks a division in the series and that most of the sonnets placed after it concern themselves directly or indirectly with the dark woman; but it does not follow as a corollary that all the sonnets before No. 126 refer to a man. There is no reason to assume that the original publisher, Thorpe, was close enough to Shakespeare to understand fully the different MSS. out of which he may have combined the whole series. It is easy to see that many of the sonnets are printed in their proper sequence (Nos. 1-17, 40-42 63-65, 78-86, for example), but on the other hand some sonnets are clearly out of their natural order (cf. Nos. 70, 77, 81). It is not at all certain that all of the sonnets before No. 126 must refer to the youth Shakespeare praised, though Thorpe may have thought so or wished the reader to think so. Benson, the publisher of the second edition, would have the reader believe, from the titles affixed to the sonnets in his edition, that nearly all these poems were written to a woman. In five cases when the text of the first edition showed that to be impossible, he altered it, changing 'him' to 'her' and 'friend' or 'boy' to 'love.' (Nos. 101, 104, 108.)

The most disputed problem of all is the autobiographical value of this sequence. Opinions on this matter range from Sir Sidney Lee's conclusion that the sonnets, for all their beauty, are imitative and conventional, to unsubstantiated theories by Frank Harris and Arthur Acheson of the intimate, personal confessions of these poems. Certainly Lee has no difficulty in proving that many of the sonnets are conventional in both theme and treatment. The debates of the eye and heart (Nos. 46, 47) are merely the 'quirks of blazoning pen.' Like the sonnets of Wordsworth and Keats, these poems differ greatly in their content and in their value; and certain quibbling, punning ones, written for the amusement of the moment, seem unworthy of their author. But there are many others which must strike the unprejudiced reader as 'such fair speech as soul to soul affordeth.' Surely in many sonnets we have glimpses of Shakespeare the man. We see a poet who was deeply sensitive to appreciation and friendship, who felt the inferiority of his social position and the discouragements of his art, and who ranged from dejection to exultation, from vulgar ribaldry and cynical indecency to the inspiration of devoted friendship. In part, the inconsistencies in the moods of the sonnets are the inconsistencies of life itself. Shakespeare may not have 'unlocked his heart' in these poems; but surely at times he left the door ajar.

The Sonnet and Elizabethan Sonneteers

It was Petrarch (1304-1374) who made the sonnet the most popular form of the lyric during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Though sonnets had been written before him, notably by Dante, the vogue of Petrarch, overshadowing that of all other lyric poets ancient and modern, was carried far beyond 'this side idolatry.' His themes were love and beauty, a hopeless love thwarted by destiny and death. His followers and imitators were legion. Vagany, in his compendious bibliography of sixteenth-century French and Italian sonneteers, does not include them all, for no man has ever read them all or could survive if he made the attempt.

Before the sonnet reached England, it came to France, where Ronsard and his contemporaries were deeply influenced by Italian poetry; and in Shakespeare's day it was largely through the French sonneteers that Petrarch affected English writers, though they made direct translations of Italian sonnets as well. The first English sonnets were written by Sir Thomas Wyatt (1503-1542) and Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey (1518-1547), and were first published after their death in Tottel's Miscellany, 1557. As might be presumed, both these poets were confirmed admirers of Petrarch, and their sonnets showed it.

The sonnet of Petrarch, commonly called the Italian sonnet, is a poem of fourteen lines divided into two parts of eight and six lines, the octave and the sestet. The octave was written abbaabba, while the sestet could have two or three rhymes, arranged in no fixed order save that the last two lines should not rhyme together. In the octave a thought, an emotion, a picture is completely presented and the verse sentence, so to speak, comes to an end. In the sestet, the explanation, the comment, the summing up of the whole matter is given. Wyatt attempted the Italian form, but found it too difficult to write correctly, and his sonnets end in rhymed couplets. Surrey, more of a stylist, devised a new and simpler form for the sonnet—three quatrains with a concluding couplet, and with no attempt to preserve the division of the octave and sestet. As a simple trial will prove, it is much harder to write a sonnet in the Italian form than to compose three quatrains and a couplet; and as the Elizabethans prized fluency, they preferred Surrey's form. In Shakespeare it reached its greatest beauty so that Surrey's form is now often called the 'Shakespearean' sonnet. It is interesting to notice that at times Shakespeare makes the break in the thought between the eighth and ninth lines that the Italian sonnet writers observed. This will be seen in 'When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,' No. 29, or better still, in several sonnets printed together with the sestet beginning invariably with 'O,' Nos. 21-23, 71, 72, 76.

Apart from Shakespeare, the Elizabethan sonnet sequences most worthy of study are Sidney's Astrophel and Stella, 1591, Daniel's Delia, 1592, Drayton's Idea, 1594, and Spenser's Amoretti, 1595. To read them, or even their finest passages, but makes more apparent the supremacy of Shakespeare.

Dedication to the Sonnets

TO · THE · ONLIE · BEGETTER · OF · THESE · INSUING · SONNETS ·
MR. W. H. ALL · HAPPINESSE ·
AND · THAT · ETERNITIE · PROMISED ·
BY ·
OUR · EVER-LIVING · POET ·
WISHETH ·
THE · WELL-WISHING · ADVENTURER · IN · SETTING · FORTH ·
T. T.

1 Onlie begetter: only inspirer (?); cf. n. 3 Mr. W.H.: cf. n. 10–12 Adventurer in setting forth: publisher 13 T.T.: cf. n.

Shakespeare's Sonnets

1

From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buriest thy content
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
  Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
  To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

2

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer, 'This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse,'
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
  This were to be new made when thou art old,
  And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

3

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother,
For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime;
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
  But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
  Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

1. 1-14 Cf. n. 5 contracted: betrothed 6 Feed'st ... fuel; cf. n. 11 content: desire; cf. n. 13, 14 Pity the world ... and thee; cf. n. 3 livery: dress 4 weed: garment 11 old excuse: excuse for my old age 3 fresh repair: healthful state 5 unear'd: untilled 7 fond: foolish 13 remember'd not to be: not caring to be remembered

4

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,
And being frank, she lends to those are free:
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive:
Then how, when Nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
  Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
  Which used, lives th' executor to be.

5

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness everywhere:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was:
  But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
  Leese but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

6

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some vial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which happies those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee;
Then what could death do, if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?
  Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
  To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

4 frank: liberal free: generous 2 gaze: object of sight, sight 4 unfair: deprive of beauty fairly: in beauty 6 confounds: destroys 5, 9, 10 Cf. n. 12 it: would it remain 14 Leese: lose 1 ragged: rugged 3 treasure: enrich 5 use: interest 6 happies: makes happy 10 refigur'd: reproduced in appearance

7

Lo, in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage;
But when from highmost pitch, with weary car,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way:
So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

8

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy:
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee: 'Thou single wilt prove none.'

9

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife;
The world will be thy widow, and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind.
Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend
Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits
That on himself such murderous shame commits.

10

For shame deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprovident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind:
Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

11

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st
In one of thine, from that which thou departest;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st
Thou mayst call thine when thou from youth convertest.
Herein lies wisdom, beauty and increase;
Without this, folly, age and cold decay:
If all were minded so, the times should cease
And threescore year would make the world away.
Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
Harsh, featureless and rude, barrenly perish:
Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish:
She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby
Thou shouldst print more, nor let that copy die.

12

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls, all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard,
Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

13

O that you were yourself! but, love, you are
No longer yours than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give:
So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination; then you were
Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,

7. 9-12 Cf. n. 9 highmost pitch: highest elevation 11 converted: turned away 12 tract: course 13 thyself outgoing . . . noon: passing beyond your noon of beauty 1 Music to hear: you whose voice is music 10 mutual ordering: ordered harmony 14 'Thou single wilt prove none'; cf. n. 4 makeless: mateless 5 still: continually 10 his: its

7 beauteous roof: your body 2 departest: takest leave of 3 youngly: in youth bestow'st: layest out, spendest 4 convertest: changest 9 for store: for breeding 11 Look, . . . the more; cf. n. 2 brave: beautiful 6 erst: formerly 9 question make: meditate 1 yourself; cf. n. 6 determination: end

Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O, none but unthrifts. Dear my love, you know
You had a father: let your son say so.

14

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And, constant stars, in them I read such art
As 'Truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert;'
Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
'Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.'

15

When I consider everything that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd e'en by the self-same sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And, in all war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

16

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rime?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
With virtuous wish would bear you living flowers
Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself, keeps yourself still;
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

10 husbandry: thrift 13 unthrifts: wastrels 2 have astronomy: know astrology 5 tell: allot 6 Pointing: appointing 8 oft predict: frequent predictions 10 art: knowledge 12 If from thyself . . . convert; cf. n. 14 date: end 4 influence; cf. n. 6 Cheered and check'd: encouraged and repressed 7 Vaunt: exult at height: when fully developed 8 And wear . . . memory: and outlast the memory of their prime 9 conceit: thought inconstant stay: transitory state of being 11 debateth: takes counsel with 14 engraft you new: renew your beauty (by my verse) 6 unset: not planted 8 painted counterfeit: portrait 9 lines of life: children 10 Which this . . . pupil pen; cf. n. 11 fair: beauty

17

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, 'This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces.'
So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue,
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
And stretched metre of an antique song:
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice,—in it and in my rime.

18

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date:
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course untrimm'd;
But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st,
Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st;
So long as man can breathe, or eyes can see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

19

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phœnix in her blood;
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

13 To give away yourself; to beget children 11 rage: enthusiasm 12 stretched: strained, exaggerated 18. 1-14 Cf. n. 8 untrimm'd: deprived of adornment 10 ow'st: owenest 5 fleets: hastest 10 antique; cf. n.

20

A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With shifting change, as is false women's fashion;
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

21

So is it not with me as with that Muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse,
Making a couplement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.
O let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:
Let them say more that like of hear-say well;
I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

22

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.
For all that beauty that doth cover thee
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me:
How can I then be elder than thou art?
O therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
As I, not for myself, but for thee will;
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

23

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart;
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharg'd with burden of mine own love's might.
O, let my books be then the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
O, learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

24

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art,
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

25

Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
But as the marigold at the sun's eye,
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
Then happy I, that love and am belov'd,
Where I may not remove nor be remov'd.

26

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written ambassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving

20. 1–14 Cf. n. 7 A man in hue . . . controlling: cf. n. 11 defeated: deprived 1 Muse: poet 4 rehearse: relate 5 Making . . . compare: joining in proud comparison 8 rondure: circle 4 expiate: end 13 Presume not on: think not to regain 2 put besides: put out of

5 fear of trust: fearing to trust myself (?), lacking all self-confidence (?) 10 presagers: indicators 12 that more . . . express'd: that more eloquently has told of greater devotion 1 stell'd: placed, engraved (?) 2 table: surface on which picture is drawn 4 perspective: cf. n. 25. 4 Unlook'd for: unexpectedly 6 But: only 7 And in . . . buried: their pride soon perishes with them 26. 1-14 Cf. n. 3 ambassage: message

Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;
Till then, not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

27

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tir'd;
But then begins a journey in my head
To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd:
For then my thoughts—from far where I abide—
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous and her old face new.
Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

28

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
But day by night, and night by day oppress'd,
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me,
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still further off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him, thou art bright
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night,
When sparkling stars twire not thou gild'st the even.
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

29

When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state,
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
Haply I think on thee,—and then my state,
Like to the lark at break of day arising
From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate;
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

10 Points: shines 6 Intend: plan, set about 9 imaginary: imaginative 6 shake hands: conspire 12 twire: peep, twinkle 7 scope: range of opportunity

30

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear times' waste:
Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight:
Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before.
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restor'd and sorrows end.

31

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts
Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
And there reigns Love, and all Love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things remov'd that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give,
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
And thou—all they—hast all the all of me.

32

If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time,
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rime,
Exceeded by the height of happier men.
O, then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
'Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love.'

1 sessions: sittings of court 4 new wail: bewail anew 6 dateless: endless 8 expense: loss 9 grievances foregone: former griefs 10 tell: count 1 endeared: made precious 5 obsequious: dutiful, regardful 6 religious: devoted 7 interest: the right, the due 11 parts of me: claims in me 12 That . . . many: so that which many once deserved 13 Their . . . lov'd: the images of those I loved 1 my well-contented day: the day I shall be well contented with 5 bettering . . . time: better works of later time 7 Reserve: retain 12 better equipage: richer equipment

33

Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gliding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:
Even so my sun one early morn did shine,
With all-triumphant splendour on my brow;
But, out! alack! he was but one hour mine,
The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now.
  Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
  Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

34

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
And make me travel forth without my cloak,
To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a salve can speak
That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace:
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
  Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
  And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

35

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast done:
Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorising thy trespass with compare,
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,—
Thy adverse party is thy advocate,—
And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence:
Such civil war is in my love and hate,
  That I an accessary needs must be
  To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me.

36

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blots that do with me remain,
Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which, though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
  But do not so; I love thee in such sort
  As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

37

As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth;
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
I make my love engrafted to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give
That I in thy abundance am suffic'd
And by a part of all thy glory live.
  Look what is best, that best I wish in thee:
  This wish I have; then ten times happy me!

38

How can my Muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rimers invocate;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.
  If my slight Muse do please these curious days,
  The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

39

O, how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And what is 't but mine own when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give

2 sovereign eye: eye of a king 6 rack: clouds in the upper air 8 disgrace: disfigurement 12 region cloud: cloud of heaven 14 may stain: may be obscured staineth: is obscured 4 bravery: splendor rotten smoke: unwholesome mist 13, 14 Ah! but those tears . . . ill deeds: cf. n. 2 fountains: springs 3 stain: dim 6 Authorising: sanctioning with compare: by these comparisons 7 amiss: fault 8 Excusing thy sins: cf. n. 9 sense: cf. n. 13 accessary: accessory, helper 14 sourly: cruelly

5 respect: consideration, regard 6 separable: dividing, separating 13, 14 But do not so . . . good report: cf. n. 3 dearest spite: worst malice 37. 5-7 Cf. n. 7 Entitled: rightfully 8 engrafted: added to 10 shadow: imagination 11 suffic'd: contented 3 argument: theme 4 rehearse: narrate 6 against: in 8 invention: creative imagination 13 curious: fastidious 14 pain: labour 1 with manners: becomingly

That due to thee, which thou deserv'st alone.
O absence! what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here who doth hence remain.

40

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all;
What hast thou then more than thou hadst before?
No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call;
All mine was thine before thou hadst this more.
Then, if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest;
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refusest.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty;
And yet, love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.
Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows,
Kill me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

41

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometimes absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assail'd;
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will sourly leave her till she have prevail'd?
Ay me! but yet thou mightst my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold truth;—
Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

42

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her;
And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain.
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross:
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one;
Sweet flattery! then she loves but me alone.

43

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright, are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How would thy shadow's form form happy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay!
All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

44

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.
No matter then although my foot did stand
Upon the furthest earth remov'd from thee;
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
As soon as think the place where he would be.
But, ah! thought kills me that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

45

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recur'd
By those sweet messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assur'd
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

11 entertain: pass away 13, 14 And that thou teachest . . . remain; cf. n. 40. 1-14 Cf. n. 5 if for: if because of (?), if instead of (?) my love receivest: receivest the woman I love 6 for: because 8 By wilful taste . . . refusest; cf. n. 14 spites: injuries 1 liberty: license 3 chief: the main cause 7 abuse: misuse 8 approve: like, make trial of (?) 11 both twain: both the two

1 wink: close my eyes 2 unrespected: unworthy of notice 4 darkly: in the dark 5 whose shadow . . . bright: whose remembered image makes darkness bright 4 where: to the place where 6 furthest earth remov'd: plot of earth most remote 9 thought kills me: melancholy kills me (?), it kills me to think (?) 11 wrought: made, created 14 badges of either's woe; cf. n. 9 life's composition: union of the four elements recur'd: restored

46

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,—
A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes,—
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impanelled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

47

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other:
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not further than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

48

How careful was I when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou best of dearest and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

49

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects;
Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass,
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I ensconce me here
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
Since why to love I can allege no cause.

50

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
'Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend!'
The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider lov'd not speed, being made from thee:
The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind:
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

51

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
Till I return, of posting is no need.
O, what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,
In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,
Shall neigh—no dull flesh—in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade,—
'Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
Towards thee I'll run and give him leave to go.'

52

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.
Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,

9 impanelled: enrolled 10 quest: jury 12 moiety: share 4 himself: itself 4 wards of trust: place of security 11 closure: enclosure, confine 1 Against: in expectation of 3 When as: when cast his utmost sum: added every item 4 advis'd respects: careful considerations

5 strangely: like a stranger 8 of settled gravity: for a grave demeanor 11 uprear: raise (as a witness taking the oath) 8 being made: if directed 1 slow offence: blameworthy slowness 6 swift extremity: extreme speed 8 In winged speed . . . know: though moving with the speed of wings, I shall not seem to myself to be moving at all 11 Shall neigh . . . fiery race; cf. n. 12 for love: for the sake of his love (shown by the slow gait) 14 go: walk 4 For: for fear of seldom: rarely enjoyed 5 solemn: ceremonious 7 thinly: widely separated

Or captain jewels in the carcanet.
So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special blest
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
Being had, to triumph; being lack'd, to hope.

53

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring and foison of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

54

O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds discloses:
But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwoo'd, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall vade, my verse distils your truth.

55

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rime;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish time
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

8 captain: chief carcanet: necklace 9 chest: treasure chest 12 his . . . pride: its gorgeous contents 13 scope: opportunity 3 every one, one shade: one shadow apiece 5 counterfeit: portrait 8 tires: headdresses 9 foison: harvest 11 bounty: generosity 14 like none: are like none none you: none are like you 5 canker-blooms: dog-roses, scentless wild roses 6 tincture: color 8 discloses: unfolds, opens 9 only is their show: consists only in their appearance 10 unrespected: unregarded 11 to themselves: all alone 14 that: that beauty, that youth vade: fade distils: preserves the essence of 7 Nor Mars his: neither Mars'

56

Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that, when they see
Return of love, more bless'd may be the view;
Or call it winter, which, being full of care,
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

57

Being your slave, what should I do but tend
Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
When you have bid your servant once adieu;
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought,
Save where you are how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love that in your will,
Though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

58

That god forbid that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O, let me suffer, being at your beck,
The imprison'd absence of your liberty;
And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list, your charter is so strong
That you yourself may privilege your time
To what you will; to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

12 wear this world out: outlast this world ending doom: to the judgment day that ends all 13 that: when 10 contracted new: but lately betrothed 5 world-without-end: never ending 10 suppose: conjecture 6 The imprison'd . . . liberty: cf. n. 7 sufferance: suffering check: rebuke 10 privilege: authorize 12 self-doing: done by yourself

59

If there be nothing new, but that which is
Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burden of a former child!
O, that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done!
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or whe'r better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O, sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

60

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

61

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry,
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
O, no! thy love, though much, is not so great:
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake:
For thee watch I whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

62

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
And all my soul and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account;
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.
'Tis thee, myself,—that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

63

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn;
When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night;
And all those beauties whereof now he's king
Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life:
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

64

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd
The rich-proud cost of outworn buried age;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-raz'd,
And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with store;
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay;
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate—
That Time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

65

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out

3 labouring for invention: striving for originality 5 record: memory 8 in character: in letters 10 composed wonder: wonderful composition 11 mended: advanced beyond our predecessors whe'r: whether 12 whether revolution be the same: whether all things come round again 4 In sequent toil . . . contend; cf. n. 5 main: flood 7 Crooked: malignant 9 transfix the flourish: remove the embellishment 10 delves the parallels: digs wrinkles 13 times in hope: future times 8 scope and tenour: aim and substance 11 defeat: destroy

7 do define: I do define 8 As: so that other: others 10 Beated and chopp'd: battered (?) and chopped; cf. n. antiquity: old age 1 Against: when, in anticipation of the time when 5 steepy: steep, surmounted with difficulty 10 confounding: destroying 12 though: though he cuts 2 rich-proud . . . age: costly and splendid tombs or monuments 3 sometime: once, formerly 4 brass eternal slave: eternal brass the slave 9 state: condition of things 10 state itself: grandeur 13 which: this thought which 1 Since: since there is not 4 action: vigor

Against the wrackful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O, none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

66

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry
As to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly—doctor-like—controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
Tir'd with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that to die, I leave my love alone.

67

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve,
And lace itself with his society?
Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek
Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is,
Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O, him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

68

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty live'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay:
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

69

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues—the voice of souls—give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues, that give thee so thine own,
In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds;
Then,—churls,—their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The soil is this, that thou dost common grow.

70

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days,
Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy evermore enlarg'd:
If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

71

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O, if, I say, you look upon this verse,
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay;

6 wrackful: destructive 12 spoil: plundering 3 needy nothing: empty vanity trimm'd in jollity: decked in finery 4 unhappily forsworn: unluckily frustrated 5 misplac'd: bestowed amiss 8 disabled: rendered helpless 11 simplicity: folly 14 to die: by dying 1 with infection: in this infected world 4 lace itself: decorate itself 6 dead seeing: a dead appearance 7 indirectly: cf. n. 13 stores: treasures up 1 map: picture 3 bastard signs of fair: cf. n. 6 The right of sepulchres: property belonging to the tomb

9 antique hours: hours of antiquity 10 itself and true: natural and sincere 14 soil: cf. n. common: too accessible 70. 1-14 Cf. n. 3 ornament: identifying badge suspect: suspicion, distrust 5 approve: prove 6 woo'd of time: wooed by the world 8 prime: spring, youth 10 charg'd: attacked 11 so thy praise: so much thy praise 12 To tie up: that it will tie up enlarg'd: at liberty 13 mask'd not thy show: did not disfigure your beauty 14 owe: own 3 Give warning to the world: cf. n. 7 would be: wish to be 10 compounded: mixed 11 rehearse: repeat

Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

72

O, lest the world should task you to recite
What merit lived in me, that you should love
After my death,—dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
O, lest your true love may seem false in this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

73

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west;
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire,
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by.
This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

74

But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee:
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead;
The coward conquest of a wretch'd knife,
Too base of thee to be remembered.
The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

1 task: challenge 4 prove: discover 10 untrue: untruly 11 My name: let my name 14 should you: should you be shamed 12 Consum'd with that . . . nourish'd by: cf. n. 3 interest: claim, part 4 Which: this line which 5 reviewest: surveyest 6 was consecrate: that was consecrated 12 of thee: by thee 13 of that: of that body is that: is that spirit 14 that is this: that spirit is this poetry

75

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found;
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
Doubting the filching age will steal his treasure;
Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure:
Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
And by and by clean starved for a look;
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Save what is had or must from you be took.
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

76

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change?
Why with the time do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
O, know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument;
So all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent:
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love still telling what is told.

77

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
Of mouthed graves will give thee memory;
Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know
Time's thievish progress to eternity.
Look! what thy memory cannot contain,
Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book.

78

So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse
And found such fair assistance in my verse
As every alien pen hath got my use

2 sweet-season'd: mild 3 peace of you: peaceful possession of you 6 Doubting: fearing 8 better'd that: made happier, more fortunate, because 12 had: had from you 14 Or: either or all away: or putting all aside, refusing all 1 new pride: ostentatious novelty 6 noted weed: well-known dress 77. 1-14 Cf. n. 4 Cf. n. 7 shady stealth: stealthy shadow 10 waste blanks: empty pages 11, 12 Cf. n. 13 offices; cf. n. 78. 1-14 Cf. n. 3 As: that use: habit

And under thee their poesy disperse.
Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to sing
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and born of thee:
In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces graced be;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

79

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
From thy behavior; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

80

O, how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!
But since your worth,—wide as the ocean is,—
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wrack'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building and of goodly pride:
Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
The worst was this;—my love was my decay.

81

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten;
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die:
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;

4 under thee: under thy patronage disperse: spread abroad 9 compile: compose 10 influence: inspiration 13 advance: raise 4 give another place: yield to another 5 thy . . . argument: the theme of your beauty 2 a better spirit; cf. n. 8 wilfully: eagerly 11 wrack'd: wrecked 6 to all the world: in the world's memory

And tongues to be your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You still shall live,—such virtue hath my pen,—
Where breath most breathes,—even in the mouths of men.

82

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse,
And therefore mayst without attaint o'erlook
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise;
And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
And do so, love; yet when they have devis'd
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd
In true plain words by thy true-telling friend;
And their gross painting might be better us'd
Where cheeks need blood; in thee it is abus'd.

83

I never saw that you did painting need,
And therefore to your fair no painting set;
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt:
And therefore have I slept in your report,
That you yourself, being extant, well might show
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty being mute,
When others would give life, and bring a tomb.
There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

84

Who is it that says most, which can say more
Than this rich praise,—that you alone are you,
In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew?
Lean penury within that pen doth dwell
That to his subject lends not some small glory;
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story.
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired everywhere.
You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

11 to be: of future generations 2 attaint: disgrace 6 limit: mark, goal 8 time-bettering days: present greater age 10 strained: exaggerated 11 sympathiz'd: matched 4 tender: offer to pay 5 in your report: in describing, praising, you 7 modern: ordinary 14 both your poets; cf. n. 3, 4 In whose confine . . . equal grew; cf. n. 10 clear: glorious 11 counterpart: reproduction fame: give fame to 13 beauteous blessings: blessings of beauty 14 Being fond . . . praises worse; cf. n.

85

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,
Whilst comments of your praise, richly compil'd,
Reserve their character with golden quill,
And precious phrase by all the Muses fil'd.
I think good thoughts, while others write good words,
And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry 'Amen'
To every hymn that able spirit affords
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.
Hearing you prais'd, I say, ' 'Tis so, 'tis true,'
And to the most of praise add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.
Then others for the breath of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

86

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse,
Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
He, nor that affable familiar ghost
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast;
I was not sick of any fear from thence:
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

87

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate:
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking;
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again, on better judgment making.
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but, waking, no such matter.

88

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn.
With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted;
That thou in losing me shalt win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me.
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

89

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence:
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace; knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange;
Be absent from thy walks; and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong,
And haply of our old acquaintance tell.
For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

90

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss:
Ah! do not, when my heart hath 'scap'd this sorrow,
Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come: so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

91

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill;
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;

1 in manners: modestly 2 richly compil'd: composed in an elaborate style 3 Reserve their character: cf. n. 4 precious: carefully wrought fil'd: polished 7 that able spirit: cf. n 12 Though words . . . before: cf. n. rank: place in line 13 respect: esteem 14 speaking in effect: which virtually speak 3 inhearse: lay as in a coffin 8 astonished: dismayed 10 gulls: cheats 13 countenance: favor 2 estimate: value 87. 3 Cf. n. 4 determinate: expired 8 patent: conditional privilege swerving: turning from me 11 upon misprision growing: made mistakenly 1 set me light: estimate me lightly

6 Upon thy part: in your behalf 12 double-vantage: doubly reward 2 comment: discourse 6 set a form: put a good semblance upon desired change: on the change you wish in our relations 8 acquaintance strangle: end our acquaintance look strange: assume the air of a stranger 12 haply: perchance 13 debate: strife 2 cross: thwart 4 drop in: come in suddenly 90. 6 Cf. n. 8 linger out: prolong 11 onset: first attack 13 strains: emotions 3 new-fangled ill: fashionably ugly

And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest:
But these particulars are not my measure;
All these I better in one general best.
Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:
Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take
All this away, and me most wretched make.

92

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine;
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.
Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend:
Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
O! what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die:
But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

93

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem love to me, though alter'd new,
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place:
For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles strange,
But heaven in thy creation did decree
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

94

They that have power to hurt and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow;
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die,
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

95

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O, what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill-us'd doth lose his edge.

96

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less;
Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a throned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated and for true things deem'd.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

97

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen!
What old December's bareness everywhere!
And yet this time remov'd was summer's time,
The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease:
Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit;
For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute:
Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer,
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

5 humour: disposition adjunct: connected 7 measure: limit (of joy) 8 humour: mood 10 Since that . . . lie: since my life would end if you betrayed me 94. 1-14 Cf. n. 2 show: seem to do 6 husband . . . expense: do not squander nature's gifts in passion

94. 9-12 Cf. n. 14 Cf. n. 2 canker: cankerworm 13 privilege: license 3 more and less: high and low 8 translated: changed 12 state: grandeur, beauty (?) 96. 13, 14 Cf. n. 5 time remov'd: time of absence 13 cheer: mood

98

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
Hath put a spirit of youth in everything,
That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him.
Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
Could make me any summer's story tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew:
Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose;
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you, you pattern of all those.
Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow I with these did play.

99

The forward violet thus did I chide:
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,
If not from my love's breath? The purple pride
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dy'd.
The lily I condemned for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair;
The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair;
A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath;
But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could see
But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

100

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light?
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers time so idly spent;
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay,
And make Time's spoils despised everywhere.
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

101

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd?
Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say,
'Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd'?
Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
Excuse not silence so; for 't lies in thee
To make him much outlive a gilded tomb
And to be prais'd of ages yet to be.
Then do thy office, Muse; I teach thee how
To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

102

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming;
I love not less, though less the show appear:
That love is merchandiz'd whose rich esteeming
The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere.
Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
When I was wont to greet it with my lays;
As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
And stops her pipe in growth of riper days:
Not that the summer is less pleasant now
Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night,
But that wild music burthens every bough,
And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue,
Because I would not dull you with my song.

103

Alack! what poverty my Muse brings forth,
That having such a scope to show her pride,
The argument, all bare, is of more worth
Than when it hath my added praise beside!
O, blame me not, if I no more can write!
Look in your glass, and there appears a face
That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace.
Were it not sinful then, striving to mend,
To mar the subject that before was well?
For to no other pass my verses tend
Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

104

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
For as you were when first your eye I ey'd,
Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
Have from the forests shook three summer's pride,
Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd
In process of the seasons have I seen,
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.

2 proud-pied: magnificent in many colors trim: finery 4 heavy Saturn: Saturn, god of heaviness or melancholy 7 summer's story: pleasant tale 9 wonder at: admire 1 forward: early 5 grossly: obviously 6 for: compared with 7 buds of marjoram; cf. n. 3 fury: inspiration 9 resty: indolent 11 be . . . decay: satirize Time's destruction of beauty 14 prevent'st: forestall'st

4 dignified: art dignified 7 lay: apply, as a color 8 if never intermix'd: if left to itself 13 office: work 1 seeming: appearance 3 merchandiz'd: cheapened esteeming: worth 7 Philomel: the nightingale front: beginning 11 pass: end 13 sit: be contained 6 process: procession

Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd:
So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd:
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred:
Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

105

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
'Fair, kind, and true,' is all my argument,
'Fair, kind, and true,' varying to other words;
And in this change is my invention spent,
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
'Fair, kind, and true' have often liv'd alone,
Which three till now never kept seat in one.

106

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rime,
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

107

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
Now with the drops of this most balmy time
My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,
Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rime,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes:
And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

108

What's in the brain, that ink may character,
Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same;
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.
So that eternal love in love's fresh case
Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page;
Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
Where time and outward form would show it dead.

109

O, never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
As easy might I from myself depart
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:
That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again;
Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd,
So that myself bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

110

Alas! 'tis true I have gone here and there,
And made myself a motley to the view,
Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
Made old offences of affections new;
Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely; but, by all above,
These blenches gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.
Now all is done, have what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then give me welcome, next my heaven the best,
Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

9 dial-hand: hand of a watch 2 show: appear 8 difference: variety 10 varying to other words: the thought expressed in other words 5 blazon: proclaiming 8 master: possess 11 divining: prophesying 107. 1-4 Cf. n. 5 mortal: deadly (?); cf. n. 6 presage: presentiment 10 subscribes: submits

13 in this: in this verse 1 character: write 3 register: record 9 in love's fresh case: always renewed 11 gives . . . place: withdraws when wrinkles must come 108. 13, 14 Cf. n. 2 qualify: moderate 5 That: thy breast 7 Just to the time: punctually exchang'd: changed 8 myself bring . . . stain: justify my fault (of absence) 10 blood: temperament 11 preposterously: unnaturally 110. 1, 2 Cf. n. 2 motley: jester 3 Gor'd: wounded 4 Made old . . . new: offended in forsaking old friends for new 7 blenches: inconstancies gave . . . youth: brought me back to youthful love 8 worse essays: trials of the worse 9 have what . . . end: take my unending love 10 grind: whet

111

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide
Than public means which public manners breeds.
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,
And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand:
Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd;
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of eisel 'gainst my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

112

Your love and pity doth the impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow;
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?
You are my all-the-world, and I must strive
To know my shames and praises from your tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.
In so profound abysm I throw all care
Of other's voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:
You are so strongly in my purpose bred,
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

113

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;
For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch:
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour or deformed'st creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature:
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.

2 guilty goddess . . . deeds: goddess guilty of . . . deeds 5 brand: stigma 6 subdu'd: reduced 10 eisel: vinegar 12 correct correction: chastise chastisement, make my correction doubly sure 1 impression: mark, brand 4 o'er-green: cover as by a vine or grass allow: approve 112. 7, 8 Cf. n. 10, 11 Cf. n. 12 with . . . dispense: I am indifferent to neglect (by others) 13 in my purpose bred: engrafted in my life 14 besides: except you 3 Doth part his function: does but part of its natural work 4 effectually: practically 5 it: my eye heart: mind 6 latch: catch 7 his: the eye's 8 his own: the eye's 10 favour: countenance 113. 14 Cf. n.

114

Or whether doth my mind being crown'd with you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
Or whether shall I say mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make of monsters and things indigest
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O, 'tis the first, 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

115

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you dearer:
Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering things;
Alas! why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
Might I not then say, 'Now I love you best,'
When I was certain o'er incertainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow.

116

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sickle's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error, and upon me prov'd,
I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

117

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day;

1 Or whether doth: is it true that 5 indigest: formless 10 kingly: like a king 11 what . . . 'greeing: what agrees with the mind's taste 114. 13, 14 Cf. n. 5 reckoning: taking account of 12 the rest: the future 13 so: 'I love you best' 14 To give: giving 4 remover: inconstant remove: depart 8 worth: power, influence height: altitude 10 his: Time's 12 edge of doom: judgment day 1 scanted: grudged

That I have frequent been with unknown minds,
And given to time your own dear-purchas'd right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me furthest from your sight.
Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
And on just proof surmise accumulate;
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate;
Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

118

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge;
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding;
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meetness
To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.
Thus policy in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,
And brought to medicine a healthful state,
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd;
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

119

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbecks foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted,
In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuk'd to my content,
And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

120

That you were once unkind befriends me now,
And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,
Needs must I under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time;
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O, that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

121

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being;
And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing:
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood?
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think good?
No, I am that I am, and they that level
At my abuses reckon up their own:
I may be straight though they themselves be bevel;
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad and in their badness reign.

122

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain,
Beyond all date, even to eternity:
Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist;
Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

123

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change:
Thy pyramids built up with newer might
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old;
And rather make them born to our desire
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past,
For thy records and what we see doth lie,

5 frequent: intimate unknown: unimportant 6 given to time: wasted 10 on ... accumulate: add suspected to proved offences 11 level: aim 1 Like as: just as 2 eager compounds: bitter mixtures palate urge: stimulate the appetite 7 welfare: good health 12 rank of: cloyed with 2 limbecks: alembics, vessels for distillation 4 Still ... win: winning new love but losing the old 7 How ... fitted: cf. n. 8 weigh: consider

120. 9, 10 Cf. n. 11 then tender'd: then had I tendered 13 fee: payment, recompense 121. 3, 4 Cf. n. 6 Give salutation to: greet (as if Shakespere were one of them) sportive: wanton 8 in their wills: as they please 11 bevel: oblique 122. 1-14 Cf. n. 1 tables: memorandum book 3 idle rank: empty row of leaves 7 raz'd: empty 9 poor retention: book that contains little 10 tallies ... score: cf. n. 12 those tables: my memory 13 adjunct: attendant 2 newer: more recent 4 dressings: refashionings 5 dates: years of life 123. 7, 8 Cf. n. 11 doth lie: doth tell us a lie

Made more or less by thy continual haste.
This I do vow, and this shall ever be;
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

124

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate,
Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd.
No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thralled discontent,
Whereto the inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short number'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with showers.
To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

125

Were 't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruining?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
Lose all and more by paying too much rent,
For compound sweet forgoing simple savour,
Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent?
No; let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul
When most impeach'd stands least in thy control.

126

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle hour;
Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self grow'st;
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee back,
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure:
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

127

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard's shame:
For since each hand hath put on Nature's power,
Fairing the foul with Art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' brows are raven black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Sland'ring creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says beauty should look so.

128

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st
The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
To be so tickl'd, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more bless'd than living lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

129

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust
Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;
Past reason hunted; and no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
On purpose laid to make the taker mad:
Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof, and prov'd, a very woe;
Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.
All this the world well knows; yet none knows well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

12 Made more or less: increasing and decreasing, constantly changing 1 child of state: born of circumstances, accidental 2 for: because it was 4 Weeds ... gather'd; cf. n. 7 thralled discontent: discontent held in subjection 8 Whereto: to which fashion: custom, usage 9 policy: craft 11 hugely politic: extremely wise 124. 13, 14 Cf. n. 1 Were 't: would it be bore the canopy: canopy of state; did outward reverence 2 With my extern: outwardly 7 savour: perfume 8 in their gazing spent: wasting themselves in regarding externals 10 free: whole-hearted 11 seconds: inferior matter 12 render: surrender 125. 13, 14 Cf. n. 126. 1-12 Cf. n. 2 sickle hour: hour when his sickle strikes 3 by waning grown: with age grown more beautiful 5 wrack: destruction 8 wretched minutes kill: kill time's minutes (that bring old age) 9 minion: darling

12 quietus: acquittance of the account 127. 1-14 Cf. n. 1 black ... fair; cf. n. 3 successive: legitimate 6 Fairing ... face: beautifying ugliness by cosmetics 10 suited: attired 11 no beauty lack: make themselves beautiful by artifice 13 so: in such a manner becoming of: gracing 4 wiry concord: harmony of the wires 5 jacks; cf. n. 129. 1-3 Cf. n. 4 extreme: violent 6 Past: beyond all 11 in proof: when experienced 12 propos'd: anticipated

130

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red:
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
I grant I never saw a goddess go;
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground:
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

131

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

132

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even,
Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face:
O, let it then as well beseem thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

133

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is 't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be?
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engross'd:
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;
Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my jail:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

134

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will,
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous and he is kind;
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me,
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that putt'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

135

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,
And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus.
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store;
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.
Let no unkind 'No' fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

136

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love my love-suit, sweet, fulfil.
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
In things of great receipt with ease we prove
Among a number one is reckon'd none:

5 damask'd: of the shade of a damask rose 14 compare: comparisons 1 so as: homely as 10 but: only on 11 One . . . neck: in quick succession 4 ruth: pity 12 suit: attire like: alike 14 foul: ugly

6 my next self: my friend engross'd: gained exclusive possession of 10 bail: go bail for (?), guard (?) 3 other mine: other self 5 nor he will not be free: not does he wish freedom 7 He learn'd . . . me: he released me by pledging himself as security 9 statute of thy beauty: bond giving possession obtained by thy beauty 10 to use: to interest 11 came: who became 12 my unkind abuse: unnatural wrong done to me 135. 1-14 Cf. n. 1 check: reprove 7 receipt: capacity

Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is Will.

137

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have err'd,
And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

138

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress.
But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

139

O, call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue:
Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside:
What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might
Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can bide?
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been my enemies;
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks, and rid my pain.

9 untold: uncounted 9 several: private 138. 1-14 Cf. n. 7 Simply: absolutely 9 unjust: false 4 by art: by cunning

140

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians know;
For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

141

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who, in despite of view, is pleas'd to dote.
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;
Nor tender feeling to base touches prone.
Nor taste nor smell desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be:
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

142

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving:
O, but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example mayst thou be denied!

143

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe, and makes all quick dispatch
In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,

4 pity-wanting pain: unpitied suffering 11 ill-wresting: maliciously misconstruing 9 five wits: cf. n. 11 unsway'd: deprived of self-control (?) 14 pain: punishment 13 what thou dost hide: the love you refuse

Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant's discontent:
So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind;
So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will,
If thou turn back and my loud crying still.

144

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell:
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

145

Those lips that Love's own hand did make,
Breath'd forth the sound that said 'I hate,'
To me that languish'd for her sake:
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
Was us'd in giving gentle doom;
And taught it thus anew to greet;
'I hate,' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who like a fiend
From heaven to hell is flown away.
'I hate' from hate away she threw,
And sav'd my life, saying—'Not you.'

146

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
Fool'd by these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

147

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease;
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please.
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve
Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic-mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's are,
At random from the truth vainly express'd;
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

148

O me! what eyes hath Love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight;
Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
That censures falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no.
How can it? O, how can Love's eye be true,
That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
No marvel then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.
O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

149

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I against myself with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend
Revenge upon myself with present moan?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind;
Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

13 Will: cf. note on Sonnet 135 144. 1-14 Cf. n. 2 suggest: prompt 11 from me: away from me to each: to each other 14 fire . . . out: drive out with fire 145. 1-14 Cf. n. 146. 1, 2 Cf. n. 4 outward walls: body 8 charge: expense 10 aggravate: increase 11 terms: long periods of time

6 kept: followed 7 approve: prove that 8 which physic did except: (Desire) which objected to the physic (of Reason) 4 censures: judges 10 watching: wakefulness 2 with thee partake: take part with thee 4 all tyrant: you absolute tyrant 9 respect: prize

150

O, from what power hast thou this powerful might,
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill,
That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
O, though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:
If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

151

Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove:
For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may
Triumph in love; flesh stays no further reason,
But rising at thy name doth point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride.
He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
No want of conscience hold it that I call
Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

152

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
And all my honest faith in thee is lost:
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see;
For I have sworn thee fair; more perjur'd I,
To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

153

Cupid laid by his brand and fell asleep;
A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove
Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired,
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
I, sick withal, the help of bath desired,
And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
But found no cure: the bath for my help lies
Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

154

The little Love-god lying once asleep
Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep
Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
The fairest votary took up that fire
Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd;
And so the general of hot desire
Was, sleeping, by a virgin hand disarm'd.
This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
Growing a bath and healthful remedy
For men disease'd; but I, my mistress' thrall,
Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

FINIS

7 warrantise: assurance 3 torn: broken 7 misuse: speak falsely of 11 enlighten: shed lustre upon 153. 1-14 Cf. n. 1 brand: torch 2 advantage: favorable opportunity 6 dateless: eternal 9 new-fired: kindled again 154. 1-14 Cf. n. 13 this: this truth: Love's fire, etc.

Notes

Dedication

1. onlie begetter. Some scholars, notably Lee, argue that 'begetter' here means 'obtainer,' 'procurer'; hence the publisher T. T. is thanking W. H. for finding and delivering to him the MSS. of this sonnet collection. Lee goes further and identifies W. H. as William Hall, a stationer of the period. Mrs. Stopes, practically following Lee's interpretation of 'begetter,' identifies W. H. as William Harvey, the stepfather of the third Earl of Southampton, Shakespeare's friend. The natural rendering of this phrase which recalls the 'only begotten' of the Creed, is 'the one, the only, inspirer.'

3. W. H. These initials raise a controversy which many volumes have not yet settled. If we reject Lee's interpretation and believe that a nobleman must be the inspirer of the sonnets praising a youth, the two best candidates are William Herbert, third Earl of Pembroke, and Henry Wriothesley (pronounced 'Rizley'), third Earl of Southampton. Of the two, Southampton seems the better claimant, though Herbert's liaison with Mary Fitton and her subsequent career has led many (especially dramatists) to consider her the heroine of the last group of sonnets. But Herbert came to court as late as 1598 and the sonnets, as a whole, seem to have been written before that year. Southampton is the only patron Shakespeare publicly acknowledged, and the dedication of Venus and Adonis, 1593, and The Rape of Lucrece, 1594, show that the poet regarded him with gratitude and affection. If, as seems more probable, W. H. was not a great nobleman, other names have been suggested: William Hall, William Harvey (vide supra), William Hughes, William Hammond, William Hathaway. It is perfectly evident that Shakespeare must have had many friends whose very names, to say nothing of initials, Time has effaced. All that can be said with certainty of the hero of these sonnets is that he was a youth of better birth and fortune than Shakespeare and that his encouragement and friendship, at a certain period in the poet's career, won Shakespeare's praise and devotion. In his gratitude, Shakespeare, as he said, built in these sonnets an enduring monument; unfortunately for us T. T. wrote its inscription. The best short account of this whole controversy is found in Alden's variorum edition of the sonnets, pp. 464-471, prepared by Frank E. Hill.

13. T. T. Thomas Thorpe. Lee describes him as a stationer's assistant, 'holding his own with difficulty for some thirty years in the lowest ranks of the London publishing trade. He merely traded in the "copy" which he procured how he could.' See also R. B. McKerrow, Dictionary of Printers and Booksellers, p. 265 f.

Sonnets

1. These first seventeen sonnets are addressed to a beautiful youth whose identity is still a subject of conjecture. They urge him by flattery, expostulation, and argument to marry and perpetuate his beauty in a child.

1. 6. Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel. Like a candle, you feed your flame by burning your own substance; or, you feed your eyes (light's flame) on the sight of yourself—you see only yourself.

1. 11. content. In this line, this word may also mean 'your whole being.'

1. 13, 14. Pity the world, or else this glutton be, To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee. This may be paraphrased: Pity the world (by perpetuating your beauty in your children) or glutton-like, you eat your beauty, due the world, by allowing it to perish in the grave and by your failure to beget children.

5. 9, 10. A reference to perfumes extracted from flowers. Compare the close of sonnet 54.

7. 9-12. But when from highmost pitch, with weary car, Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day, The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are From his low tract, and look another way. Cf. 'All this blanked not Pompey, who told him frankly againe, how men did honour the rising, not the setting of the sunne; meaning thereby, how his owne honor encreased, and Scyllaes diminished.' Life of Pompey in Plutarch's Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans englished by Sir Thomas North (1579).

8. 14. 'Thou single wilt prove none.' 'Perhaps an allusion to the proverbial expression that one is no number.' Dowden. Compare sonnet 136, line 8.

11. 11. Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the more. See, to you whom Nature best endowed she gives an added gift.

13. 1. O that you were yourself. O that you were yourself forever.

14. 12. If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert. If you would turn from living for yourself alone and would beget children.

15. 4. secret influence. Astrology taught that there emanated from the stars a power or force (secret influence) which determined the characters and the fortunes of men and states.

16. 10. Which this Time's pencil, or my pupil pen. Beeching gives the following paraphrase: 'Neither portraiture ("this Time's pencil," cf. line 8) nor description ("my pupil pen," cf. line 4) can represent you as you are, either in character or beauty.'

18. Sonnets 18-25 form a single series, praising the youth's beauty and declaring the poet's affection for him.

19. 10. antique pen. This word, pronounced 'antic,' may mean in this sonnet not merely 'old' (cf. sonnet 106. 7) but also 'a pen that plays pranks, that draws grotesque lines.'

20. This sonnet has hardly the tone in which Shakespeare, the actor, could address a nobleman of high rank.

20. 7. A man in hue all hues in his controlling. This line is a source of perpetual debate. The Quarto prints 'all Hews,' and some editors have seen here a pun on the name Hughes, even suggesting that this proves 'W. H.' to have been William Hughes. Other editors change the reading 'A man in hue' to 'A native hue' or 'A maiden hue.' Shakespeare has just said that his friend has a woman's gentle heart, an eye that is brighter than a woman's, and in this line, going a step further, he gives to him a man's complexion of such beauty that it overpowers or surpasses the handsome coloring of all others.

24. 4. perspective. An optical instrument for viewing objects, a magnifying glass. Notice the pun in the next line, 'through the painter.' Shakespeare is also alluding to the more familiar meaning of perspective. The N. E. D. cites Haydocke, 1598, 'A painter without the perspective was like a doctor without grammar.'

26. By some editors, this sonnet is regarded as an envoi to the preceding twenty-five sonnets. 'This written ambassage' (line 3) may refer to that series; but it may equally well refer to this sonnet only.

34. 13, 14. Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds, And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds. Cf. Antony and Cleopatra, III.ix.76-78.

> Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates
> All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss;
> Even this repays me.

This and the following sonnet may refer to the incident described in sonnets 40-42.

35. 8. Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are. Not only the meaning of this line but the correctness of the text itself is a debated question. Q. reads 'their' for 'thy' in both instances; Bullen reads: 'Excusing their sins more than thy sins are.' The present reading is the one most generally adopted. This line and the preceding one may be paraphrased: I am corrupting myself in condoning your fault, for I am so anxious to exculpate you that I offer for you excuses out of all proportion to your sins.

35. 9. sense. Not 'reason' but rather 'the senses, the feelings.' The poet's own feelings urge him to excuse the guilt of his friend.

36. 13, 14. But do not so; I love thee in such sort As thou being mine, mine is thy good report. But do not dishonor yourself (by showing me kindness in the eyes of the world), for my love has so completely taken possession of you that your good name, your honor, belongs to me. (Note that this same couplet occurs at the close of sonnet 96.)

37. 5-7. Apparently the youth Shakespeare praises is better born, richer, and handsomer than the poet; yet these lines do not prove him to be one of the nobility.

39. 13, 14. And that thou teachest how to make one twain, By praising him here who doth hence remain. This may be paraphrased: And because, Absence, you teach me to make of one person two—my friend is away from me and yet I may call him before my memory and seem while praising him to enjoy his presence.

40. There is nothing to prove that the woman of sonnets 40-42 is the 'dark' woman of sonnets 127 ff.

40. 8. By wilful taste of what thyself refusest. Dowden paraphrases this: 'By an unlawful union while you refuse loyal wedlock'; Beeching conjectures: 'By taking in wilfulness my mistress whom yet you do not love.'

44. 14. badges of either's woe. The poet's heavy tears are the signs of woe of the two elements in his body, earth and water. In the first line of the next sonnet, Shakespeare alludes to the two remaining elements, fire and air. According to the belief of Shakespeare's day, man was composed of these four elements.

51. 11. Shall neigh—no dull flesh—in his fiery race. It is possible that the text of this obscure line is corrupt. As it stands, the thought may be expressed as follows: (Desire), no dull, plodding beast, shall neigh like a spirited horse as it rushes on its fiery race to you.

58. 6. The imprison'd absence of your liberty. Beeching paraphrases this: 'suffer your absence, which, though it represent liberty to you, means imprisonment to me.'

60. 4. In sequent toil all forwards do contend. Toiling and following each other all (the waves) strive onward.

62. 10. This line and the opening lines of the following sonnet give no definite information whatever concerning Shakespeare's age when he wrote these poems. It was a common convention of both English and Continental sonneteers to contrast their wrinkled faces and advanced years with the lovely youth of the person they were praising.

67. 7, 8. Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow. In this line 'indirectly' means 'dishonestly.' Shakespeare is inveighing against the fashionable practice of rouging or painting the face. This protest was a common one; it was expressed in many moods, including Hamlet's passionate outburst (Hamlet III.i.148ff.).

68. 3. Here the poet attacks the fashionable practice of wearing wigs. According to Stow, the custom of wearing them began in England in 1572.

69. 14. soil. The N. E. D. explains the word in this line as 'The solution of the problem.'

70. If this sonnet is addressed to the youth of sonnets 34-35, 40-42, it is plainly out of place, for here the youth's life is pronounced blameless.

71. 2, 3. This alludes to the custom of tolling the church bell when a member of the parish died, one stroke for each year of the deceased.

73. 12. Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by. The wood which fed the fire is now turned to ashes and extinguishes the flame.

77. Apparently this sonnet was either written in a blank book sent to the unknown friend, or else it accompanied such a gift. It is out of place between sonnets 76 and 78 which discuss Shakespeare's own writings.

77. 4. And of this book this learning mayst thou taste. Dowden makes the following comment: 'Beauty, Time, and Verse formed the theme of many of Shakespeare's sonnets; now that he will write no more, he commends his friend to his glass, where he may discover the truth about his beauty; to the dial, where he may learn the progress of time; and to this book, which he himself—not Shakespeare—must fill.'

77. 11, 12. Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain, To take a new acquaintance of thy mind. The meaning of these lines may be expressed: Your thoughts, written in the pages ('waste blanks') of this book, will seem new when you reread them, as children, sent out to nurse, are grown and changed when brought back to their parents.

77. 13. These offices. The habitual use, in the manner suggested by the poet, of the dial and mirror.

78. This begins a series of nine sonnets in which Shakespeare laments that his friend has turned from Shakespeare's verses to the poetry of a 'better spirit.' Cf. the next note.

80. 2. Knowing a better spirit doth use your name. No one has yet established the identity of this 'better spirit' who supplanted Shakespeare in the esteem of his friend and to whom in this sonnet and in the ones immediately following, Shakespeare acknowledges himself far inferior. Attempts have been made to show that the rival poet was Barnes, Chapman, Daniel, Drayton, Jonson, Marston; yet nothing has been proved.

83. 14. Than both your poets can in praise devise. That one of these poets must be Shakespeare is quite evident.

84. 3, 4. In whose confine immured is the store Which should example where your equal grew? You, in whom is stored up the whole sum of your unexampled beauty.

84. 14. Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse. Being fond of receiving praise which, as it never does you justice, really detracts from you (makes your praises worse).

85. 3. Reserve their character with golden quill. This may be paraphrased: (The comments of your praise, l. 2) are written down in a form that will endure (reserve their character), in a beautiful style (with golden quill).

85. 7. able spirit. Another reference to the rival poet whose 'hymns' have proved as elusive as his name.

85. 12. Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before. This, and the preceding line, may be expressed as follows: Though my words are not equal to your praises sung by another, the loving praise in my mind outranks the tributes of everyone.

87. 3. The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing. You do not belong to me because your fine qualities give you the privilege of leaving me.

90. 6. Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe. Attack me after I have defeated one misfortune.

94. It is interesting to compare this sonnet on self-control with Hamlet's famous praise of the man who is not passion's slave (Hamlet III.ii.66-89).

94. 9-12. Wyndham paraphrases these lines: 'These self-contained persons may seem to lack generosity; but then, without making voluntary gifts, they give inevitably, even as the summer's flower is sweet to the summer, though it live and die only to itself. Yet let such one beware of corruption.'

94. 14. This line occurs in the anonymous play of Edward III (published in 1596), II.i.51. Though the opinion is not unanimous, many Shakespearean scholars believe the sonnet antedates the play, to which Shakespeare has sometimes been thought to have contributed certain scenes.

96. 13, 14. This couplet concludes sonnet 36 where, as many critics observe, it is more in keeping with the general idea of the poem.

99. 7. buds of marjoram. The reference may be either to the color of the buds—reddish brown—or to their fragrance.

107. 1-4. The first four lines of this sonnet may be paraphrased: Neither my own fears, nor the divining soul of the world dreaming of the future to which the present shall give way, can overpower the duration of my love, mistakenly supposed to be subject to the fate that limits all things.

107. 5. mortal moon. Many scholars find in this sonnet definite allusions to contemporary events. Lee and others believe it celebrates the release of Southampton from prison, 1603. He was set free after the death of Elizabeth, whom contemporary poets celebrated as the moon goddess. ('The mortal moon hath her eclipse endured.') The motto of James I, who released Southampton, was 'Blessed are the peacemakers' (cf. l. 8). To others, the sonnet celebrates the defeat of the Armada, or the reconciliation of Elizabeth with Essex. It is equally possible to read this sonnet as merely one more in the series in which Shakespeare proclaims his devotion to be superior to fate and death.

108. 13, 14. Finding the first conceit of love there bred, Where time and outward form would show it dead. Finding the first love still inspired in a face whose appearance of age would make it unlovely to others.

110. 1, 2. These lines refer, probably, though not necessarily, to Shakespeare's career as an actor. They lament, as do the following two sonnets, the associations forced upon him by poverty.

112. 7, 8. None else to me, nor I to none alive, That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong. So far as I am concerned, no one but you (and I live for you alone) can influence my callous feeling to right or wrong.

112. 10, 11. that my adder's sense To critic and to flatterer stopped are. This may be a reminiscence of Psalm 58. 4, 5: 'Even like the deaf adder, that stoppeth her ears; Which refuseth to hear the voice of the charmer, charm he never so wisely.'

113. 14. My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue. Malone explains this line: 'The sincerity of my affection is the cause of my untruth; i.e., of not seeing objects truly, such as they appear to the rest of mankind.'

114. 13, 14. In line 12, the eye has been compared to the taster for king Mind. If the eye gives him a poisoned cup, it is not such a great sin because the eye drinks the poison first.

119. 7. How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted. 'How have mine eyes started from their hollows in the fever fits of my disease.' Dowden.

120. 9, 10. O, that our night of woe might have remember'd My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits. O, that the memory of our night of suffering might have recalled (remember'd) to my inmost soul how hard a blow true sorrow strikes.

121. 3, 4. And the just pleasure lost, which is so deem'd Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing. 'And the legitimate pleasure lost, which is deemed vile, not by us who experience it, but by others who look on and condemn.' Dowden. 'And the lawful pleasure lost, which is judged vile from the point of view of others and not from any sense of shame on our part.' Wyndham.

122. In this sonnet Shakespeare explains why he gave away a blank book, a present from his friend. Compare sonnet 77.

122. 10 Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score. This line alludes to the old custom of recording by cutting notches (scores) on a stick (tally).

123. 7, 8. And rather make them born to our desire Than think that we before have heard them told. 'We regard the wonderful works of to-day as the offspring of our own will, and forget that past ages produced the very same.' Beeching.

124. 4. Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd. Time might weed it out with hate or gather it lovingly as a flower.

124. 13, 14. To this I witness call the fools of time, Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime. Scholars are not agreed as to the meaning of this obscure couplet. 'The fools of time' may be Essex and his followers; the Jesuits, condemned for plotting against the Crown; or any traitors who die piously.

125. 13, 14. Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul When most impeach'd stands least in thy control. In this sonnet Shakespeare has asserted that he regards not outward appearance but the heart. Probably there is no personal reference in 'suborn'd informer'; it means any false idea or detraction of the poet's devotion.

126. The Quarto indicates by brackets that two lines are missing after the final couplet, yet this twelve-line poem, written not in sonnet form but in couplets, is complete as it stands. It serves to mark the conclusion of the sonnets addressed to the friend.

127. The dark woman of the following sonnets is as much a mystery as ever, despite the many pages that editors, critics, and playwrights have devoted to her. Some scholars and dramatists assume her to be a maid of honor of Queen Elizabeth, Mary Fitton, at one time the mistress of William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke. She was evidently attractive, for she was married twice after the Pembroke affair. With the praise of dark beauty in this sonnet compare Love's Labour's Lost IV.iii.258-277.

127. 1. In the old age black was not counted fair. 'Black' in this sonnet and in the following ones, means 'dark complexioned,' 'brunette'; while 'fair' means both 'light complexioned' and 'beautiful.'

128. 5. jacks. 'In the virginal, an upright piece of wood fixed to the key-lever and fitted with a quill which plucked the string as the jack rose when the key was pressed down. Here used as "key." ' Onions.

129. 1-3. The expense of spirit in a waste of shame Is lust in action; and till action, lust Is perjur'd. Lust when put into action spends the spirit in a shameful waste; and until it acts, Lust is perjur'd.

135. In this and in the following sonnet, Shakespeare writes a series of puns on the word 'will,' using it as a proper name, as 'wish,' and as 'lust.' Used as a proper name, 'Will in over-plus; More than enough am I' (ll. 2, 3), refers to Shakespeare; 'Will to boot,' (l. 2) refers to another man, possibly to the friend of sonnet 133, l. 2.

138. In The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599, this sonnet was printed with variations from the present text in eight of its lines. In general, the present version seems the better one and probably represents Shakespeare's revision of the poem published ten years before the collected sonnets appeared.

141. 9. five wits. Common sense, imagination, fancy, estimation, memory.

144. This sonnet appeared in The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599, with some unimportant changes in text. (Cf. note on sonnet 138.) Drayton's sonnet, 'An evil spirit, your beauty, haunts me still,' published also in 1599, has certain resemblances to this sonnet. That Drayton took a hint from Shakespeare seems more probable than that Shakespeare was indebted to Drayton.

145. This sonnet seems out of place in this series on the 'female evil.' It is written in octosyllabics; and it depicts a woman quite different from that mistress, 'black in deeds,' whose baneful influence upon the poet has been described in the preceding sonnets.

146. 1, 2. Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth, Fool'd by these rebel powers that thee array. In the Quarto, the second line of this couplet is misprinted 'My sinful earth these rebel powers that thee array.' In place of 'My sinful earth,' repeated from the first line, many readings have been proposed, such as: 'Foil'd by'; 'Slave of'; 'Thrall to'; 'Starved by.' The reading of this text is as plausible as any other.

153, 154. These two sonnets are alternative versions of an epigram by Marianus, a Byzantine writer of about the fifth century A.D. There were sixteenth-century translations of this epigram both in Latin and in Italian; in Giles Fletcher's Licia, 1593, there is another very free adaptation of it.

The Text of the Present Edition

Although two of the sonnets in this collection, Nos. 138 and 144, were included in The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599, the first edition of the sonnets is the quarto which appeared in 1609 and which sold for five pence. This quarto was not sanctioned by Shakespeare; it is full of obvious errors and yet it is the accepted text. By permission, the text of this edition is that of Craig's Oxford Shakespeare, published by the Oxford Press, which follows the first quarto, correcting its mistakes. In a few cases the editor has departed from Craig's text, preferring the reading of the first quarto or some generally accepted emendation. Minor changes of spelling and punctuation are not recorded, but all other variations from Craig's text are given below, where Craig's readings are printed after the colon.

10. 1. For shame deny Q: For shame! deny
16. 10. Which this Time's pencil,: Which this, Time's pencil,
16. 13. yourself, Q: yourself
26. 14. Till then, Q: Till then
31. 1. hearts: hearts, Q
59. 11. Whether Q: Whe'r
66. 14. Save that to die Q: Save that, to die
75. 9. Sometime all Q: Sometime, all
84. 1. most, Q: most?
84. 2. you, Q: you?
84. 4. grew?: grew.
84. 8. story.: story,
85. 3. Reserve Q: Deserve
88. 5. weakness being Q: weakness, being
110. 9. have Q: save
114. 3. say Q: say,
141. 6. feeling Q: feeling,

Continued from front flap

fully contains Shakespeare's authentic intent. This is no easy chore. Every edition of Shakespeare is obliged to make clear and defend its final choice of preferred texts. Toward this end, each play in The Yale Shakespeare is preceded by an informative introduction by that particular play's editor. Among the topics discussed in these introductions are the editor's choice of authoritative text, the debate surrounding the claims of other variants, the probable date of the play's composition, the possible sources which Shakespeare used to foster the plot, and some insights into the nature of Elizabethan stagecraft and the actors who brought these roles to life. In addition to the editor's introduction, each play includes two sets of notes. The notes at the bottom of each page help the reader to understand difficult or archaic word usages, while notes of an explanatory or interpretive nature, such as the specifics of the historical details mentioned by Shakespeare, follow each play. The poems, and sonnets, similarly annotated, appear after the plays, and crown the volume.

How now, my lord! The greatest works of literature ever produced in the English language, presented in their most readable, memorable, and understandable form. What more could a reader ask?

Back cover illustration: title page engraving of the First Folio, 1623, of William Shakespeare by Martin Droeshout, courtesy of the Granger Collection, New York

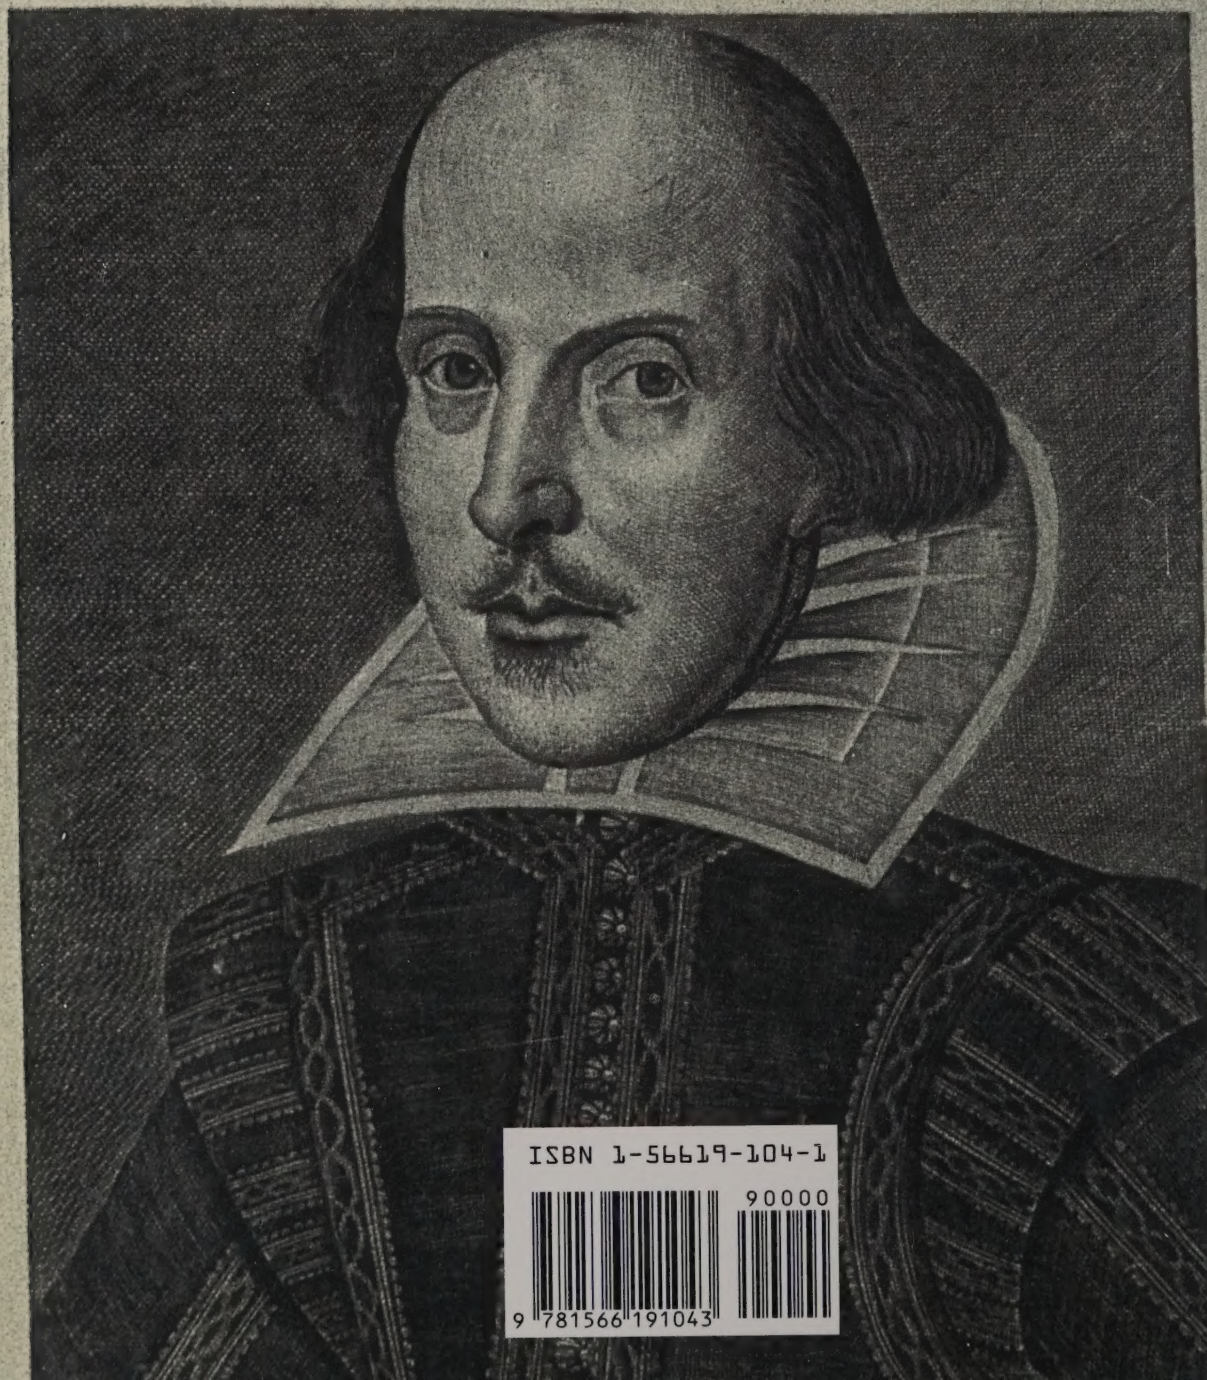
Jacket design © Ziga Design

BARNES & NOBLE BOOKS
NEW YORK

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARES

COMEDIES, HISTORIES, & TRAGEDIES.

Publiſhed according to the True Originall Copies.



ISBN 1-56619-104-1

90000

9 781566 191043